Judith, too, was ready to admit that her last and culminating effort had been in vain. Wearied and unstrung, she raised herself from the fatal form that was to besmirch the name and the father that had been her source of pride. She crossed over toward her father, who stood silent and despairingly in the shadow of one of the linotype machines.

"Goodby, Wheeler. I am going out of your life forever. I am sorry it had to end like this—all our plans, all our hopes"—

The thought of the happy moments that she had spent with Wheeler, building air castles for their future when they would be man and wife, came over her. It swept down the wall of reserve and determination with which she had deemed it necessary to surround herself. She halted and gazed steadfastly into her father's face. Slowly she raised her hands and pressed them against her cheeks as though horror stricken. Then she turned, rushed impulsively back to Wheeler Brand, and, bending tensely toward him, she searched his strong young face as best her tear dimmed eyes would let her. He returned her gaze unflinchingly.

Judge Bartelmy saw the girl's struggle to decide between the father who had dishonored her name and the lover who meant a life of happiness, purity, success and inspiration. He was wise enough in the ways of the world to know that again was Brand to prove a victor over him.

The girl stood immovable a moment. Then she extended her arm toward her lover. Judith Bartelmy had made her choice.

The judge's features showed but little of the storm into which his emotions had been plunged. His years of practiced self control had come to his aid and enabled him to face the ruin of his career and his life and his name without the frenzied demonstration in which most men in his position would have indulged. To the last he was the cool, polished, suave hypocrite that he had been in the beginning, when those who sought to loot the public for private gain found him a willing tool.

"He is right," Bartelmy said to Judith. "He has told you the truth tonight—the absolute truth." He looked at his watch. "Six hours, did you say, Mr. Brand?" he asked.

Brand had gathered Judith in his arms. She sighed contentedly as she laid her head upon his shoulder. "Yes," he answered the judge.

"Six hours, did you say, Mr. Brand?"

Judge Bartelmy stood watching the united couple for a moment before he turned and walked away, muttering as he went: "Six hours. One may travel far in these days in that time."

* * * * * * *

The great ship heaved and lunged through the giant seas that swept over her bows, out of the freezing night, out of the cold northeast. The captain and the first officer, lashed to opposite ends of the lofty bridge, choked in the flying spume of wind riven midocean.

Somewhere a deep toned bell told of the hour in the sailors' accustomed fashion. From somewhere out of the depths of the vast groaning fabric tumbled the men of the watch who were now to go on duty to relieve their storm beaten fellows.

And somewhere down in the shivering, rearing hull a gaunt faced, hollow eyed man lay on the saffron hued velvet cushions of a narrow couch at the side of a luxurious stateroom. He was fully dressed in spite of the lateness of the hour and of the fact that he was sleeping—just as he had been the night before. He tossed uneasily. Sometimes he thrust his hands out convulsively as though to ward off a threatening danger. He began to talk incoherently. The ship rolled, and a tray containing dishes and an evening meal that had gone untouched crashed to the floor. "The press—the printing press—has started," he muttered disjointedly as the sound of the breaking dishes penetrated into his wearied brain. His hand instinctively crept under one of the cushions. It grasped and for a moment fumbled with a blue steel object, which it drew weakly forth—a revolver. The shock of the cold steel roused the sleeper. He opened his eyes and gazed fascinatedly at the instrument of death. With a cry of terror he relaxed his fingers, and the object dropped to the floor. He groaned the groan of a lost soul in the anguish of its never ceasing torture. He turned his face to the wall and tried in vain to close his eyes in sleep.

Judgment had been pronounced in the case of "JUDGE BARTELMY VERSUS THE PEOPLE, WHEELER BRAND AND THE ADVANCE."

Local Party News.

Under this head will be published the news concerning the activities of the Ward Branches of the Socialist Party in Columbus and from Locals in Franklin county. All news and announcements should be sent in not later than Wednesday morning.

City Headquarters at 184½ South High Street.

FIRST AND SECOND WARDS.

The First and Second Ward Branches have arranged for a joint propaganda meeting at Weirich's hall, corner Schiller and Parsons, Tuesday evening, March 28. The speakers will be J. L. Bachman, R. E. Radebaugh, J. W. Freeman and D. J. Farrell. Everybody invite.

FOURTH WARD BRANCH.

The meeting of the Fourth Ward Branch, last Sunday evening, was of a nature indicating that the comrades in that ward are up and doing. The Branch cleared over $25 on a picture show entertainment last week. Propaganda meetings are being arranged for. Comrade Lewis, of The Columbus Socialist, was the speaker of the evening.

SIXTH WARD BRANCH.

The Sixth Ward Branch enjoyed a practical talk last Suday afternoon, from Comrade J. W. Freeman on "Organization." He gave the details of the plans followed in the Eleventh Ward. Comrade R. E. Radebaugh, of The Columbus Socialist, gave an address on "False Issues."

NINTH WARD BRANCH.

At a meeting on Thursday, March 9, the Branch was entertained by Master Thomas Gates, aged 11, of the Fourth Ward, who gave a talk which would have done credit to many an older person. We congratulate the Fourth Ward in having a boy of such ability. Samuel Cochran, of the Twelfth, also gave a talk on the "Growth of Socialism." Three new members were obligated and two applications passed. Standing room was at a premium, and these meetings are attracting a great deal of attention and bringing the progressive people of the Ninth Ward together.

ELEVENTH WARD BRANCH.

The Eleventh Ward Branch is doing some mighty good work and doing it systematically. A week ago last Sunday its precinct captains distributed 3,500 copies of The Appeal to Reason, between 6 and 9 o'clock in the morning. The money to pay for these papers was raised almost entirely among people not members of the party. The Eleventh Ward claims to have the most perfect organization in the city. It is now up to the other ward branches to show them what they can do and have done.

LOCAL LINDEN HEIGHTS.

Local Linden Heights will hereafter meet every Sunday afternoon at Comrade McDonald's blacksmith shop north of the brickyard.

The Columbus Motor Car Transportation Company stockholders will elect directors next Monday afternoon, at 1 o'clock, at Odd Fellows' Hall, 198 South High street. It is now determined to push this enterprise without any more delay. It is a good thing and should receive the support of all who favor fairness.

FATHER LEYDEN FAILS TO ANSWER QUESTIONS

READS A PAMPHLET WHICH HAS BEEN SHOWN UP AS GARBLED.

Rev. Father A. M. Leyden was announced to preach at St. Francis' Catholic Church, Wednesday evening, on the subject, "Why a Catholic Can Not Consistently Become a Socialist." Many of Father Leyden's hearers were disappointed, for instead of giving a discourse he read a pamphlet circulated by a church society and giving garbled extracts from the writings of certain Socialists. This pamphlet has been shown up often as garbled and misleading. A letter, sent to Father Leyden last Monday, was ignored by him. It is as follows:

Columbus, O., March 13, 1911.

My Dear Father Leyden:

"I notice you are to talk on "Socialism," at your church next Wednesday evening, and would like you to reply to the following queries, as I will be present to take note of your remarks for use in the coming campaign:

If the Socialists should obtain for mankind, as they claim they can, better housing, better clothing, better food and more leisure, would not man be better fitted to practice the precepts of our church?

If the powers of government were used to protect human rights, instead of property (as at present), would we become better or worse Catholics?

If our church has decided to take a part in the political arena, are we going to strike for or against capitalism?

Would criticism of our opposition to Socialism be "irreverence" to the church?

What party, if any (Socialist excepted), offers any relief to the workingman, and what do they offer?

What is your remedy for the protection of our girls who are compelled to work, under the present system, for less than their "board and clothing?"

How can a girl, who has no home and is compelled to work for five dollars or less per week, lead a virtuous life?

Yours for the truth,

MARSH C. GREEN.

LEGAL NOTICE.

Columbus, O., Feb. 7th, 1911.

Notice is hereby given that the first meeting of the stockholders of The Columbus Motor Car Transportation Company will be held at I. O. O. F. Hall, 198 South High street, Columbus, Ohio, at 1 o'clock p. m., on the 20th day of March, 1911, for the purpose of electing directors and transacting such other business as may properly come before the meeting.

N. H. Wilson, Geo. W. Poor, M. J. O'Rourke, Will F. Houck, George W. Bope.

AN IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT!

The Socialist is no longer an experiment, the result of which is uncertain. The steady growth in circulation and the kind approval of the paper given by the comrades of the city and state are the best evidence that The Socialist has struck the right chord.

This is a Socialist paper, but it is different, and our readers seem to like it.

When The Socialist was first published its publishers did not propose to urge the comrades of this city to invest in something which might prove a failure. Large sums of money have been lost in Socialist publishing enterprises, promoted by enthusiastic workers in the cause. It was the intention to place the paper upon a safe basis and then ask for the co-operation of party members in devising larger things. That time has come. There is no longer any doubt as to The Socialist being a success. As indicated, our subscription list is increasing—not by leaps and bounds, but steadily.

The Postoffice Department has admitted the paper to the second-class mailing privilege, thereby reducing a heavy financial drain.

One of the necessities in the near future is a printing plant of our own—a Socialist plant to supply the enormous demand for propaganda and other printed matter. We must have it.

To do this The Socialist Publishing Company now offers its stock for sale at the par value of $10 per share, payable in cash, or $1 down and $1 per month until the amount subscribed for is paid.

The Socialist Publishing Company was incorporated for $10,000, and of this amount $1000 has been sold. There remains $9000 which will be sold to Socialist party members on the terms stated.

Of course, The Socialist will be published anyhow, but the time is at hand when greater and better plans should be carried out. To do this requires money. NOW IS THE TIME FOR ACTION.

SUBSCRIPTION FOR STOCK.

I, the undersigned, do hereby subscribe for.....shares of stock in The Socialist Publishing Company, of Columbus, Ohio, at the par value of $10 per share, payable in cash upon delivery of the stock, or One Dollar in cash and One Dollar per month until the amount subscribed is paid.

The SOCIALIST

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF, BY AND FOR THE WORKERS

VOL. 1. No. 14. COLUMBUS, OHIO, SATURDAY, MARCH 25, 1911. PRICE, $1.00 PER YEAR. SINGLE COPIES, 3 CENTS.

THE SOCIALIST SENDS SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT TO EUROPE

Ella June Purcell Will Visit Cities of the Continent to Investigate Municipal Government.

The most important problem that immediately confronts the American people is that of municipal government. The cities and towns of the United States have been for decades the common prey of looting politicians, who are the pliant tools of the Big Business Interests. This is true in general everywhere, and in Columbus in particular.

The Socialist party, in the course of human events, expects to have placed upon it the responsibility for the conduct of public affairs in this city, and it is of vital importance that it be fully informed as to the duties that will be assumed. There is no selfish purpose in this. The people at large of Columbus are the ones to be benefited.

To aid this work for the commonweal THE SOCIALIST PUBLISHING COMPANY has secured ELLA JUNE PURCELL, the well-known member of the firm of Quinby and Purcell, attorneys. Her commission is to visit Germany, France, Switzerland, Holland, and other European countries, for the purpose of studying and reporting upon the municipal governments of the leading continental cities where the best methods have been developed in spite of the fact that, with one exception, the nations visited are monarchies. She will, as a matter of course, tell of the part taken in this movement by the Socialist party. This fact is ignored by most writers upon the topic. They have told many interesting things, but have been silent as to the force that has put Home Rule into practice, even under almost despotic national rulers.

Miss Purcell will leave for Europe as soon as some business affairs of her firm are adjusted and her itinerary arranged. The results of Comrade Purcell's investigations will be published from week to week in THE SOCIALIST, and will be one of the valuable features of this paper. Miss Purcell's portrait and a brief sketch of her career will be found on another page.

The thousands of readers of THE SOCIALIST will join us in saying bon voyage to our first special representative to foreign soil.

"NEW RICHMOND IN THE FIELD."

The Columbus Republican-Herald is the new name of the Franklin County Herald, and the new editor is Attorney E. W. Brinker. The first issue of the re-christened sheet last week declares it will be a "helpful weekly publication, that shall occupy what has seemed to us, for some time, to be a much neglected field of news, namely, the Republican political field in the city of Columbus, the county of Franklin, and as far outside of Franklin county as our influence will reach." The editor proposes to "make a specalty of giving that news which pertains to Republican political and administrative matters and which has for so long a time been absent from the daily press of the capital city of the really great State of Ohio. IT IS SAID THAT IN A RECENT CAMPAIGN THE REPUBLICAN PARTY WAS COMPELLED TO SPEND A SMALL FORTUNE WITH PROMINENT DAILY PAPERS IN ORDER TO EVEN GET THE NAMES OF ITS CANDIDATES, AND THE PLATFORM ON WHICH THEY STOOD FAIRLY BEFORE THE PEOPLE OF COLUMBUS. THIS WAS A HARDSHIP ON THE COMMITTEE, ON THE CANDIDATES, AND ADDED LARGELY TO THE EXPENSES OF THE CAMPAIGN. You who decry exorbitant campaign assessments and feel that elections should be conducted on a plane above ordinary commercialism should not be ignorant of the fact that commercialism has so entered into the habits of political life that it crops out in most unexpected places when candidates and parties make an attempt to appear before the people for their endorsement and support."

This really is a sad state of affairs, and Editor Brinker has undertaken a big job. There is only one thing lacking in his announcement. He does not say that the paper proposes to head off Socialism. It will take more than the Republican Herald to save the G. O. P. this fall, and don't forget it.

OUR ATTITUDE TOWARD THE CHURCH.

We do not ask any church or any other religious society, to endorse the Socialist party. Such a course would injure both the church and our party. The people in general instinctively resent any combination of church and state.

But the ethics of the working-class movement will just as certainly capture the church as that the Socialist party will capture the state. This will be brought about by permeation rather than by conflict. At least the battle will be fought out within the religious field itself. It is impossible that the Socialist party should ever take issue with the church, unless the church enters the political arena and makes the attack upon us.

What is our demand upon the churches? Only that they understand us. Ignorance is not conducive to spirituality.

But in the religious world itself a social conscience has been born. Wholeness and holiness are found to be related words. To blame the sinner personally for his own condition, and give society itself a clean bill of fare, may be satisfactory to the Billy Sunday type, but not to the nobler minds in the field of religion.

Slowly a new evangel will displace the old and a new ethics will come with the new economic age.

Frederick Guy Strickland.

DISTRIBUTION OF LITERATURE.

One of the most promising signs in the Socialist movement is the steady increase in the regular distribution of literature reported from all parts of the country.

The regular distribution of literature led to the capture of Milwaukee by the Socialist party. And the Milwaukeeans merely followed the example of the great German Socialist party.

The election last week of two Socialist aldermen in Muscatine, Iowa, is ascribed to a literature campaign.

Local Columbus has gained an unprecedented increase in membership owing to the regular distribution of literature.

A great deal more can be done. We can not expect the older men to do much of this most important work. But every young party member should make it a point of honor to serve a term on the literature bridgade. Nor will he have to serve long, for his efforts will soon bring new recruits, eager to continue his work and to convert others by the same method by which they have been converted.

COUNCIL STILL SQUIRMING.

The city council dodged, and wriggled and squirmed, last Monday night in a pitiful way on the gas ordinance. Instead of amending any of the ordinances that were already before the committee and had already received their second readings, both sides introduced entirely new ordinances. One introduced by Baldridge, chairman of the committee, fixes the rate definitely at 30 cents net a thousand feet for ten years. The other, introduced by Councilman Chris Ross, puts the rate at 25 cents net for the first five years and 30 cents net for the last five years of a ten-year period.

Neither measure had supporters enough to force a vote. In the meantime, the gas companies say that the only rates they will accept are 30 cents net, the presen rate, for the next five years, and 35 cents, or an arbitrated rate, for the following five years.

The American Tobacco Company—the Tobacco Trust—paid, during the year 1910, 42.2 per cent. on its common stock to the amount of $25,000,000. This over and above dividends paid on preferred stock and interest paid on $100,000,000 in bonds.

It seems that the trust is not worried by the prospect of an adverse decision from the United States Supreme Court.

WOEFUL PLIGHT OF CHRIS ROSS.

The amended redistricting ordinance came up again in city council Monday night, and, after being mangled some more, got a second reading and goes over another week. Chris Ross is convinced that the committee in charge of the ordinance was after him when it fixed up the new scheme. He declared:

"Every councilman here has some chance of being re-elected in these new wards except me. I'm right on the boundaries of the West Side wards. I've Socialists to the right, Socialists to the left and DEMOCRATS to the REAR! Now what the devil kind of a chance have I got?"

An irreverent Socialist suggests that Chris might take to the river. The cold fact is that the gang wants to dump Chris, in order to head off Socialism.

LIES ABOUT LABOR TROUBLE.

Information contained in reliable reports that have reached Cincinnati show that there is no truth in the rumors of numerous killings in connection with the strike of the firemen of the Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific Railroad.

The facts show that none has been killed as a result of the strike, and that only six men have been injured. Five of these are not even seriously hurt, while the other man is reported to have a chance for recovery. According to reports in the Associated press papers, as high as eleven men had been killed during the trouble. It seems impossible for the A. P. to tell the truth about labor troubles. Every act of union men that can be construed to mean disorder is magnified a thousand fold, and when there is no foundation at all the imagination is drawn upon.

The history of the world has never offered such a stupendous opportunity to any class in any nation as it now offers to the producing class of America. All things are in readiness for a grand forward movement for the human race. If you, the workers of America, will use your votes to seize the governmental powers of the United States and throw them in the world's balance for progress, instead of permitting our great material resources being used on the side of reaction in the councils of the nation, as is now being done by our industrial kings, who control the national, state and city governments, the workers of the whole world will bless you in every language. AROUSE YE SLAVES AND POSSESS YOURSELVES OF WHAT RIGHTFULLY BELONGS TO YOU, AND USE IT FOR HUMAN EMANCIPATION. YOUR MASTERS NOW USE IT TO PERPETUATE SLAVERY AND ALL FORMS OF EXPLOITATION AND ROBBERY.

New York.—Charles Belling, third vice president of the Bronx National Bank, got fifteen months in Sing Sing for stealing $30,000 of the bank's funds.

On the same day, Friday, Emil von Jegeman, a grocer wagon driver, got thirteen months in Elmira for stealing $50 given him by a customer.

Von Jegeman got the $50 bill on February 13. Indictment and trial followed promptly, no obstacles being raised in his behalf by any one.

In addition to the prayers of a mother for her boy, who had fallen under sudden temptation, the probation officer said he had looked up Van Jegeman's past and found it good.

Capitalists and capitalist industries are ruled by the capitalist system. That is why there can be no sentiment in business. The business man who runs his business on sentiment soon faces the bankruptcy court.

That promise of lower rates for coal next month, sent on from the East by the coal czars, would sound better if the lesser rate was granted for the present month while the coal trust's victims are using coal.

George Harper, councilman-at-large and candidate for mayoralty nomination, sent his picture to the Buckeye Republican Club, last Saturday, together with a letter. The members calmly and cruelly voted to receive and file the lecture and picture, but directed that the latter should not be hung upon the wall. This was "the most unkindest cut of all."

The postal savings banks are pretty sure to be increasingly popular with the people. It could not well be otherwise since we are approaching panic years, when a good many of the smaller banks and those given to speculation will be crushed like egg shells.

St. Louis Socialists are using a special paper, called The People's Voice, for house to house distribution in their municipal campaign.

In some of the smaller states of Germany there are even kings who are suspected of voting the Social-Democratic ticket.

Columbus, O., March 13, 1911.

My Dear Father Leyden:

"I notice you are to talk on "Socialism," at your church next Wednesday evening, and would like you to reply to the following queries, as I will be present to take note of your remarks for use in the coming campaign:

If the Socialists should obtain for mankind, as they claim they can, better housing, better clothing, better food and more leisure, would not man be better fitted to practice the precepts of our church?

If the powers of government were used to protect human rights, instead of property (as at present), would we become better or worse Catholics?

If our church has decided to take a part in the political arena, are we going to strike for or against capitalism?

Would criticism of our opposition to Socialism be "irreverence" to the church?

What party, if any (Socialist excepted), offers any relief to the workingman, and what do they offer?

What is your remedy for the protection of our girls who are compelled to work, under the present system, for less than their "board and clothing?"

How can a girl, who has no home and is compelled to work for five dollars or less per week, lead a virtuous life?

Yours for the truth,

MARSH C. GREEN.

AN IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT!

The Socialist is no longer an experiment, the result of which is uncertain. The steady growth in circulation and the kind approval of the paper given by the comrades of the city and state are the best evidence that The Socialist has struck the right chord.

This is a Socialist paper, but it is different, and our readers seem to like it.

When The Socialist was first published its publishers did not propose to urge the comrades of this city to invest in something which might prove a failure. Large sums of money have been lost in Socialist publishing enterprises, promoted by enthusiastic workers in the cause. It was the intention to place the paper upon a safe basis and then ask for the co-operation of party members in devising larger things. That time has come. There is no longer any doubt as to The Socialist being a success. As indicated, our subscription list is increasing—not by leaps and bounds, but steadily.

The Postoffice Department has admitted the paper to the second-class mailing privilege, thereby reducing a heavy financial drain.

One of the necessities in the near future is a printing plant of our own—a Socialist plant to supply the enormous demand for propaganda and other printed matter. We must have it.

To do this The Socialist Publishing Company now offers its stock for sale at the par value of $10 per share, payable in cash, or $1 down and $1 per month until the amount subscribed for is paid.

The Socialist Publishing Company was incorporated for $10,000, and of this amount $1000 has been sold. There remains $9000 which will be sold to Socialist party members on the terms stated.

Of course, The Socialist will be published anyhow, but the time is at hand when greater and better plans should be carried out. To do this requires money. NOW IS THE TIME FOR ACTION.

SUBSCRIPTION FOR STOCK.

I, the undersigned, do hereby subscribe for.....shares of stock in The Socialist Publishing Company, of Columbus, Ohio, at the par value of $10 per share, payable in cash upon delivery of the stock, or One Dollar in cash and One Dollar per month until the amount subscribed is paid.

The SOCIALIST

VOL. 1. No. 14. COLUMBUS, OHIO, SATURDAY, MARCH 25, 1911. PRICE, $1.00 PER YEAR. SINGLE COPIES, 3 CENTS.

THE SOCIALIST SENDS SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT TO EUROPE

Ella June Purcell Will Visit Cities of the Continent to Investigate Municipal Government.

The most important problem that immediately confronts the American people is that of municipal government. The cities and towns of the United States have been for decades the common prey of looting politicians, who are the pliant tools of the Big Business Interests. This is true in general everywhere, and in Columbus in particular.

The Socialist party, in the course of human events, expects to have placed upon it the responsibility for the conduct of public affairs in this city, and it is of vital importance that it be fully informed as to the duties that will be assumed. There is no selfish purpose in this. The people at large of Columbus are the ones to be benefited.

To aid this work for the commonweal THE SOCIALIST PUBLISHING COMPANY has secured ELLA JUNE PURCELL, the well-known member of the firm of Quinby and Purcell, attorneys. Her commission is to visit Germany, France, Switzerland, Holland, and other European countries, for the purpose of studying and reporting upon the municipal governments of the leading continental cities where the best methods have been developed in spite of the fact that, with one exception, the nations visited are monarchies. She will, as a matter of course, tell of the part taken in this movement by the Socialist party. This fact is ignored by most writers upon the topic. They have told many interesting things, but have been silent as to the force that has put Home Rule into practice, even under almost despotic national rulers.

Miss Purcell will leave for Europe as soon as some business affairs of her firm are adjusted and her itinerary arranged. The results of Comrade Purcell's investigations will be published from week to week in THE SOCIALIST, and will be one of the valuable features of this paper. Miss Purcell's portrait and a brief sketch of her career will be found on another page.

The thousands of readers of THE SOCIALIST will join us in saying bon voyage to our first special representative to foreign soil.

"NEW RICHMOND IN THE FIELD."

The Columbus Republican-Herald is the new name of the Franklin County Herald, and the new editor is Attorney E. W. Brinker. The first issue of the re-christened sheet last week declares it will be a "helpful weekly publication, that shall occupy what has seemed to us, for some time, to be a much neglected field of news, namely, the Republican political field in the city of Columbus, the county of Franklin, and as far outside of Franklin county as our influence will reach." The editor proposes to "make a specalty of giving that news which pertains to Republican political and administrative matters and which has for so long a time been absent from the daily press of the capital city of the really great State of Ohio." IT IS SAID THAT IN A RECENT CAMPAIGN THE REPUBLICAN PARTY WAS COMPELLED TO SPEND A SMALL FORTUNE WITH PROMINENT DAILY PAPERS IN ORDER TO EVEN GET THE NAMES OF ITS CANDIDATES, AND THE PLATFORM ON WHICH THEY STOOD FAIRLY BEFORE THE PEOPLE OF COLUMBUS. THIS WAS A HARDSHIP ON THE COMMITTEE, ON THE CANDIDATES, AND ADDED LARGELY TO THE EXPENSES OF THE CAMPAIGN. You who decry exorbitant campaign assessments and feel that elections should be conducted on a plane above ordinary commercialism should not be ignorant of the fact that commercialism has so entered into the habits of political life that it crops out in most unexpected places when candidates and parties make an attempt to appear before the people for their endorsement and support."

This really is a sad state of affairs, and Editor Brinker has undertaken a big job. There is only one thing lacking in his announcement. He does not say that the paper proposes to head off Socialism. It will take more than the Republican Herald to save the G. O. P. this fall, and don't forget it.

OUR ATTITUDE TOWARD THE CHURCH.

We do not ask any church or any other religious society, to endorse the Socialist party. Such a course would injure both the church and our party. The people in general instinctively resent any combination of church and state.

But the ethics of the working-class movement will just as certainly capture the church as that the Socialist party will capture the state. This will be brought about by permeation rather than by conflict. At least the battle will be fought out within the religious field itself. It is impossible that the Socialist party should ever take issue with the church, unless the church enters the political arena and makes the attack upon us.

What is our demand upon the churches? Only that they understand us. Ignorance is not conducive to spirituality.

But in the religious world itself a social conscience has been born. Wholeness and holiness are found to be related words. To blame the sinner personally for his own condition, and give society itself a clean bill of fare, may be satisfactory to the Billy Sunday type, but not to the nobler minds in the field of religion.

Slowly a new evangelism will displace the old and a new ethics will come with the new economic age.

Frederick Guy Strickland.

DISTRIBUTION OF LITERATURE.

One of the most promising signs in the Socialist movement is the steady increase in the regular distribution of literature reported from all parts of the country.

The regular distribution of literature led to the capture of Milwaukee by the Socialist party. And the Milwaukeeans merely followed the example of the great German Socialist party.

The election last week of two Socialist aldermen in Muscatine, Iowa, is ascribed to a literature campaign.

Local Columbus has gained an unprecented increase in membership owing to the regular distribution of literature.

A great deal more can be done. We can not expect the older men to do much of this most important work. But every young party member should make it a point of honor to serve a term on the literature bridgade. Nor will he have to serve long, for his efforts will soon bring new recruits, eager to continue his work and to convert others by the same method by which they have been converted.

COUNCIL STILL SQUIRMING.

The city council dodged, and wriggled and squirmed, last Monday night in a pitiful way on the gas ordinance. Instead of amending any of the ordinances that were already before the committee and had already received their second readings, both sides introduced entirely new ordinances. One introduced by Baldridge, chairman of the committee, fixes the rate definitely at 30 cents net a thousand feet for ten years. The other, introduced by Councilman Chris Ross, puts the rate at 25 cents net for the first five years and 30 cents net for the last five years of a ten-year period.

Neither measure had supporters enough to force a vote. In the meantime, the gas companies say that the only rates they will accept are 30 cents net, the present rate, for the next five years, and 35 cents, or an arbitrated rate, for the following five years.

The American Tobacco Company—the Tobacco Trust—paid, during the year 1910, 42.2 per cent. on its common stock to the amount of $25,000,000. This over and above dividends paid on preferred stock and interest paid on $100,000,000 in bonds.

It seems that the trust is not worried by the prospect of an adverse decision from the United States Supreme Court.

WOEFUL PLIGHT OF CHRIS ROSS.

The amended redistricting ordinance came up again in city council Monday night, and, after being mangled some more, got a second reading and goes over another week. Chris Ross is convinced that the committee in charge of the ordinance was after him when it fixed up the new scheme. He declared:

"Every councilman here has some chance of being re-elected in these new wards except me. I'm right on the boundaries of the West Side wards. I've Socialists to the right, Socialists to the left and DEMOCRATS to the REAR! Now what the devil kind of a chance have I got?"

An irreverent Socialist suggests that Chris might take to the river. The cold fact is that the gang wants to dump Chris, in order to head off Socialism.

LIES ABOUT LABOR TROUBLE.

Information contained in reliable reports that have reached Cincinnati show that there is no truth in the rumors of numerous killings in connection with the strike of the firemen of the Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific Railroad.

The facts show that none has been killed as a result of the strike, and that only six men have been injured. Five of these are not even seriously hurt, while the other man is reported to have a chance for recovery. According to reports in the Associated press papers, as high as eleven men had been killed during the trouble. It seems impossible for the A. P. to tell the truth about labor troubles. Every act of union men that can be construed to mean disorder is magnified a thousand fold, and when there is no foundation at all the imagination is drawn upon.

The history of the world has never offered such a stupendous opportunity to any class in any nation as it now offers to the producing class of America. All things are in readiness for a grand forward movement for the human race. If you, the workers of America, will use your votes to seize the governmental powers of the United States and throw them in the world's balance for progress, instead of permitting our great material resources being used on the side of reaction in the councils of the nation, as is now being done by our industrial kings, who control the national, state and city governments, the workers of the whole world will bless you in every language. AROUSE YE SLAVES AND POSSESS YOURSELVES OF WHAT RIGHTFULLY BELONGS TO YOU, AND USE IT FOR HUMAN EMANCIPATION. YOUR MASTERS NOW USE IT TO PERPETUATE SLAVERY AND ALL FORMS OF EXPLOITATION AND ROBBERY.

New York.—Charles Belling, third vice president of the Bronx National Bank, got fifteen months in Sing Sing for stealing $30,000 of the bank's funds.

On the same day, Friday, Emil von Jegeman, a grocer wagon driver, got thirteen months in Elmira for stealing $50 given him by a customer.

Von Jegeman got the $50 bill on February 13. Indictment and trial followed promptly, no obstacles being raised in his behalf by any one.

In addition to the prayers of a mother for her boy, who had fallen under sudden temptation, the probation officer said he had looked up Van Jegeman's past and found it good.

Capitalists and capitalist industries are ruled by the capitalist system. That is why there can be no sentiment in business. The business man who runs his business on sentiment soon faces the bankruptcy court.

That promise of lower rates for coal next month, sent on from the East by the coal czars, would sound better if the lesser rate was granted for the present month while the coal trust's victims are using coal.

George Harper, councilman-at-large and candidate for mayoralty nomination, sent his picture to the Buckeye Republican Club, last Saturday, together with a letter. The members calmly and cruelly voted to receive and file the lecture and picture, but directed that the latter should not be hung upon the wall. This was "the most unkindest cut of all."

The postal savings banks are pretty sure to be increasingly popular with the people. It could not well be otherwise since we are approaching panic years, when a good many of the smaller banks and those given to speculation will be crushed like egg shells.

St. Louis Socialists are using a special paper, called The People's Voice, for house to house distribution in their municipal campaign.

In some of the smaller states of Germany there are even kings who are suspected of voting the Social-Democratic ticket.

THE UNITED STATES AND MEXICO.

SPECIAL PRIVILEGE VERSUS HUMAN RIGHTS—THE CLASS WAR.

That the United States government is dominated and controlled by Special Privilege (Moneyed Aristocracy) is surely proven by the action of the administration in the mobilization of troops on the Mexican border line.

The moneyed aristocracies of Europe and America have large holdings in railroads, mines and various other enterprises in Mexico, under the watchful care of Diaz, the Usurper, who made large concessions for which he hopes to realize larger favors.

The Mexican government is an autocratic despotism, of which Diaz, the president, so-called, is a mere tool of the special privilege class of England, France, Germany and the United States. By means of his reign his subjects have been reduced to a state of peonage quite equal to that of Russia. These peons have rebelled, and, under the leadership of Francisco Madero, who, in fact, they elected their president last year, are fighting for their freedom and independence. Hence the insurrection in Mexico, where a down-trodden people are seeking to throw off a yoke of tyranny by means of civil war, just as the Cubans did under Spanish oppression, and likewise ourselves in the War of Revolution, to become a free and independent nation.

Hence it is that the Taft administration has been ordered to send troops to the Mexican border to aid Diaz quash the rebellion. Why? To protect the interests of certain capitalists who have large holdings in Mexico.

General Madero, the leader of the revolutionists, has promised to protect foreigners and their interests, and requests other nations to keep hands off in this fight for their liberties and their rights.

Why does the United States government not accept the terms of the revolutionists and leave the Mexicans settle their differences in a fair fight? Because peonage is more profitable to Special Privilege than will be the more humane treatment of the working class under Madero.

Remember, it was Special Privilege who drove the insurrectos of Mexico to rebel against the oppression to their peonage! It was Special Privilege who introduced the presidents of the two so-called republics on the bridge at El Paso and Juarez, there to pledge their powers of government to capitalism!

It was Special Privilege who ordered the mobilization of troops on the Mexican border line!

It was Special Privilege who assembled the United States navy to patrol the Mexican coast!

It was Special Privilege who plotted, schemed and deceived the people by subterfuge and lying to get as much of the army as possible on the Mexican border line, thus ready to usurp the rights of another at the command of their emissaries in England, Germany and France!

It is time for the citizens of the United States to call a halt to this kind of proceedure.

Are we to be treated like a herd of swine, to be penned up for a butchering at the command of a moneyed plutocracy, whose god is the almighty dollar? What is the goal of all this warlike "maneuvering," and who is to benefit by its acquisition? The goal is property interests in Mexico, which, was obtained by certain capitalists in this and foreign countries by confiscatory means, through Diaz acting in his official capacity and as a tool of Special Privilege.

It is property interests versus human rights! Injustice versus justice! Wrong versus right! It is placing the value of property above that of human life! The citizens of Mexico fighting for their liberties against the power of usurpation—against autocracy and plutocracy!

Special Privilege knows no law of righteousness, seeths in iniquity and crime, and burdens every commonwealth with disaster and death.

Special Privilege was so bold when it became apparent that righteousness might become justified on behalf of these peons of Mexico, who had risen under their yoke of oppression to fight for their freedom, that the Constitution of the United States was disavowed—usurped by a non-delegated power—and the accouterments of war flaunted in the faces of a bewildered citizenship. Have the people of the United States no rights which their president is bound to respect? What right had Mr. Taft to call out the army to go to the Mexican border line to intimidate the revolutionists on the one hand and the federals on the other? It was a breach of the Constitution, wherein Congress alone has the power to call the army into action.

Since Mr. Taft has so boldly and so unconstitutionally taken sides with the moneyed oligarchy of a sister nation, and thus proven his disloyalty toward the majority of his own people, whose interests are jeopardized by this unwarranted provocation of war, it behooves the people of the United States whose interests are centered in the welfare of our people rather than in the "almighty dollar" to enter a most positive protest against this most flagrant violation of our common good. Every man, woman and child who has a care for the American workingman should sign a declaration of impeachment, and thus depose a president who seeks to enthrone a plutocracy upon the wretched slavery and accursed peonage of mankind!

The war of the classes is on! Workingmen, arouse! By your ballots seize the reigns of government at the next election and save our own beloved United States! And thus we will help save Mexico!

E. A. PALMER.

Fairfield County Notes.

(Crowded Out Last Week.)

We are in the way of getting enthusiastic down here, for it's about to happen. We mean that we are getting down to solid rock and may be depended on to show some one surprising results in the near future. Certain it is that we are creating more interest and comment than anything that has happened in this community for a decade. Comrade Griffith has been holding forth for a week, via the soap-box route, and the comrades are putting out a lot of literature in the crowds attracted. The best indication of conditions here is the remarks you hear favorable to points brought out in the lectures, and the good will of the working class is slowly but surely leaning our way. And why not? Surely these times of high prices and low wages should cause them to think. Shall we turn over our souls and bodies to the task-masters, along with those of our wives, children, parents and brothers and sisters, to the end that, through their agony, suffering, and by the sweat of our brows, By which we earn bread, the masters shall reap the profit? Verily not! Let us put some courage and "do it now" into our work, accepting no refusals, no rebuffs, and fight until victory is won.

Only a few short years ago Socialists were called visionaries and anarchists by people who did not realize the harm they were trying to accomplish. A tap of the forehead, a sneering laugh, a boycotted man among his fellow-workers (poor things) marked the Socialist. Today he is a marked man, but in a different manner. He is distinctive from his fellow-man, through victory over all these adverse conditions, and has emerged from the fight many, many times a better man, truer to his community and his fellow-man.

Our meeting at Lancaster, Sunday, the 12th, was poorly attended, owing to heavy rain and other adverse conditions; but what we lacked in numbers we gained in giving the work new impetus.

This week we hope will see the securing of our new hall room, where we can greet our friends in a more convenient manner and with less confusion. We have also arranged with a committee to secure the services of Comrade Strickland for a lecture, and are preparing to go through the plutes, in much the same manner they have been going after us, lo! these many moons.

Comrade Renshaw, of Sugar Grove, is much improved at this writing. Local Sugar Grove reports on new member last meeting.

Comrade Haus, secretary of Local Lancaster, is still sore in his shoe and not able to attend to his duties.

J. P. Morgan has pulled the string and Uncle Sam, great protector of the capitalist, has danced to the tune of 30,000 men on the Mexican border to help Satan's friend, Diaz, crush more workers. And the worst feature is that the d—n fools who are to do the crushing are workers and producers in this "land of the bond-holder and home of the scab." Why not let Ex-Convict Coach and his rotten crew of moral lepers, led by the valiant "E. K.," do the job?

Ha! ha! How we do go on!

LANCASTER LOCAL.

OH, WHAT A DIFFERENCE!

During the time the local streetcar strike was in existence an ex-convict shipped into this city many of his friends as strikebreakers. The mayor and many of the municipal authorities knew they were here. A man named McCollister exhibited his artillery around the saloons for two weeks preceding the strike. During this time two men were arrested at the union depot as vagrants or suspicious characters. Why was it that Mr. McCollister was not arrested? He was a vagrant and with him Brady a criminal. Attorney Dawley, who has since become ashamed of his criminal associates, has helped purify Cleveland by emigrating to Los Angeles. They were all in the same class. But listen to what they did to the Coach gang in Oklahoma:

(By United Press.)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., March 11.—Recognition of the streetcar conductors and motormen's union was conceded in a conference between President Classen of the company and labor officials.

The employes' strike was immediately called off and the union men returned to their cars. The strike was begun last Sunday morning.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., March 10.—Eleven of fourteen imported strikebreakers brought here by the street railway company were arrested by the police in the car barns.

All of the men were armed with guns, "knucks" and various other weapons.

When the police went to get the men they hid in the cars. Three escaped.

No cars have been operated since last Sunday morning, and a settlement seems near.

"I don't think I can give the prisoners justice in my court," said Police Judge Highley.

"It is a felony under the state law for a corporation to ship in a bunch of 'thugs' to win a strike. I am going to turn them over to the higher court for prosecution."

Mayor Lackey has refused the street car company policemen on cars to be operated by strikebreakers.

SOME FACTS ABOUT GAS.

New Lexington, O, March 6, 1911.

Since the Socialists of Columbus are in a gas fight, I thought a few facts and figures from a neighboring town might give the consumers of Columbus a little help in settling the question of a higher gas rate. New Lexington has a 30-cent gas rate, if paid on or before the 10th of each month. We get our gas from the same company that supplies Colmbus. The tile-works of New Lexington bought the product of several gas well in this vicinity at 5 cents per thousand at the well, and it is reported here that that was more than the Ohio Fuel Company would pay for it; at least the companies owning the wells seem glad to have a local market for their gas. A gas well averaging 1,000,000 cubic feet per day pays the farmer who owns the land from $100 to $200 per year, depending upon the kind of lease he has obtained. It pays the company drilling the well $18,250.00 per year, and the company marketing the gas to the dear people of Columbus $19,500.00 per year. Now this is just a medium gas well I have taken as an example. But should the well be a large one, say 10,000,000 cubic feet per day for a year, then the gas company would collect from the people of Columbus $1,119,500.00 per year for just one well. I will not try to compute the product of more than one well, for the figures are so great that the human mind does not comprehend them, but it may help to show how the Standard Oil Company makes some of its millions from the people of Columbus. When these gas wells were sold at 5 cents per thousand the gas people explained that the difference between the cost of gas at the well and the market cost to the consumer was because it cost the gas company so much to get its franchise from the councils of the different villages and cities that it had to charge the consumer a high rate. I don't know anything about your councilmen in Columbus, but I suspect that if the people know all about the gas problem there would certainly be a Socialist council and mayor elected in Columbus next fall.

Your Comrade.

G. P. ALLISON.

THEN LIBERTY WILL BE BORN.

Among the pro-slavery men who battled for the justice of negro slavery previous to the Civil War none proved a greater defender of that particular institution than John C. Calhound, for many years a representative in the United States Senate from South Carolina. Arguments were buried at the abolitionists by him that have not been answered to this day.

"We slave-holders turn not our old slaves, after their useful days of service are over, out on the highways to die of neglect and want, nor do we send them to the poor farm, that is poor indeed. They are cared for from the cradle to the grave, and pass away surrounded by their loved ones."

On one occasion, when Calhoun was in New York—in those days there were few railroads and it was his habit to ship from Savannah to New York in order to reach Washington—it was thought proper to take cognisance of the presence of a great man, as Calhoun was recognised to be, and invite him to deliver an address at the Chamber of Commerce. It was doubtless an inspired meeting to show to the wealthy merchants and manufacturers of New York that the interests of the owners of the wage-slave, as Calhoun denominated free labor, and the interests of the chattel slave owner were identical. Slavery, either chattel or free, was an economic question in which the wealthy, whether an employer of one or the other, were of an interest identical. He opened his address to the members and their invited friends, all men of wealth, upon the Empire State of the Union, the growth of the state and the metropolis, then he launched into that which always lay next his heart, the slavery question.

"Let me tell you, men of the North," pointing his long bony finger, "you among you who would destroy slavery, that slavery is but the outpost of all human servitude, all human servitude is but SLAVERY. You destroy the outposts and the citadel is bound to fall. You destroy black slavery in the South and your white slaves here in the North will rise to a man; they will break from their enfettered limbs the galling chains of wage slavery, and they will hurl those chains in your face."

Much water has passed under the bridge since that long ago. The men of the North did go down in the South and destroy black slavery, and now all over the land and in the world the white slave is struggling at the galling chains of wage slavery. He is mighty of limb and brawn; he will break them, for he now recognised that all "servitude is but slavery."

GOVERNMENT EMPLOY STEALS

Washington.—Following his confession that he stole and sold more than $10,000 worth of stamps, Arthur M. Travers, chief clerk to the third assistant postmaster general and for a time acting assistant to Postmaster General Hitchcock, was today dismissed from the government service. There will be no criminal proceedings.

How significant! There will be no criminal proceedings. Why not?

Don't we send men to the penitentiary right along for stealing a loaf of bread or a pair of shoes?

Isn't it a well known fact that the Federal government will follow a man to the ends of the earth, pursue him for twenty years if necessary, and spend thousands of dollars in making the capture and securing a criminal conviction if the man counterfeited a one dollar bill or embezzled fifty cents or defrauded the government out of two cents by reusing a cancelled two-cent stamp?

And here is a trusted Republican employe, who steals $10,000 worth of stamps and he is to go free. How strange!

Not a bit strange after all, if you look down a little deeper. TRAVERS MAY KNOW TOO MUCH ABOUT THOSE HIGHER UP for them to dare prosecute him, for he held a very responsible position under the capitalist crew in charge of the Federal government.

It was a position with immense power and for which just such a corrupt character was suited. His past record showed his fitness for the position, to the powers that be.

And this was the creature that was placed in a position to pester, maltreat and harass the Socialist press of the land, and he promtly took advantage of every opportunity to do it injury.

Once more let it be repeated: "THERE WILL BE NO CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS."

The most harmful and wasteful thing is competition. It means that men's abilities and energies are devoted to fighting each other instead of being devoted to the production of better results.

The day will come when competition will be as much out of date as war or the plague. All of those horrors will disappear one after the other, and go to join the old instruments of torture that are kept in the museums.—Arthur Brisbane.

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION.

News From The World Wide Movement Of The Workers.

NEWS FROM THE NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS

Comrade Hill, State Secretary of Florida, reports a 40 per cent. increase in the sale of dues stamps during last month and bright prospects for the party in that state. An order for two thousand party buttons was received from the city of Tampa. This is the scene of the recent protracted Cigar Makers' strike. A lively city campaign is on in that town. The workers are beginning to realise that the government is a good thing for them to control.

Comrade Lanferdek, State Secretary of Kentucky, submits a comparative statement of receipts for dues in that state, as follows: February, 1909, $4.10; February, 1910, $21.05; February, 1911, $50.20. Such reports, and others of like character from different states, make possible and probable the announcement, in the near future, of the enrollment of 100,000 dues-paying members.

The National Executive Committee, by vote, has granted $50 a month each to the translators of the South Slavic Socialist Federation and the National Polish Section of the Socialist party, and have provided for maintaining a publicity agent in the city of Washington, D. C., during the term of the special session of Congress, beginning April 4.

NOTICE TO LOCALS—In the matter of endorsing proposed national party referendums the locals are requested, when sending notice of a second to any proposal, to also state in the same communication the number of good-standing members enrolled in the local. This will avoid further and unnecessary correspondence. The Constitution provides that referendum shall be submitted "upon the request of locals representing at least five per cent. of the entire membership of the party on the basis of dues paid in the preceding year."

The Bohemian Socialists will hold a national convetion in the city of Chicago, beginning April 28 and continuing until May 1.

One of the most important measures now before the city of Milwaukee is the question of whether the city shall be allowed to do its own street work directly or continue to employ contractors. The superintendent of street construction has presented figures which are very convincing, showing how much the city could gain from doing its own work. This idea makes the contractors shiver, and they are raising a desperate howl through the capitalist press.

Seven new leaflets, at the price of $1.50 a thousand each, will be ready for shipment from the National Office by March 24. The shipping date will permit of the use of these leaflets by many locals in the closing days of the municipal campaign. The titles of the leaflets are as follows:

"The Labor Movement Here and Abroad," by Morris Hilquitt.

"The Rising Tide of Socialism," by Carl D. Thompson.

"Socialism and Private Property," by John M. Work.

"Old Age Pensions," by W. J. Ghent.

"A Legislative Program," by Winfield R. Gaylord.

"The Children of the Poor," by Eugene V. Debs.

"Government by Commission," by J. J. Jacobsen.

OHIO SOCIALIST NEWS.

The Crestline Insurgent, Volume 1, No. 2, reaches our exchange table. M. J. Beery, otherwise known as "Jack," is editor and manager. Comrade Beery is one of the men who are Socialists all over. The Insurgent is red hot. John Dinsmore is associate editor.

The Commonwealth is a new Socialist paper, published at Salem. Orom D. Gray is managing editor and Charles Bonsall is associated editor. It said last week: "You are one of the members of one of the 5,000 households of Columbiana county, to which a copy of The Commonwealth will be delivered each Sunday morning, as long as the industrial people see proper to support this paper.

"Who is FREDERICK GUY STRICKLAND?

"He is one of the ablest lecturers now in the field, and will speak in Salem, Tuesday evening, May 30, 1911, under the auspices of the lecture bureau of the Socialist Publishing Company, of Columbus.

Comrade Peter Allen, secretary of Local Derwent, writes The Socialist regarding Comrade Strickland's date at that place, and adds: "On Sunday, March 19, we had the largest local meeting we ever had. I believe we will elect our full township ticket next election down here. We have our own co-operative store in full blast and doing a large business. The boys are taking hold of it fine. This makes three stores of this sort in Guernsey county.

Workingmen in Marion have organized a co-operative store, and The Marion Socialist is booming it.

WISCONSIN NOTES.

The bitterest fight ever waged against the Socialists by the Democratic-Republican combination in the Milwaukee city council took place last week. The battle lasted six hours. The anti-Socialists made a savage onslaught, marked with calumny and slander. The Social-Democrats replied with dignity and spirit and on the ground of class-conscious Socialist principles.

When the Socialists assumed control in Milwaukee the other side was at first rather good-natured. Our opponents had the notion that ours would be a weak administration, and that the Social-Democrats would not take very strong ground in any direction. But now they see that the Socialists mean business, that they are really doing things, and that this will cut out the profits of the grafters. Consequently, they are growing very bitter. What angers them most is the proposal of the Social-Democratic administration to do away with the contractors and their profits and to have the city perform its own street work and other work directly.

This seems to them a terrible blow. Up to the time when the Socialists took control the contractors had their own way in Milwaukee. Under the former administrations they flourished and grew fat.

Now, in their wrath, the contractors and their friends are holding so-called "taxpayers' meetings," and forming so-called "taxpayers' clubs." They are filling with their complaints the daily papers, which are only too glad to print their side of the story, and entirely suppress our side of it.

This proposition that the city shall do its work directly, without the intervention of contractors, was one of the subjects hotly debated at the last Milwaukee city council meeting.

Another was the Milwaukee River Park project. The establishment of this park carries with it the plan for model workingmen's homes. Hence it was bitterly fought by the anti-Socialists. One corpulent representative of capitalistic interests, who would like to see the river lined with smoky factories pouring their sewage into the water, said that "a city commercial is better than a city beautiful." Comrade Berger retorted that, better than either, is a "city healthful."

The measure was finally passed and Milwaukee will have its great park system. The Republican-Democratic combination insists that there was a legal flaw in the procedure. Even if this was the case, the flaw can be mended, and the working class will not be cheated out of this great benefit.

Now a curious part of this story is that next day the daily papers of Milwaukee had full reports of what the anti-Socialists said in the council, but scarcely a word of all the good things in the speeches of Victor L. Berger and the other Socialists. The Milwaukee daily papers are becoming worse and worse in their attitude toward the Social-Democracy. It appears that the only way in which the Socialists can get the truth before the people will be to get a Socialist daily in Milwaukee, just as soon as they can procure the funds to start it.

The enemies of Socialism have taken another means to block it in Milwaukee, as they hope. They are trying to push through the Wisconsin legislature a bill for non-partisan elections in all city elections. This bill has already passed the Wisconsin state senate. They intend, by means of this bill, to defeat the Social-Democrats in the next municipal election, and thus recover Milwaukee for the forces of capitalism. But they are reckoning without their host. While this bill, if finally passed, will no doubt make it harder for the Socialists to keep Milwaukee in 1912—why, then they will just work so much the harder, and show the enemy that all their desperate efforts against Socialism were simply hate's labor lost.

This fierce fight against the Social-Democrats is only solidifying the working class. The Federated Trades Council, of Milwaukee, held a glorious meeting last night. They appointed a special campaign committee of speakers to visit all the unions and address them on the issues of the present campaign, appointed another committee to sell bonds for the Milwaukee Socialist daily, voted to withdraw their label advertising from the capitalist daily which has most opposed the Socialists, and adopted ringing resolutions endorsing the Social-Democratic administration and defending it against the attacks of the capitalistic press. Thus the labor unions are taking up the Socialist fight as their own.

The struggle in Milwaukee gets more and more interesting. It is the conflict between the working class and the capitalistic interests. The lines are drawn more closely every day. But the final issue of the fight can not be doubted.

E. H. THOMAS,
State Secretary.

GENERAL SOCIALIST NEWS.

Bohemian Socialists will hold a national convention in Chicago, April 28 to May 1, inclusive.

Special election at Granite City, Ill., resulted in a victory for Socialist candidate for alderman. Politicians fear it means the loss of the city.

Socialists of Germany are making a hard fight against the war plans of the government, but they are being defeated by the bloody ruling class and its political hirelings.

The free speech fights in Boston have been won by the Socialists. It cost them $100, but the historic old town will still bid defiance to tyranny, whether it be kingcraft or capitalism.

Ramsay Macdonald has been elected chairman of the Labor party of the British House of Commons. He is what might be termed a conservative Socialist—among the "57 varieties."

Unionists and Socialists at La Crosse, Wis., are opening a big co-operative store. Shares are $5, and no more than two sold to any one person. Sixty per cent. of members must carry union cards.

The Polish Socialists and the South Slavic Socialist Federation have organized so rapidly in this country that they are now entitled to translators at national headquarters of the Socialist party, at the rate of $50 per month each.

Scandinavian Socialists are making preparations to start two weekly papers in Chicago. One will be Svenska Socialisten, in Swedish, and the other a Norwegian-Danish paper. Those interested can address Charles H. Sand, Lake View, Ill.

A big Socialist vote will be polled in Chicago next month. That is admitted on all sides. Not only is the S. P. growing rapidly, but many workingmen are forming independent clubs to support Rodriguez, the business agent of the painters, for mayor.

Editor Stanley B. Wilson, of the Los Angeles Citizen and formerly a pure and simple (Republican) unionist, is out making speeches for the Socialist party. Some of the plute dailies are roasting Wilson for daring to move forward, and as a consequence the labor editor is becoming quite popular.

Francis Feehan, who has just been reelected president of the Pittsburg district of miners after a fierce campaign in which certain plute newspapers and operators took a hand, declares that the election of "Jim" Masser, the Socialist plumber at Reading, will result in four and possibly five more districts going Socialist at the next election.

As in a number of other cities during the past couple of weeks, the workingmen at Galesburg, Ill., were unmercifully trimmed in trying to get their candidates nominated on old party tickets. This fact has made the Galesburg Labor News so blamed mad that it announces in its last issue that it intends to support the Socialist ticket.

The legislature of Prussia has passed a resolution declaring unlawful the Young People's Socialist League and ordaining that that organization must be dissolved. Now watch the kids have fun fooling the capitalist masters and their police. Perhaps the league will be turned into a Sunday school class or "boy scout" organization. Anyway, the interest will be greater now than ever before.

COOK-HIGBY DEBATE. VICTORY FOR SOCIALIST

Volunteer Canton Comrade Floors a Vindictive Clergyman.

The debate in Canton between Allen Cook and the Rev. Arthur Higby, of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, completely filled the big auditorium, even though an admission fee was charged. About eighteen months ago Rev. Higby gained considerable prominence in denouncing the prohibition movement and his popularity was especially marked among "the working people." When Allen Cook, a short time ago, chided the clergy with being indifferent to the social struggle that is grinding women and children into profits, paupers and prostitutes, Rev. Higby felt called upon to act as spokesman for the gentlemen of the cloth and denounced Cook's declarations from the pulpit. Then the latter came back through the Canton News-Democrat with a couple of columns and suggested that a public discussion be held. Rev. Higby assented, and 4,000 people went to the auditorium expectant and came away disappointed. From all accounts it could hardly be called a debate. Rev. Higby displayed such gross ignorance of Socialism and the labor movement generally that his friends wondered why he was foolish enough to engage in a public discussion. To cover his confusion he thought it would be a good scheme to employ the Davis Goldstein-Martha Moore Avery tactics and condemn the Socialists as free lovers, home wreckers, etc. Then Cook went after him and produced statistics to show that thousands of preachers have been convicted of seduction while no known Socialist is in jail anywhere for any such crime. The audience fairly raised the roof as Cook drove home point after point, and when Higby made a final desperate effort to defend the weak position that he chose somebody yelled, "How about Rev. Lupton?" That put the finishing touch to Higby. A visiting minister to Canton remarked to a carload of people: "If I were in Higby's place I never would speak in public again. Never!"

ORGANIZER SHINN'S WORK.

A. B. Shinn, state organizer, tells of progress and need of organization in all parts of the state, as follows:

"In Midland City a number of persons wishing to organize, were meeting regularly each week, and called the organization the 'Socialist Club.' They did not know how to get a charter or to even locate the state office.

"Holloway, with a population of about 1,000, had elected a full Socialist ticket, including mayor and councilmen, but had no organization, not even a dues-paying member. The mayor and councilmen placed their resignation (with no date) in the hands of the new Socialist local.

"In Sherodsville the mayor and city clerk gave their immediate resignation, to become charter members in the new local of 24 charter members.

"There are many places ready for organization. Look over in your next town and see if it is ready, and, if so, get busy comrade. Help them organize. On the tour just finished I have secured applications for charters for Holloway, Flushing, Cenaburg, Sherodsville, Monday, Murray, Midland City, Troy and Macon. Macon is in Brown county, where the official report to the state gave 'No Socialist votes cast,' but the tally-sheets of the November election show 31 straight Socialist votes and a number of mixed votes."

COMRADE BLOOR AT LARGE IN OHIO TOWNS AND CITIES

CAPTURES PEOPLE AT MT. VERNON, WHERE SHE OCCUPIES PULPIT.

The meetings held in Ohio so far have been most encouraging. In St. Mary's the activity is so marked that people for miles around say, "Those Socialists are going to carry the town of St. Mary's this election;" and I believe they will. Their organization is increasing every day, and they have a system of covering the town regularly with literature. They also have a good weekly Socialist paper, well patronized by local advertisers.

In Sidney the meeting was held in the court house. Many tickets were sold and the assembly hall was filled. In this and other places, where time enough is given, ticket selling has proven the very best method of securing a really good meeting. In the first place, members of the party themselves take more interest, and in selling the tickets frequently have an opportunity of making a talk on Socialism.

Very often, too, the financial success of the meeting will be assured by this method while the collection is always doubtful.

In Bradford the meeting was held in the Star Theater, and was well attended. The comrades here have interested a number of railroad men in Socialism and have organized a group of unusually intelligent young men in our movement. One or two of them at least will be able to take the stump this summer in Bradford and nearby towns.

In Mt. Vernon we found another town sure of "capturing the city" this fall. With a population of less than 10,000, they have a membership of nearly one hundred. At my meeting Sunday afternoon seven applications for membership in the party were secured, and a large audience seemed deeply interested in the address.

In the evening I occupied the pulpit of the Church of Christ, with Rev. Mr. Francis, the pastor, who is holding special services. The church was packed to the doors with people sitting on the steps of the pulpit and standing everywhere. My brief address preceded the sermon, and the subject was "The Cause and Cure of Child Slavery." The texts were these: "Suffer little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven;" "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." The comrades of Mt. Vernon were especially gratified by this invitation from the church, as it was the first time a Socialist had occupied one of Mt. Vernon's pulpits.

ELLA REEVE BLOOR.

SOCIALISM THRIVES IN CLEVELAND.

The remarkable growth of the Socialist party in Cleveland is best exemplified by the increase in the dues-paying membership of the Socialist party.

The number of members initiated in January was 74 and in February 128, or over 200 in the two first months of the year. The first week of the present month found 26 applications in the hands of the City Central Committee, and March bids fair to surpass February in the gain of organization members.

The total membership in the city up to March 1 was 1,186, and Organiser Schroeder has no hesitancy in saying that fully 2,000 persons will be enrolled before the November election, and every ward will be well organized with propagandists to spread the new political doctrine.

The need of a weekly paper in the German language has been severely felt in this community for some time, and on May 1 it is proposed to launch such a publication which will be known as The Echo. There has also been talk of starting a strictly propaganda paper in the English language, and there may be some developments along this line in the near future.

The unusually large meetings that are being held in various parts of the city every week are also creating a great deal of comment, and the enthusiastic manner in which such speakers as C. E. Ruthenberg, Tom Clifford, William Bessemer and others are being received are further signs of the general awakening that is taking place all along the line. In fact the older members of the Socialist party who did the early pioneering make no attempt to conceal their pleasure at the satisfactory turn of affairs.—Cleveland Citizen.

In a recently printed list of the Standard Oil Company there appears the names of eleven of the nobility of Europe. They are drawing 40 per cent. dividends out of the hide and tallow of these great free Americans, who would rather die than support royalty! Say, what chumps some people are and don't know it!

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE JAPANESE INVASION, THE WORKING CLASS OR THE CAPITALIST CLASS?

We are being told that it is necessary to mobilize some of our ships and soldiers for fear of a Japanese invasion. We will admit that some of the best military movements have been made under cover of the artillery's smoke. But what we fail to understand is why United States soldiers and sailors are closing in on a non-combatant's battlefield in Mexico. Some of the papers tell us that our "property interests" are being jeopardized by the Mexican rebellion. If the United States wants to locate a point where the Japanese have invaded, let them go to the island of Honolulu. For the last ten years the labor unions on the Pacific Coast have been warning the government at Washington of the danger of allowing the yellow race to over-populate our island possessions. The Korean Exclusion League, the principal fighter against this cheap class of Asiatic labor, has been condemned by state officials and presidents as being an unpatriotic body, and yet today the working class is called upon to be patriotic and help expel them with guns and bayonets. Who brought them here? The capitalist class. What for? To keep down wages by flooding the labor market with cheap labor. Where are they employed? On all the large Western railroads and plantations. What has become of the white section-hand? Ask Mr. Taft who owns stock in these railroads and ranches. Capitalists all over the globe. Does Japan hold any of these stocks and bonds? Most assuredly. This is a mere commercial transaction, controlled by international stock exchanges. What about Mexico? Same state of affairs. Foreign investors placed their money in Mexican industrial enterprises because it was possible to buy Mexican labor cheap and receive large profits in return. But why are they in rebellion in Mexico? Because the working class have demanded the right to vote for what they want for their daily needs in Mexico. They want to stop producing for a foreign herd of parasites whom they never see or knew. To be plain, they want Mexico to be for the Mexicans and for the common interest of the real producers of all wealth.

But surely our government is not going to allow foreigners to grind flesh and blood into golden dollars? Why, we drove these non-producers out of this country, and founded what we call a republic. Yes! But remember that you can drive criminals out of any county. But you can not stop them investing their stolen property in the country they were evicted from. The capitalist don't care if you are a white, yellow or black man, just as long as you and your class will work cheap to increase the profits on his investments. We only hear of a race or color question when there is a scarcity of jobs. And this rebellion in Mexico is significatn of the fact that the workers of Old Mexico are awakening to realise their real strength on the economic battlefield. Today they re fighting to overthrow the greed of Capitalism. Quite recently some Japanese coolies struck for more wages. Who was the first to condemn the leader? Why, the representative of capitalism, the Japanese consul. The interests of all capitalists are to keep the working class in wage-slavery. The real invasion that the capitalist class fear is the march of the Socialist party.

Remember, fellow-worker, that creed and race prejudices are only sprung in times of industrial depressions. Remember that wars increase taxes and, the workers being in the majority, the burden falls on your shoulders. The capitalist brought the "war scare" here to increase his profits. Now let him do the fighting. The load on your back is already heavy. Why add to your earthly burdens. YOUR WAGES ALWAYS COMMENCE FROM THE LOWEST MARGIN OF SUBSISTENCE.

"The mass of mankind has not been born with saddles on their backs, nor a favored few booted and spurred, ready to ride them legitimately, by the grace of God.——Thomas Jefferson.

JIM, HENDERSON.

You workers have in your own hands the power by which you may consciously make your economic and social world. When you learn to use your class power intelligently, want, poverty, degradation, child-labor, sweatshops for men, women and children, and long degrading hours of drudgery will pass away and be remembered only as a bad dream. Wind, steam, electricity are now harnessed to the magic tools you have created and handed over to your masters to torture you with. When you have intelligence enough to possess yourselves of them, they will relieve your burdens. While you recognize your master's title to them, they are the instruments of your enslavement and the enslavement of your wives and children. Study Socialism and learn the way to economic, social and intellectual freedom.

Comrade J. B. Fisher, of Linden Heights, is on the firing line.

STRICKLAND LECTURE TOUR.

Saturday, April 15, Eaton; Sunday, 16, Miamisburg; Monday, April 17, Red Lion; Tuesday, 18, Springfield; Wednesday, 19, London; Thursday, 20, New Lexington; Friday, 21, Lancaster; Saturday, 22, Derwent; Sunday, 23, Byesville; Monday, 24, Mineral City; Tuesday, 25, Salem; Wednesday, 26, Lisbon; Thursday, 27, Warren; Friday, 28, Wadsworth; Saturday, 29, Akron; Sunday afternoon, 30, Massilon; Sunday night, 30, New Philadelphia; Monday, May 1, Wellington; Tuesday and Wednesday, 2 and 3, Mansfield; Thursday, 4, Mt. Vernon; Friday, 5, Findlay; Saturday, 6, St. Marys; Sunday, 7, Piqua and Troy; Monday, 8, Sidney; Tuesday, 9, Bellefontaine.

The above are the dates assigned for Comrade Fred G. Strickland's first lecture tour under the auspices of The Socialist. It seems to be the best possible arrangement that could be made. Advertising matter has been sent to the various locals, and now all that is needed is some activity on the part of the comrades in each place in order to make every one of these meetings a grand success. Comrade Strickland will do his part. He knows how, and any town he speaks in receives a new Socialistic shake-up.

OUR LEGISLATIVE MORGUE.

"Windy Smith," of Marion, Has Again Vomited on Labor.

March 22 labor representatives from all over the state came to Columbus, to see the minority report of the Liability Commission deposited in the legislative embalming tank. Windy Smith, of Marion, performed the obsequies, assisted by Bertsch and Hanby Jones, of Franklin county. Labor should realise that, while we may be asked to adopt some new orphan, let us be vigilant for fear that organized labor be charged with its parentage. Outside of conducting inquests on labor bills, the only real business, so far transacted, was to allow "Hypocritical Smith," of Marion, to make a buch of money by selling cushions to "legislative seat-warmers."

Governor Harmon was only defending his claim when he ordered labor leader Charles Frank, of Canton, to be s-p-e-c-i-f-i-c when talking against the interests of the rat Keystone Watch Company. When were you with your class last election, Brother Frank? If not, remember there is another election to come.

THE PARK COMMISSION.

The board of elections has decided to call a special election, on April 18, to decide the question of creating a park commission. The Chamber of Commerce has been backing the park commission idea and has arranged for a strong campaign in its support.

It should be known that Socialists are heartily in favor of parks and particularly when the parks are located so as to supply breathing spaces in the congested portions of our cities. The Socialist does not wish to be placed in the attitude of "knocking" any proposition that will add to the facilities by which the people can get the fullest possible enjoyment of nature's ample pleasures.

There are, however, some things about this park commission business, as projected by the Chamber of Commerce, that should be understood before we could advise the working people of Columbus to vote for the commission.

First. It is not just apparent why a separate commission is needed in order to get more parks. The department of public service has this work now in charge. With the right kind of an administration we could have a real City Beautiful. Is there some hidden purpose? Is some one seeking to reap a harvest of graft and build up a political machine at the expense of the taxpayers?

In asking this we do not wish to reflect on all the men who are promoting this park plan. There are several men, notably George W. Lattimer, who are above any such suspicion.

Second. In case a park commission is constituted, it should be provided that all work should be done directly by the city without giving contractors and sub-contractors the immense profits they usually secure. Milwaukee has led the way in this.

Third. The employment of union labor should be guaranteed. The Chamber of Commerce has always shown itself opposed to organized labor, although it now is seeking the help of the unions in this park scheme.

Fourth. It seems that the Chamber of Commerce has the complete charge of this plan. Is some real estate syndicate formed already to promote a huge deal, by which land bought cheaply can be sold at high prices? There are reports to this effect.

Fifth. The West Side includes about one-fourth of the population of Columbus. Its people are protesting against the fact that out of the 100 members of the committee in charge of this commission plan only four or five live west of the river. A West Sider said, the other day: "We have the cemeteries, the workhouse, the morgue, the dog pound, the imbecile and insane hospitals, and schoolhouses overcrowded so that storerooms are being used for school purposes, but not a park have we." The West Siders want to know if they are to have a chance. Mere hints will not do. There are other sections interested as well.

Unless these points are satisfactorily explained The Socialist must urge the working people of Columbus to vote the park commission down.

TOM SOUTHARD DEFENDS EIGHT HOUR BILL

Ex-Governor James Campbell and Ex-Secretary of State Daniel J Ryan Condemn the Working Women's Eight Hour Bill Before the Ohio Legislature.

These two distinguished representatives of the Democratic and Republican parties hurled the vicious spleen of capitalism against a measure drawn up to protect the rights of womanhood. The ex-Governor said that telephone operators had little to do but "chew gum" and say the "line was busy." He admitted he went into a laundry where the heat was so fierce that "he could not have staid inside the building more than ten minutes." Said he was standing on the Democratic platform. He said "he did not believe that any employe had been coerced into signing petitions against the measure." Mr. Campbell has recently returned from a trip to Europe. Few of the working women take such trips. It was plain proof that the Democratic-Republican leaders are out to crush the working classes, whenever the capitalist is willing to pay the price for their service.

Thomas C. Southard, an employer and likewise a member of the Socialist party, contradicted these two representatives of capitalism by telling the Ohio Legislature that, since adopting the eight hour work-day in his factory, they have received better results, loyalty and a greater net gain at less cost for production.

E. L. Hitchens, of Cincinnati, and Miss Ella Hass, of Dayton, also made forcible speeches in favore of th[illegible]

BARBERS' UNION.

The Columbus Federation of Labor's Legislative Committee endorsed the Barbers' Sanitary Shop Bill. The measure is worthy of public support, and it is to be hoped that the legislature will at least give the same a hearing. The bill reads as follows:

"To regulate the occupation of barbering, to create a board of examiners for the licensing of persons to carry on such practice, to insure the better education of such practitioners, to provide rules regulating the proper sanitation of barber shops, schools and colleges, preventing the spreading of contagious and infectious diseases, thereby insuring to the general public cleaner and better service."

NOTICE TO ORGANIZED LABOR.

Cincinnati, March 16, 1911.

To Whom It May Concern:

At the last meeting of the Central Labor Council of Cincinnati and vicinity the following resolution was adopted, and ordered given publicity:

"To correct an impression that prevails throughout the state in reference to Wm. J. Rohr on the Workmen's Compensation Commission, the Central Labor Council desires to say that neither this council, nor any union in the city so far as we know, was consulted in his appointment; that we did not endorse him, or know of his appointment until after it was made. We therefore disclaim any responsibility for his appointment or his actions subsequent thereto. We recognise only those as representatives of labor who obey its wishes and work for its interests. We desire to further say that the Cincinnati Chronicle is not the property of the Central Labor Council, but of Frank L. Rist, and that we have nothing to say in the selection of those who work upon that paper."

Fraternally,
WILLIAM PROUT,
Secretary Central Labor Council.

MORTOR COMPANY ORGANIZES.

Stockholders of the Columbus Motor Car Transportation Company elected directors Monday for the proposed bus line, organized by unionists. The following were chosen: William N. Gourley, Nelson N. Gallentin, Obed Jewell, George W. Poor, John D. O'Dea, Wiley B. Smart and John W. Schumm.

"The venture is a sure go," said Poor. "We are practically a unit on the proposition, and we have assurances that with the completion of the organization work we will have funds sufficient to see us through."

The directors will meet shortly to elect officers and perfect plans. The company is capitalized at $100,000.

There seems to be no doubt now that the plans, so long delayed, will be carried out. Every friend of organized labor should help to put this enterprise on its feet.

THE RED INK BRIGADE.

Capatinia Bushisky has retrieved. When it came to clubbing poor defenceless street-car strikers this swashbuckling hero was in his glory. He could even follow up his venomous desire for revenge by heading a grand jury, but when it came to leaving his happy home, he said, "Me for state contracts." He is a ballroom glue pot during the perfumed "social season," and the smoke of battle might spoil the effect of his lightning bug illumination at the state capitol. "Bush," Mexico will never know what she missed in not seeing you. Oh, if Barnum could rise from the dead and again hunt for freaks!

Left-tenant De Squeese longs, with tearful eyes, to go to Mexico; but, if we remember rightly, some one with a name similar to this is more liable to go to jail for state graft. It looks as if every crook in the country has a grudge against Old Mexico.

Several Ohio senators are desirous of helping President Diaz. For all the good they have done the working class in the Ohio senate, and for all the harm they would do the cause of real Mexican independence, let them begin to sing, "I Want to Be an Angel," and then we, the PEOPLE, will Amen their request by warbling, "Oh, Let It Be Soon!"

Adjutant General Weybreeches went to Washington to offer his best services to the Morgan-Rockyfeller Brigandage Co., Limited. "These Are My Jewels" reads an inscription in the Ohio State House grounds. We hope the gallant worm disturber from Ohio hid his face when he passed the statutes of Lafayette and Paul Jones. Suppose these national heroes had stood with King George in the same manner that you, Mr. Weybreeches, intend to stand with King Rockyfellow and Emperor Morgan, things might have been different with the British forces. But then soldiers of fortune care nothing about patriotism or civil rights.

Washington, D. C.—Placing the militia directly under the control of the Federal government, so that no local or state opposition can prevent its use to break strikes, the new militia bill just passed the House of Representatives is the latest word of menace against organised labor from the allied monied interests.

The bill provides for a graduate scale of wages to be paid to officers and men of the militia, ranging from 5 to 30 per cent. of the regular pay for officers to 15 per cent. of the army pay to enlisted men.

SUNDAY LABOR CONDEMNED.

Columbus Federation Endorses Closing of Postoffice on Sunday.

The following resolution was unanimously endorsed by the Columbus Federation of Labor, relative to the closing of the postoffice on Sunday:

Whereas, Sunday (the Sabbath) is a day set aside by our Divine Maker as a day of divine workship and rest; and

Whereas, The selfishness of employers is such today that, unless steps are taken to preserve the Sabbath as a day of divine worship and rest, that it will ere long be entirely forgotten; and

Whereas, It is necessary at this time to force some employers and public office-holders to respect the law of God and man; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we hereby publicly denounce the postmaster of Columbus for his antagonism in fighting the movement to close the postoffice on Sunday in the city of Columbus, O., and we heartily endorse the movement to respect the Sabbath by closing the postoffice, and we declare ourselves as in favor of any movement to abolish all labor on the Sabbath as well.

Endorsed unanimously.

CONSISTENCY, THOU ART A JEWEL!

The Christian people of Columbus are trying to secure a seventh day of rest for postal employes, and yet every Sunday morning a retired minister of the Gospel, or some of his relatives, appear at the Columbus postoffice to demand mail. Why not stay up Town street till Monday morning, Mr. Inconsistency?

The New York Telegraph recently told a good kind of a Hibernian joke in a dramatic way. The parish priest was going his rounds when Marty Sullivan ran up to him with his eyes the size of saucers. "Shure, father," said he, "Pat Driscoll has hanged himself in his barn."

The priest said, "You cut him down, of course?"

"No," said Marty; "he wasn't dead yet."

PINKERTON SPIES IN OHIO STATE HOUSE.

The following is a copy of an official report of a detective, found in the gallery of the senate chamber in the State House, at Columbus, on Monday afternoon, March 21, near where the "Rev." J. H. Boeckter, "business agent" of the Employers' Association of Toledo, and other "reformers" were sitting.

The "Rev." Walking Delegate was observed looking anxiously for something he missed. "If it was them there papers," they were safely tucked away in the pocket of James Henderson, of Columbus.

The report evidently was made to an employers' organization by one of the Pinkertons or other employers' detective agency, and may be accepted as official and indisputable evidence that spies are continually watching honest workingmen wherever they are, even in the legislature:

Operative No. 71. C-8.

Friday, March 17, 1911.

The following is my report for today:

I went to the school building at the corner of Ashland and Mehan street, at 6:30 A. M., and seen only a few pickets in front of the work; I think there was five. No one said anything to the carpenters, four carpenters on the job. Strikers left at about 7 A. M.

I stayed around the work until near 9 o'clock, came to the downtown building and seen only a few carpenters on picket, but several structural iron-workers were on the corner of Jefferson street and Summit street. Went do several saloons, but heard nothing said about the strike.

Went again to the school building at 2:30 P. M.; had quite a chat with one striker by name of Andy Fraisy. He followed me up on the grands and asked me what I was doing or what company I represented. I told him I might be a time-keeper. He said they hired a time-keeper, but said some one had got him away. I said, "Oh, you have worked here, have you?" He said, "Yes, he had worked for Speaker for the last eight years." I said, "What's the matter you are not working?" He said they were on a strike, about forty men or carpenters had quit. He then stated that Speaker was unfair; had always been a very strong union man until this came up; but said he hoped the trouble would end soon, and, if Speaker would not give in again April 1, the whole town or all the carpenters would be out, but said he did not want to see it. He said he had better get out or he might be arrested. I said, "Why, no one would arrest you, would they?" He then walked away. He told me of Jake Bishop being fined or put out of the union. No trouble in sight.

I left after the carpenters had gone, 5:30 P. M.

THE WORKERS' RIGHT TO BE SUSPICIOUS OF THE CAPITALIST CLASS—A REPLY TO P. H. MORRISSEY.

Mr. P. H. Morrissey, ex-chief of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, the man who has been trying to use the labor movement to kill all Congressional rate legislation, is credited with uttering these words at New Haven, Conn.: "Any man who tries to set class against class and labor against capital must be regarded with suspicion."

Of course, when we realize the high salary paid this conservative critic for his decoy services, we realise that "Whose bread he eats their song he sings." Yet we offer events in history to warn Mr. Morrissey against his own associates, the capitalist class.

First. Does Mr. Morrissey intend to blend honest motives with dishonest? Does he believe that the rich have a right to get richer, and the poor poorer? Listen! In 1893 the Review of Reviews published the following information: "The owners of small homes in Chicago are assessed at one-fourth, one-third and even one-half there real value, while the owners of mansions and skyscrapers escape with one-tenth, one-twentieth and even one-thirtieth their value. Marshall Field, for instance, reported six horses, valued at $120; carriages, six, valued at $180; one piano, valued also at $150. P. D. Armour, three carriages, valued at $90. G. M. Pullman, ten horses, valued at $200; six carriages, at $150; one piano, $150. The United States Brewing Company, total returns for personal property was $50. The Union Rendering Company, of the Stockyards, in 1893, returned the following personaly property: Twenty-five horses, $250; eleven wagons, $110; one safe, $15; total, $390. Do you call this class distinction, Mr. Morrissey? If so, why condemn the class struggle?

SUNDAY BILL AND SUNDAY BALL.

Bill Sunday was a ball player once upon a time. Now he is a rip-roaring rooter, and he gets the coin. One of Mr. Sunday's admirers is Mr. Selby, of Portsmouth, O. This geneleman is one of the worst labor crushers in the state. Sunday left Portsmouth to help kill the devil in Lima, O. The next day Mr. Selby left for Columbus, to kill the Woman's Eight Hour Bill. What a contrast?

The Rev. Harpster is against Sunday ball. He is not locked up for sixty hours a week in an industrial prison, known as a workshop. Mr. Harpster is an ardent admirer of Sunday Bill. The other day this reverend brother told our state senate that some of the senators smelt bad. The good brother must have smelt his own breath.

Until ministers have the nerve and backbone to stand for the shorter work-day, let them cease trying to deprive the workers of what little liberty they have on Sunday. These spineless reformers are a menace to real reforms. Where was you, Mr. Harpster, when the Woman's Eight Hour Bill was before the senate? Sunday, Selby and Harpster! What an unholy trinity?

JUDICIAL DESPOTISM IN FRANKLIN COUNTY.

"When a citizen of the United States gives security to obtain his freedom, the court who receives the bond should by law protect the individual." Something is rotten with the courts of Franklin county. To be plain, it looks as if unseen voices were influencing the men who were elected to dispense justice instead of special privileges to special interests. At the present time the county jail is nothing more than a vicious sweat-box. Confined behind its walls—in silent chambers—are men who have been arrested on the infamous charge of conspiracy. The man who convicted them was a being with an insane military mind, and above all a self-confessed detester of labor unions.

We have our own opinion as to how this tyrant became part of that judicial inquisition. Likewise, the reason why the majority of the men under him were of the same vicious caliber. The victims of these judicial tyrannies have only recently been allowed to see their wives. Recently, two of the men obtained bail, and went to work in a distant city. The minds that convicted them caused the papers of that locality to print their names and the offenses that they were convicted for. This resulted in the men losing their jobs. Talk about the tyranny of the Russian government! But keep in mind the fact that the Russian government has never convicted any of her subjects in the last few years without giving them a court trial. But it is different in the State of Ohio. One of the indicted men was told he could not go to work until the courts declared him "not guilty." What about the Rail-Light criminals? Sure they could go home to friends, be kept on the company's pay roll, etc. Justice! "A rose by any other name would smell as sweet," in Franklin county, anyhow.

Don't forget, Mr. Prosecutor, that the general public wants to know more about that police murder. We want to know why the post-mortem was called off. The victim of the policeman's club was a citizen, and the citizens elected you, and not the privileged interests. The man Begeritti was murdered in cold blood, and it is your duty to let the public know the real facts. The press may talk about the GOLDEN RULE methods in force at our city police court. If the public is to measure policies by the accomplishments of a policeman's club, why talk of Golden Rules in Columbus?

Don't forget that one of the delegates to the Columbus Federation of Labor testified before two hundred delegates that he heard a witness promised a job by a Rail-Light official if he would go on the stand and testify against a stone thrower. Governor Harmon pardoned Paul Bucholtz because he did not believe him guilty. The same source that convicted Bucholtz is being relied upon to deprive honest citizens of their liberty. Brethren, eternal vigilance is the watchword of Liberty.

KENNELS AND CRADLES.

Some of the residents of Columbus are begging the Recreation Bureau not to place a children's wading pool near their residences, because of the "exhibition and noise." We suspicion that these miserable creatures are afraid that the wholesome music of the children's merry laughter might wake up poor Fido. Of coufse, dogs are more fashionable than children. Hence, in some localities, kennels take the place of cradles. This is generally the class of beings who talk about Socialism breaking up the home.

To do this The Socialist Publishing Company now offers its stock for sale at the par value of $10 per share, payable in cash, or $1 down and $1 per month until the amount subscribed for is paid.

Of course, The Socialist will be published anyhow, but the time is at hand when greater and better plans should be carried out. To do this requires money. NOW IS THE TIME FOR ACTION.

THE ENFRANCHISEMENT OF WOMEN.

(Mary E. Garbutt.)

"I have all the rights I want. Don't talk to me about women voting," said my next door neighbor.

A few weeks after she poured into my ear a tale of woe. Her husband, without her consent, had sold their home, although it was community property and her earnings had helped to pay for it. "Is there nothing I can do about it?" she asked anxiously. "Nothing," I replied, "the law of California gives the husband absolute control of all community property. "But the law is unjust, cruel," she cried. "Yes, there are many laws not only in this state, but in all other states, unjust to women. In some states, as soon as the marriage knot is tied, a wife doesn't even own her own clothing, nor the wedding gifts. 'With all my worldly goods I thee endow' is a satirical bit of sentiment concealing the real situation.

"What are you going to do about it?" I asked. "Do, what can I do?" she said. "Why, work for the ballot for women and get these laws changed." From that time on she was a militant suffragist.

"If the vote were given to me INSTEAD of Bridget, I would believe in suffrage; but if the vote is given to me AND Bridget, I don't see what it would accomplish for her vote would offset mine," says that college friend of mine, who believes in an educational qualification.

There was an election in our town to close the saloons. There were two ballot boxes. One in which the men alone deposited their votes for the city officials to be elected. Another in which both men and women voted for or against the closing ordinance. The Bridgets voted that day to close the saloons. They were just as anxious to protect their Pats from the saloon evils as my college friend to protect her boys.

When the ballot boxes were opened and the votes counted, it was found that the men had elected the anti-officials, while the women, rallying at the polls, had won a sweeping majority for the closing ordinance.

You may count on Bridget voting for her home interests, whether she knows how to demonstrate a problem in Euclid or not.

"But woman's place is in the home where God meant her to be, and where man has put her, with a perfect knowledge," says the Henry Thurston Peaks of society, "of his own necessities, and in the second place of her own nature, her endowments and her limitations. In that place she is bound to stay, because for him, and it may be added because for her as well, it is wholly best that she should do so.

But woman, in spite of this dictum of the divine oracle, refuses to stay "put." Economic necessity has pushed over 5,000,000 women of this country out of the home into the business world. The spinning-wheel, the hand-loom, the kneading-bowl, all the insignia of woman's work in the home, if they exist at all, are found stored away in the attic, an occasional reminder of the days of our foremothers. Robbed of her old domain of industry, she has been compelled to leave the home and go out into the factory and mill, the shop and store, where industry has been socialized and the utilization of steam and electricity.

The very fact that so large a body of women are forced out of the home and have become bread-winners under a new environment, and under the relation of employes and employers, makes it imperative that the working women secure the ballot. They need to have something to say about the conditions under which they work, the length of hours, the wages paid.

When women performed their work in the home they could regulate all these matters. Now they are helpless, they are discriminated against; through their very weakness they have lowered the wage scale of men. They have submitted to being driven like machines, with never the power of protest. The ballot in the hands of the working woman would be of some economic value. If it did no more good than to help develop collective action, its importance can not be over-estimated.

With trade organization among wage-earning women and political enfranchisement many of the wretched conditions would be improved. Of much greater value, however, would be that sympathy and co-operation developed, eventually to become a powerful force against the whole vicious system that exploits them.

Many so-called arguments are offered against the enfranchisement of women. Analyzed, they are just as strong arguments against the enfranchisement of men. When Mr. Barry reported, for the Ladies' Home Journal, "that equal suffrage has done no good and has cost the women their refinement," he could just as well have added, "and man suffrage has done no good, and, judging from Ohio elections, has cost men their integrity."

The trouble with this world of ours is, it has been too long a man's world only. All our institutions, our laws, our government, even our religion, are man-made.

The Hindu women of Bombay declare, in the motto of their Sorosis, "The world was made for women, too." We need a human world, men and women both active factors in its fashioning. The world needs to be made more home like. Who can do it better than the women?

The Socialist party incorporates into its platform the political and industrial emancipation of women. It takes the position that the members of the party should be ready, when there is a campaign in any state for the enfranchisement of all women, to work along with the organizations in the field and in every way possible to further their cause. We can not do less than this if we are true to our principles.

Of course Socialists realize that the political freedom of women will not emancipate them fully; it will only be a step toward that larger freedom of economic independence which man and women alike are seeking through the Socialist state. The ballot is simply a means to an end. Socialist women welcome the opportunity their enfranchisement would give them to help achieve industrial democracy. Our hearts burn within us for the power to register our votes at the ballot box on election day for Socialism. Such a vote is the strongest protest we can make against the merciless power of the capitalist system.

NO EXTRAVAGANCE IN SPENDING $5,000 A YEAR FOR DRESS.

There is no extravagance in spending $5,000 a year for dress if one's income is sufficient, according to Mrs. Donald McLean, former president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

She made the assertion in reply to the frequently brought charges that New York women are extravagant. She admitted that there are a hundred women in New York who spend $30,000 annually on their clothes, while a thousand spend half that amount. But they can afford to do it, she added.—Exchange.

MRS. MAYBRICK WORKS FOR REFORM IN TRIALS OF WOMEN.

Mrs. Florence Maybrick, who served fifteen years in an English prison for the alleged murder of her husband and who has given her life since her release to the improvement of prison conditions, is trying to secure the passage of a bill through the California legislature forbidding men to be present in a court-room where women are being tried. She declares the presence of idle, curious men is distressing to women prisoners and so confusing as to actually endanger their chances of justice, and also that it leads a certain class of women to dress and primp with the idea of attracting the attention of the men.

She cites the examples of Boston and New York, in which cities men have been excluded for a year past from the trials of women. Mrs. Maybrick's reform has met with the unanimous approval of the bench.

Another reform which she advocates is the abolition of the chain-gang, which she regards as a relic of the dark ages.—Exchange.

ONE WOMAN'S INFLUENCE.

Owen Kildare, the writer, died recently. His career was a most singular mixture of strange adventure, sadness, fame and a love of such rare pathos and beauty as to make a profound and lasting impression on all who read the story as told in his book, the sweetest and most tender of love stories, "My Mamie Rose."

Kildare, at the age of seven, was a homeless, orphan waif of the Bowery. In turn he was newsboy, gang member, prize-fighter, "bouncer," bartender, journalist and author. At the age of thirty he could neither read or write. A little school teacher, whose way to and from her school led her through the most disreputable portion of the Bowery, was one day protected by Kildare from the insults of his associates. Their friendship grew, and the little teacher undertook the education of her champion. He proved a most apt scholar, giving up his old ways of life and entered a profession that shortly made him prominent in the world of letters. The sad death of the teacher, "Mamie Rose," occurred a short time before she and Kildare were to have been married. But her influence lived on in his life, and through it he was most successful as a writer and was styled the "Bowery Kipling."

MAKING AND UNMAKING MARRIAGES.

There are indications that the Christian world is reforming its opinions on marriage and divorce. The respectable element of every respectable community used to believe unalterably that a man or a woman—especially the woman—must take the other party to the marriage contract "for better, for worse." Now there is a growing conviction among respectable people that the marriage that turns out for "the worse" had better be dissolved. For unanswerable argument in support of this position, they point to the hospitals, the asylums and the jails that are being overcrowded with the products of these unions that have been "for the worse." Such misery making marriages, it would seem, might better be ended before they add yet more unborn suffering that that which they have already created. So the prominent club woman has recently been urging that the price of divorce should be brought within the reach of the poor. As yet only the rich can avail themselves of it.

A speaker before the New York Society of Medical Jurisprudence has urged that our present marriage system is a disgrace to civilization. He wants more sociology and less theology in it. He wants the laws reversed so that marriage shall be made difficult to get into and easy to get out of. There are also many people who are urging that a license to wed should be granted only on the strength of a certificate of health and morals. For every other trade or profession affecting the interests of society they require certain qualifications, but the practice of matrimony, which will make or mar human beings unto the third and fourth generation, is freely thrown open for the least fit to engage in.

In England the Divorce Commission has been making an exhaustive inquiry. The consensus of opinion among the witnesses they summoned was in favor of increasing the facilities for divorce, especially in favor of qualifying the divorce laws for men and women. The law in England at present grants a man a divorce for a single act of incontinency on the part of the wife. On the other hand, he may repeat that sin with impunity, and, unless he adds to it also cruelty in the form of assault and battery, the courts will not grant the woman a divorce.—Delineator.

COMRADE BLOOR'S ADDRESS.

Comrade Ella Reeve Bloor, national organizer of the Socialist party, was with us recently and delivered her inspiring and forceful message to the women comrades of Columbus. Comrade Bloor is a small woman, with a kindly, good face, and eyes so wonderful in their magnetic brilliancy that one sees when looking into their depths the ultimate triumph of Socialism in all its splendid reality. Comrade Bloor is enthusiastic. She has devoted the best years of her life to the cause of Socialism and Woman's Rights, and her efforts, we are sure, will not be in vain. When we listen to so powerful a message as she gives we are impressed by some prescience that her cause will prosper, and will prosper soon, because it is the cause of the welfare of the entire human race, and a loftier cause than this never dwelt in the human breast.

MISSOURI GIRL WINS PRIZE.

Miss Fay Foster, a Missouri girl, has just won $500, the second prize in a contest for the composition of the best waltz, offered by "Die Woche," a weekly journal in Berlin. There were more than 3,400 contestants. The first and third prizes were awarded to well-known German musicians. Miss Foster's success is spoken of in Europe as a commentary on the recent assertion made by President Lowell, of Harvard, that America is not a musical nation. Large photographs of the winners of the first three prizes are displayed in the window of "Die Woche's" office, and Miss Foster, who is beautiful as well as gifted, is said to have received many proposals of marriage in consequence. She has answered none of the letters.—The Woman's Journal.

IN REGARD TO JULIA WARD HOWE.

Most women realize their responsibility to the family, to the community, even to the state and to the country. Mrs. Howe, with a recognition of a far off ideal of womanhood, realized her responsibility to the world—to the Cosmos. This sense of spiritual kinship with humanity gave her courage for the independence of thought and action so manifest in her life. She was in the truest sense a liberator and a reformer. She pleaded for the rights of womanhood with audacity and eloquence. In a century of marvelous achievement she was eminently useful. She stands for the noblest womanhood and the highest standard of citizenship.—Review of Reviews.

State Senator Tustin, of Pennsylvania, has offered a joint resolution to give women the right to vote. The resolution will have to be passed by the legislature at two successive sessions and approved at a subsequent popular election.

THE BOYS AND GIRLS OF CHINA.

(By Yan Phou Lee.)

OUTDOOR GAMES AND SPORTS.

The Chinese boy has been usually represented by writers on China as a prodigy of obedience, fully invested with the attributes of dignity and seriousness of demeanor.

The truth of the matter is that, as in many statements about the Chinese, what has been observed among a few, and at certain times only, is represented to be true of all and at all times. The average boy of the country on the other side of the globe and directly under us, is, I assure you, astonishingly like boys of more enlightened climes. He, too, is compounded of naughtiness and goodness, obedience and rebelliousness, love of play and thirst for knowledge, wearisome curiosity and wholesome respect for his elders. It must be owned, however, that children in China from their earliest days are taught to obey implicitly, never to question the propriety of commands laid upon them by their superiors, and never to contradict. They are trained to remain silent even when unjustly punished, and to make no complaint when beaten by their elders. In the house they must not sit unless bidden, and are not expected to talk unless questioned. Outside, the same deference to their seniors must be shown. On no account should a boy walk side by side with his father, an elder brother, or an uncle—and still less precede them. He should show his respect by always following in their footsteps.

Under a pernicious system of restraint, fear controls the young instead of love, and deceit is often resorted to where truth should be told. The boy's frank, impulsive and spontaneous nature is restrained and bound down, and its development checked at the outset. It becomes like the dwarfed trees, for which Chinese gardeners are famous—which are cut and trimmed and bent over and held down by wire frames, to make them resemble some fabulous monster or other.

Such being the method of molding his character, and so little freedom being accorded him, it possibly would be inferred that the Chinese boy becomes a model of deportment; that he puts away childish things, with all the games and sports of boyhood, as soon as he reaches his teens, and that he is a man at an age when American boys are still playing marbles and spinning tops. Not so. Before his superiors he is as quiet, studious and grave as you please; but, out of their sight and among his comrades, he is a different thing altogether. Remember, he has been acting a part; maybe his mother has promised him a mango or a moon-cake if he would be good; or perhaps his teacher is a ferocious tyrant, ready to use the rattan whip or walnut ruler on all occasions. Our boy abstains from play, frolic and fun only so long as he is watched. Out in the back yard, where none but indulgent mothers or sympathising sisters are about, or at the street corners, you will find the Chinese boy lively and frolicsome.

Of innocent amusements the Chinese boy can not be said to be entirely deprived. He does not play marbles, but he tosses pennies instead. He plays tip-cat with great enjoyment, but knows nothing of lawn-tennis, baseball, football, coasting, skating or tobogganing. The game of battledoor and shuttlecock satisfies his lofty ambition to be a high kicker. This game is played without other battledoors than those of nature's make—his own feet. The player has to assume various queer attitudes in trying, with his feet, to keep the shuttlecock in the air as long as possible. A defeat must be confessed when he permits the feathered toy to reach the ground.

The flying of kites, indulged in at all times, but especially on the "ninth day of the ninth moon," when everybody takes part except women and girls, gives him an opportunity to run and expand his lungs. As the large paper kite, with concave wings, round-painted body and long tail, soars into the pendent clouds and emits weird sounds from the musical bow fastened on top, reproducing the music of the Aeolian harp, and suggesting a message from another planet, is there a youngster who would not be enchanted with the sport? A paper butterfly, measuring two feet from wing to wing, and gorgeously painted, is sometimes sent up along the string. The wind carries it up, up, until it reaches the kite, when, its message being delivered (a spring being touched by the force of the concussion), its wings collapse and down it comes by its own weight.

When there are other kites buzzing in the upper air, a battle royal generally ensues; every one disputing the supremacy of the skies with every other, and attempting to dislodge all rivals by cutting string with string. The kite with the toughest cord is likely to come out ahead, though a little skill may prolong the ethereal existence of those with weaker cords. The discomfitted kites are carried by the four winds of heaven into unknown regions, to be heard of no more. In this sort of contest, where might and not right comes off conqueror, it is not deemed disgraceful to beat a retreat.

The Chinese boy enjoys his games of running and jumping, and he can hop on one leg as long as the nimblest of American lads. But to be carrier on somebody's shoulders and play horseback-riding is great fun for him. To wear a mask and "make believe" that he is some great hero—to frighten the girls—that is the small boy's summit of felicity.

Our small boys have a substitute for baseball—a sorry apology it must be admitted, for the national game of the Americans. Some yarn is wound around bits of snake-skin, and the ball thus made is as elastic as one made of rubber. The game consists of making the ball bound as many times as possible. Sometimes the ball is made to strike against a wall, and then under one leg of the player before it is again struck with the palm. This game is too simple to elicit anything but scorn from a Yankee lad. It would not be a bad idea for some young baseball enthusiast to go to China and teach the boys there the American game.—From St. Nicholas.

CONFISCATED!

The Austrian Government Does Not Like the Truths Found in the Little Socialist Magazine.

In our November issue we wrote an article in German on "Portugal." This pleased "Der Jugendliche Arbeiter," a juvenile magazine published in Vienna, that the editors published the article also.

That was too much of a good thing for the government officials, so they went to the office of "Der Jugendliche Arbeiter" and took out every copy that contained the article.

Now, many of you can not read the German page of our magazine, but you are surely anxious to read the article which we translate herewith:

"You have probably heard or read that Portugal has been proclaimed a republic. This is an important occurrence, which shows that the people are growing more and more tired to be ruled by a king or an emperor, especially when such rulers are silly boys.

"Outside of Portugal no one had an idea that the king would be forced to flee over night, and that a republic would be proclaimed. From this you can learn that a king is an ordinary human being like yourselves. Any one of you could be a king or an emperor. If thousands of soldiers take a sacred oath to defend you with their guns and cannons, then you could rule over a people, which have no arms, with the greatest ease.

"If you then give order that every one must bow down before you, then every one will have to bow. If you squander your money, you need only to say you need more money, and your subjects will have to furnish it out of their own pockets, and if they refuse you can throw them into prison. But if they should collect in masses in the streets to fight against this outrage, you can have them shot down by your soldiers."

"The churches will then also be on your side. They will tell the people to pray for you, and to beg God to punish all those who wish to drive you from such a nice life.

"So you see it is child's play to be a sovereign. One must only fill the people with fear. But should the people ever have no more fear, then the king will have 'ausgespielt,' as the saying goes."—From Little Socialist Magazine.

TESTING THE NEW BOY.

(Senator Hoar in "Boyhood in Concord.")

The boys knew very well how to take the conceit or vanity out of their comrades. In the summer days all the boys of the village used to gather at a place on the river, known as Thayer's swimming place, about half a mile from the town pump, which was the center from which all distances were measured in those days. There was a little gravel beach where you could wade out a rod or two and then for a rod or two the water was over the boy's head. It then became shallow again from the opposite bank. So it was a capital place to learn to swim.

After they came out, the boys would sit on the bank and have a sort of boys' exchange, in which all matters of interest were talked over and a great deal of good-natured chaff was exchanged. Any newcomer had to pass through an ordeal of this character, in which his temper and quality were thoroughly tried. I remember now an occasion which must have happened when I was not more than eight or ten years old, when a rather awkward looking individual had come down from New Hampshire and made his appearance at the swimming place. The boys, one after another tried him by putting mocking questions or attempting to humbug him with some story. He received it all with patience and good nature until one remark seemed to sting him from his propriety. He turned with great dignity upon the offender, and said: "Was that you that spoke, or was it a punkin busted?" We all thought that it was well said, and took him into high favor.

The Girl From the Effete East

By ARTHUR DENSMORE

Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association

BARRINGTON was completing his first year of practice when Theodore Tuppenheim arrived in Knuckleville. Mr. Tuppenheim was selling stock in the Charitable Gold Mining company at 5 cents per share, price to advance to 10 cents at the end of thirty days. Incidentally he found time to foster in Barrington's bosom the spirit of discontent which ten months' fruitless waiting for clients had engendered. If he were a clever, clean cut young man like Barrington, did Barrington know what he'd do? Move west. He wouldn't fritter away his time in a moss backed New England hamlet where people looked down on a fellow just because they'd known him all his life and could remember when he was a little shaver and went with patches on his trousers. No, sir. He'd just gather together his earthly possessions and take the first train for Gilt Gulch, Nev. There was the coming town; there lay the opportunity for an able young man to rise. No reason in the world why he should not be in the United States senate within five years. That would be coming some? Well, everybody and everything came some in that country. Why, sir, where the thriving city of Gilt Gulch now stood there had been less than two years since naught but sagebrush and alkali. And now look at it—just look at it! Six thousand inhabitants and more coming by every train! Simply couldn't get houses up fast enough for 'em. Had to camp out in tents. And every blamed one of 'em making money. Why, sir, you couldn't find a bootblack in Gilt Gulch who was worth less than fifty thousand!

This vision of wealth and political prominence was quite too much for Barrington. He adjusted his affairs in Knuckleville, which was no very difficult matter, took tearful leave of numerous relatives and of a certain pretty damsel, who was not yet a relative, but had rashly promised to become one whenever Barrington's income should suffice for the support of two persons, and hied himself to Gilt Gulch, promising to send souvenir postcards from every municipality he passed through on the way.

Now, underneath the lurid exaggeration with which Mr. Theodore Tuppenheim had clothed his narrative of the rise of Gilt Gulch there lay a respectable substratum of truth, and the combination of Barrington's ingenious appearance with certain letters of introduction to persons financially prominent in Gilt Gulch, which Mr. Tuppenheim procured for him, resulted in his speedily establishing a thriving practice. For the most part it was work in connection with the location of mining claims, and, besides numerous fees in cash, Barrington acquired several claims of his own, which he disposed of profitably.

In brief, at the end of a year Barrington had waxed so prosperous as to feel himself warranted in marrying. The Knuckleville Weekly Times announced editorially that it understood that young Mr. Barrington, for whom, its readers would remember, the Times had predicted a brilliant career when he hung out his shingle in Knuckleville, was now one of the leading men in the west, and the other village maidens were openly jealous of Susie Cutler, whose good fortune it was to be to marry a millionaire.

But Susie herself had no illusions. She even refused to permit Barrington to come east for the marriage. Her childhood lessons of thrift and economy had taken deep root in her mind, and she would not, she said, have the price of a round trip railroad ticket thrown away. If Barrington felt that he must spend the money, let him buy a cabinet organ or a secondhand piano for the front parlor. They would be married in their own house at Gilt Gulch and after that take a little wedding trip to Colorado Springs or maybe Denver. Perhaps, being a prudent damsel, Susie desired to have a glance at Gilt Gulch before she committed herself irrevocably. At any rate, matters had been thus arranged, and, the date set for the wedding being but two days away and Susie due to arrive that afternoon, Barrington was in the state of ecstasy appropriate to such circumstances. It was in this moment of supreme happiness that misfortune befell him.

The work Barrington had been doing requires to be performed with great accuracy; otherwise it is not only valueless, but may be the occasion of great loss to the client. Now, it is possible that Barrington possessed genius. People who have that, you know, are apt to be careless as to details. Perhaps it was merely that, being deeply in love, he could not concentrate his mind upon his work. However that may be, Hartford, the attorney whose office was next to Barrington's, had discovered in the course of an investigation of the records that Barrington had filed documents containing serious errors. He spoke to Barrington about it in a perfectly friendly way. Barrington received his kindly admonitions with a contempt which he was at no pains to disguise. Why should he pay heed to the remarks of a man who wore baggy trousers and long hair and played faro, to say nothing of becoming intoxicated now and then? He knew well enough what inspired these critical observations. Hartford was jealous of the prosperity which Barrington had so rapidly achieved. Let him stop cavilling, said the virtuous Barrington to himself, and seek success by leading a sober life, as he did.

Feeling that he had been insulted, Barrington thereafter confined his communications with Hartford to a curt "How are you?" accompanied by a barely perceptible nod when they chanced to meet. It was with a good deal of surprise, therefore, that Hartford, glancing up from his rather dilapidated desk as he heard the door open, perceived Barrington entering his office. One had not to look at Barrington twice to be convinced that he was badly frightened. His eyes, which ordinarily regarded those about him with an air of easy toleration, were wide with terror; and his well chiseled features, customarily wearing an air of placid conceit, were now white and drawn. His manner toward Hartford was no longer supercilious. All his carefully constructed attitude of dignity had vanished.

"You've been in this part of the country longer than I have, Hartford," said he. "I want your advice as a—a friend, you know."

Hartford nodded and withdrew his pipe from his lips.

"Sure," said he succinctly. "What's the row?"

"Why, you see," said Barrington, "it seems that in filing the papers for Jim Busby on that last mining claim of his I made a slight error. I have been doing a large business, you know, Hartford—a very large business—and it was inevitable that I should make a mistake occasionally. It seems that some unscrupulous persons have taken advantage of this purely technical slip and have jumped Busby's claim, and he is very much exercised about it."

"I should think he might be," Hartford observed.

"Yes," repeated Barrington, "he is much exercised and quite unreasonable about it. He came into my office a few moments ago and demanded an explanation. Of course I couldn't tell him anything except that it was just a mistake such as any man might make, and he said I was lying to him. He said I was too smart to make a fool break like that and that I was in with the gang that were trying to do him out of a claim that would have made him rich. I argued with him the best I could, but it didn't budge him. He said he didn't see that it made much difference, anyhow, whether I was a fool or a knave, because either way I hadn't any right to live, and he wound up by saying that he'd just go down to the Jolly Dog and get a few drinks to put him in the right frame of mind and then he'd come back and reduce the membership of the Gilt Gulch bar by one."

It is significant of Hartford's broad and tolerant temperament that he did not remind Barrington that he had previously predicted such a catastrophe as had now befallen. Nevertheless a slight glimmer of amusement stole across his face.

"So you want my advice, do you?" he asked.

"I should appreciate it very much," said Barrington.

"Well, you shall have it," said Hartford laconically, rapping the bowl of his pipe against the heel of his shoe. "If Jim Busby were out gunning for me and I couldn't shoot any better than you can, and I had a comfortable little sum saved, as you have, and there were a pretty girl in New England who didn't know any better than to love me, as she does you, I'd go east on the half past 2 train, and I wouldn't hurry back."

"But the trouble is," Barrington explained, "Susie—Miss Cutler, that is—will be here on the train that gets in at 2:30. The trains pass on the first siding out, you know. The fact is we are to be married day after tomorrow at noon. You'll pardon my omitting to send you an invitation, won't you? It was quite unintentional. I've been so busy"—

"Oh," Hartford broke in, with a deprecatory wave of his arm, "you need not apologize. It's just one of those little mistakes a busy man is bound to make every now and then. I haven't Busby's disposition. I'll forgive you."

Then Hartford looked at his watch and found that it was twenty minutes past 2.

"You'll have to move lively, my boy," he said. "Keep an eye open for Jim, and if the coast is clear take the 2:30. If it isn't, walk over to Sand City and take the next one there."

"But about Susie," Barrington remonstrated.

"Pshaw!" growled Hartford. "That's easy enough. Leave a note for her with the station master, telling her to go back to Colorado Springs and you'll meet her there. If you don't have time to write a note, have the station master tell her you've been called away on a life and death matter and that she's to go to the hotel and wait until you send her word. Don't you worry about the girl. She'll prefer a slightly delayed wedding to an expedited funeral. Hurry up now. You've just about time to make it."

As he slipped down the main street of Gilt Gulch on his way to the station Barrington caught a glimpse of Jim Busby's gaunt profile as he stood at the bar of the Jolly Dog, his back toward the entrance. Barrington's indolent heart rejoiced as he reflected that the ten mile walk to Sand City would now be unnecessary. It was just twenty-eight minutes past 2 when he reached the station. He gave the necessary instructions concerning Susie to the station master and rushed out upon the platform. But the train which made up at Gilt Gulch was not yet ready to depart. A freight car had left the rails, blocking the track. Five, ten, fifteen minutes passed, and still the obstruction remained. Barrington grew uneasy. Jim Busby might at any moment deem that he had imbibed a quantity of liquor commensurate with his contemplated task and begin to search for him. But at the end of twenty minutes, to his great relief, the perspiring train crew succeeded in replacing the derailed car, and the freight train pulled slowly out upon a siding. Even as it did so Barrington caught sight of the 2:30 train as it rounded the curve just beyond the station.

A moment later Susie Cutler, her trim little figure set off by a skillfully tailored gray traveling suit and her face wearing the look of determination befitting a girl who had just completed a journey nearly across the continent alone, descended to the platform of Gilt Gulch station. Barrington rushed toward her joyfully. Within three steps of her he encountered an obstacle—a very serious obstacle. This was nothing less than the muzzle of a revolver. Behind the revolver stood Mr. James Busby.

"Now, young man," said Mr. Busby, "we'll attend to your little matter, and we won't be long doing it."

Then Busby became suddenly conscious of a voice, evidently feminine, proceeding from some point in his rear and of the light pressure of a hand upon his arm.

"Do you know," said the voice, "it's dreadfully careless of you pointing that thing at anybody so. Why, it might go off."

Turning about, Busby looked into the piquant features of Susie Cutler. He decided unhesitatingly that, notwithstanding some freckles and the tendency of the nose to turn up, it was a rather pleasing face to view.

"So it might," said Busby slowly. "So it might."

"Well, then, stop aiming it at Har—Mr. Barrington," she commanded. "You make me nervous."

"Fact is," said Busby, "I was sort of planning to shoot Mr. Barrington."

He had lowered his weapon and spoke very calmly and deliberately.

"What!" shrieked the girl. "You have the audacity to stand there and tell me you mean to commit a cold blooded murder? Where are the police? A splendid place this must be to live in, where a man goes out to kill another as coolly as he'd eat his breakfast!"

"That's the way with all you folks from out Boston way," grumbled Busby. "You're always getting murder and the administration of justice mixed. I ain't going to murder him. I'm going to execute him. He's done me dirt, and if he ain't killed he'll do somebody else dirt. So for the good of everybody he'd ought to be shot. What do you care anyway? Ain't no relative of yours, is he?"

"Why, no," she answered in some confusion, "he isn't a relative exactly—that is, he"—

A gleam of comprehension shone in Busby's eyes.

"Come to think of it," said he, "I heard something about his being going to get married. Be you the girl?"

She nodded.

"Yes," she answered simply, "I'm the girl."

"Then," said Busby, "it's clear enough to my mind that in interfering with this execution you're preventing me from doing you a great favor. Howsomever, if you stick to it that you don't want him shot and if you'll take him out of Nevada and keep him out"—

The girl did not wait for him to finish. She transferred her grasp from Busby's arm to that of Barrington, who during the preceding conversation had stood silent, his face white, his limbs trembling, cold sweat beading his forehead.

"Come, Harry," she said imperiously.

Meekly, with bowed head and downcast eyes, Barrington suffered her to lead him aboard the train, which was now, the track being clear, about to [illegible]

Jim Busby sat down upon the edge of the platform and burst into a roar of laughter. Long after the train had disappeared around the curve below the station the station master found him there, his broad shoulders still shaking with merriment.

"Well, you doddering idiot," said the station master, "what's the joke?"

"Oh, ain't he going to get his all right, though?" queried the mirthful Busby. "Did you hear her 'Come, Harry,' him and make him aboard the train like he'd been a puppy hitched to a string? He got out of being executed, but he's getting a life sentence, and that's a whole lot worse."

THE ENFRANCHISEMENT OF WOMEN.

(Mary E. Garbutt.)

"I have all the rights I want. Dont' talk to me about women voting," said my next door neighbor.

A few weeks after she poured into my ear a tale of woe. Her husband, without her consent, had sold their home, although it was community property and her earnings had helped to pay for it. "Is there nothing I can do about it?" she asked anxiously. "Nothing," I replied, "the law of California gives the husband absolute control of all community property. "But the law is unjust, cruel," she cried. "Yes, there are many laws not only in this state, but in all other states, unjust to women. In some states, as soon as the marriage knot is tied, a wife doesn't even own her own clothing, nor the wedding gifts. 'With all my worldly goods I thee endow' is a satirical bit of sentiment concealing the real situation.

"What are you going to do about it?" I asked. "Do, what can I do?" she said. "Why, work for the ballot for women and get these laws changed." From that time on she was a militant suffragist.

"If the vote were given to me INSTEAD of Bridget, I would believe in suffrage; but if the vote is given to me AND Bridget, I don't see what it would accomplish for her vote would offset mine," says that college friend of mine, who believes in an educational qualification.

There was an election in our town to close the saloons. There were two ballot boxes. One in which the men alone deposited their votes for the city officials to be elected. Another in which both men and women voted for or against the closing ordinance. The Bridgets voted that day to close the saloons. They were just as anxious to protect their Pats from the saloon evils as my college friend to protect her boys.

When the ballot boxes were opened and the votes counted, it was found that the men had elected the anti-officials, while the women, rallying at the polls, had won a sweeping majority for the closing ordinance.

You may count on Bridget voting for her home interests, whether she known how to demonstrate a problem in Euclid or not.

"But woman's place is in the home where God meant her to be, and where man has put her, with a perfect knowledge," says the Hagry Thurston Pecks of society, "of his own necessities, and in the second place of her own nature, her endowments and her limitations. In that place she is bound to stay, because for him, and it may be added because for her as well, it is wholly best that she should do so.

But woman, in spite of this dictum of the divine oracle, refuses to stay "put." Economic necessity has pushed over 6,000,000 women of this country out of the home into the business world. The spinning-wheel, the hand-loom, the kneading-bowl, all the insignia of woman's work in the home, if they exist at all, are found stored away in the attic, an occasional reminder of the days of our foremothers. Robbed of her old domain of industry, she has been compelled to leave the home and go out into the factory and mill, the shop and store, where industry has been socialized and the utilization of steam and electricity.

The very fact that so large a body of women are forced out of the home and have become bread-winners under a new environment, and under the relation of employee and employers, makes it imperative that the working women secure the ballot. They need to have something to say about the conditions under which they work, the length of hours, the wages paid.

When women performed their work in the home they could regulate all these matters. Now they are helpless, they are discriminated against; through their very weakness they have lowered the wage scale of men. They have submitted to being driven like machines, with never the power of protest. The ballot in the hands of the working woman would be of some economic value. If it did no more good than to help develop collective action, its importance can not be over-estimated.

With trade organization among wage-earning women and political enfranchisement many of the wretched conditions would be improved. Of much greater value, however, would be that sympathy and co-operation developed, eventually to become a powerful force against the whole vicious system that exploits them.

Many so-called arguments are offered against the enfranchisement of women. Analyzed, they are just as strong arguments against the enfranchisement of men. When Mr. Harry reported, for the Ladies' Home Journal, "that equal suffrage has done no good and has cost the women their refinement," he could just as well have added, "and man suffrage has done no good, and, judging from Ohio elections, has cost men their integrity."

The trouble with this world of ours is, it has been too long a man's world only. All our institutions, our laws, our government, even our religion, are man-made.

The Hindu women of Bombay declare, in the motto of their Sorosis, "The world was made for women, too." We need a human world, men and women both active factors in its fashioning. The world needs to be made more home like. Who can do it better than the women?

The Socialist party incorporates into its platform the political and industrial emancipation of women. It takes the position that the members of the party should be ready, when there is a campaign in any state for the enfranchisement of all women, to work along with the organizations in the field and in every way possible to further their cause. We can not do less than this if we are true to our principles.

Of course Socialists realise that the political freedom of women will not emancipate them fully; it will only be a step toward that larger freedom of economic independence which man and women alike are seeking through the Socialist state. The ballot is simply a means to an end. Socialist women welcome the opportunity their enfranchisement would give them to help achieve industrial democracy. Our hearts burn within us for the power to register our votes at the ballot box on election day for Socialism. Such a vote is the strongest protest we can make against the merciless power of the capitalist system.

NO EXTRAVAGANCE IN SPENDING $5,000 A YEAR FOR DRESS.

There is no extravagance in spending $5,000 a year for dress if one's income is sufficient, according to Mrs. Donald McLean, former president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

She made the assertion in reply to the frequently brought charges that New York women are extravagant. She admitted that there are a hundred women in New York who spend $30,000 annually on their clothes, while a thousand spend half that amount. But they can afford to do it, she added.—Exchange.

MRS. MAYBRICK WORKS FOR REFORM IN TRIALS OF WOMEN.

Mrs. Florence Maybrick, who served fifteen years in an English prison for the alleged murder of her husband and who has given her life since her release to the improvement of prison conditions, in trying to secure the passage of a bill through the California legislature forbidding men to be present in a court-room where women are being tried. She declares the presence of idle, curious men is distressing to women prisoners and so confusing as to actually endanger their chances of justice, and also that it leads a certain class of women to dress and primp with the idea of attracting the attention of the men.

She cites the examples of Boston and New York, in which cities men have been excluded for a year past from the trials of women. Mrs. Maybrick's reform has met with the unanimous approval of the bench.

Another reform which she advocates is the abolition of the chain-gang, which she regards as a relic of the dark ages.—Exchange.

ONE WOMAN'S INFLUENCE.

Owen Kildare, the writer, died recently. His career was a most singular mixture of strange adventure, sadness, farce and a love of such rare pathos and beauty as to make a profound and lasting impression on all who read the story as told in his book, the sweetest and most tender of love stories, "My Mamie Rose."

Kildare, at the age of seven, was a homeless, orphan waif of the Bowery. In turn he was newsboy, gang member, prize-fighter, "bouncer," bartender, journalist and author. At the age of thirty he could neither read or write. A little school teacher, whose way to and from her school led her through the most disreputable portion of the Bowery, was one day protected by Kildare from the insults of his associates. Their friendship grew, and the little teacher undertook the education of her champion. He proved a most apt scholar, giving up his old ways of life and entered a profession that shortly made him prominent in the world of letters. The sad death of the teacher, "Mamie Rose," occurred a short time before she and Kildare were to have been married. But her influence lived on in his life, and through it he was most successful as a writer and was styled the "Bowery Kipling."

MAKING AND UNMAKING MARRIAGES.

There are indications that the Christian world is reforming its opinions on marriage and divorce. The respectable element of every respectable community used to believe unalterably that a man or a woman—especially the woman—must take the other party to the marriage contract "for better, for worse." Now there is a growing conviction among respectable people that the marriage that turns out for "the worse" had better be dissolved. For unanswerable argument in support of this position, they point to the hospitals, the asylums and the jails that are being overcrowded with the products of these unions that have been "for the worse." Such misery making marriages, it would seem, might better be ended beforte they add yet more unborn suffering that that which they have already created. So the prominent club woman has recently been urging that the price of divorce should be brought within the reach of the poor. As yet only the rich can avail themselves of it.

A speaker before the New York Society of Medical Jurisprudence has urged that our present marriage system is a disgrace to civilization. He wants more sociology and less theology in it. He wants the laws reversed so that marriage shall be made difficult to get into and easy to get out of. There are also many people who are urging that a license to wed should be granted only on the strength of a certificate of health and morals. For every other trade or profession affecting the interests of society they require certain qualifications, but the practice of matrimony, which will make or mar human beings unto the third and fourth generation, is freely thrown open for the least fit to engage in.

In England the Divorce Commission has been making an exhaustive inquiry. The consensus of opinion among the witnesses they summoned was in favor of increasing the facilities for divorce, especially in favor of qualifying the divorce laws for men and women. The law in England at present grants a man a divorce for a single act of incontinency on the part of the wife. On the other hand, he may repeat that sin with impunity, and, unless he adds to it also cruelty in the form of assault and battery, the courts will not grant the woman a divorce.—Delineator.

COMRADE BLOOR'S ADDRESS.

Comrade Ella Reeve Bloor, national organizer of the Socialist party, was with us recently and delivered her inspiring and forceful message to the women comrades of Columbus. Comrade Bloor is a small woman, with a kindly, good face, and eyes so wonderful in their magnetic brilliancy that one sees when looking into their depths the ultimate triumph of Socialism in all its splendid reality. Comrade Bloor is enthusiastic. She has devoted the best years of her life to the cause of Socialism and Women's Rights, and her efforts, we are sure, will not be in vain. When we listen to so powerful a message as she gives we are impressed by some prescience that her cause will prosper, and will prosper soon, because it is the cause of the welfare of the entire human race, and a loftier cause than this never dwelt in the human breast.

MISSOURI GIRL WINS PRIZE.

Miss Fay Foster, a Missouri girl, has just won $500, the second prize in a contest for the composition of the best waltz, offered by "Die Woche," a weekly journal in Berlin. There were more than 2,400 contestants. The first and third prizes were awarded to well-known German musicians. Miss Foster's success is spoken of in Europe as a commentary on the recent assertion made by President Lowell, of Harvard, that America is not a musical nation. Large photographs of the winners of the first three prizes are displayed in the window of "Die Woche's" office, and Miss Foster, who is beautiful as well as gifted, is said to have received many proposals of marriage in consequence. She has answered none of the letters.—The woman's Journal.

IN REGARD TO JULIA WARD HOWE.

Most women realize their responsibility to the family, to the community, even to the state and to the country. Mrs. Howe, with a recognition of a far off ideal of womanhood, realized her responsibility to the world—to the Cosmos. This sense of spiritual kinship with humanity gave her courage for the independence of thought and action so manifest in her life. She was in the truest sense a liberator and a reformer. She pleaded for the rights of womanhood with audacity and eloquence. In a century of marvelous achievement she was eminently useful. She stands for the noblest womanhood and the highest standard of citizenship.—Review of Reviews.

State Senator Tustin, of Pennsylvania, has offered a joint resolution to give women the right to vote. The resolution will have to be passed by the legislature of two successive sessions and approved at a subsequent popular election.

THE BOYS AND GIRLS OF CHINA.

(By Yan Phou Lee.)

OUTDOOR GAMES AND SPORTS.

The Chinese boy has been usually represented by writers on China as a prodigy of obedience, fully invested with the attributes of dignity and seriousness of demeanor.

The truth of the matter is that, as in many statements about the Chinese, what has been observed among a few, and at certain times only, is represented to be true of all and at all times. The average boy of the country on the other side of the globe and directly under us, is, I assure you, astonishingly like boys of more enlightened climes. He, too, is compounded of naughtiness and goodness, obedience and rebelliousness, love of play and thirst for knowledge, wearisome curiosity and wholesome respect for his elders. It must be owned, however, that children in China from their earliest days are taught to obey implicitly, never to question the propriety of commands laid upon them by their superiors, and never to contradict. They are trained to remain silent even when unjustly punished, and to make no complaint when beaten by their elders. In the house they must not sit unless bidden, and are not expected to talk unless questioned. Outside, the same deference to their seniors must be shown. On no account should a boy walk side by side with his father, an elder brother, or an uncle—and still less precede them. He should show his respect by always following in their footsteps.

Under a pernicious system of restraint, fear controls the young instead of love, and deceit is often resorted to where truth should be told. The boy's frank, impulsive and spontaneous nature is restrained and bound down, and its development checked at the outset. It becomes like the dwarfed trees, for which Chinese gardeners are famous—which are cut and trimmed and bent over and held down by wire frames, to make them resemble some fabulous monster or other.

Such being the method of molding his character, and so little freedom being accorded him, it possibly would be inferred that the Chinese boy becomes a model of deportment; that he puts away childish things, with all the games and sports of boyhood, as soon as he reaches his teens, and that he is a man at an age when American boys are still playing marbles and spinning tops. Not so. Before his superiors he is an quiet, studious and grave as you please; but, out of their sight and among his comrades, he is a different being altogether. Remember, he has been acting a part; maybe his mother has promised him a mango or a moon-cake if he would be good; or perhaps his teacher is a ferocious tyrant, ready to use the rattan whip or walnut ruler on all occasions. Our boy abstains from play, frolic and fun only so long as he is watched. Out in the back yard, where none but indulgent mothers or sympathising sisters are about, or at the street corners, you will find the Chinese boy lively and frolicsome.

Of innocent amusements the Chinese boy can not be said to be entirely deprived. He does not play marbles, but he tosses pennies instead. He plays tip-cat with great enjoyment, but knows nothing of lawn-tennis, baseball, football, coasting, skating or tobogganing. The game of battledoor and shuttlecock satisfies his lofty ambition to be a high kicker. This game is played without other battledoors than those of nature's make—his own feet. The player has to assume various, queer attitudes in trying, with his feet, to keep the shuttlecock in the air as long as possible. A defeat must be confessed when he permits the feathered toy to reach the ground.

The flying of kites, indulged in at all times, but especially on the "ninth day of the ninth moon," when everybody takes part except women and girls, gives him an opportunity to run and expand his lungs. As the large paper kite, with concave wings, round-painted body and long tail, soars into the pendent clouds and emits weird sounds from the musical bow fastened on top, reproducing the music of the Aeolian harp, and suggesting a message from another planet, is there a youngster who would not be enchanted with the sport? A paper butterfly, measuring two feet from wing to wing, and gorgeously painted, is sometimes sent up along the string. The wind carries it up, up, until it reaches the kite, when, its message being delivered (a spring being touched by the force of the concussion), its wings collapse and down it comes by its own weight.

When there are other kites bussing in the upper air, a battle royal generally ensues: every one disputing the supremacy of the kites with every other, and attempting to dislodge all rivals by cutting string with string. The kite with the toughest cord is likely to come out ahead, though a little skill may prolong the ethereal existence of those with weaker cords. The discomfitted kites are carried by the four winds of heaven into unknown regions, to be heard of no more. In this sort of contest, where might and not right comes off conqueror, it is not deemed disgraceful to beat a retreat.

The Chinese boy enjoys his games of running and jumping, and he can hop on one leg as long as the nimblest of American lads. But to be carrier on somebody's shoulders and play horseback-riding is great fun for him. To wear a mask and "make believe" that he is some great hero—to frighten the girls—that is the small boy's summit of felicity.

Our small boys have a substitute for baseball—a sorry apology it must be admitted, for the national game of the Americans. Some yarn is wound around bits of snake-skin, and the ball thus made is as elastic as one made of rubber. The game consists of making the ball bound as many times as possible. Sometimes the ball is made to strike against a wall, and then under one leg of the player before it is again struck with the palm. This game is too simple to elicit anything but scorn from a Yankee lad. It would not be a bad idea for some young baseball enthusiast to go to China and teach the boys there the American game.—From St. Nicholas.

EXTRAVAGANCE!!!

The Austrian Government Does Not Like the Truths Found in the Little Socialist Magazine.

In our November issue we wrote an article in German on "Portugal." This pleased "Der Jugendliche Arbeiter," a juvenile magazine published in Vienna, that the editors published the article also.

That was too much of a good thing for the government officials, so they went to the office of "Der Jugendliche Arbeiter" and took out every copy that contained the article.

Now, many of you can not read the German page of our magazine, but you are surely anxious to read the article which we translate herewith:

"You have probably heard or read that Portugal has been proclaimed a republic. This is an important occurrence, which shows that the people are growing more and more tired to be ruled by a king or an emperor, especially when such rulers are silly boys.

"Outside of Portugal no one had an idea that the king would be forced to flee over night, and that a republic would be proclaimed. From this you can learn that a king is an ordinary human being like yourselves. Any one of you could be a king or an emperor. If thousands of soldiers take a sacred oath to defend you with their guns and cannons, then you could rule over a people, which have no arms, with the greatest ease.

"If you then give order that every one must bow down before you, then every one will have to bow. If you squander your money, you need only to say you need more money, and your subjects will have to furnish it out of their own pockets, and if they refuse you can throw them into prison. But if they should collect in masses in the streets to fight against this outrage, you can have them shot down by your soldiers."

"The churches will then also be on your side. They will tell the people to pray for you, and to beg God to punish all those who wish to drive you from such a nice life.

"So you see it is child's play to be a sovereign. One must only fill the people with fear. But should the people ever have no more fear, then the king will have 'ausgespielt,' as the saying goes."—From Little Socialist Magazine.

TESTING THE NEW BOY.

(Senator Hoar in "Boyhood in Concord.")

The boys knew very well how to take the conceit or vanity out of their comrades. In the summer days all the boys of the village used to gather at a place on the river, known as Thayer's swimming place, about half a mile from the town pump, which was the center from which all distances were measured in those days. There was a little gravel beach where you could wade out a rod or two and then for a rod or two the water was over the boy's head. It then became shallow again from the opposite bank. So it was a capital place to learn to swim.

After they came out, the boys would sit on the bank and have a sort of boys' exchange, in which all matters of interest were talked over and a great deal of good-natured chaff was exchanged. Any newcomer had to pass through an ordeal of this character, in which his temper and quality were thoroughly tried. I remember now an occasion which must have happened when I was not more than eight or ten years old, when a rather awkward looking individual had come down from New Hampshire, and made his appearance at the swimming place. The boys, one after another tried him by putting mocking questions or attempting to humbug him with some story. He received it all with patience and good nature, until one remark seemed to sting him from his propriety. He turned with great dignity upon the offender, and said: "Was that you that spoke, or was it a punkin busted?" We all thought that it was well said, and took him into high favor.

The Girl From the Effete East

By ARTHUR DENSMORE

Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association

BARRINGTON was completing his first year of practice when Theodore Tuppenheim arrived in Knuckleville. Mr. Tuppenheim was selling stock in the Charitable Gold Mining company at 5 cents per share, price to advance to 10 cents at the end of thirty days. Incidentally he found time to foster in Barrington's bosom the spirit of discontent which ten months' fruitless waiting for clients had engendered. If he were a clever, clean cut young man like Barrington, did Barrington know what he'd do? Move west. He wouldn't fritter away his time in a moss backed New England hamlet where people looked down on a fellow just because they'd known him all his life and could remember when he was a little shaver and went with patches on his trousers. No, sir. He'd just gather together his earthly possessions and take the first train for Gilt Gulch, Nev. There was the coming town; there lay the opportunity for an able young man to rise. No reason in the world why he should not be in the United States senate within five years. That would be coming some? Well, everybody and everything came some in that country. Why, sir, where the thriving city of Gilt Gulch now stood there had been less than two years since naught but sagebrush and alkali. And now look at it—just look at it! Six thousand inhabitants and more coming by every train! Simply couldn't get houses up fast enough for 'em. Had to camp out in tents. And every blamed one of 'em making money. Why, sir, you couldn't find a bootblack in Gilt Gulch who was worth less than fifty thousand!

This vision of wealth and political prominence was quite too much for Barrington. He adjusted his affairs in Knuckleville, which was no very difficult matter, took tearful leave of numerous relatives and of a certain pretty damsel, who was not yet a relative, but had rashly promised to become one whenever Barrington's income should suffice for the support of two persons, and hied himself to Gilt Gulch, promising to send souvenir postcards from every municipality he passed through on the way.

Now, underneath the lurid exaggeration with which Mr. Theodore Tuppenheim had clothed his narrative of the rise of Gilt Gulch there lay a respectable substratum of truth, and the consummation of Barrington's ingenious appearance with certain letters of introduction to persons financially prominent in Gilt Gulch, which Mr. Tuppenheim procured for him, resulted in his speedily establishing a thriving practice. For the most part it was work in connection with the location of mining claims, and, besides numerous fees in cash, Barrington acquired several claims of his own, which he disposed of profitably.

In brief, at the end of a year Barrington had waxed so prosperous as to feel himself warranted in marrying. The Knuckleville Weekly Times announced editorially that it understood that young Mr. Barrington, for whom, its readers would remember, the Times had predicted a brilliant career when he hung out his shingle in Knuckleville, was now one of the leading men in the west, and the other village maidens were openly jealous of Susie Cutler, whose good fortune it was to be to marry a millionaire.

But Susie herself had no illusions. She even refused to permit Barrington to come east for the marriage. Her childhood lessons of thrift and economy had taken deep root in her mind, and she would not, she said, have the price of a round trip railroad ticket thrown away. If Barrington felt that he must spend the money, let him buy a cabinet organ or a secondhand piano for the front parlor. They would be married in their own house at Gilt Gulch and after that take a little wedding trip to Colorado Springs or maybe Denver. Perhaps, being a prudent damsel, Susie desired to have a glance at Gilt Gulch before she committed herself irrevocably. At any rate, matters had been thus arranged, and the date set for the wedding being but two days away and Susie due to arrive that afternoon, Barrington was in the state of ecstasy appropriate to such circumstances. It was in this moment of supreme happiness that misfortune befell him.

The work Barrington had been doing requires to be performed with great accuracy; otherwise it is not only valueless, but may be the occasion of great loss to the client. Now, it is possible that Barrington possessed genius. People who have that, you know, are apt to be careless as to details. Perhaps it was merely that, being deeply in love, he could not concentrate his mind upon his work. However that may be, Hartford, the attorney whose office was next to Barrington's, had discovered in the course of an investigation of the records that Barrington had filed documents containing serious errors. He spoke to Barrington about it in a perfectly friendly way. Barrington received his kindly admonitions with a contempt which he was at no pains to disguise. Why should he pay heed to the remarks of a man who wore baggy trousers and long hair and played faro, to say nothing of becoming intoxicated now and then? He knew well enough what inspired these critical observations. Hartford was jealous of the prosperity which Barrington had so rapidly achieved. Let him stop cavilling, said the virtuous Barrington to himself, and seek success by leading a sober life, as he did.

Feeling that he had been insulted, Barrington thereafter confined his communications with Hartford to a curt "How are you?" accompanied by a barely perceptible nod when they chanced to meet. It was with a good deal of surprise, therefore, that Hartford, glancing up from his rather dilapidated desk as he heard the door open, perceived Barrington entering his office. One had not to look at Barrington twice to be convinced that he was badly frightened. His eyes, which ordinarily regarded those about him with an air of easy toleration, were wide with terror, and his well chiseled features, customarily wearing an air of placid conceit, were now white and drawn. His manner toward Hartford was no longer supercilious. All his carefully constructed attitude of dignity had vanished.

"You've been in this part of the country longer than I have, Hartford," said he. "I want your advice as a—a friend, you know."

Hartford nodded and withdrew his pipe from his lips.

"Sure," said he succinctly. "What's the row?"

"Why, you see," said Barrington, "it seems that in filing the papers for Jim Busby on that last mining claim of his I made a slight error. I have been doing a large business, you know, Hartford—a very large business—and it was inevitable that I should make a mistake occasionally. It seems that some unscrupulous persons have taken advantage of this purely technical slip and have jumped Busby's claim, and he is very much exercised about it."

"I should think he might be," Hartford observed.

"Yes," repeated Barrington, "he is much exercised and quite unreasonable about it. He came into my office a few moments ago and demanded an explanation. Of course I couldn't tell him anything except that it was just a mistake such as any man might make, and he said I was lying to him. He said I was too smart to make a fool break like that and that I was in with the gang that were trying to do him out of a claim that would have made him rich. I argued with him the best I could, but it didn't budge him. He said he didn't see that it made much difference, anyhow, whether I was a fool or a knave, because either way I hadn't any right to live, and he wound up by saying that he'd just go down to the Jolly Dog and get a few drinks to put him in the right frame of mind and then he'd come back and reduce the membership of the Gilt Gulch bar by one."

It is significant of Hartford's broad and tolerant temperament that he did not remind Barrington that he had previously predicted such a catastrophe as had now befallen. Nevertheless a slight glimmer of amusement stole across his face.

"So you want my advice, do you?" he asked.

"I should appreciate it very much," said Barrington.

"Well, you shall have it," said Hartford laconically, rapping the bowl of his pipe against the heel of his shoe. "If Jim Busby were out gunning for me and I couldn't shoot any better than you can, and I had a comfortable little sum saved, as you have, and there were a pretty girl in New England who didn't know any better than to love me, as she does you, I'd go east on the half past 2 train, and I wouldn't hurry back."

"But the trouble is," Barrington explained, "Susie—Miss Cutler, that is—will be here on the train that gets in at 2:50. The trains pass on the first siding out, you know. The fact is we are to be married day after tomorrow at noon. You'll pardon my omitting to send you an invitation, won't you? It was quite unintentional. I've been so busy"—

"Oh," Hartford broke in, with a deprecatory wave of his arm, "you need not apologize. It's just one of those little mistakes a busy man is bound to make every now and then. I haven't Busby's disposition. I'll forgive you."

Then Hartford looked at his watch and found that it was twenty minutes past 2.

"You'll have to move lively, my boy," he said. "Keep an eye open for Jim, and if the coast is clear take the 2:20. If it isn't, walk over to Sand City and take the next one there."

"But about Susie," Barrington remonstrated.

"Pshaw!" growled Hartford. "That's easy enough. Leave a note for her with the station master, telling her to go back to Colorado Springs and you'll meet her there. If you don't have time to write a note, have the station master tell her you've been called away on a life and death matter and that she's to go to the hotel and wait until you send her word. Don't you worry about the girl. She'll prefer a slightly delayed wedding to an expedited funeral. Hurry up now. You've just about time to make it."

As he slipped down the main street of Gilt Gulch on his way to the station Barrington caught a glimpse of Jim Busby's gaunt profile as he stood at the bar of the Jolly Dog, his back toward the entrance. Barrington's indolent heart rejoiced as he reflected that the 400 mile walk to Sand City would be unnecessary. It was just twenty-eight minutes past 2 when he reached the station. He gave the necessary instructions concerning Susie to the station master and rushed out upon the platform. But the train which made up at Gilt Gulch was not yet ready to depart. A freight car had left the rails, blocking the track. Five, ten, fifteen minutes passed, and still the obstruction remained. Barrington grew uneasy. Jim Busby might at any moment deem that he had imbibed a quantity of liquor commensurate with his contemplated task and begin to search for him. But at the end of twenty minutes, to his great relief, the perspiring train crew succeeded in replacing the derailed car, and the freight train pulled slowly out upon a siding. Even as it did so Barrington caught sight of the 2:50 train as it rounded the curve just beyond the station.

A moment later Susie Cutler, her trim little figure set off by a skillfully tailored gray traveling suit and her face wearing the look of determination befitting a girl who had just completed a journey nearly across the continent alone, descended to the platform of Gilt Gulch station. Barrington rushed toward her joyfully. Within three steps of her he encountered an obstacle—a very serious obstacle. This was nothing less than the muzzle of a revolver. Behind the revolver stood Mr. James Busby.

"Now, young man," said Mr. Busby, "we'll attend to your little matter, and we won't be long doing it."

Then Busby became suddenly conscious of a voice, evidently feminine, proceeding from some point in his rear and of the light pressure of a hand upon his arm.

"Do you know," said the voice, "it's dreadfully careless of you pointing that thing at anybody so. Why, it might go off."

Turning about, Busby looked into the piquant features of Susie Cutler. He decided unhesitatingly that, notwithstanding some freckles and the tendency of the nose to turn up, it was a rather pleasing face to view.

"So it might," said Busby slowly. "So it might."

"Well, then, stop aiming it at Her—Mr. Barrington," she commanded. "You make me nervous."

"Fact is," said Busby, "I was sort of planning to shoot Mr. Barrington."

He had lowered his weapon and spoke very calmly and deliberately.

"What!" shrieked the girl. "You have the audacity to stand there and tell me you mean to commit a cold blooded murder? Where are the police? A splendid place this must be to live in, where a man goes out to kill another as coolly as he'd eat his breakfast!"

"That's the way with all you folks from out Boston way," grumbled Busby. "You're always getting murder and the administration of justice mixed. I ain't going to murder him. I'm going to execute him. He's done me dirt, and if he ain't killed he'll do somebody else dirt. So for the good of everybody he'd ought to be shot. What do you care anyway? Ain't no relative of yourn, is he?"

"Why, no," she answered in some confusion, "he isn't a relative exactly—that is, he"—

A gleam of comprehension shone in Busby's eyes.

"Come to think of it," said he, "I heard something about his being going to get married. Be you the girl?"

She nodded.

"Yes," she answered simply, "I'm the girl."

"Then," said Busby, "it's clear enough to my mind that in interfering with this execution you're preventing me from doing you a great favor. Howsomever, if you stick to it that you don't want him shot and if you'll take him out of Nevada and keep him out"—

The girl did not wait for him to finish. She transferred her grasp from Busby's arm to that of Barrington, who during the preceding conversation had stood silent, his face white, his limbs trembling, cold sweat bending his forehead.

"Come, Harry," she said imperiously.

Meekly, with bowed head and downcast eyes, Barrington suffered her to lead him aboard the train, which was now, the track being clear, about to move eastward.

Jim Busby sat down upon the edge of the platform and burst into a roar of laughter. Long after the train had disappeared around the curve below the station the station master found him there, his broad shoulders still shaking with merriment.

"Well, you doddering idiot," said the station master, "what's the joke?"

"Oh, ain't he going to get his all right, though?" queried the mirthful Busby. "Did you hear her 'Come, Harry,' him and make him aboard the train like he'd been a puppy hitched to a string? He got out of being executed, but he's getting a life sentence, and that's a whole lot worse."

Local Party News.

Under this head will be published the news concerning the activities of the Ward Branches of the Socialist Party in Columbus and from Locals in Franklin county. All news and announcements should be sent in not later than Wednesday morning.

City Headquarters at 184½ South High Street.

FROM STATE HEADQUARTERS.

The most encouraging letters are coming in daily to the state office, which indicate a healthy, growing and expanding movement in Ohio.

Locals are taking an active interest in the referendums, and all seem to be willing to organize the unorganized districts and, are proud when they accomplish the task of getting a local started.

By next fall we will have the entire state covered with locals, and a vigorous campaign is anticipated during the next few months. Mineral Ridge, Trumbull county, with 10 names, and Trenton, Butler county, have applied for admittance. The latter was organized by Comrade B. F. Primmer, secretary of Local Hamilton.

There is no question about it but what the next state convention will be by far the largest and most interesting that has ever been held in the state. Credentials will be issued to the locals within a few days, proportioned according to their quota. If all attend, there will be about 200 delegates. The referendum will decide whether it will last four days or only two, as that question is before the membership now, to be decided before April 15.

G. A. STORCK,
State Secretary S. P.

PLEASANT SURPRISE.

Some of the members of the Fourth Ward Branch gave a surprise party for Mrs. Flora Holley, the event being to celebrate her birthday, March 21. The evening was spent very pleasantly.

FIRST AND SECOND WARDS.

The First and Second Ward Branches have arranged for a joint propaganda meeting at Weirich's hall, corner Schiller and Parsons, Tuesday evening, March 28. The speakers will be J. L. Bachman, R. E. Radebaugh, J. W. Freeman and D. J. Farrell. Everybody invited.

SECOND WARD BRANCH.

The Second Ward Branch meeting, next Friday evening, will be addressed by Comrade Lewis, of The Columbus Socialist, at Gutknecht's Hall, corner Parsons and Livingston avenues. All invited.

COMRADE QUINBY AT CHILLICOTHE.

Comrade H. Anna Quinby spoke at Chillicothe last Sunday afternoon, to a large audience. The local there is active and zealous in the work and has taken up the organization of the country districts.

CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE.

The Campaign Committee will meet this (Saturday) evening at 7:30 sharp, at City Headquarters, 184½ South High street. Every member is requested to be present. Important business is to be transacted.

A CORRECTION.

Our list of dates for Comrade Fred G. Strickland contained two errors, April 16 and 17 have been assigned as follows:

Sunday, April 16, Miamisburg.
Monday, April 17, Red Lion.

NINTH WARD BRANCH.

Next Thursday evening, March 30, Comrade Peter Kinnear will lecture on "The Green-Eyed Poll Parrots Of Other Days," at the above Ward Branch hall, corner of Town and Cypress avenue. This lecture will be a treat, and take issue with those who are now contending from rostrum and pulpit the impracticability of Socialism. The lecture is free. Everybody welcome, especially those who contend that "Socialism won't work."

At a meeting on Thursday evening, March 16, Comrade Kinnell spoke on "Historical Facts," pointing out how each period in the development of man changed, and why we are on the verge of another great movement forward. Comrade Freeman also told of some moves to be made in the near future, whereby all may be reached with the great truth of Socialism. Three applications for membership were received. No action was taken in the matter of building a hall as the redistricting of the city will make some changes in the branches.

NORTH SIDE DANCE.

The joint entertainment of the Tenth, Eleventh and Twelfth Ward Branches, to consist of a dance and card party, will be given at High Warren Hall, April 17. Admission 25 cents. The Socialists of the entire city should give the North Side Branches a boost in this entertainment. Tickets are for sale in every Branch.

MAY DAY FESTIVAL.

The May Day Festival Committee met Wednesday evening, to complete arrangements for the celebration of International Labor Day, on May 1. The program will include musical numbers, a dance, exercises by the children and refreshments. The affair is under the auspices of the Socialist Glee Club Forward. Tickets are now on sale. Give the Germans a boost and have a good time also.

SOCIALIST QUARTETTE'S CONCERT.

The last number of the Chicago Daily Socialist Lyceum Course was given by the Socialist Concert Company, to a pleased audience at the Board of Trade, last Tuesday evening. This was in spite of the fact that, through some petty spite work, the piano was removed from the auditorium before the concert. The talent members of the company were not to be daunted by such work, and delighted their hearers.

NORTH SIDE DANCE.

The joint entertainment of the Tenth, Eleventh and Twelfth Ward Branches, to consist of a dance and card party will be given at High-Warren Hall, April 17. Admission 25 cents.

FAIRFIELD COUNTY NOTES.

Well, I see we were crowded out last week, but you can't suppress a Socialist, so here comes at you again, after one glorious meeting at Comrade Manning's, Sunday, the 19th. Every one seemed to be very enthusiastic, although we were forced to assume a quiet demeanor, and the interest created among the visitors was evidenced by the admission of two members and the promise of two more next week, and, with their aid, we expect to show the old parties something in the way of a live organization. We simply can't be kept down.

Comrade Griffith enlivened the meeting with some shrewd and pertinent remarks intended for the education of the visitors present. He also transferred his membership to our local. His talks to the Saturday night crowds is creating quite a bit of comment and stirring up a lot of interest. The "old liners" can't make any capital out of him and he is proving a puzzle to them. We hope their guilty conscience will cause them to lost the sleep they deserve to lose.

We also had with us Comrade Nellsen, from Denmark, who, although he has not been in this country long, speaks English with remarkable clearness and was perfectly able to make it understood that he was a good Socialist.

Even the ladies are interested in the good work, and we are going to have a few in the local as soon as we secure a hall, which will be next week. Why not? They will be as good, if not better, voters than the men, and that soon.

We are looking forward to the Strickland meeting with great interest and have ordered more tickets printed than seating capacity would take care of if all were sold, but many will buy who can't attend, so there will be room for any who desire a seat.

Comrade Crampton occupied his seat at the local meeting Sunday, after an absence. Also Comrade Wilcoxen showed up again.

Comrade Haus was unable to be present, and Comrade Bradley filled his chair with credit, as usual.

Our literature fund is growing fast, and more has been disposed of lately than ever before. This is a sign of the times. The revolution of brains is approaching us, and we are preparing the people for it. The plute shivers with apprehension every time a victory for Socialism is recorded. They are beginning to see the end more clearly than the worker, because he has more time and a greater interest in keeping the workers down.

The C. & M. V. Ry. shops, located at Lancaster, using the old plute gag of curtailment, have laid off a large force of men and cut the hours of the rest to almost nothing. At $1.25 per day, on the ten-hour basis, this leaves them almost nothing, while the private owners of stock still give monkey dinners and bathe their dirty consciences in finest wines. On with the dance!

SOCIALISM FROM THE STANDPOINT OF A BOOKKEEPER.

If there is any man or set of men under the sun who have the opportunity of seeing and feeling the need of Socialism it is the bookkeeper for any large industrial concern.

Is business bad? The bookkeeper must see that no unnecessary expense is added to the expense account. He must work over-time, getting out statements showing resources and liabilities, merchandise bought and sold, and all this sort of thing. He must keep his finger on the firm's pulse, as it were, in order to determine just how the patient is progressing. Are there some men to be laid off? The bookkeeper usually has the pleasure of placing a little note in their envelope informing the unfortunate of the fact that "owing to slack business we are compelled to dispense with your services for the present." Sounds nice, doesn't it? Sounds nicer to Mary and the kids at home, with winter staring them in the face, no coal in the cellar and no money to pay gas bills.

Is business good? The bookkeeper must hump himself to keep things moving so that each day's business is taken care of, in order that one day will not overlap the other.

Is there an error made in some customer's account? The bookkeeper is to blame. He is the goat for the whole business.

Does the boss want to raise h—l with some one? The bookkeeper is generally the handiest slave, and consequently gets the benefit.

The bookkeeper has a thorough insight into just the way that business is carried on, and I say to you suckers who are eternally voting her straight for the old party tickets (which means that Big Business shall continue to exploit you), I say, if you knew the tricks and dirty schemes that are worked off on you continuously you would come into the Socialist camp in droves and help us inaugurate a system wherein tricks and schemes to make an honest living and a decent one would be unnecessary. Yes, I have seen tricks worked off on you, and after you had walked up in that free-born American air (?) you carry so well), and bit "like a bass going after a minnow," the managers of the concerns have given you the merry Ha! Ha! for being such idiots. If you were only the business men you'd try to make the business men think you are, you wouldn't be selling your $10 per day labor power for $3, would you? How long would a business man stay in business if he sold an $18 coat for $3. You would say the man was crazy as a June bug and he certainly would be. Well, the capitalist class don't give you credit with being crazy, because a crazy man sometimes gets violent; but you never do, you're tame.

ELLA JUNE PURCELL.

The Columbus attorney, who will represent The Socialist as Special Correspondent in a tour of investigation through European cities.

Miss Ella June Purcell is one of the three women lawyers of Columbus. She was admitted to the bar in June, 1909, and with Miss H. Anna Quinby formed a firm and began to practice law. Miss Purcell is a Columbus girl. Her parents came here from Urichsville, O., when she was two years old. She received her education in the public schools of this city and the Ohio State University, where she graduated, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Laws. Miss Purcell is a bright, energetic young woman, of unusual talents, and we bespeak for her a bright future.

She began her literary work very early, while in the grade schools writing many little articles and poems, which have appeared in the local papers. When The Socialist was started she was asked to be one of the contributing editors, and has written articles touching mostly on the legal side of the Socialist questions. Miss Purcell has been closely confined since she began to practice law, and greatly needs a little vacation, which she will spend in furthering the cause of Socialism by making this trip investigating the civic and municipal conditions of European cities. Being a lawyer, she will be able to gather valuable information which will help improve the conditions of Columbus. Miss Purcell will take up her law practice when she returns, in a few months.

WOMEN RALLY TO SOCIALIST PARTY.

Comrade Bloor Gives Party Work a New Impetus in Columbus.

Comrade Ella Reeve Bloor, national organizer, delivered a telling and effective address to a crowded house of women, at City Headquarters of the Socialist party, last Saturday night. She set forth eloquently the relation of women to the cause of Socialist agitation and appealed in a convincing way to the women present to join the party. The response was a number of applications for membership and the organization of a women's committee. Mrs. Sylvia Vermillion was elected temporary chairman and Mrs. Georgia Crooks secretary.

RESOLUTIONS OF PROTEST.

The following resolutions were adopted by the City Central Committee of the Socialist party of Columbus, last Wednesday evening, by a unanimous vote:

Whereas a state of war now exists within the borders of the neighboring nation of Mexico; on the one side the present autocratic and tyrannical government of Porfirio Diaz, and on the other side an earnest and fearless body of liberty-loving men, sacrificing their lives in an effort to rouse their shackled brethren, and free them from misgovernment, feudal bondage and political and economic oppression; and

Whereas it is further evident from the sudden massing of United States forces on our Southern border that our national government is preparing to arbitrarily intimidate and interfere in the conflict, in the behalf solely of capitalistic interests here and abroad, and regardless of American public sentiment; and

Whereas we, as citizens of the United States, are conscious of our revolutionary traditions of justice to and sympathy with the oppressed of all countries; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we extend our full sympathy and encouragement to the Mexican insurrectionists, and that we demand of our national government at Washington that immediate and full recognition be made of the belligerency of these combatants. We furthermore demand that our national forces, military, executive and judicial, shall maintain the strictest neutrality, and that full right of asylum be accorded to all political refugees across the border.

We further direct that copies of these resolutions be transmitted to the President and the Secretary of State at Washington, and the State and National Headquarters of the Socialist party.

HUMAN LIVES ARE CHEAP.

Another terrible holocaust is chargeable to the greed and neglect of capitalism. Last Saturday afternoon fire broke out in the factory of the Triangle Shirtwaist Company, on Washington Square, New York City, and 143 human lives were sacrificed. The plant was a non-union concern, employing some seven hundred men, women and girls, largely Jews and Italians, recently arrived in this country and compelled to work under the worst conditions imaginable. Doors were locked, windows barred, and it would have taken three hours for the employes to have reached the street by the fire-escape. The building was a death trap. On Monday the proprietor, J. J. Asch, testified at a public hearing that in 1908 the company made a profit of ONE MILLION DOLLARS. IN 1909 the profits were more than ONE MILLION DOLLARS. The city and state officials in New York are trying to lay the blame for the non-enforcement of the factory laws upon each other. The owner of the hell-hole is secure with his millions.

WHAT ABOUT COLUMBUS? In the local papers, last Monday, Assistant Fire Chief Daniels is quoted as saying:

"A catastrophe similar to the one in the New York shirtwaist factory fire of Saturday afternoon is possible in Columbus.

"This condition in Columbus is due to the failure of the state department of workshops and factories to enforce the law requiring fire-escapes on all buildings three stories or more in height.

"In Columbus there are a number of factories five stories high, in which many men and women are employed, which are not provided with a single fire-escape," continued Chief Daniels.

Chief Daniels called attention to shoe factories, a candy factory five stories high, filled with girl employes, a five-story building on East Chestnut street, in which many girls work on the top floor with only one stairway by which they can descend.

"The height of the building doesn't make much difference. They would burn to death or die from the injuries received by jumping just the same as they did in New York," said Daniels.

"In addition to the factories in Columbus which have no fire-escapes, as provided by law, there are a number of tenement houses over three stories or more where the occupants could not possibly escape if a fire started below them.

"In some of the buildings of three and four stories, occupied by factories where many girls are employed and where there are no fire-escapes, we could not get to them with ladders on account of the network of electric wires which are permitted to remain in the streets."

The state factory inspector says local conditions are due to a lack of co-operation on the part of the city authorities. The city building inspector says his force is too small to cope with the situation. City Solicitor Weinland says:

"The city ordinances are very vague, and don't really place the responsibility anywhere definitely for the enforcement of fire-escape and stairway regulations. It is really divided, in a general way, between the building inspector's department and the fire department. The state laws, too, are vague and indefinite."

And so it goes. Property is protected in a thousand ways, but the lives of the workers are deemed unworthy of any particular trouble. Within a block of the State House in Columbus may be found death-traps where the possibilities are horrible to contemplate. Throughout the city may be found places equally as dangerous. THIS IS CAPITALISM.

ULTIMATUM FROM GAS COMPANIES.

> Inasmuch as the ordinance now in force expires July 1, 1911, we take this means of notifying you that your gas will be turned off at that time, and that you should make suitable and proper arrangements for heat and light thereafter.

This is the ultimatum which, Wednesday, was mailed to 27,000 or 28,000 patrons of the Columbus Gas and Fuel Company, notifying them of the company's stand on the 30-cent 10 year gas rate ordinance passed by council Monday night. It is contained in a statement prepared by Louis G. Addison, attorney for the company, and passed upon at a conference with President H. D. Turney, of the company.

The people of Columbus can now see where they stand. The companies have the gas, and, backed by the principle of private ownership and the protection of the courts, they propose to decline to sell this gas except upon their own terms. Just let this fact percolate through your mind, and then consider this question:

What are you going to do about it?

WANTED: A CONSCIENCE.

One hundred and fifty human beings caught like vermin in a trap and then burned alive or hurled to stone pavements, hundreds of feet below. Dead, all dead! The gaping public stare and are horrified. The priests of religion read their ritual. The officers of the law investigate.

But few, indeed, feel any responsibility in this matter. Each one blamed another. Even a culprit, caught red-handed, declares with Cain, "Am I my brother's keeper?" The public will soon forget; other shocks and sensations will come to fill the mind of the multitude.

Where now is the prophet Nathan to point a finger and declare: "Thou art the man!"? The prophet is here, not in one man, but in a movement, the uprising of the working class itself. We hold the present order guilty of our comrades' blood. We demand restitution. We demand a new order.

This age is weighed in the balance and found wanting. It has no conscience—no sense of social solidarity. We are witnesses of wholesale murder, and, with the blood of our young sisters and brothers upon us, we go into our temples "to make our peace with God!" Any god who would hear our prayers under such conditions is not worthy of intelligent worship. It is time to put our prayers into shoe leather and "elbow grease." "Let justice roll down like a mighty stream." Until we do, let us be ashamed to whisper the word God, or any other word that means good.

It is time for the labor and Socialist movement of this country to call the nation to repentance. Too long have we stood the accusation of "irreligion." We are here as the embodiment of a living faith—the faith that an order of justice can be builded now. To this mighty social service we have given our lives. In this matter we are not on trial.

But our so-called institutions of faith must give an account of themselves. Are they going to see our fellow-workers slaughtered by horrible death and make no protest against this mammon-worshipping system which produces such a holocaust? What shall their answer be? Will they hear the children calling in the darkness? Will they cry aloud and spare not?

Frederick Guy Strickland.

MAYOR MARSHALL HAVING FUN.

Declaring that he could eliminate the social evil in Columbus if the city would establish a home for fallen girls, Mayor Marshall, Sunday morning, delivered an address before the members of the Baraca Bible Class of the West Tenth Avenue Baptist Church.

He reiterated the declaration often made in his public addresses that he was not working toward segregation of the social evil, but, instead, desired to do away with it entirely.

"My work is made doubly hard," he said, "by the business interests of the city. When I began the work of cleaning up the Seventh street district a large petition, signed by many well known merchants, was sent to me. The petition, which is on file at my office, declared that the signers were well satisfied with conditions as they existed in Seventh street."

The mayor asked the co-operation of his hearers in his efforts to do away with the social evil, and declared himself as resolved to continue in the work as long as he was in position to keep up the fight.

Mayor George Marshall ought to know that he can not do away with the "social evil" so long as present industrial conditions continue. He ought to know that if all the fallen women in Columbus were provided with places in a "home," or sent to an island in the ocean, the ranks of shame would be filled again in a brief time. Building and furnishing "Doors of Hope" is futile as long as women and girls are obliged to work for starvation wages. Mayor Marshall has not studied this question very deeply. He recently said, in a public address, that he didn't know whether he would be re-elected or not, but that he was going to have some fun while he was in office. George is just fooling about this question. He hasn't done anything. He hasn't driven the women off the streets, he hasn't closed the wine-rooms, and he hasn't decreased vice in Columbus. If he thinks he has, he ought to put on his gum shoes and take a stroll some night between the city hall and the police station.

MISLEADING POLITICAL "DOPE."

A Columbus paper, last Sunday morning, handed out some more local political dope. Under the heading, "Marshall, Karb and Bachman To Lead the Parade," it attempts to forecast the entries in the mayoralty contest this year. The article says:

"A race between Mr. Karb and Mr. Marshall alone will be a pretty one, but there is still a third man to be considered—and to be considered seriously. He is Jacob L. Bachman, Socialist. By one election the Socialists have leaped to a place where the leaders of the old parties are looking at them with interest, if not with apprehension.

"The predictions after the last election that Socialism would die out—that it was simply the result of temporary conditions—does not seem to have been borne out by later developments.

"The Socialists are extremely confident that they will win. Mr. Bachman received more than 11,000 votes when he ran for congress against E. L. Taylor, Jr., and Frank S. Monnett, and the Socialists say he has been gaining strength daily, as has the party. It is a matter of record that the Socialist vote seldom shrinks, but that each recurring election usually shows gains. However that may be, with the lineup as outlined above, it is safe to say that the fall campaign will be a hummer."

So far as the Republican and Democratic parties are concerned The Socialist has nothing to say, but it must protest against the persistent efforts of the capitalistic papers of this city to name a ticket for the Socialist party. The men who write stuff about the Socialist party for these daily papers seem to be unable to understand the basic principles of our organization. Their statements put several of our comrades in a false light before the public.

The Socialist again desires to say most emphatically that no one is authorized to speak for the Socialist party except the party organization. Neither Comrade Bachman or any other comrade is a candidate for any nomination within the gift of the party.

To make the matter plain, it can be stated that, at the proper time, a mass convention of the party members in Columbus will be held for the purpose of naming a city ticket. The names of the men and women named by that convention will be filed in legal form with the board of elections and will be supported by the party members at the primary, in September. When the Socialist party names a member as a candidate or to fill any position, that member is in duty bound to respond unless there is some very good reason for doing otherwise. Gentlemen of the daily press, the Socialists of Columbus do not thank you for trying to nominate our municipal ticket. It is an injustice to the party and to the comrades whom you chance to mention. Please cut it out.

MEXICAN PROTEST PETITION.

The national executive committee of the Socialist party is sending out to all locals blanks, which are headed with the protest form given below, with the request that they be circulated for signatures in each community and then sent at an early date to Victor L. Berger, congressman from the Fifth Wisconsin district, Washington, D. C., who will present them in Congress. In order to save time, if these blanks have not yet been received, locals can clip this part of the paper and place it at the head of a petition sheet and circulate it, or typewrite it over as a heading, if this is practical. Let all petitions be forwarded to the above address as soon as possible:

MEXICAN PROTEST.

"Believing that the sudden massing of our troops on the Mexican border is intended to intimidate, impede and harass the people of Mexico now in active revolt against the despotic rule of a cruel dictator; that it may precipitate wanton war and bloodshed between the people of two American sister republics who have no just cause for hostilities, and that it was undertaken for the sole purpose of protecting the private property interests of a ring of American capitalists and speculators; we, the undersigned, citizens of the United States, hereby protest against the executive order for the movement of troops toward Mexico, as a degrading attempt on the part of the predatory interests to enlist the army of our republic in the nefarious task of aiding a foreign despot to crush the people of his country. And, in the name of popular government, liberty and peace, we hereby petition Congress to order the immediate recall of the American army from the Mexican border."

The uniform school book bill was killed in the State Senate last Tuesday, despite the vigorous fight made for it. On the same day the House defeated the Bertsch bill providing for the sale of all foodstuffs by weight. 'Tis said to state, but the present Ohio General Assembly is about the worst that ever met since the admission of the state.

Checking Congressional Results.

(Charles Edward Russell, in Coming Nation.)

The day of the Sixty-first Congress is over and that of the Sixty-second is at hand. Checking up advance through the chief instrument of our government, where do we find ourselves? Taking stock for the season just closed, how do our accounts stand? Fair questions. We have in our country a vast and growing preponderance of misery and poverty. Half the population, one American citizen out of every two, born to the opportunities which we regard with so much pride, is hopelessly submerged in the class of the "very poor." A mind not versed in the casuistry of capitalistic society might reasonably regard that simple fact as of some slight importance.

What has the Sixty-first Congress done toward alleviating conditions that condemn the half of a nation to nether darkness?

We have in our country a smoothly working system of capitalistic concentration which is steadily bringing all lines of industry into a few hands. Enormous fortunes, such as the world has never seen before, have invested unparalleled power in a few individuals, responsible to nothing under God, who absolutely control government, commerce, industry, and the lives of ninety per cent. of the people. To the simple observer this process would seem worthy of some little attention.

What has the Sixty-second Congress done toward checking the sequestration of wealth and the enslaving of the toilers.

We have in this country hundreds of thousands of little children, deprived of all light, all happiness, all comfort, enfeebled in body, stunted in brain, crippled, starved, blighted before they are formed; whose weary lives are bound to the fearful treadmill of factory toil. These children, each of whom is made, we are told, in the divine image, never can know what it is to have enough to eat, enough to wear, never can know how to laugh or be merry, never can learn the things that make life worth while, never can be well or strong, or bright or good, or fair, or in any way partake of the birthrights of human beings." The untutored mind might be pardoned for wondering whether these matters might not legitimately be considered as constituting a deadly menace to the race and the nation.

What has the Sixty-first Congress done toward abolishing the horror of child labor?

We have in our country a division of government which has arrogated to itself the supreme authority above the people, above the structure of the republic, a force completely subservient to the masters, operating against democracy, justice and liberty. It is unchecked, backed by an army and viciously reactionary. An impartial student of affairs might think that such a danger called for some slight attention.

What has the Sixty-first Congress done toward breaking down the judicial oligarchy and restoring popular sovereignty?

What has the Sixty-first Congress accomplished in any way that can be called a service to humanity or an honest attempt to deal with the tremendous problems that crush upon us? What has it done to lessen crime, disease, prostitution, pauperism? What has it done to meet the crying needs of the unemployed? What has it done to compensate the victims of industrial despotism? What has it done to stop the slaughter of men and woman and children, defenseless under iron conditions of labor? What has it done to protect the maimed, the aged, the starving, the leavings from the cruel pressure of competition? What has it done to end war? What has it done to lift the future above the present? What has it done to promote education, decency, health, sufficiency? What has it done to check inequality? What has it done for democracy? What has it done for man?

We can write one word across the page in answer:

Nothing!

The Sixty-first Congress has done nothing that bears the slightest relation to human progress. It has doddered about with capitalistic measures to settle questions of capitalistic policy one way or another. It has monkeyed with details of the capitalist system, trying to decide whether to use green with yellow stripes or pink with a streak of blue. It has played the game for the masters from the day it went in to the day it went out. No act of its life became it like the leaving of it.

And now we have the Sixty-second Congress.

This Congress would be an exact repetition of the one that went before if it were not for a single important fact. It includes in its membership a Socialist, a man pledged to the issues that are vital to the workers, the disinherited, the unfortunate. For the first time in American history Congress will hold a man whose sole purpose is to compel attention to the interests of humanity.

Comrade Berger, we salute you!

A VENERABLE SOCIALIST.

Mrs. Amy D. Winship, who is now attending the State University, at the age of eighty years, is not more interested in the progress of education than in that of Socialism. In fact, she expects to see some of the theories of Socialism worked out here in

MRS. AMY D. WINSHIP.

Columbus, even more practically than in Milwaukee. She says she has never been converted to Socialism, but is a born Socialist; that history is repeating itself, and that the struggle for the elimination of slavery now calls to her mind the struggles she went through with during the Civil War, when she gave her husband for the cause, and is still willing to make any sacrifice for the cause of Socialism, which she deems fully as worthy.

President Taft arrived in Augusta, Ga., and found the city overcrowded and hotel accommodations scarce. It happened that a kind, benevolent old gentleman, by the name of John D. Rockfellow, was occupying a suite of twelve rooms at one of the leading Augusta hotels. The proprietor of the hotel went to Mr. Rockfellow and sought his aid in entertaining the President of the United States by allowing the presidential party to use some of their rooms. Now all that the oily deacon said was, "No." Mr. Patriotic Citizen, the President of the United States is supposed to represent the interests of 80,000,000 citizens. He is likewise commander-in-chief of the army and navy. What about Mr Rockfellow, you say; "Where does he obtain his powerful authority over the governor and the governed? Why, controlling the needs of society, namely: food, fuel, shelter and clothing. Socialism means that the people will own themselves what they need in common. Then no man will govern men by keeping them hungry.

POSTAL CLERKS MAY QUIT JOBS.

CHICAGO.—That 2500 railway postal clerks are affiliating with the American Federation of Labor, with the intention of resigning in a body, unless conditions are changed, was the claim several local clerks made today.

Heavy runs of mail without substitutes or assistants, which cause the clerks to average between eleven and twelve hours a day, is the chief grievance of the men.

The clerks charged that there has been almost a 50 per cent. increase in the amount of mail handled, and that despite this the staff has been reduced slightly. Their plight, it is asserted, has made the delay of several mails unavoidable. The entire condition is laid by the malcontents to the economical policy of officials at Washington.

CAPITALIST RAISES.

They raised his salary two years ago last May,
The said increase amounting to 10 cents a day;
Since then they've raised the prices
Of carrots and of beets,
Of flour and of meats,
Of corn and coal and fruits,
Of babies' little boots,
Of potatoes, milk and cheese,
Of the products of the bees,
Of hats and sacks and coats,
Of all that sinks and floats,
He's paying out the money that he saved before the raise;
But prosperity's upon us and his heart is full of praise.—Exchange.

The Question Box.

What private property could a man own in the co-operative commonwealth, or Socialism, and what inducement would there be to improve a home if he couldn't own it?

J. C.,
Marion, O.

Socialists believe that the things that are privately or individually used should be privately or individually owned, and the things which are publicly, or collectively, used should be publicly or collectively owned.

All the things produced for private use, including food, clothing, homes, etc., should be the private property of those who have by their labor produced their equivalent value. But shops, factories, etc., which are the means of producing these articles of private utility, should belong to the many who depend upon them as a means of applying their labor.

One of the popular misconceptions of Socialism is the erroneous idea that Socialists believe in the public ownership of all property. We want collective ownership of land and machinery, not as an object in itself, but because it will enable the willing worker to apply his labor to nature's resources and to individually own the equivalent in value of all his labor socially produces.

Under the present system the owner of land or of a factory is enabled by such ownership to take part of the product of the laborers in the shop or on the farm. If a land renter, the tenant must give part of his product to the landlord, in the form of rent; if a wage-worker, the laborer gets only that part of his product represented by wages, while the balance goes to the owner in the form of profit.

Private ownership of publicly-used land, tools and machinery is the means by which the laborer is separated from part of his product; and private ownership also gives control of the land and of the job, through which the worker must gain his living, to the employer and the employing class. To free the workers from this dependence on the favor of the masters—to make each laborer the owner of his job—is the object of Socialism.

To secure this end the ownership of the things that the workers must use should be transferred from the non-using owners to the non-owning users. It is the things that the workers must use in making a living that should be collectively owned. When owned by the workers who use them, then give such workers the opportunity to produce wealth for their own consumption and secure to each producer the full social product of his efforts. This is the end and aim of the Socialist movement, and public ownership of land, machinery, etc., is only incidental to this end.

SOCIALISM NOT ANTI-RELIGIOUS.

Socialism is often attacked, not because it is economically unsound or impracticable, but because it is irreligious. In presenting a brief for the Socialist side of the argument in the Westminster Review (London, May), the Rev. Drew Roberts begins by declaring "religion" too vague a term to oppose to Socialism. If one considers the classes professing religion and those professing Socialism there might be found antagonism, he admits, but he says these classes are not quarreling over religion. Apart from Socialism, or any other ism, he observes, "You have, on the one side, the propertied and comfortable classes, as classes, and attending church and chapel, and, of course, making a profession of adherence to Christianity, and, on the other, the huge mass of workers, skilled and unskilled, outside of every religious organization, and at the best indifferent to its appeals." It has come to pass, he asserts, that "apart from the question of Socialism, religion, especially that of the Church of England, seems to be against the workers, and collectively the whole body of more or less comfortably off and well-dressed church and chapel folk are felt to be, unconsciously or deliberately, opposed to the interests of those who do the hardest and heaviest part of the nation's work and receive the least pay." Socialism, he admits, "as it comes to be understood by the working classes, can not but intensify and point this feeling."

"For Socialism aims at depriving the land-owning class, and ultimately the capitalist class, of all their peculiar privilege and position and economic advantages in the struggle of life. Socialism says quite expressly that the necessary means of life for such an industrial community as ours is the land and the mines, railways, etc., and that these should be communally owned, and collectively administered for the good of all. But the possessing classes, who are the chief supporters of church and chapel today, and their dependents, a large part of the lower middle classes, clerks, and the like, are, and must needs be, not as individuals, but as a class, opposed to Socialists. Like all broad statements, this will admit of many qualifications, but, on the whole, it can not be gainsaid.

"It is true that Socialists are members of churches and chapels, and it is true that Socialism is gaining adherents daily among the members of the church and non-conformist bodies, but broadly and collectively speaking, Socialists find themselves in opposition to the members of the church and non-conformist bodies, not qua churchmen, or qua non-conformists, but because the vast majority of churchmen belong to the governing and possessing classes today and are entirely opposed to the public ownership of land and of the great routine industries of the community. Further, it is evident that the steady and increasing pressure of diverging economic interests will force the industrial classes and the present propertied classes farther apart. Not, of course, that we shall see the Marxian prophecy coming true—there will be overlapping, the edges of opposition will be dulled, there will be endless side-issues, but the main currents of Socialistic and capitalistic economy and legislation will tend to run farther and farther apart.

"Notice at the present how the opposition declares itself. We have Socialists standing for secular education, as much from seeing it is the only way out of the impasse as from conviction. So with disestablishment, about which the Socialist is not greatly concerned, but will certainly vote for. So it would have been, had any real outcry been raised about the deceased wife's sister's bill. On such occasions, the cry will surely be raised, 'Socialists are the enemies of religion, the family and the church,' because people will identify the economic interests of church-going people with the Christian religion itself. And the opposition is intensified in some other ways. For the church and the free churches, speaking broadly, are still wedded to the idea that the best way to 'help' the poor and starving is by means of soup kitchens, doles, bread tickets. All this is called 'charity,' sometimes with, more often without, organization. Among the more intelligent of the workers, it has therefore come to pass that there is no word more loathed than this word 'charity,' which seems to be a most inefficent substitute to them for justice, and to be twice cursed, cursing him who gives with the sense that he (or she) is doing some useful and noble act, and the receiver is encouraging lying, cadging and dependence. But when a principle such as "the right to work" is claimed, it will then be found that both Radical and Tory, both church and chapel, will resist its practical application by the community. It is possible to develop this line of thought by showing how the cleavage between the wage-earner and the income-tax-paying classes is deepened by the growing claim for justice and equality of opportunity being constantly met by instinctive or conscious opposition."

A world-wide movement that possesses so many men and women of deep faith, of sincere conviction, and undying hope, and the will and capacity to suffer for what they hold true, he concludes, is "a challenge to the church in every land, and can not be denounced as opposed to religion without the implication that the religion to which they are opposed has lost its savor."—From the Literary Digest.

SOCIALISM IN URUGUAY.

It is a pleasure to note that the Socialists of Uruguay, in South America, have succeeded in electing a Socialist representative to the legislature in the person of Dr. Emilio Frugoni, who is a professor at the Montevideo University. Dr. Frugoni, who was elected with the co-operation of the Liberal party, has the honor of being the first Socialist to be elected to the parliament of Uruguay, and to him and the Uruguay Socialists we tender sincere congratulations on this historic event. In the matter of Socialist members of parliament South America is far ahead of North America. Chili has six, while Uruguay and the Argentine Republic have one each, like Canada and the United States. Thus South America has eight Socialist members of parliament to North America's two. South America, in fact, is making the pace.—Labor Leader.

NEWS FROM THE NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS

CHANGE OF ADDRESS—On and after April 1 the address of the National Office will be 205 West Washington street, Chicago, Ill. The location is the same. The change is only due to a city plan, whereby the buildings are renumbered in the business part of the town, taking effect on the above mentioned date.

The National Executive Committee is now voting upon a request for assistance to the extent of three dollars per day, for a period of five months, submitted by the state organization of Nebraska; also upon a motion by Comrade Goebel to appropriate $100 to the defense of the comrades connected with the New Castle Free Press, now about to be retried for seditious libel.

The National Committee is now voting on Motion No. 1: "That the report of the Investigating Committee be approved." Vote will close March 17.

The State Executive Committee of Nevada recites the following facts: That the Southern Pacific Railway Company is perniciously active in the matter of securing legislation against the interests of the working class and is pursuing the policy of discharging all active unionists and Socialists; that it is boosting the yellow "Railway Employes and Investors' Association" and coercing its employes to sign petitions for legislation inimical to the cause of labor. Upon the above facts the committee adopted the following resolution:

"That we request the National Executive Committee of the Socialist party to arrange for and conduct a special campaign of propaganda work along the lines of the said railway company in Nevada and among the employes of said railway company."

The Socialist Local of Tooele City, Utah, following the action taken by the International Smelting and Refining Company, of that city, by which all Socialists have been discharged, have issued a ringing statement of the Socialists' position, adressed to C. R. McBride and the smelter officials. This is the same company that, some time ago, discharged all Socialists employed at its works in Anaconda, Mont.

By a recent referendum in Oklahoma, Comrade R. E. Dooley, Indiana Building, Oklahoma City, was elected State Secretary.

The Central Trades and Labor Union of St. Louis, at a regular meeting last Sunday, adopted a resolution, with one dissenting vote, recommending that all members of organized labor should vote the Socialist ticket in the spring election.

Comrade McCrillis, of Iowa, supports the National Committee motion proposed by Comrade Streine, of Kentucky, first published March 11.

GENERAL SOCIALIST NEWS.

The Labor party of South Africa has gone on record in favor of Socialism. It announces as the object of its existence "the gradual socialization of the means of production, distribution and exchanges."

The "Nebraska situation" in the Socialist party is pretty well solved. Not only has harmony been restored, but 33 locals have been formed, and the prospects are good to increase the number up to 200.

Eugene V. Debs has been on the road through the Southwest, and is now working westward. It is hardly necessary to add that he is speaking to capacity houses and people are turned away at many of the meetings.

Prof. David Hendershot, a well-known Socialist at Plymouth, Ind., died at the age of 78. He was an Abolitionist and a veteran of the Civil War, and as enthusiastic to free the white from thralldom as he fought to liberate the blacks.

National Executive Committee Socialist party is going to cover the special session of Congress with a bureau of publicity—without the aid or consent of the Associated Press. Louis Kopelin, a practical newspaper man, will direct the news bureau. The Reds are spreading out pretty big.

Now comes Uruguay, South America, with the announcement that Emile Frugoni, a Socialist, had been elected to parliament in that country. Nobody around here knew that there were any Socialists in that neck o' the woods. How the new movement does spread all over the world!

James O. Nelson, of Scotia, Wash., writes to the Appeal to Reason: "They tell me that if the Socialist party was in power we would all have to divide up. This nearly made me faint. I haven't anything but a cat and corn on my toe. Do you think some one would want to take either of these?"

In St. Louis the street railway monopoly is attempting to put across another steal of many millions by having its franchise lengthened to 37 years. The Central Trades and Labor Council investigated the situation and the committee brought in a recommendation that, in the event the city administration sanctions the grab, all workingmen should pledge themselves to vote the Socialist party ticket. The recommendation was adopted by the central body with but one dissenting vote.

INVITE SOCIALISTS INTO HIS CABINET?

Italy's King Said to Be Planning Portfolios for Them.

ROME.—King Victor Emmanuel today officially charged Giolitti with the task of 'forming a new cabinet. The names, however, will not be announced till after the jubilee.

It is predicted here that he will invite Socialist deputies into his cabinet.

Among those who are said to be in line for portfolios are Bissolati, Bonomi and Cabrini.

The retiring radical ministers, Sacchi and Credaro, will be retained, in all probability, as the king is anxious for the co-operation of the radicals in the government.

The king shocked the conservatives today by receiving Deputy Bissolati, one of the Socialist leaders in parliament, at the Quirinal. It was said he desired to consult him regarding the ministerial crisis with a view to the possible participation of the Socialists in the government to succeed that of Premier Luzzatti, resigned.

This move upon the part of the king is unprecedented, the present being the first occasion on which a Socialist deputy has entered the Italian royal palace to speak with the king.

This is not the first time Victor Emmanuel has made friendly overtures toward the Socialist leaders of Italy. Soon after he ascended the throne he scandalized the respectable element by appearing informally at one of the co-operative offices one day and making himself very agreeable. Some thought at the time that the king did this at the suggestion of some of the keener witted political leaders, who were said to have been severely frightened by the killing of King Humbert by Bresci and alarmed by the growth of the syndicalist unions and the general unrest of the working class.

Bissolati is one of the leaders of what is known as the revisionist or opportunist wing of the Socialist party, which is the dominant one. Until recently he was editor of the Socialist organ, Avanti.

Labor produces all wealth. Those who do the labor should have all that they produce. They—the workers—constitute the great majority, and the Socialists propose that they, by their votes, secure control of the government, organize publicly owned industries, and thus guarantee to themselves the full product of their toil.

FACTS ABOUT MILWAUKEE.

Socialists Are Making Good on Every Proposition --School Primary Explained.

The capitalist press has been howling continually that the terrible Socialists had "scared capital away from Milwaukee." The Milwaukee daily papers are all the time whining that the Socialist administration is fearfully extravagant, that it has burdened the city with debts, destroyed Milwaukee's credit, etc.

Last week an issue of Milwaukee bonds was put on the market. After all the capitalist press had said it might have been supposed that nobody would be very anxious to purchase these bonds. So it was rather funny to see that even the capitalists themselves tak no stock in what their own press says. The bonds went off like hot cakes! The purchasers almost fell over each other in the scramble to buy them. It was the best attended bond sale that Milwaukee has had for the last ten years.

These bonds are for sewerage, public baths, public museum, and other purposes. They amount to $430,000. At the rate they are selling they will bring a premium of over $14,000, on a 4.10 basis.

Of course, the Milwaukee Socialist administration is not to be measured in dollars and cents. Its real test of success is the good it is doing for the people of Milwaukee and the working class. But it is amusing that the capitalist class confess by their own action that their hired howlers are talking nonsense. In fact, the capitalists, judging the Social-Democratic administration by their own standards, have admitted its integrity and efficiency—and that in the most practical manner possible.

Another dodge of the capitalist press is to profess a sudden interest in the unemployed and to pretend that there are 30,000 men out of work in Milwaukee, for whom the Socialist administration is doing nothing. The Milwaukee Federated Trades Council, the central body of the trades unions of this city, has completely exposed this preposterous charge. It points out that there is not anything like this number of unemployed men in Milwaukee, and secondly, that the administration is doing for these men everything that it possibly can. The Federated Trades Council also resolved to "most emphatically condemn the so-called black-hand methods used by disgruntled politicians and vested interests who are endeavoring to discredit the best administration Milwaukee has ever had by subsidizing the press and the hired grafters in a systemized knocking of the administration." In the same meeting the Federated Trades Council adopted resolutions containing a vigorous arraignment of the capitalist press and pledging their moral support to the proposed Milwaukee Socialist daily.

Next week the factory gate meeting will be in full swing in Milwaukee. The best Social-Democratic speakers will address the factory workers during their noon hour, on the issues of the campaign.

The primary election last Tuesday resulted rather unsatisfactorily for the Socialists, two of their candidates for the school board failing to get on the ballot. This was due to the fact that the Social-Democratic voters failed to understand the new non-partisan primary law, which was passed only three weeks ago, for the avowed purpose of blocking the Socialists.

These non-partisan laws, framed up just to "kill the Social-Democrats," as the enemy freely admitted, will make it a little harder for them, and will necessitate a good deal more work and more expense in their campaigns.

They are accordingly putting out immense quantities of literature, and will meet their increased difficulties with increased efforts and redoubled energy.

Stricklands Win Praise.

ERIE AUDIENCE IS CAPTIVATED BY THE TWO ELOQUENT COMRADES.

Under the heading "Able Socialist Orator Captivates Large Audience," the Erie (Pa.) Dispatch has the following to say about the Stricklands:

"Officials at Washington were declared to be Wall Street bell-boys, by Frederick Strickland, in his lecture on 'Socialism,' at Maennerchor Hall, last night. He said Wall Street had ordered the administration to send troops to the Mexican border, and, like good and obedient subjects, they had obeyed their lord and master. Mr. Strickland told the large audience that he was not there to call names and indulge in bitter invective that is calculated to drive men to desperation.

"'The men are desperate enough already, and he would be a criminal who would incite them to deeds of violence by appealing to their passions and prejudices,' said the speaker. 'If you are waiting to hear me call nasty names to people, you had better leave right now.' The speaker kept his word. He was witty, good humored and eloquent. He seemed to have captured the sympathies of the large audience at the very outset of his address. Both old parties received a liberal amount of his attention and both were branded by as 'inefficient has-beens.'

"'Democrats point with pride to Thomas Jefferson,' the speaker said. 'Well, it was not his fault that the party degenerated until now all it is able to do is to meet around the banquet board and talk about the founder of the party, at so much a plate. The Republican party has been a grand old party. It gave to the country the greatest President we shall have until a Socialist is elected.

"'Republicans look into the honest face of Abraham Lincoln, but all they can see is the wart. We, on the contrary, hang his sayings in our halls and rooms where we can see them, and we use them, too. If Lincoln were alive today, he would have no place in either of the old parties, but would have to take his position by my side on this platform.'

CAPITALISM DOOMED.

"The lecturer told his hearers that capitalism is doomed. He said the markets of the world would soon be closed to the manufacturers of the United States and then there would be nothing to do but enter into a co-operative industrial alliance which would include all the producers of the country. He insisted that every man is entitled to work, to the full product of his toil, and to the leisure that follows toil.

"While insisting that capital is doomed, the speaker promised the submerged capitalists shelter under the wing of the Socialist party.

"'We are not organized for a malicious purpose,' said the lecturer. 'We know capital is doomed, and the whole system must go with it. But when that time arrives we will take the capitalist under our protection and give him a job alongside of the workers. Then he will be permitted to earn his bread, enjoy the fruits of his toil, and the rest, leisure and pleasure which follow.'

"Mrs. Strickland took part in the proceedings, giving a recitation entitled 'The Dabneys.' This was designed to depict the struggles of a worker who has a large family to support and whose income is slender and his job insecure. Mrs. Strickland said the two greatest scourges that come to a family where money is scarce are sickness and the doctor. The one, she said, paisies the hand of the breadwinner, while the other empties his pocket."

MILWAUKEE OFFICIAL HEALTH BULLETIN.

The January number of the new official bulletin, which will be issued monthly hereafter by the Milwaukee health department, has just made its appearance. The publication is neatly gotten up and not only gives advice on keeping the city clean and caring for the health, but information of what the department is doing. With Fred. W. Luening, former newspaperman, as his secretary, Health Commissioner Kraft is able to present the public with something worth reading. Citizens desiring copies of the report regularly can secure them by sending names and addresses to the health department.

STENOGRAPHIC REPORT OF THE INVESTIGATING COMMITTEE.

50 Cents a Copy.

The committee states: "We desire that the findings of your committee and the stenographic report of the trial be as extensively circulated as possible . . . the printing the full proceedings will cost, according to the lowest bid received, $625 for 1,500 copies. We therefore request the solicitation of advance orders for copies of the proceedings at the price of 50 cents a piece."

Money should accompany orders. Address: National Socialist Headquarters, 180 Washington street, Chicago, Ill.

ANOTHER SOCIALIST INNOVATION.

The public school dental clinic opened at 9 yesterday morning, on the eighth floor of the Milwaukee city hall, and before noon four children, two little girls and two little boys, appeared and were treated. In the afternoon several more school children appeared.

Dr. Helen Addenbrooke was the first volunteer dentist to take charge of the clinic, working from 9 until 12 yesterday morning. Dr. W. T. Faust took charge in the afternoon.

About fifty dentists have volunteered to devote one-half a day a month to the free clinic. Miss Lillian Cocroft is the clinical assistant.

No charges are made for these treatments.—Milwaukee Political Action.

THE COST OF LIVING.

The cost of living still appears to be the most vexing problem troubling chiefly those who have never approached nearer a living than an existence, and those who make it their business to solve problems. Many ingenious solutions of this problem have been advanced, and have got no farther. And so many causes for the high cost of living have been discovered that it is astonishing that the cost of living is not several times as high.

Among these, if not the most exact, at least, the most epigrammatic is Jim Hill's "the high cost of living is due to the cost of high living." This he explained to mean (very often necessary with epigrams) that we are too extravagant. Well, we are not so sure about that, but can not deny that with a lot of people we know of living at any cost is an unwarranted extravagance.

We can see where it hits Jim Hill, who has a hobby for collecting old paintings, railroads and other curios. He himself is by no means extravagant, for he has so much money that it would take an incinerator to burn it. But the workers, they will persist in living beyond their incomes when they ought to realize that already their incomes are too narrow to turn over inside of. They have not taken the trouble to cultivate a taste for the works of Corot, Velasques, Raphael, Tuck and other extinct masters, but persist in an animal craving for well-preserved antiques from the studio of Swift, Armour, Cudahy and P. Burns. And still they ask for more as these improvements upon nature become more inaccessible to them. Now if the workers would content themselves with an esthetic and easily digestible dietary of "Toasted Post-holes" and "Dream of Wheat," varied by an occasional healthful fast, the high cost of living would worry them no more and Jim Hill could found an international museum of prehistoric showcard writing.

However, it looks to us as if it might be possible that the reason this problem is so difficult of solution and its causes so obscure is that the high cost of living is not the problem after all. That it is not that prices of necessities are going up, but that we don't get the price, and can't get it. What odds how the price of fodder went up if wages, our price, went up accordingly? But there are more of us than there are jobs for, and become many more of us as the ratio of jobs is diminished. Consequently our price will not go up accordingly. Of course it goes up a little. That is, our standard of living is being lowered a little more slowly than if it fell down a coal pit. And it is these slight rises in wages which have been eating Jim Hill and causing him to emit sapiency and epigrams on a subject of which he knows as little as he did about Rembrandt before he learned to steal railroads with impunity and benefit of clergy.

WHAT THEY ARE.

Wealth is anything that satisfies human desire.

Capital is wealth used to produce more wealth, but owned by one man or set of men and worked by others.

The Capitalist Class are those who get their income by owning capital, whether they draw rent, interest, or profit, or all three.

The Working Class are those who get their incomes by working. The workers (when they have a job) are paid wages, which are less than what they produce. Wages never equal the full product of the worker's toil.

BEWARE--BECAUSE?

The men who seek to poison the minds of men in secret chambers are dangerous subjects. We must admire the majestic bearing of the lion; but who ever thought of admiring the insignificant parasites who live in the animal's hide. Sometimes these little insects irritate the king of beasts, causing him to send forth a ponderous roar. Then these little creatures giggle because they think they are doing the roaring. Beware! They cry of certain classes: Beware of certain creeds. Believe only in ME, and I will keep CLASS against CLASS and CREED against CREED. Why? Because I desire to govern man's political destinies, saith the tools of capitalism.

THE ABUSE OF POWER.

When we hear of our citizens having a gun poked under their noses, with a demand for their money or their life, "the good citizens" cry, "Arrest all foreign vagrants; it's an outrage. What's the matter with the police?"

But when we see the whole commmunity seized by the throat by a foreign corporation, with a threatening demand for your money or your LIGHT and HEAT, the very soul of humanity seems to cry out, "It's an outrage! What is the matter with the PEOPLE?"

JIM HENDERSON.

WICHITA HEARD FROM.

At Wichita, Kan., the full count of votes cast in Monday's primary election, under the commission form of government, shows the Socialist candidates to have run even stronger than was supposed at first. Eight candidates for commissioners were to be nominated, from whom four will be elected on Tuesday next. Four of the primary winners, or half of the number, are Socialists.

In the race for nomination for mayor, A. L. Blaze, Socialist, had the highest vote, receiving 3683 to the 3052 for John H. Graham, Blaze's nearest competitor. This means that Blaze and Graham alone will get their names on the ballot at the election. The feature of the primary campaign was the cry of the Socialists and labor forces to "Milwaukeeize Wichita."

More power to Wichita! Columbus will not be a bit jealous if the Socialists out there win their city six months before we do. Go to it!

MORE LIGHT ON THE PARK COMMISSION.

The Park Commission proposition has been condemned by the Columbus Federation of Labor. This action verifies the opinion expressed by The Socialist that the workers are suspicious of the plan. They, and all citizens, have reason to be in this frame of mind. The commission would be an appointive board, not directly responsible to the people. Its members are to receive no salary, but must give bond in the sum of $3,000 each. This excludes any workingman from being named on the board. The entire scheme would be in the hands of the exploiters of labor. The toilers of Columbus produce all the wealth and are the ones who really pay for everything. They naturally desire to have some say as to who shall have charge of public affairs. The proposed park commission would be vested with powers given no other municipal board. Its plans would be subject to no veto or amendment. It could force the submission of bond issues to a vote at an expense of some $9,000 for each election. It would have the final decision as to where parks would be located and as to what these parks should be. It is stated that one of the first things undertaken would be the parking of the river front and the construction of a dam to raise the level of the water in the Scioto. This would be nice. At the same time comes the information that a prominent promoter of the park commission idea has a project of his own to put motor boats on the river to carry passengers at so much per trip. This would be nice for his private purse. The more the subject is considered the more forcible becomes the thought that this park commission business will bear closer investigation.

WHY WE ARE IN MEXICO.

By Gordon Nye.

Porfirio Diaz to Morgan: "Help!"

Morgan to his office boy, Taft: "Send the army and navy to the Mexican frontier."

Taft to Morgan: "Yes, sir! Yes, sir!"

That's the Mexican situation in a nutshell.

At the command of the gray wolves of high finance, Taft orders the army to the border for "practice," armed with loaded shells.

According to a report, the object of the army maneuvers now in progress is "to form a solid military wall along the Rio Grande to stop filibustering and to see that there is no further smuggling of arms and men across the international boundary."

"It is believed," continues this official dispatch, "that with this source of contraband supplies cut off the insurrectory movement, which has disturbed conditions generally for nearly a year without accomplishing anything like the formation of a responsible, independent government, will speedily come to a close."

* * * * *

For the moment let us go back to March, 1776. At that time the insurrectory movement in the American colonies had been hurting business for a year "without accomplishing anything like the formation of a respectable, independent government." True, there were numerous bands of quarrelsome revolutionists in the field, but they had not even framed a declaration of independence. They had not succeeded in doing anything more than to disturb conditions generally.

Suppose at the critical moment France and Spain had decided that business had been hurt and declared peace with England, so as to release from continental service enough British troops to form a solid military wall from Maine to Georgia. With such a wall to contend with, would not the insurrectory movement in the colonies have come speedily to a close?

* * * * *

To all the explanations offered, official and non-official, regarding the Mexican situation, the American people say "Piffle!" No one with a grain of sense places any credence in these explanations from Washington.

The Mexican revolution has hurt business. Therefore it must be suppressed. We know that the troops on the Mexican frontier are there for one purpose, and only one—to safeguard the lordly interests of the Wall Street gamblers in Mexico.

In order to protect the interests of Morgan, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., John Hays Hammond, Rockefeller, the Guggenheims, Dave Thompson, William R. Hearst and others, Taft is willing to spend millions of dollars of your money, and if necessary sacrifice thousands of workingmen's lives, to maintain the arrangement by which Mexico has been bequeathed in perpetuity to Diaz by our Wall Street economic masters.

At the present time this alliance is seriously endangered by the success of the revolution. As our capitalists have no idea of giving up their opportunity to exploit the working class they call on Taft to send the army to protect them in their robbery.

These eminent American Captains of Industry would like to set all Mexican revolutionists to work on the rock pile, and if the wall of soldiers along the border can bring this about it will be done. This may be all right according to the stand-pat theory, but still it is pertinent to ask: What has become of the American spirit of 1776?

Too long have the slaves of Yucatan, the serfs of the provinces, the peons of the Mexican states filled graves wet with their own whipped blood. And now they have turned on their masters.

To Americans it makes no difference whether opponents of Diaz are better or worse than he. They are destroying a system which has been weighed and found wanting, and which even they can never re-establish. The point that puzzles us common folk is why should American soldiers, representing the "land of the free and the brave," be sent to Mexico, and perhaps be shot to pieces for the benefit of the same capitalist class that daily robs their brothers in mine, factory and shop.

What have American workingmen to gain from a war with Mexico? If it happens to come we shall very likely defeat the Mexicans and annex the country. But the American workers, who will do the fighting and the dying will gain nothing—absolutely nothing. The only gainers in such a war will be the exploiters of the American workingmen—our Wall Street financial and political buccaneers.

The exercise of arbitrary power, so boldly perpetrated by Morgan's office boy, Taft, amounts to nothing less than a great crime against the human race and the cause of freedom. The Mexican nation struggling against great odds for the sake of liberty and democracy is awed and threatened into submission to its ruling tyrant and into abandoning its struggle at the supreme moment, when victory is within its grasp—awed and threatened into submission by the iron fist of the American nation.

At the behest of American capital this unheard of, unprecedented, dangerous intervention in a foreign people's affairs is undertaken by our ready servants of capitalism.

What matters it to the capitalist class how great the expense in such a warlike mobilization? You, the workers, can pay it.

What matters it to them how great the risk and immediate danger of enrolling this country in an unrighteous war with a neighboring nation, who has not harmed us and has no intention of doing so? You "Easy Marks" can stand for it.

What matters it to them how many thousands of lives are snuffed out, how many hearts are broken, how many children are left fatherless? Workingmen are cheaper than mules.

Capitalism and Taft don't care.

If Morgan and his gang of Wall Street cutthroats want war, let them shoulder the guns, do the marching, the fighting and the dying. It is just as well that we put the Wall Street gang on notice that we common folk have done about all of that sort of thing we ever expect to do.

LAST WEEK IN OHIO.

(On Train.)

Continuing my route from Mt. Vernon, I was scheduled to appear at Rittman, away off in a remote corner of Ohio, but this new organization is very much alive. The meeting was held in the opera house, and stirred up the whole town. At Marion we found a lively crowd. They have a paper of their own, and a co-operative store. Their instinct for advertising brought them a crowded house. They had two large billboards announcing my meetings in front of the county court house building. One of the boards had cartoons from our Socialist papers, about Mexico, all over the vacant spaces. The comrades here have made a large number of benches for their headquarters, and they expect to use these benches for their open-air meetings in the summer—in front of the court house. Their new headquarters has its walls fairly covered with printed mottoes—one of them is something like this:

"The Only Trust Teddy Ever 'Busted' Was the Trust the American People Had in Him."

We regretfully left Marion, after faithfully promising to come back for open-air meetings in the summer.

At Salem, Comrade Bonsall was waiting for us; and we found here a well-drilled "flying squadron," which starts out at 7 a. m. every Sunday morning, to cover the entire town with Socialist literature. The meeting was held in their fine hall and was like all the other Ohio meetings— well attended by earnest, interested men and women.

Arriving at East Liverpool early in the day and going up to the headquarters, I found a great house cleaning going on in honor of my coming. The women had the place all decorated with strips of red, looped back and forth across the ceiling and walls; a stage draped with red, and a beautiful bouquet of red pinks on the speakers' table. The meeting was opened by singing "The Marseillaise," led by the Men's Glee Club. Comrade Mrs. Bowring was chairman, and told how the Woman's Progressive League of East Liverpool had grown from seven members to forty-five. Here we secured several new members for the party. The next day, before leaving for Lisbon, we held a fine open-air meeting on the Diamond, standing on a barrel, in the midst of a crowd of hundreds of men. We gave them the message of "the largest political party in the world today," and every man there seemed to be convinced that the time had come to make it his party.

Over in Lisbon, young Comrade Henacy, a student, introduced me to his father, last year's candidate for mayor on the Democratic ticket and a "prominent citizen" of the town, and we could see that the earnest arguments of his son had made some impression upon him. Comrade Henacy and a number of other high school students of the town, had guaranteed the success of the meeting by selling a large number of tickets. Before the meeting, which was held in the county court house, I adressed several hundred people from the band stand on the square.

On Sunday, at Warren, I found the largest crowd waiting for me of the entire trip. Every Sunday the Socialists of Warren hold their meetings in the theater, which will seat about 400 people. The collection was over ten dollars, and they even wanted more from the speaker, and asked me to hold another meeting in the evening. This was also an enthusiastic meeting, and a social was held afterward, and all gathered around the piano, singing "The Red Flag" and other stirring song. It was the "opening night" for their beautiful new headquarters, and a farewell night for the little organizer, as I was just closing my trip of nearly 5,000 miles and about seventy meetings at this place. A funny incident occurred at the social. It has been my habit, in speaking of some of Mark Hanna's notorious efforts to hoodwink labor, to say: "Before Mark Hanna went to heaven he used to say, 'Let capital and labor get together,'" etc., and before I left a large bulletin was presented to me, containing these words:

"Great excitement in Heaven. Mark Hanna not yet arrived."

Am now just leaving Pittsburg, where it was my privilege to address the miners' convention now in session there. They gave me an enthusiastic reception, and presented me with a beautiful delegate's badge; was introduced by Comrade Michael Holapy, of Indianapolis, who has just been appointed editor of the United Mine Workers' Journal, and, now, with my face turned eastward, am not going to say "good-bye" to Ohio. I want to be with you all this summer in the hard field work, and help in making Ohio win for Socialism.

STRICKLAND LECTURE TOUR.

Saturday, April 15, Eaton; Sunday, 16, Miamisburg; Monday, April 17, Red Lion; Tuesday, 18, Springfield; Wednesday, 19, London; Thursday, 20, New Lexington; Friday, 21, Lancaster; Saturday, 22, Derwent; Sunday, 23, Byesville; Monday, 24, Mineral City; Tuesday, 25, Salem; Wednesday, 26, Lisbon; Thursday, 27, Warren; Friday, 28, Wadsworth; Saturday, 29, Akron; Sunday afternoon, 30, Massillon; Sunday night, 30, New Philadelphia; Monday, May 1, Wellington; Tuesday and Wednesday, 2 and 3, Mansfield; Thursday, 4, Mt. The above are the dates assigned for Comrade Fred G. Strickland's first lecture tour under the auspices of The Socialist. It seems to be the best possible arrangement that could be made. Advertising matter has been sent to the various locals, and now all that is needed is some activity on the part of the comrades in each place in order to make every one of these meetings a grand success. Comrade Strickland will do his part. He knows how, and any town he speaks in receives a new Socialistic shake-up.

THE MESSAGE OF SOCIALISM.

Comrade J. L. Bachman delivered "The Message of Socialism," at the West Fifth Avenue Christian Church, last Monday evening. He made a decided impression upon the large audience present.

When Socialism comes, asserted the speaker, people may not have to work more than two or three hours a day. The rest of the time may be taken up in travel, study of the arts and sciences, or in any way that the citizen may elect, he said.

"You might just as well try to stop the sun and moon in their course as to attempt to bust the trusts," said Bachman. Trusts are the natural evolution of the industrial system, he told the audience. The competitive system breeds waste.

If the state owned all the land it would get an enormous income in rent, with which, after abolishing all present taxation, it could do wonders for its citizens, in education and social betterment of every kind.

COLUMBUS FEDERATION OF LABOR

Credentials were received from the Book Binders, and Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and delegates were seated at the Federation meeting last Monday evening. P. H. Chappelear was admitted as a ministerial delegate. The brother, in the course of a few remarks, informed the delegates that Rev. Wharton and himself had been appointed delegates from the Columbus Ministerial Association, and that they expected to be active co-operators in the work of the Federation. The Federation of Labor indorsed the pleasing remarks by their hearty applause.

The request of the Metal Polishers of St. Louis to make known the unfair attitude towards organized labor of the firm of H. Mueller Manufacturing Co., Decatur, Ill., was indorsed.

Indorsed proposition to put workhouse prisoners at work spading up lots so as to allow the worthy poor to plant potatoes for the winter food supply. Motion carried.

Federation refused to indorse Park and Boulevard Commission. Legislative Committee report favoring election of all public officials was indorsed.

Federation sent dues to Association of Political Science and indorsed work of the association.

Brother Byrum, Ohio Federation of Labor representative, was given the floor and urged the delegates to attend the legislative hearing. He also reported the movement of the various labor bills and the actions of the opponents of the labor measures before the legislature.

The hall committee was unable to report. Chair granted extension of time. Action was taken to secure more tenants and plans for future continuance of lease to be inquired into.

Printing section delegate reported adoption of fines on any member of their craft caught having work done in "rat" barber shops. Delegate Phrem recommended that this rule be adopted by all unions.

Delegate Horn, from the Bakers' Union, notified the body that the Bakers had signed a label agreement with the Craigiow Baking Company. Delegates were requested to demand the union label.

President Voll, of the Ohio Federation of Labor, was in attendance at the meeting. The Executive Board took up matters relating to unfair moving picture shows. Committee will report next meeting.

The Federation accepted the offer of State Labor Commissioner Wirmel regarding the distribution of labor reports for 1909.

It will be necessary to soon form a Railroad Section in the Federation. At the next meeting plans will be laid for the same. Body adjourned to meet April 18, 1911.

MACHINISTS' GREAT VICTORY.

The union machinists on the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad gained a 10 per cent. increase in wages and the honorable distinction of being the first railroad machinists in the world to enjoy the eight hour work-day.

Business Agent James T. Liddy has been called to Cincinnati through the death of his sister. We extend our heartfelt condolence.

The American Photo-Engraver for March discusses the action of the Miners in withdrawing from the Civic Federation. The writer appears to understand the selfish and jealous instincts of human nature; and he apparently advises the membership to await developments. The article is one of the most wholesome digests so far reached by a balanced, clear-thinking mind. Every word is food for thought.

NOTICE OF CHANGE OF MEETING PLACE.

The regular meeting of Columbus Typographical Union, No. 5, will be held Sunday, April 2, 1911, 2 p. m., at 328½ South High street.

CLINTON TOWNSHIP ORGANIZED.

A meeting was held at Lane View, northwest of Columbus, Friday evening of last week. Addresses were made my Organizer D. J. Ferrell, J. H. Henderson and F. E. Johnston. There was a good attendance, and an application was secured for a local in Clinton township. Comrade Walton is the chief promoter at Lane View, and the prospects are bright there.

THE OHIO LEGISLATURE.

The Edwards bill, giving the labor commissioner greater power over employment agencies, passed the House.

The boiler inspection bill passed the House.

The special compensation committee had a hearing on the Employer Liability measure. The legislative hash pot appears to be on the boil. So far the smell is not very invigorating, and the bosses therefore are applying the necessary restorative seasonings.

The Woman's Eight Hour Bill was again resurrected, crucified, and, then deposited in the chamber of death. The good, kind men who build shops to give the poor working girls work, so they can work and earn money to give themselves more work and more wages and more work, so their kind masters can buy more material to give them more work, so they can earn money to put in the savings bank so their good, kind master can borrow the money the girls put in the bank to pay them wages to buy more material to give them more work, etc., opposed the same by these facts.

A BILL.

Be It Enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio:

Section 1. That Sections 13154 and 13155 of the Revised Statutes be amended so as to read as follows:

Sec. 13154. Any person or persons, partnership or corporation, who shall use or display the genuine label, union shop card, trade mark, term, design, device or form of advertisement, or the name or seal, or any imitation, likeness, or counterfeit of the genuine label, union shop card, trade mark, design, device or form of advertisement, or name or seal, of any association or union in any manner, not being authorized so to do by such union or association, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine or not less than twenty-five dollars ($25), nor more than two hundred dollars ($200).

Sec. 13155. Any person or persons, partnership or corporation, who shall in any way use the genuine label, union shop card, trade mark, term, design, device or form of advertisement, or the name or seal, or any imitation, likeness, or counterfeit of the genuine label, union shop card, trade mark, term, design, device or form of advertisement, or name or seal, of any association or union, or officer thereof, in and about the sale of goods or otherwise, not being authorized to so use the same, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars ($25), nor more than two hundred dollars ($200).

Section 2. That the original Sections 13154 and 13155 of the Revised Statutes be and the same are hereby repealed.

This bill is to take the place of the remains left by the codification commission's inquest on label laws.

THE NEWSBOYS' STRIKE.

The Columbus Dispatch has again lowered the wages of its newsboys. Before the Dispatch European contest the boys received two cents on all the Sunday papers sold. After the contest they were cut half a cent. Now this paper has a Book Lovers' contest on, and, so as to make the poor newsboys struggle for existence harder, the Dispatch has taken off the other half cent. So now the boys only receive ONE CENT. The strike was lost. The boys are wondering whether they are to pay for the band instruments or the new Dispatch building.

HOWLS FROM THE SWEAT-BOX.

Eight hundred milk carriers in Paris, France, went out on strike for a wage increase. The strike is still in progress.

Rome, Italy is facing a general strike. The United Railroad Unions are already taking a vote. This will inconvenience the opening of the National Exposition.

The London County Council have passed a law forbidding all street selling. The Union Labor party claim it to be an act of tyranny, supported by the large storekeepers.

Until a man has a grip on himself he is not going to grip anything that will stay with him.—The Tailor.

The initiative and referendum measure is to see the light of day once again in the Ohio Legislature.

All the progressive states are trying the right of "recall." So far it has proven a failure. At least the political bosses and the corporations say so. Many a crooked politician has passed to oblivion through the "recall."

The Brotherhood of Railroad Firemen may call out all the men employed on the Southern system. This system comprises about twenty-three railroads. It would entail a strike of 2,000 railroaders.

President Brown, of the New York Central Railroad blames the employes for the increase in freight rates, because they are continually demanding high wages. Of course he said nothing about the parasites who live in Europe in luxury, while the American workmen exist on starvation wages to produce dividends.

President Taft is sorry his friend, Booker Washington, got biffed.

Women expect to vote in Illinois. They have a bill before the Illinois legislature.

SOCIAL LIFE INSURANCE.

For the Public.

We learn by degrees. Modern nations are coming to understand that if they would persist and dominate, they must write two life insurance policies: the first, a Child Labor Law, to protect children from premature toil; the second, a compulsory Education Law, to guarantee a minimum of education to every growing citizen.

A nation which writes these two insurance policies has thrown a strong safeguard around its future life.

SCOTT NEARING.

GOVERNMENT RAILWAY POSTAL CLERKS MUST BE DEAF —TO TRUTH.

Washington dispatches announce that railway postal clerks whose trains are wrecked must not talk about the wreck except to the department. "In that way," remarks the second assistant postmaster general, "we shall be able to adjust our troubles with the railroads without much friction." Quite so. But isn't it queer that the postoffice department enjoins the same kind of silence upon its railway employes that the railway companies enjoin upon theirs?

THOU SHALL NOT KILL.

Governor Harmon signed a bill carrying with it an appropriation of $20,000 for the erection of armories. During the streetcar strike a young woman was crippled for life by one of the graduates of these killing institutions. This young victim has a bill before the legislature to give her enough support to save her from pauperism.

This is a Christian era, and yet we teach men to KILL instead of teaching them kindness.

MORE GOLDEN RULE METHODS —NIT!

In police court William Watters exhibited the fond remembrances received at the hands of Policeman Sandusky's club. If this golden rule business keeps up, it will be necessary for the patrol wagons to carry a surgeon. The law appears to be administered like medicine in Columbus—"To be well shaken before taken."

THE LOCAL CARNEGIE HERO.

George H. Nitschke has saved three people from being consumed in flames. What a brave man! Whenever we hear the name of Carnegie we think of the Homestead massacre. Carnegie stands today as one of the world's vilest labor crushers. Well, who is there that does not know Nitschke Bros. to be the rattest printers in the State of Ohio.

WOMEN WORKERS, AWAKE!

Sit down and write to the Franklin county delegation, especially Representatives Hanby Jones and Joseph F. Bertch. They need all the coaxing and watching generally allotted to spoiled children. Urge them to vote for the Compensation Bill, 271, and Women's Eight Hour Bill. The women of Cincinnati, headed by the secretary of the Woman's Label League, Mrs. Edna Ohnstein, sent a petition to the Columbus Legislature, signed by 5,000 women workers, in favor of the Woman's Eight Hour bill.

FRANKLIN COUNTY COURT NEWS.

Judges Evans and Dillon received presents of cuff buttons and scarf pins and the bailiffs received boxes of cigars. These gifts were supplied by the jurors.

Deputy Sheriff Street Car Official McQueen and Inspector Geiger appear to have been engaged in special business at the court house during the trying of the Strader case.

Captain Bush was greeted very cordially by some of the Strader jury.

The following gentlemen comprise the Franklin county jury commission: Foster Copeland, banker; Chas. D. Cussins, business man; Chas. F. Barr and Joseph B. Davis, farmers. These men selected the names to go in the jury wheel.

Captain Bush was the foreman of the grand jury.

William Cavanaugh was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary for having dynamite in his possession. Gerald O'Leary, alias G. W. Brady, a Conch detective and professional strikebreaker, shot and maimed a poor harmless girl, causing her to be a cripple for life, and was acquitted. Street Car Conductor Foty killed a passenger on his car, and received a sentence of six months in the city workhouse.

THE MASTER CLASS BROUGHT ON THE CLASS STRUGGLE.

The laboring man and the trade unionist ask only equality before the law, but by the interpretation of the Sherman anti-trust law by the United States Supreme Court they do not get it. They are denied the right of free speech, a free press and peaceable persuasion in fighting for their rights.

The workingman is now contending for equality before the law, which he does not now get. He is at a disadvantage in the sale of his labor, and in his social, political and legal rights, and he is fighting for equality and he will continue to do so as long as his rights are denied.

It is absurd for the President to contend that in advocating laws for their protection the workingmen are demanding class legislation and unequal privileges. In view of the fact that much of our legislation in the past has been in favor of the money power. Class legislation has been the curse of our country, because it has been for the benefit of the few at the expense of the many. This the workingman does not want. He simply asks for the opportunity to work out his destiny by the right of public appeal in support of a cause that has for its object the uplift of his fellowman.

The interpretation of the Sherman anti-trust law as applied to labor is a class decision and places a manacle on the laboring men of the country.—Bulletin of the Clothing Trades.

TO THE SOCIALISTS OF THE UNITED STATES.

I wish you could accompany me to Warren, Ohio, to see their headquarters. A hall large enough to seat 300 people, open day and evening, kept absolutely clean, the floor like the top of a dining table, walls and ceiling nicely papered, polished gas fixtures, room trimmed in red decorator's paper.

A committee room, with a long table, writing desk, etc. Another room for smoking, especially for the [redacted].

Above all, I wish you might take a peep in at the fourth and best room of all, the library, especially set aside for the women, but the gentlemen are not debarred. This room has a nice oak library table, fine oak book case, full of books, red brussels carpet on the floor, and clean. Pictures of Debs and others on the walls.

The windows are covered with clean, white lace curtains.

They have a beautiful piano; in fact, nearly a complete orchestra. They have a singing class. They are just beginning to arrange for a Socialist Sunday school.

The comrades of Warren, Ohio, do not belong to that class who are always talking and never doing anything—they are so busy doing something that they have not much time for talking.

When non-Socialists come to their headquarters, they say: "Why, I did not think you had such a nice, clean place. Why, I will have to bring the wife and family up the next time, for they enjoy music and singing so much, and we will all be glad to hear what you have to say."

Actions sometimes speak louder than words.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT.

Amount of stock offered for sale,	$9,000 00
Amount sold to date,	300 00
Amount unsold,	$8,700 00

The figures on stock sales are exactly the same this week as last. This should not be so. If every Socialist in Columbus could realize the tremendous possibilities which would follow the ownership of a printing plant by The Socialist Publishing Company there certainly would be no delay in supplying the necessary capital.

It should be remembered that The Socialist is not an experiment. Money is not sought to pour into a hole in the ground. The campaign this year will require an immense amount of propaganda matter. The Socialist, to serve the cause, must develop and carry out larger plans. This paper is not a personal organ. It speaks the sentiments of the party, officially expressed. It is your paper, Socialists of Columbus.

We need a printing plant, and must get one.

To do this The Socialist Publishing Company now offers its stock for sale at the par value of $10 per share, payable in cash, or $1 down and $1 per month until the amount subscribed for is paid.

Of course, The Socialist will be published anyhow, but the time is at hand when greater and better plans should be carried out. To do this requires money. NOW IS THE TIME FOR ACTION.

SUBSCRIPTION FOR STOCK.

I, the undersigned, do hereby subscribe for.....shares of stock in The Socialist Publishing Company, of Columbus, Ohio, at the par value of $10 per share, payable in cash upon delivery of the stock, or One Dollar in cash and One Dollar per month until the amount subscribed is paid.

EFFICIENCY.

Did you know there is a magazine called "Efficiency?" I did not until the other day, when, standing in a book-store, looking over late periodicals, the door opened and a young girl entered. She was a beautiful girl, fresh and rosy of face, trim and neat of figure, and by her glowing eyes I judged full of enthusiasm about something. Before she had made known her wishes I felt instinctively that she was an office girl. There were the subtle evidences of it about her that one long familiar with the type comes to know. I judged that she was not long out of the business college, possibly working at her first position; glad to be earning her own money, glad to be independent, and, above all, glad as youth generally is in the mere joy of living. In the presence of such gladness one's soul delights, for it is the gladness that comes but once, when the heart is young and untroubled. It is a radiance born of the spirit of dreams clamoring for fulfillment, and though no realities afterward will ever quite satisfy those airy fancies, yet, at the time, they are glorious and belong to the most precious period of life. And to this period the young lady of my sketch belonged.

"Have you the magazine called 'Efficiency?'" she asked; "there is also another called 'Opportunity,' I am told, but 'Efficiency' will be quite enough for me over Sunday.

The clerk handed out a large magazine, and the girl, happy as though she had discovered the fountain of perpetual youth, walked out of the store, feeling that in her newly purchased magazine she was carrying away the key that was to unlock for her the doors of business success.

You may ask right here, Would I destroy her belief in her newly-found treasure? Would I in any way quench the spirit of her optimism? Not a bit of it. Once I had been right there myself, and am quite sure at that period of sweet adolescence I would have welcomed an iconoclast in any shape about as much as a snow-storm in the late spring time. It was not necessary for me to disillusion her, to tell her that, no matter how she developed that latent power of "efficiency" within her, it would in the end count for very little under the present system of business conditions. Time will tell her that, and it will tell her the story so well she will never forget it in a lifetime.

Sorrowfully I looked after her and the air-castles limed in the soft atmosphere of the spring twilight about her—for I could see them as plainly as could she. Among them were to be an elegantly furnished suite, a suite with the dearest, little parlor to entertain her friends in (for the real home was back in the small town); then there were to be such smart tailored suits and pretty evening dresses, and vacation trips, later on a trip to Europe to see all the wonderful places she had been reading about in Stoddard, and later, when "efficiency" should be thoroughly established, enough capital to go into business of some description for herself. Poor child! Today she believes all these things are possible; tomorrow she will learn that they are not. The daughters and the wife of her employer may delight in their luxurious rooms, amid beautiful pictures and statuary and flowers and music; they may be exquisitely gowned in the correct fashions of the day; they may see Europe for months at a time. But the office girl; what of her? Why, she may remain in her one room, none too prettily furnished; she may seldom go over a certain inadequate sum for clothes; as for trips, perhaps once in a great while, by dint of rigid economy, she may get as far away as Niagara Falls for a few days; and as for capital to eventually launch in a business for herself, that capital, or the hope of it, remains always just beyond a taunting will-o-the-wisp, for there are expenses and expenses that eat up all the little capital as she goes along.

Now what is my young lady reading in her "Efficiency" this bright Sunday afternoon? Before me is a magazine, not "Efficiency," but one in tone and preachment similar. I pick it up and read. How strange! The very first thing I see is this set out in heavy type: "Quality and Efficiency. Have these two, and all the rest shall be added unto you." What rest? Surely not physical rest. There is very little of that for the average working girl in this age. It is not true that all the good things will come as a reward of quality and efficiency, for they can not come under the system that takes all you can give which is to your interest to sell as high as you can and to your employer's to buy as cheaply as he can.

Again I see the following: "Happiness comes from service. Profit comes from service." True enough! But who gets the profit of your labor? Your employer. Profits never go to the laborer, and neither does the happiness thereof.

Then I read this: "Efficiency—if I wanted to sum up a man's career and his ambition in one word, that would be the word."

Is this the truth? An individual may be ambitious beyond description, and he may be blest with far more than a mediocre share of efficiency, but in summing up his career you will first determine in which class fate has placed him. If you find him in the capitalist class, then sum up his career, this man blest with both unbounded ambition and efficiency, and specify him, if you please, as either a coal, a steel, a copper or an oil magnate. If he happens to be in the working class your decision will be, an honest, hard working chap—nothing more—because he can not be anything more. All his efficiency and ambition can take him just so far, and not another step farther.

Let us go on in the magazine. We come to an article called "What Is Business?" This is the answer: Business is warfare. It's a hard, constant fight to the finish. The moment a contestant enters the field of commerce he is challenged by a host of competitors. All his movements are disputed and opposed by those already in possession of the field. He must fight to live. He must conquer to succeed. So it is that a man of business is like a soldier of the regiment. And, like the well-trained soldier who delights in the clamor of battle, the enterprising business man is eager for the struggle of competition. He delights to overcome those who oppose him, and he finds genuine pleasure in outgitting his rivals. It is the spirit of rivalry that sharpens a man's intellect and spurs on his energy. And unless a man is possessed of this desire to overcome, to surpass, to stand first in his line, he can never hope to carry the day, he will never succeed in his fight. Profit, which is the reward of industry (?) is not the sole object and consideration that actuates the really successful man. The love of gain can not inspire him to the highest endeavor. There must be something more enduring to call forth his supreme effort and satisfy his ambition. And that something is the same spirit that is possessed by man of war who go into battle to do or die—who fight to win and forget all else." Truly a good capitalistic definition of Business. And this is the spirit of business that is instilled into the working men and women of our land today. The thought of employment as warfare, a hard, constant fight to the finish. Men and women must fight to live. Is life worth living under such conditions? But why this fiendish warfare that makes modern commercialism worse than savage barbarity? First, that we may have the dear-bought privilege of living—and, after all, for what? And then, principally, to give to the capitalist class the luxury so essential to their parasitic existence.

And so we are bidden to "fight to win and forget all else." What do the workers win, may I ask? As to forgetting all else, there is little time left to remember anything else.

And now, my dear little lady who bought "Efficiency," whoever you are, I hope you may read this article, not that it possesses any literary merit in itself, but only that your eyes may be opened to the fact that there is a class struggle going on and that you are under the wheels, and that no matter how you develop your efficiency, no matter how hard, or long, or cheerfully you toil, it will always be the same with you under Capitalism.

Come out and join the great army of working women in the Socialist party—think with them, work with them, and, by and by, enjoy the victory with them. Try to see that the magazines which promise you so much as a reward for efficiency are only tools of Capitalism, paid by them that they may gain from you added strength to help them build up their colossal fortunes, which vast fortunes in the hands of the few must ever make for the poverty of the many, and must ever be a menace to good government and the rights and liberties of the people.

ANNIE MINTURN.

Rev. Anna H. Shaw was the speaker at the meeting of the Equal Franchise Society, in Maxine Elliott's theater in New York, recently. Her address was warmly applauded. She made fun of the fear expressed by the politicians that women will be crushed by the burden of the ballot. She is reported as saying: "I have borne the burden of disenfranchisement a good many years and worked hard at it, and I'd like the salary of a United States senator for a few years before I die."

THE STORY THE NEEDLE TOLD.

A little maiden sat busily sewing in the great arm-chair behind mother's sewing table. The sewing basket was heaped with bright colored threads and the floor and table were covered with scraps.

Spring, just passing by the window, cast a bundle of bright rays into the room, so that the busy little hands were quite flooded with the light, and the needle between her fingers gleamed brightly.

The little girl stopped in her sewing and looked thoughtfully before her. But listen! Just as though the sun had awakened a hidden life, a little, thin voice suddenly sounded. It was the needle that began to talk.

"Hard, hard work," it sighed, "on such a beautiful day, too. Stitch, stitch! And yesterday I had a very hard time. I became quite hot—stitch, stitch! A waist to be made for mother, and a shirt for father, and today the same old story.

"Have you been long in service?" asked a deep voice. It was the thread, that slowly followed the needle.

"Only a week—stitch, stitch!" answered the needle; "but I wish I had stayed home."

"Where do you come from, you pretty little thing?"

"From far, far away. Oh, I've lived through a lot in my life. My life story will scarcely interest you, stitch, stitch; but perhaps I'll feel a little more cheerful if I tell it to you."

"You have called me a pretty little thing," began the needle, "and indeed my figure is very graceful—stitch, stitch! See how I glisten in the sun! But would you ever believe I was once gray, old and homely?"

"Go on, you're joking," said the thread.

"No, I'm not," asserted the needle. "At first I was—stitch, stitch—a piece of gray wire, that was cut off from a great roll of wire in a machine, with a lot of sisters that all looked like me. I lay in a great dusty box, in a gloomy factory, where many machines roared and rumbled. It wasn't nice a bit there, so we were very glad when we were taken away. But now just think where we were put—"

"Well?"

"Into a great fire. A giant man looked at us through a big glass, put us into a ring and shoved us into the most terrible heat. We screamed with pain, but no one listened to us. At last the man took us out again and whirled us so fast with an iron that we became quite stiff."

"You poor thing," said the thread, and hitched a little closer to the needle.

"But that wasn't enough. Then we went to the grinder's. There we were put between two hard stones, that gave us two sharp points on either end while the sparks flew all around. If we had only had those points when they put us into the fire—"

"Then what next?" asked the curious thread.

"Then they gave me a pretty white band, like a silver girdle, around my body. I didn't mind that, but next we went to the stamper's and there, before we could help ourselves, great hammers pounded us, and there, just where the silver girdle had been, we were beaten all broad and thin. I lost my senses, and, when I recovered, we were in the hole-making department. There were many girls, and these, I thought, must have kindly hearts. But before I knew it a hand grasped me, pushed me into a machine, and this machine pierced me—Oh, horrible—so that I thought my last hour had come."

"I never should have thought," said the thread, "that girls could be so heartless."

"I was very glad," went on the needle, "when they packed us in cases, and an old woman took us away off through the city into a miserable little street and up into an old, gray, dirty house. In a dark room, which smelled of straw, rancid oil and little children; sat an old man with bad eyes and a wooden leg. And a couple of pale, hungry-looking children were there. But they all handled us gently, and, after stringing us on thin threads, brought us back to the factory again."

"I can tell you that my heart beat fast, and my foreboding was correct. I had scarcely arrived when a great hand seized me, and—crack—I was broken into two parts. Every needle becomme two needles. We certainly were astonished, but the man didn't pay the slightest attention to us. One, two, three, and over the grindstone, and there we were, our heads smooth and round as though freshly shaven Then they put us into hot oil."

"Into hot oil!" screamed the thread and gave such a start that it broke.

"Let me forget the pain of this! Worse is to come. Then a big, ugly man stuck us into a drum, under which a bright fire burned. Help! help! we cried, but it was of no use. When we were half dead, they took us out, wrapped us in rough cloth, sprinkled sand and oil upon us and gave us to the polishing mill. There for days we were rolled and pressed and kneeded between great rollers. That was a time! We became so hot and there was such a terrible dust, almost suffocating! But when we came out, we were silver-clear and beautiful. Then quick, a sawdust bath, then a petroleum bath, then another sawdust bath, and then to the packers. They sorted us, heads to heads; counted us with a machine, packed us in folded papers and then piled us up in cartons. Many cartons were placed in one case, the case carried to the railroad, and then to a great city. I lay in a great store for many days until one day a young woman bought me, anw now I am here—stitch, stitch!"

"And you are getting lovelier every day through the work you are doing here."

"That is true. Seventy people worked to make me and give me this polish; but the finest polish I have given myself. Do you like me this way, Oh, Thread?"

"I guess I do," laughed the thread, and they took hold more firmly and made a great jump through the cloth. —From the German of O. Ruehle, in Der Gleichheit.

BOY SCOUTS.

You have been shown by us that the organization of the boy scouts is a very bad thing, because it makes the boys think only of bloodshed, but those who organize the boy scouts say that this organization is simply for the purpose of making the boys good, noble and true.

In the scout law it reads: "If a scout were to break his honor by telling a lie, he would cease to be a scout.' Now as long as people were civilized it was considered wrong to tell a lie. It was not necessary to organize the boy scouts to prevent lying. Those who organize the boy scouts are the biggest liars, because their purpose in organizing the boy scouts is not as above stated, but is plainly for the purpose of raising soldiers to kill their fellow-men, and perhaps their own fathers and brothers, as is shown by a bill which has just been introduced in Congress, authorizing the detail of army officers, army transportation and army equipment for the further instruction of the boy scouts." The cat is out of the bag now.

It will not be many years before every young man will be forced into the army, just as is done in Europe, and then there will be "wailing and gnashing of teeth.—From the Little Socialist Magazine.

TRULY MARVELOUS.

A football player had three fingers badly smashed while playing in an exciting game. He called at a doctor's to have them attended to.

"When they are better, shall I be able to play the piano, doctor?" he inquired.

"Certainly you will," said the doctor.

"Then, doctor, you are a marvel, for I never could before," said the footballer.

ODD PROBLEM IN PHYSICAL [illegible]

This is, indeed, a Herculean feat. The object is to break with your middle finger a stout wooden match placed across the roots of the first and third finger nails.

The arm must be held parallel with the shoulder and the fingers kept quite straight.

Tommy is a patient little boy and his mother thinks he will become a great man, because he made soap-bubbles nearly all morning and tried to tie a string to them.

The labor journals as well as the Socialist papers have begun to issue warnings to workingmen against sundry Texas and Florida land schemes, which have appeared to take the place somewhat of the mining speculations that for a time caught the little bank accounts of the credulous. The most fraudulent of the land fakes use big type and full page advertising to land their victims, and their advertisements are so artfully worded that there is no redress. It is always safest for the workingman to investigate carefully before he goes into any such deal.

Anent the suggestion that married women be tattooed to distinguish them, what's the matter with tattooing the married men likewise?

And what's the matter with employers' associations considering tattooing as a means to distinguish the faithful sheep from the radical goats?

Notwithstanding the fact that 10,000 women in the city of New York alone support their husbands, women, it is claimed, are too delicate in physique to cast a ballot.

What Socialism Stands For.

Human life depends upon food, clothing and shelter. Only when these are assured are freedom, culture and higher human development possible. To produce food, clothing and shelter, land and machinery are needed. Land by itself does not satisfy human needs. Human labor gets raw materials and food out of the soil by creating machinery and using it upon the land. Whoever has control of land and machinery has control of human labor, and with it of human life and liberty.

Today the machinery and the land used for industrial purposes are owned by a rapidly decreasing minority. So long as machinery is simple and easily handled by one man it does not make its owners so powerful that they can dominate the sources of life of others. But when machinery becomes more and more complex and expensive, and requires for its effective operation the organized effort of many workers, its influence reaches over wider circles of life. The owners of such machinery become the dominant class.

The Masses in Subjection.

In proportion as the number of such machine owners compared to all other classes decreases, their power in the nation and in the world increases. They bring over larger masses of working people under their control, reducing them to the point where muscle and brain are their only productive property. Millions of formerly self-employing workers thus become the helpless wage slaves of the industrial masters.

The more the economic power of the ruling class grows, the less useful does it become in the life of the nation. The overwhelming bulk of the useful work of the nation falls upon the shoulders of the classes that either have no other productive property but their manual and mental labor power the wage workers — or that have but little land and little machinery outside of their labor power—the small traders and small farmers. The ruling minority is steadily becoming useless and parasitic.

A bitter struggle over the division of the products of labor is waged between the exploiting propertied class, on the one hand and the exploited, propertyless class on the other. In this struggle the wage working class cannot expect adequate relief from any reform of the present order from the dominant class of society.

The wage workers are therefore the most determined and irreconcilable antagonists of the ruling class. They are also the class which suffers most from the curse of class rule. The fact that a small number of capitalists is permitted to use all the country's resources and social tools for their individual profit, and to make the production of the necessaries of our lives the object of their competitive private enterprises and speculations, is at the bottom of all the social evils of our time.

Modern Industry Planless.

In spite of the organization of trusts, pools and combinations, the capitalists are powerless to regulate production for social ends. Industries are largely conducted in a planless manner. Through periods of feverish activity the strength and health of the workers are mercilessly undermined, and during periods of enforced idleness the workers are frequently reduced to starvation.

The climaxes of this chaotic system of production are the regularly recurring industrial depressions and crises which paralyze the nation every fifteen or twenty years.

In this mad and reckless race for profits the capitalist class is bound to exploit the workers to the very limit of their endurance and to sacrifice their physical, moral and mental welfare to its own insatiable greed. Capitalism keeps the masses of working men in poverty, destitution, physical exhaustion and ignorance. It drags their wives from their homes to the mill and factory. It snatches their children from the playgrounds and schools and grinds their slender bodies and unformed minds into cold dollars. It wantonly disfigures, maims and kills hundreds of thousands of workingmen annually in mines, on railroads and in factories. It drives millions of workers into the ranks of the unemployed and forces large numbers of them into beggary, vagrancy and all forms of crime and vice.

Public Intelligence Corrupted.

To maintain their rule over their fellow men, the capitalists must keep in their pay all organs of the public powers, public mind and public conscience. They control the dominating parties and, through them, the elected public officials. They select our executive, bribe our legislatures and corrupt our courts of justice. They sway our educational institutions. They own the nation politically and intellectually just as they own it industrially.

The struggle between wage workers and capitalists grows ever fiercer, and has become the only vital issue before the American people. The wage working class, therefore, has the most vital and direct interest in abolishing the capitalist system. But in abolishing the present system, the workingmen will free not only their own class, but also all other classes of modern society: The small farmer, who is today exploited by large capital more indirectly but not less effectively than is the wage laborer; the small manufacturer and trader, who is engaged in a desperate and losing struggle for economic independence in the face of the all-conquering power of concentrated capital; and even the capitalist himself, who is the slave of his wealth rather than its master. The struggle of the working class against the capitalist class, while it is a class struggle, is thus at the same time a struggle for the abolition of all classes and class privileges.

Must Conquer the Political Power.

The private ownership of the land and means of production used for exploitation, is the rock upon which class rule is built; political government is its indispensable instrument. The wage workers cannot be freed from exploitation without conquering the political power and substituting collective and democratic administration for private ownership of the land and the means of production used for exploitation.

The basis for such transformation is rapidly developing within the very bosom of present capitalist society. The factory system, with its immense labor, is rapidly destroying all vestiges of individual production in manufacture. Modern production is already very largely a collective and social process, while the great trusts and monopolies which have sprung up in recent years have had the effect of organizing the work and management of some of our main industries on a national scale, and fitting them for national use and operation.

An End to Class Rule.

In the struggle for freedom the interests of the workers of all nations are identical. The struggle is not only national, but international. It embraces the world and will be carried to ultimate victory by the united workers of the world.

To unite the workers of the nation and their allies and sympathizers of other classes to this end, is the mission of the Socialist. In this battle for freedom the Socialist movement does not strive to substitute working class rule for capitalist rule, but by working class victory to free all humanity from class rule and to realize the international brotherhood of man.

THE GREAT UNREST.

Humanity is revolutionary at heart. Very few injustices or oppressions remain in existence long at a time. Sooner or later the fermentation and agitation ever at work in the deep consciousness of a large part of the people expresses itself, and the injustice is toppled off its pedestal.

The great spiritual unrest of the present age has its source in the gigantic economic wrongs under which the masses are toiling. Humanity simply can not achieve its true spiritual grandeur while its body is burdened by a galling yoke. Men can not arise to their full mental height while oppressed by an uneven struggle for bread and butter and the commonest comforts of life.

If the church would interest itself in righting the social and economic evils of the world it would have removed the greatest obstacle in the path of church growth and spiritual unfoldment. It would open the pathway to the golden era of mentality and spirituality.

Humanity looks to the church and the priesthood for solace. When humanity goes to this common source for solace today, it finds the leading churchgoers and priests allied with those who are piling up economic wrongs upon the galled shoulders of the masses. When a homeless man or a hungry family applies to the modern church for sympathy and spiritual help, it finds that church, in nine cases out of ten, in the ranks of the oppressors of the common man. It finds that those who are responsible for the gigantic economic wrongs of the age, for landlordism, for favoritism, for special privileged classes, are also allied with and lead the churches.

So the church sits upon the backs of the poor and homeless alongside the great financial interests. The one great source of solace and spiritual help at which humanity drinks is polluted, like a poisoned spring in the desert, with the virus of economic prejudice. The great spiritual unrest of the age, instead of being stilled by the influence of the church, is only embittered by it, because of the alliance of the church with the powerful interests which have created and which seek to perpetuate the present one-sided economic condition.

If the economic wrongs of the age were righted, the spiritual unrest would suddenly cease. If men could feed and clothe their families in decency and comfort from their labor; if homes were to be had on any reasonable conditions by the homeless; if families of workingmen were provided with the common comforts of life and environed with a few of the ordinary luxuries; if the brute struggle for bread would give place to a happier economic condition, mankind would soon "get right" spiritually.

If the church would busy itself first with covering the defenseless heads and providing homes and equal opportunity for the poor and would see that every man had a square deal and a common start in life, its pews would be filled to overflowing. It would solve the problem of spiritual unrest.

As long as there is economic injustice in the land, there will be skepticism, unbelief, infidelity, atheism. The mind of the masses will not submit to an aristocracy of spirituality. There must be justice in the creed of the church—there must be a just and symmetrical correspondence between the creed of the church and the works of the church—before people will surrender their spiritual welfare into its keeping.

And as the economic unrest grows deeper and farther flung, so will the great drifting away from the altars of the church be strong and deep and permanent. If men can not arise to their full mental and spiritual height under the influence and with the aid of the Christian religion, they will drift away from it and found a new creed which offers them emancipation from economic injustices. They will establish a new faith, which will vote right first, and pray afterward.—Bert Huffman, in The Public.

SOMETHING ABOUT PRIVATE PROPERTY.

The Rev. William Kirby, Ph. D., one of the leading opponents of Socialism, writes in a recent number of the Catholic Word concerning the status of "Private Property as It Is," in this present age of capitalism, and shows that the contention of the Socialists is, in a measure, justified. In part, he advises his readers as follows:

"Possibly the strongest force of collective consciousness in the world today is that part of which is based on property. It is this unified collective consciousness that is held in mind in the attacks that are made by organised labor and by Socialism on the present organization of property. The timid individual owning $500 is no being to be afraid of. He offers no menace to our institutions. He has no power to sway the minds of men. He has no temptations to undermine the institutions of government. But the individual into whom the spirit of modern organization of property as a whole has entered, who is caught by its power and swayed by its temptations; the individual who has, through mastery of property, become master of men and master of institutions, he it is that is held in mind in the denunciations of capital and capitalism which are constantly hurled forth from the ranks of organized labor and Socialism. Therefore, it would be well for us to keep this in mind in our defense of private property and in meeting the attacks that are made against it. We tend too much to argue in defense of the small owner and the legitimate use of property and we tend to overlook the complicated mechanism just hinted at—by which property is completely revolutionized."

WHAT MILWAUKEE'S BUSY COUNCIL DID AT ITS LAST MEETING.

Decided to purchase 500 acres of river front property for a park, at an estimated cost of $1,010,000.

Failed to pass an ordinance for a bond issue of $30,000 for payment on interest and principal for 1911.

Deferred action on the proposition of having the city do its street work until Monday.

Sustained the mayor's veto on the resolution relating to absence of city officials.

Appointed two committees to adopt plans to relieve the unemployed conditions.

Agreed to defer action on the Somers system of realty valuation on account of questionable legality.

Annexed a portion of Jackson park, town of Wauwautosa, to the city.

Passed an ordinance providing for a license fee of $15 on every street car.

Decided to issue $350,000 in bonds for 1911 street and alley work.

Advanced to engrossmen an ordinance to enable the operation of a cross-town line.

Sent the substitute $100,000 hospital bond ordinance to engrossment.

Appropriated $5,000 for an examination of the water department books.

Adjourned to Monday afternoon.

It was the liveliest meeting of the city council since the Socialists captured the city government, and it was war from start to finish.

Capitalism was snarling. The tiger was being attacked at the right point.

Big business, little business, big grafters, little grafters all were howling with pain as the Socialists got busy.

Every move of the Socialists was fought by the opposition, and bitterly fought, because they were moves to benefit the working class first and the rest of the people only incidentally.

After the city has been looted and swindled to the point of poverty by former administrations, after it has been run into debt to the tune of thousands of dollars, and after a score of years of open graft and bribery, the remnants of the old forces that still remain in the council have all at once become converted to a scheme of extreme retrenchment.

Such a thing they never thought of until the Socialists came into power. And now they want the Socialists to quietly sit down and do nothing. It galls them to see the Socialists up and doing for the working class. They dread the future and are fighting it. The Milwaukee Socialists are making Good. The opposition is fighting and fighting hard; fighting like cornered rats; fighting in desperation and resorting to falsehood and trickery of every sort to stem the inevitable advance planned by the present administration.

The million dollar park plan was carried triumphantly.

The municipalization of all street work and the concomitant abolition of the contract system will come next. And therefore the howling and wailing and gnashing of teeth.

The contractor is going to go. The contractor was not in business to put down streets, but to make money—profits. He made those profits all right, and gave us imitation streets. And that is now at an end. And with that ends his profits, and therefore his howl and—the howl of his hired hands—some of whom are often found occupying seats in council under the false pretense of representing the people.

Those days are about over in Milwaukee, and it won't take long for many other cities to follow suit.

WALL STREET IS BOSS.

Alleging that J. Pierpont Morgan and Wall Street ordered the President to send troops to Mexico, and that Taft is simply an "errand boy of the interests," Eugene V. Debs denounces the proposed intervention in Mexico.

"There are billions of American dollars invested in Mexico," said Debs, and they are controlled by Wall Street. In the American-owned mines there are employed thousands of peons, who are forced to eke out a living on starvation wages. These peons have stood long for Diaz and his assassins.

"Now they are rebelling, and Wall Street has ordered Taft to send 20,000 soldiers to the front to intimidate and put down the insurrection. Diaz's is one of the vilest despotisms in the world. He has 24,000 rurales and hired assassins to kill or otherwise subject the peons who have rebelled.

"War maneuvers! That is the foulest rot! They would try to make 90,000,000 of United States cattle and swine, as we are termed, believe it! It is a broad opinion that they put on American intelligence."

The Question Box.

The less a person disposed to be peaceable and industrious feels the hand of government upon him the better. The citizen does not enjoy espionage and officialdom. He wants to be free and independent—to have the greatest number of proper liberties and rights. Under Socialism would there not be more governmental control of the individual, more of officialism, more presence of the state, not only in public affairs, but in what we now call our private, social and individual life?

H. E. M.,
Toledo, O.

National government, like self-government, is good or bad according to what it does. Your idea of the "less government the better" must be based on the hypothesis that all government is bad, or at least a necessary evil to be avoided to the greatest extent possible. The government is a power which can lay its hand upon an individual and crush him, or place its hand beneath the individual and help him to rise.

Does the hand of government that carries your mail across the continent oppress you? Does the hand of government that provides paved streets, sidewalks and a sanitary system of sewerage, oppress you in so doing? If it does, the oppression does not consist in providing these things, but in the way it does it. Do not allow yourself to drift into the hopelessly pessimistic idea that, because the government of potentates and plutocrats is bad, a real democratic government by majority would also be bad.

I know that the faith of many in popular government has been sadly shaken by the farce that is now in operation and persists in miscalling itself a republic.

I am convinced that under applied Socialism there would be far less governmental control of the individual, less officialism and less state interference than there is at present.

My limitation of space prevents further discussion of this subject here, but would suggest you send 25 cents to the Socialist Publishing Company, 36½ North High street, Columbus, Ohio, and get a copy of "Modern Socialism," by Vail, which will explain the principles of Socialism and prove a revelation to any intelligent and earnest investigator.

ANSWER TO CORRESPONDENT.

Indifference of the common people to their common interests always develops a privileged class, who exist by securing privileged interests. Every twenty-year franchise robs some child of its earthly inheritance, and the law (the people) indorses the robbery by perpetuating the system that allows the same to exist. Yes, the people are awakening to the meaning of Socialism.

A LETTER FROM THE FRONT.

"Regeneracion," 519½ E. Fourth St.,
Los Angeles, Cal.,
March 22, 1911.

Dr. Ada M. Nichols, Masonic Temple, Chillicothe, Ohio.

Dear Madam and Comrade—We received a very kind letter from you, dated January 28, which we intended to answer at length before this. You will understand, however, that we are overwhelmed with work, and that it is particularly hard for us to keep up with our correspondence in English, which has grown very heavy. The sending troops to the Mexican border has made our movement, of course, one of world-wide interest, and it seems to us that it should be teaching a most useful lesson as to the lengths to which the money power will go.

It has been our aim from the very first to try and get the people of this country to understand that our cause is theirs, and it is our firm conviction that the stand we have taken will encourage the movement for emancipation in this country, and, therefore, throughout the world. Especially just now this is the work to which we are bending every energy, endeavoring to open the public's eyes to the great and terrible truths that underlie our movement.

You have been so good as to distribute much of our reading matter in the past, and we hope you will still exert every effort to interest your friends and neighbors, for we need both all the sympathy we can get, and, of course, even more, substantial support, the movement calling constantly for what money alone can procure. It is just at this critical time that all the help available is needed.

Yours fraternally,
R. FLORES MAGON.

PARK COMMISSION PLAN.

Workers Are Opposed to Uncertain Policy of Chamber of Commerce.

The Central Organization of the Socialist party of Columbus, last Wednesday evening took a positive stand against the park commission plan which is now before the voters for a decision. A circular setting forth the position of the party in regard to the scheme will be issued in order that the workers may vote intelligently. The Socialist is thus justified in its suspicions of the park commission idea as fathered by the chamber of commerce.

The people of this city have learned to look askance at proposals that are shrouded in mystery and that seem to have behind them some hidden design for private profit.

STOP, LOOK AND LISTEN.

COMRADE PURCELL GETTING READY.

Comrade Ella June Purcell, The Socialist's special commissioner to Europe, is at Chillicothe, taking a much needed rest before her long trip and arranging plans for her work abroad. The date of her departure for the Old World will be announced soon.

The SOCIALIST

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF, BY AND FOR THE WORKERS

Office State Librarian
Columbus, O.

VOL. 1. No. 16. COLUMBUS, OHIO, SATURDAY, APRIL 8, 1911. PRICE, $1.00 PER YEAR. SINGLE COPIES, 3 CENTS.

WHERE ARE WE "AT?"

We are opposed to the Park Commission as fostered and pushed by the Columbus Chamber of Commerce.

We are opposed to it because organized labor and the Socialist party have officially declared against it. We are opposed to it because it is backed by a class whose interests are directly inimical to the interests of the working class.

We are opposed to it because the commission is appointed and not directly responsible to the people. We are opposed to it because of the methods used to promote it. Whenever the Master Class proposes some scheme that seems to be ostensibly for the good of the people there is always a justifiable suspicion that there is some ulterior and sinister design behind it.

THE SOCIALIST IS FOR PARKS, AND PLENTY OF THEM, but it is unalterably against any plan that gives any chance for exploitation or jobbery. It avails nothing to say that the commission will be composed of high minded and public spirited citizens. Such men have always been used by the gang bosses to fleece the people. Who are the probable members of the commission? Nobody knows, but there is a strong likelihood that they will be acceptable to the men who have always given the workingmen of Columbus the worst of every deal.

If the Park Commission plan carries it will be by the votes of the toilers. Let nothing prevent you from going to the polls and voting AGAINST THE PARK COMMISSION, Tuesday, April 18.

THE REASON WHY.

The fact that the Wells-Fargo Express Company distributed $25,000,000 in dividends last year, while the postoffice fell behind $17,000,000 as a result of public ownership that our long-haired Socialists seem to forget.—Marysville Republican.

In the first place, the insinuation that Socialists are long haired is untrue. A whole lot of us haven't got much hair at all. We have become bald-headed trying to eke out an existence under Republican prosperety. In the next place, the express companies pay big dividends by charging extortionate rates and preventing the government from conducting a parcels post. At the same time the railroads charge the government from eight to sixteen times as much per pound for carrying the mails as they charge the express companies for transporting express matter. One reason for this is that the same interests control both the railroads and the express companies, and through their tools in Congress and other branches of government dictate the policy of the administration of national affairs. No wonder the corporations can pay big dividends.

LOAN SHARK BILLS.

The probability is that the present session of the Ohio General Assembly will do nothing to curb the nefarious work of the "loan sharks."

The Haas eight per cent. bill was passed by the Senate, February 24, limiting the rate of interest to eight per cent. a year and charges for investigation, collection and other expenses to one per cent. per month. The bill, as sent to the House of Representatives for concurrence, requires loan agents to pay a state license fee of $100 a year, and to give bond of $1,000, which may be forfeited in the event of violation of the law governing the business, particularly with reference to rates.

The original draft of the bill provided for a fee of three per cent. a month on each loan for investigation and collection, but an amendment offered by Senator Edgar Johnson, and adopted by the Senate, reduced this figure to one per cent. This makes the total rate, which will be collectible in court, if the bill becomes a law, twenty per cent. a year. The vote on the bill was unanimous.

H. E. French, Toledo loan broker, was expected to attempt the substitution of another measure in the House for the Haas bill. This is the bill which was given to Representative W. T. Colter, of Toledo, for introduction. It eliminates the state control and bonding features of the Haas bill and provides for twenty-six per cent. interest and fees.

The Ohio statutes now provide that six per cent. is collectible on accounts where no rate is stipulated and that the maximum rate collectible in court, even when specified by contract, is eight per cent.

The bill which Representative W. T. Colter was requested to introduce provides that eight per cent. and an additional eighteen per cent., making a total of twenty-six per cent., can be collected by local sharks in an action in court. And even this is not the whole story, for the bill further provides for additional charges "for making out papers."

Colter is now trying to sidestep any responsibility for the measure, so that the toilers will remain at the cruel mercy of conscienceless parasites, who prey upon the misfortunes of workers. It was ever thus.

A WORSHIP WHICH IS FELLOWSHIP.

Dr. Max Nordau is credited with the following statement:

"A time is coming, and is perhaps near at hand, when we shall see a civilization in which men will satisfy their need for rest and recreation, for elevation of their ideas, and their longing for emotions; when a solidarity of the human race will be the worship of a progressive and enlightened age.

"By a return to primitive customs, such as history has often to record, the theater will again be the place of meeting and worship, as it was two and a half thousand years ago among the Greeks."

Just one more thought needs to be added to the above statement: Only the workers can introduce such a reign of comradeship. They alone have the sense of solidarity—in the rough, it is true, but all the more valuable as the rock foundation of a superstructure which is to follow.

The new ethics will be constructive, and none but the world-builders have the constructive spirit.

So much rudimentary work is to be done now that the workers have not yet brought to a spirit-thirsty world the wine of the new ethics. But they have this task before them, and the work will be accomplished in due time.

Just now our position seems to be iconoclastic, but we are compelled to cut out some of the underbrush as we prepare the new foundation. Our work is essentially constructive.

We have even anticipated Max Nordau's prophecy about the theater being the scene of the new worship. Starting with the smaller play-houses, now so plentiful, we are beginning to make them the gathering places of the new comradeship.

And this is our work, rather than to rail at the old religious forms as unfit for the present age. If we devote our energies to providing a suitable expression for the solidarity of humanity, and know that our class-consciousness is blazing the way for an ultimate universal brotherhood, the people will flock to our world-wide emblem and even the old religious organizations will, in time, readapt themselves to fit into the message which we have brought. This will be the consummation of our victory.

Our ethical tactics must be the same as our political tactics. We do not rant and rave about the old-time political parties. We consructively bring the new party. In like manner we must constructively bring the new worship, which is fellowship. In every industrial center we must provide the comradely gathering of the people—a meeting for the joy and development of human feeling. We must employ music, the drama, the story, poetry, art and oratory.

The working-class movement has within itself the elements that will build the temple of an unified humanity.

Frederick Guy Strickland.

VAIN PLAN OF TRICKSTERS.

The ordinance redistricting the city of Columbus so as to provide for sixteen ward councilmen and three councilmen-at-large was passed by council last Monday night. The sole object seems to have been to gerrymander the territory of this municipality so as to prevent the Socialists from gaining power. Gentlemen of the council, you have constructed a crazy-quilt system of wards and precincts. To change the figure of speech, you have tried to stack the cards against the common people. You have toiled in vain. Take due notice, now that you have thus schemed and twisted, that you are going to get the worst thrashing that was ever given to a gang of political tricksters.

SOCIALIST VICTORIES.

In Berkeley, Cal., last Saturday, J. Stitt Wilson, Socialist, was elected mayor by a plurality of 284 votes in a total of 6,216. Last fall Comrade Wilson was the Socialist candidate for governor in California. The fight was a clean-cut victory for Socialism.

On last Monday the Socialists of Butte, Mont., elected their candidate for mayor and their entire city ticket by a plurality of over 1,800.

Helena elected one Socialist alderman.

At Flint, Mich., last Monday, the Socialist candidate for mayor was elected by over 400 plurality.

The election reports in the daily capitalistic papers now contain a new feature. Formerly the word Socialist never was seen. Now when a victory is not recorded, the headlines read "Socialists Defeated." This indicates that the once despised element is now a political factor that must be met at every election. This will continue with increasing force. There may be temporary reverses, but such setbacks are common to every revolutionary cause. They aid rather than retard. Ours is no "Jonah's gourd tree" movement. It is the fateful result of inexorable evolution, and can not be stopped or stayed in its onward progress.

JUST PURE CUSSEDNESS.

The great railway systems of the United States seem to be in a conspiracy to retaliate upon the people for the action of the Interstate Commerce Commission in refusing to allow an increase in freight rates. According to well authenticated reports the Pennsylvania lines have, within the past two weeks, laid off over 5,000 employes. The cutting of expenses and the reduction of forces is general all over the Eastern states. This is directly in the face of an unusual demand for the transportation of commodities. In all the larger cities and towns there is a great revival in building operations. This is true in Columbus, where the building inspector's department is swamped with the applications for permits. The trade reports from other points are along the same lines. For the three months ended March 31 the sales of The American Steel & Wire Co. were the largest and the most profitable in the history of the organization. In the same time the business of the Carnegie Steel Co. was equal to its previous total. For the same three months the American Bridge Co.'s gross and net receipts duplicated the hitherto best record. These three concerns are the bread-winners of the United States Steel Corporation. Yet they did not operate to full capacity. The Carnegie has 59 furnaces. It is operating 54. Both the Steel & Wire and the Bridge Companies could do more.

There is extraordinary activity reported in every department of manufacturing. Despite this fact, the railways are decreasing their facilities to handle this business.

Capitalism is thus working its own doom. "Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad." It is about time for the people to wake up to the cold, hard truth that capitalism is massing its power for a last grand stand against the rising tide of Socialism.

INFORMATION FOR VOTERS.

If you have changed your residence and moved into a new ward and precinct since last election, you should go to the office of the Board of Elections, in the Harrison Building, next Monday or Tuesday, and secure a transfer. If you have not registered at all, you must at the same time and place, have your name entered on the polling list in order to vote at the special election, April 18. The hours for registration are from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m., next Monday and Tuesday, at the Board of Elections' rooms, in the Harrison Building. Do not neglect this. Then VOTE AGAINST THE PARK COMMISSION.

THEN AND NOW.

In the early days of the United States, the State of Pennsylvania repudiated all obligations held by foreigners, and, while the United States was at that time weak as a military power, no nation on earth thought of using force to compel the settlement of the Pennsylvania foreign debt.

Of course at this time the Morgan-Rockyfellow Brigandage Co., Limited, had not stolen the earth from the people. Today this firm has its process-servers (battleships and soldiers) along the borders of Old Mexico, to menace, and, if necessary to their interests, to mutilate. Who pays the bills, Mr. Worker?

A farmer in a central Ohio county is under arrest for the murder of a young girl, under particularly atrocious circumstances. In its report of the affair a Columbus evening paper takes pains to note that the man arrested is a brother of one of the police mutineers during the streetcar strike in Columbus last summer. This paper seems intent upon stigmatizing these men forever. The act of the thirty-three policemen who refused to ride the cars of the Columbus Rail-Light last August was one of the bravest deeds that has been recorded thus far in this century. They deserve honor from all toilers, and the efforts of a capitalistic press to besmirch their reputations will react upon the promoters of the robber system.

HOW SOCIAL OWNERSHIP WORKS.

BY ALLEN COOK, CANTON, OHIO.

A great deal is being said these days about social ownership. Every Socialist ought to thoroughly understand social or collective ownership. To all intents and purposes social and collective ownership are one and the same thing. One of the cardinal doctrines of the Socialist party is "that all things socially used should be socially owned, and operated for the use and benefit of all the people and not for the private gain of individuals or corporations." The Socialists also believe that "all things privately used should be privately owned." Every man, woman and child in the United States has a social or collective share and right in our postoffice system. The poorest child in our jungle districts has just as much right in the postoffice system as a Roosevelt or a Rockefeller. Every man, woman or child has all the postoffice they can use under any and all circumstances. I would not sell my social share, rights and privileges in the United States postoffice for any sum that could be named. And yet if one million people should offer to sell me all their combined social shares, rights and privileges in our postoffice system, I would not give one penny for all their combined interests. Why? Let me tell you. I have all the postoffice I can use under any and all circumstances, and my benefits and privileges could not be enlarged by depriving one million other people of their benefits and privileges in our postoffice system. That is the way social or collective ownership works. Do you catch the point? That is the reason our opponents say we want to "divide up" property equally and put everybody on a "dead level." Let me explain further. The postoffice system is one of the largest industries in the United States. If the system were privately owned, the same as our express companies and steel industries are owned, it could be made to pour multiplied hundreds of millions of dollars annually into the coffers of its owners. Why don't Rockefeller and Morgan try to get a monopoly on the postoffice business? The answer is "because it is socially owned and operated for use and not for profit." The price of stamps, of money orders and of registered letters is fixed by law. A Rockefeller and Morgan would be compelled to go to the government to purchase their stamps and money orders, and pay the price set by law. They would have to sell these stamps and money orders at a profit or they could not do business. You could not find a person in all the United States so simple minded as to pay Rockefeller and Morgan five cents for a stamp that could be purchased for two cents at our postoffice. Thus you see that socially owned and operated industries can not be monopolized by even untold wealth. But our opponents say that our postoffice system is a losing proposition. That the expenses exceed the receipts by millions of dollars annually. Let us admit that to be a fact. What causes this loss? Let us see. The postoffice department pays the railroad companies sixteen times as much for carrying a given weight of mail as the express companies pay the same railroad company for carrying the same weight of their packages in the same car. In other words, our Congress and administration authority extract from the people at least sixteen times as much for carrying the mails as the railroad company should receive. That is simply one reason why the receipts of the postoffice system are less than the expenditures. If there were not so many Congressmen and Senators and cabinet officers who hold the railroad and corporation interests generally beyond and above the interests of the public these rates would be reduced and the postoffice receipts would exceed the expenditures. The people of the United States today demand a parcels post law, by which the postoffice would carry large packages at reduced rates. The United States government has all the machinery for handling packages through the postoffice system. It has costly postoffices built in all the cities of the United States. It has postoffices established everywhere. It has postal cars, mail carriers, rural mail carriers, and all facilities that are needed for carrying larger packages through the mails. The question arises, "Why should we not use these facilities for the benefit of all the people in transporting packages through the mails, instead of paying such an outrageous rate to the express companies?" The average load of the rural mail carrier, it is claimed, does not exceed twenty-five pounds. He could deliver five hundred pounds, or a thousand pounds, just as conveniently, and the farmers could be greatly benefited thereby and save many millions of dollars which are now extorted from them through the express companies. It is claimed by good authority that the postoffice department could add forty million dollars ($40,000,000) per year to its receipts if the rural delivery wagons were permitted to carry postage packages. And it is estimated that more than forty millions could be added to the receipts of our postoffice department through the receipt and delivery of postal packages in the cities. Hence it is not the fault of the social ownership of the postoffice system which causes the annual deficit in that department. It is the capitalistic operation of the same. If our government dealt honestly with the people, the postoffice system would be one of the greatest sources of revenue in our government. But it deals dishonestly with the people when it pays sixteen times what it should pay for carrying our mails, and refuses to carry large packages through the mails. The numerous express companies exert a powerful influence in preventing the enactment of the parcels post law. The railroad companies are the principal owners of the express companies at the present time, and of course the railroad companies find it to their profit to prevent the enactment of a parcels post law which would largely destroy their "parcels-carrying" business. A proper parcels post law, it is safe to say, would add annually more than one hundred million dollars ($100,000,000) to the receipts of the postoffice department.

The people of the United States pay eight cents per pound on packages limited to four pounds. Practically all the little South American republics and the European nations are carrying eleven-pound packages for one cent per pound. The United States government has made agreements with forty-three different governments of the world to receive and deliver parcel packages directed from those governments to persons in the United States, and to receive parcel packages and deliver them abroad. But our government denies our own wpeople the rights and privileges which it gives to the foreign nations. It refuses absolutely to receive and deliver packages from one part of the United States to another while it receives and delivers them to practically all the nations of South America and Europe. In other words, our government gives to other people greater privileges and benefits than it does to its own. If the American people had sense enough and courage enough to carry their conviction to the ballot box, the United States would have a parcels post law without delay. Our postoffice system is practically a perfect working system, but it is surrounded by capitalistic hamperings and influences. If the government socially owned and operated the railroad companies as well as the postoffice system the entire express business could be done through the postoffice system, and freight could be reduced to one-fourth their present rate and passengers carried for one cent per mile. But the working people hang on to the old political parties like mad men and refuse to let loose of the political bigotries and fanaticisms and superstitions that are blighting their hopes and driving them down to destitution and despair.

WATER WORKS SYSTEM.

Let me give you another illustration of social or collective ownership. It has only been a few years since the cities of our country have socially owned and operated their water works system for the use and benefit of the whole people. Many large cities even now do not own their own water works plant, and, generally speaking, those cities that do not own their own water works system pay a much higher rate than those that do and receive a much poorer grade of water. Where the water works system is socially owned, the poorest child in the jungle district drinks as pure water as the richest man in the city. Every man, woman and child has an equal share and right in the socially owned water works system. The price they pay and the quality of the water is the same to all. That is Socialism, and that is why the capitalistic claim is made that we would all be reduced to a "dead level" under Socialism.

FIRE DEPARTMENTS.

The fire departments of the cities are excellent illustrations of social or collective ownership. They are organized for service and not for profit, and the brave fire laddies respond to the calls of rich or poor, high or low, mansion or shack, with equal activity and zeal. If the fire departments were run by some rich man or corporation, you would have to wait and enter into a written contract or put down your cash before they would respond to the call to put out your fire. Don't you catch the difference? Social ownership is for service while private ownership is for profit.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS AND HOSPITALS.

Our public school system is also Socialistic, and is a good illustration of social ownership. The children of the poor and of the rich have equal opportunities and advantages in our public school. They are conducted for use and education instead of gain and profit. If our public school system was operated for profit today, not one-fourth of our children would receive a common school education. Yet it almost caused a war to make the change from private to public schools. For the sake of argument, let us admit that there are some graft and dishonesty in the postoffice system, the water works system, the fire departments and the public schools, but it all comes from the profit system of capitalism that surrounds the institutions. Socialism would wipe the profit system out of existence and there would no longer be anything to graft upon. Graft would die for want of food to sustain its life.

Our hospitals for the care of the sick, the injured and the afflicted are operated today in the cities of our country for profit. Hundreds of thousands of people who are injured and afflicted in various ways, and are sore in need of the aid of physicians and surgeons and nurses, are unable to pay the price and go on suffering their miseries in silence and to death. Socialism would establish hospitals for the afflicted, where the best medical and surgical attention would be given, free of charge, to all who apply. Is there anything wrong, immoral or irreligious in that idea? Only an intensely selfish or densely ignorant human being would object to socially owned and operated hospitals for the care of the afflicted of our race. It is a moral crime to neglect the hundreds of thousands of poor and afflicted who suffer for want of proper medical and surgical care.

The Socialists favor the social ownership of the railroads, steamship lines, telegraphs, telephones, street car lines, heat, light and water plants, the steel industry, the coal mines—in short, all the means of production and distribution that are socially used.

Social ownership is for service and not for profit. Private ownership is for profit and not for service. There is the difference between Socialism and capitalism. Capitalism places all the temptations of life on the side of greed and svarice, and meanness and oppression and crime. Socialism would place all the temptations of life on the side of goodness and freedom, and service and brotherly love. It is for the American people to say which system they want.

THE PARABLE OF THE HUNTER.

(By Oscar Ameringer.

(From the pamphlet "Socialism, What It Is and How to Get It.")

Once upon a time there lived in the land of Stars and Stripes a mighty hunter, by the name of Eagle-eye. This man could hit the left hind leg of a flying mosquito four hundred yards off. But, alas, he had no gun. Whereupon he hiked himself to "Old Man" Bateye, who was blind and lame, but who owned many guns. And Eagle-eye spake unto Bateye also: "Lord! I am a hunter without a gun; wherefore the wife of my bosom is cleansing the soiled garments of your wife's and my children cry papers in the wilderness of Chicago, while my stomach is empty as the House of the Lord in summer time. Therefore I beseech thee, let me have one of your guns that I may follow my vocation, which is that of a hunter of quails; so that I too may eat, drink and be merry."

Then up spake Bateye, and said: "Gladly will I lend you a gun, for I too crave hot birds, cold bottles and warm babies, but for the use of my capital (as guns are called in the lingo of the chosen few) thou must give unto me four quails out of every five you shoot."

This looked fair and reasonable to the hunter, for he was sorely pressed and up a stump, from which he could not descend. Therefore he accepted the terms of Bateye, and fetched to him four quails out of every five, but the fifth one he ate himself.

This lone bird filled but a small part of his inners, and he was hungry most of the time, and then Bateye would slap him on the back and say: "I'd give a million quails to have your appetite," but he never did.

Sometimes when he was weary, wet and worried, Eagle-eye would bemoan his lot and curse fate for having been born. At such times, Holyman, the soothsayer, who ate at the table of Bateye, would come to him with incantations and promises of mansions on the other side of the silver lining. He also spake much of golden harps.

Eagle-eye thought these good things to eat, and was made happy again.

Thus he worked for many years, until his eyes became too dull and his legs too wobbly to shoot birds. But his appetite was as good as ever, when Bateye gave the gun to a younger hunter with clear eyes and steady legs. Thereupon Eagle-eye, who had eaten less every year as he grew older, quit eating altogether, and gave up his ghost.

Holyman preached the funeral sermon and spake much of Providence, dust and being called home to the mansion above the clouds; whereupon a crazy man laughed, and said: "If Eagle-eye had a gun of his own, he could have kept all the birds he shot, and he would now be still among the living, sporting a red nose and a shining bald spot and sitting in the front row at the Gayety." But all the people called this man loony and scoffed him, and laughed him to scorn and said he was a dreamer, for even a fool knoweth the guns are made for some to own and for others to use.

Soda fountains are now being installed on passenger trains. Does the small business man recognise what this move means?

The Question Box.

What are the meaning of the terms: Proletarian, bourgeois, bourgeoise and bourgeoisie, and why are they used in this country? Have these words no English equivalent?

EUGENE,
Mansfield, Ohio.

A proletarian is one of that class who have no means of making a living other than by the sale of his or her labor power to the owners of the means of production. This includes intellectual proletarians, such as professors, teachers, clerks and bookkeepers, and manual proletarians—that is, wage wokers, tenants, and, indirectly, small farmers, who till their own little piece of ground, but are, nevertheless, exploited by the capitalist class to that extent that the census statistics show them to receive less average income from their labor than their hired help does.

Bourgeoisie was a term applied to that part of the French people who were neither nobles nor workingmen. It became a custom to call the trading, or capitalist, class the bourgeoisie, which also signified a conservative class. A bourgeois is a male member, bourgeoise a female member of the bourgeoisie. Every new movement creates and adopts terms necessary to express its new thought. These words have a permanent place in Socialist literature, and their use tends to emancipate the minds of workingmen from the use of the capitalist vocabulary.

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION.

News From The World Wide Movement Of The Workers.

NEWS FROM THE NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS

The Proclamation entitled "Withdraw the Troops," issued by the National Executive Committee, has called forth an immediate and favorable response from all parts of the country. Orders by wire and mail have come flooding in. Bundles, each in small lots, aggregating fifteen thousand copies, and going in all directions, have been sent out within the past week.

The National Executive Committee has appropriated $100 for the defense of the comrades interested in the publication of the New Castle Free Press and who are on trial for seditious libel, and request the comrades throughout the country to contribute to the defense fund. All remittances should be made to "The Free Press," New Castle, Pa.

In the capitalist papers it will soon become a habit to keep standing as a head for news items the following: "SOCIALIST CANDIDATES WIN."

Comrade Ernest D. Barber, in an election held March 31, was elected corporation attorney for the town of Bennington, Vt., defeating Judge E. L. Bates, who ran on the Citizen's ticket.

On the same date the Socialists of Two Harbors, Minn., captured the city by electing Comrade Alex Halliday mayor and four of the seven city aldermen.

The Jewish Socialist Agitation Bureau will hold its annual convention in Boston, beginning Saturday, May 27, and continuing in session the 28th, 29th and 30th.

By a recent referendum in Colorado Comrade A. H. Floaten, 1430 Monroe street, Denver, was re-elected State Secretary.

Comrade Rosett, of Maryland, supports the National Committee motion proposed by Comrade Millard, of Ohio, first published March 18.

Regardless of the attempt of the capitalists to call forth the jingo spirit in connection with the Mexican war situation, reliable information is at hand that Socialist literature is more freely circulated than ever on the warships of Uncle Sam. On a number of the ships copies of Comrade Kirkpatrick's striking book, entitled "War—What For?" are going the rounds and being read with great interest.

By a recent referendum in Rhode Island, Comrade Fred Hurst, 1923 Westminster street, Providence, was re-elected State Secretary, and Comrade Joseph T. Grimshaw, 392 Grove street, Woonsocket, was elected a member of the National Committee.

Some idea of the fear that Taft's regime inspires in the trusts can be seen in the effect upon some of them. Steel trust stock has advanced from $22 a share to $95. Standard Oil has advanced from $486 to $713. Yes, this administration is going to protect the people from the ravages of the trusts. What gillies the people are, after all. They are as easily deceived by their leaders as are seven year old children. This administration is going to give trusts and grafters freer sailing than they ever had. Well, may it go rapidly. Not until the people are stripped and shivering will they lose confidence in the confidence men who are runnings things.

INDIANA SOCIALIST MOVEMENT.

(By State Secretary Sheffler.)

Local Osgood has arranged to have Comrade Korngold for three dates, April 11, 12 and 13. Comrade Korngold was with them on March 1, and left such an impression that they want him for return dates. The comrades are determined to clean up the place and make it a resting place for the One Hoss editor, when he comes back on the next visit. Go it, boys! When Ralph fails to get them, it is hard sledding, indeed. Once organized, no power can prevent the workers winning.

The comrades of Elwood are preparing to thoroughly organize that trust-ridden town. They, too, are beginning to realize that in order to have a democratic government, it is necessary to be prepared to speak after as well as on election day. If it is officiat dictatorship we want, why go any further? The Demo-Rep. politicians are past masters in that art. They know how to get the goods for their capitalist class masters. Better have a powerful working-class political organization; then we can control officials as well as control the situation for them.

W. F. Ries, the author of "Men and Mules," will make a few dates in Indiana during April. Locals wishing to make use of his services can secure dates by addressing the state secretary. First come, first served.

Dates are being reserved and route will be made up, shortly, for Comrade Claud L. Ferguson, the blind soap boxer of Findlay, Ohio. Comrade Furguson has a streak of humor in his makeup, and seems to get considerable enjoyment out of his work, along with the good he does, even though he is blind. Have a few more open dates, which locals may secure, by addressing the state secretary at an early date.

Local Connersville is preparing to get into the harness right. They have been having rather a hard time to interest the slaves sufficiently to get them to act in their own interest. When the capitalist wage-slave driver gets after them they begin to sit up and take notice. They want, not a larger slice of what they produce, but the whole cheese.

Fifty out of 97 locals made their regular monthly report for February. What about it, Mr. Financial Secretary; are you one of the 50 who reported? If not, why not? If you did fail for February, don't get the habit. It is bad for Socialism. Get the reporting habit. That will help keep the chariot moving. Get in your March report on time.

It is estimated that there are four thousand five hundred boys and girls under 16 years of age working in factories in Indiana. Two ministers appeared before the committee that was discussing the Keegan child labor bill in the recent legislature and tried to defeat it. Christ said: "Suffer little children to come unto me." These would-be teachers of His word say, "Suffer little children to go into the factories and make profits for the capitalist so that I may receive more from him and thus live easily."—Ft. Wayne Thinker.

GENERAL SOCIALIST NEWS.

GERMANY.

A military boycott has been pronounced against the Cinematograph Theater in Halle on account of some picture of Singer's funeral. Soldiers are forbidden to go there as long as these pictures remain in the program. In two other places the pictures were forbidden altogether, though only in one of them was the prohibition enforced.

ALGERIA.

The Socialist Federation of Algeria protests energetically against the decision taken by the parliamentary commission on the subject of proportional representation, which, on the motion of M. Maginot, excludes Algeria from participation in this system, shortly to be applied in France. The federation demands the support of the Socialists in parliament, so that they should not once more be done out of a reform of social value. A committee, on which all the political parties are represented, is being formed, in order to voice the protest of the people of Algeria.

ALSACE-LORRAINE.

At the last municipal elections at Mulhausen six Social Democrats were elected. This did not suit the bourgeois authorities, and all six mandates were annulled. The new election took place on February 5. This time the Social Democrats polled 2,320 votes—300 more than before. The bourgeois parties had, however, united to oppose them, and by this means managed to gain the victory with 1,363 votes. In the evening an imposing meeting took place to protest against this theft of seats.

GREAT BRITAIN.

A meeting of the British section of the International Socialist Bureau was held in a committee room of the house of common last week. Mr. Keir Hardie was elected chairman, and Mr. J. Ramsay Macdonald secretary of the section.

It was resolved to invite the international bureau to convene a gathering of representatives from France, Germany and Great Britain to discuss the relations between the three countries, and to seek to promote a better feeling between them. The meeting will probably be held at Brussels.

GREECE.

A telegraphic message states that the assistant editor of the Greek Socialist paper, Ergvna, and a director of the Greek Labor League have been arbitrarily imprisoned, and that Socialists and labor league members are being terrorized.

A MESSAGE FROM VICTOR BERGER.

"The Future Belongs to the Enlightened Proletariat---And Representing the Enlightened Proletariat, I Can Not Fail."

Truly, few men have greater responsibility thrust upon them than devolves upon me. And few men have had a smaller opportunity when compared with the immensity of the task. I am going to be one Congressman in about four hundred—not counting the Senate. And not counting the President, who himself counts for as much as two-thirds of the House of Representatives and the Senate together.

The eyes of the entire nation will be upon me. And not realizing the importance or the magnitude of the problem, most of them will not be friendly eyes. The entire capitalist press will watch me. And partly from ignorance of Socialism and its aims, it is prone to misrepresent, to misjudge and to misconstrue every move and every action of mine.

I shall be hedged in by parliamentary usage, old precedent and other obstacles. I shall be the subject of ridicule, of suspicion, and possibly of deception.

Moreover, I am not a brilliant man. It is not given to me to shine. All the results I have ever accomplished have been won by continual and tenacious hard work.

And I shall be all alone. The comrades expect a great deal. To judge by the tremendous mail which is poured upon me, I am to be a new kind of a Congressman—a Congressman at large for the Socialist party of this country.

Can I come up to this expectation? I say all this because I do not want the comrades to feel any disappointment in case I can not do all they expect me to do.

Of course, I shall try to do my full duty according to my light and my understanding—as I have done in Milwaukee.

And being alone and in a small majority does not frighten me. I am accustomed to this. I have been in the minority most of my life.

Moreover, while still in the minority, I am convinced and I fell intensely that I am representing the majority.

I know that the untutored people still fail to grasp the meaning of Socialism. But I also know that the time and the conditions are changing.

I know that the new light is dimly seen, not only by the masses, but also by their rulers.

In the past, it was ignorance which accounted for the lowly position of the mass of men. This ignorance is rapidly disappearing, and with it disappears the justification for the few to lord it over the many.

Therefore, I shall ask in Congress, What have you, the representatives of the people, done for the people? What action have you taken to curtail the privilege of the minority and to promote the interest of the majority?

This is a republic.

But in what way has the glorious revolution of 1776 changed the condition of the masses? Do not the greatest number stand where they always stood?

Are not our conditions today the same that they were in old Rome? Is not our proletariat face to face with the wild beast Hunger, while a few patricians, robed in purple, look from afar at the battle of life?

The hour is not distant when the common people will awaken to the fact that political rights were fought for and won to secure economic rights. When the common people will discover that their so-called sovereignty is a sham and a delusion, as long as the omnipotence of wealth is real and the exploitation of the masses is the basis of our economy.

The future belongs to the enlightened proletariat. And, representing the enlightened proletariat, I can not fail.

Be of good cheer, comrades, Victor Berger will make good.

Mrs. Anna M. Storck, the Socialist member of the Lorain Board of Education, is making a hit as a lecturer. She was over in Akron last week and spoke to a big house and conducted the meeting on her "school" innovation so successfully that the idea was adopted there and then. It is probable that Mrs. Frank Prevey will be the schoolma'am to deal out lessons to the grown-ups in Akron.

On account of the many Socialists who are now being elected to public office and the responsibilities that they are compelled to assume, National Committeeman Millard, of this state, has submitted a motion that "the National Executive Committee install in the national office a research bureau, the object of which shall be to collect and arrange data and information which would be of assistance to elected Socialist officials, to campaign committees, to committees elected by the party for special purposes and in general to act as a clearing house for social science." This is a good idea and ought to be adopted without objection.

The meeting of the Stricklands last Sunday was largely attended. They are prime favorites in this city. Fred Strickland paid an eloquent tribute to the late Robert Bandlow, saying that he had first become interested in the labor movement and the Socialist party in personal chats with our deceased comrade. Strickland also praised the Citizen for its efforts in educating the working people to an understanding of the great social problems that are now pressing for solution and its all-around newsy features.—Cleveland Citizen.

MARCH A GOOD MONTH.

The following cities fell in line with full Socialist government during March. Watch this list grow:

Muscatione, Iowa.
South Frankfort, Michigan.
Two Harbors, Minnesota.

WHAT SOCIALISTS CAN DO IN MUNICIPALITIES.

(By W. R. Shier.)

They can reduce the hours and increase the wages of municipal employes.

They can inaugurate non-contributory superannuation schemes for policemen, firemen, school teachers, street cleaners and all those employed directly by the municipality.

They can use the police powers to enforce wholesome conditions in stores and factories.

They can exempt the very poor, especially widows with families to support, from paying the water rates.

They can provide well-equipped, supervised playgrounds for the children of the working class.

They can interfere with children being taught military ideals in the schools.

They can erect magnificent public baths for the benefit of the common people.

They can introduce a system of free medical service for citizens that is free from the taint of charity.

They can do much toward solving the housing problem by erecting model dwellings and renting them to working people at cost price.

They can reduce the cost of living to a certain extent through municipal fuel yards, municipal abbatoirs, municipal milk depots, etc.

The work-people of Europe are poor and the work-people of this nation are poor. The useless element there is rich, and the useless element here is rich. What is the difference between a monarchy and a republic, anyway?

The Teachers' Federation of Chicago has formed a Socialist Club to boost the Socialist ticket, and 600 policemen and firemen are to groom George Koop, a Socialist printer candidate for alderman from one of the wards. So says the Western Laborer.

The "Reds" in the district of Giessen, Germany, came pretty close to winning still another seat in Parliament. In a total vote of about 25,000 the Socialists lost by 947 votes. As it is they gained over 4,000 votes and are confident that they will clean up that district at the coming general elections.

An interesting incident is reported from London. The British government is considering the matter of paying members of parliament, which has never been the custom, and the amount of salary discussed by the Liberal statesmen is $2,500 a year. But the Labor party members are against the proposal. They say that $1,000 per year ought to be sufficient. It is probable that a compromise will be agreed upon.

The Catholic trade unions held a convention in Nurenberg, Germany, and complained that the working people do not receive fair representation in the Centre (or Catholic) party in parliament, but one seat in that body being held by a labor man from Bavaria. The workers demanded greater representation in the Centre, and some of the delegates discussed the matter of forming a Catholic Labor party. An effort will be made to secure a satisfactory understanding.

The brutal attack upon Editor Tuck, of the Oakland (Cal.) World, a vigorous Socialist weekly, that made things hot for the police and their third degree tortures, is having the effect of marshaling the organized workers behind the paper and the Socialist ticket in increasing numbers. The Typographical issued a lengthy address to the citizens of Oakland, in which the police ring is bitterly arraigned, while the Socialist ticket has been endorsed by the machinists, blacksmiths, electrical workers, millmen, Amalgamated Carpenters, Brotherhood Carpenters and cooks and waiters.

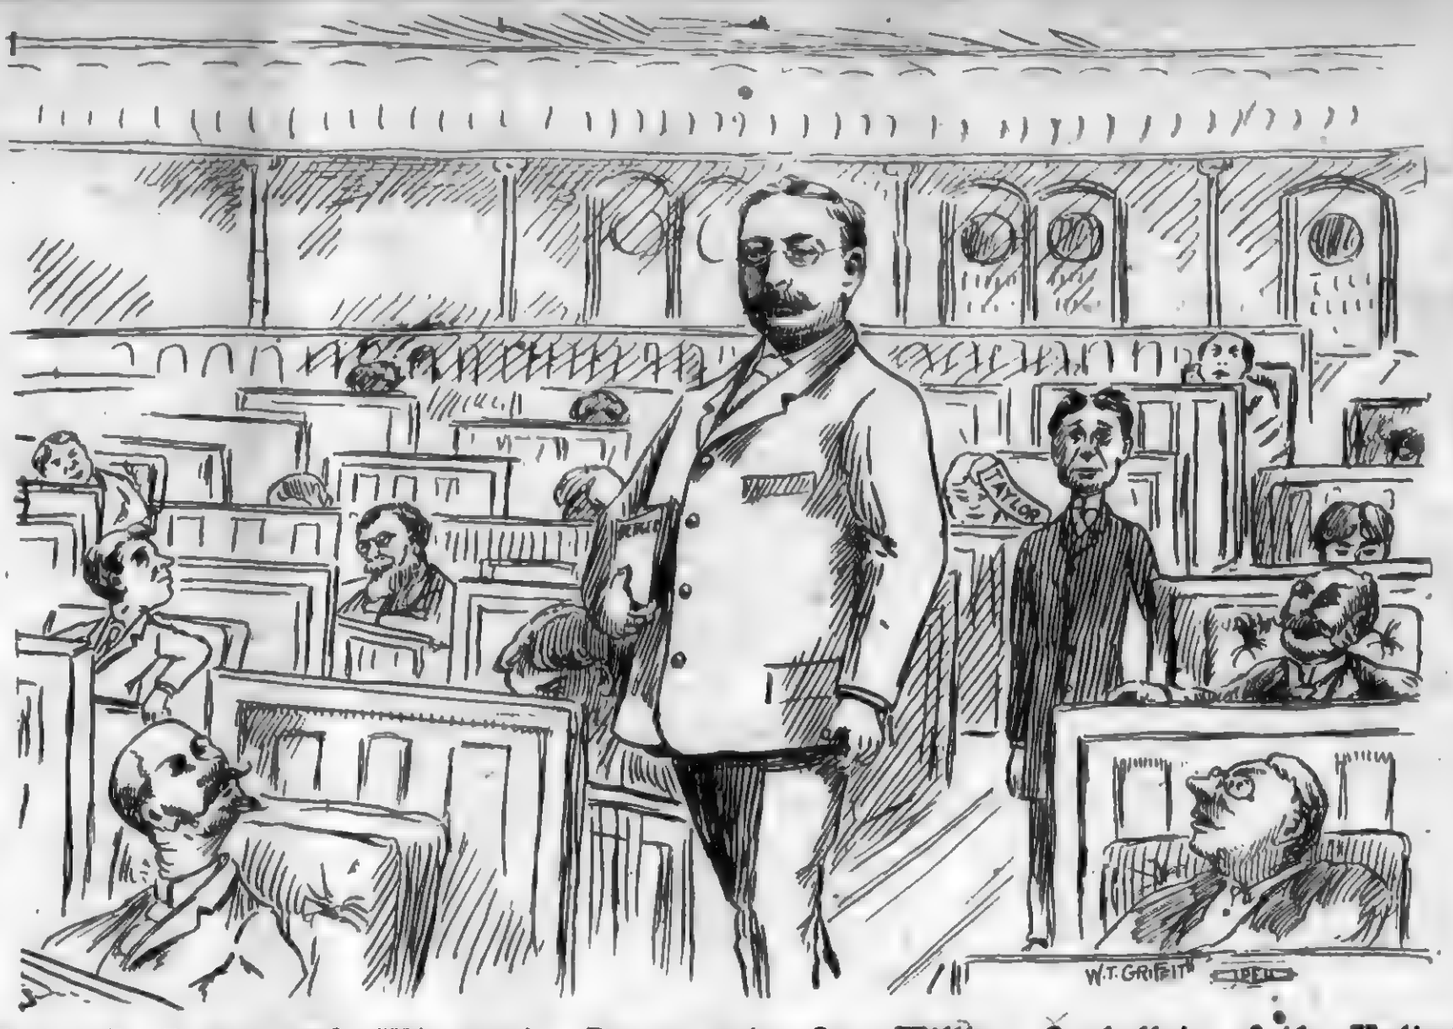
RAILROAD EMPLOYES AND THE CLASS STRUGGLE.

Society is divided into two classes. One is the Master Class and the other is the servant class. The Master Class own the tools, which the servant class must possess to supply the human family with fuel, shelter, food and clothing.

To supply these natural desires, the people must possess factories, farms, mines and railroads, the last-named being the most important because they carry to the people the things produced from the four mentioned sources. Who operates the factories, farms, mines and railroads? The servant class.

Who own them? The Master Class.

Who gave these valuable necessities of life to the Master Class? The servant class. By what means? Through their indifference to things that concern their future well-being and their votes at the ballot-box.



What has this finally resulted in? The class struggle. Might against right. The demand of the few, the supreme right to rule the many by controlling the factories, farms and mines. What about the railroads? The Master Class use the locomotives and cars like a street robber does his gun. The thug demands "your money or your life." The railroad kings demand that you pay their price for hauling what the people need from the factory, farm and mine. If the people refuse to pay this price, then the railroads refuse to haul, and the factories and mines have to shut down, and the farmer sees his crops wither and waste in the fields. Why are the railroads so powerful? Listen! President Taft recently desired to consult the railroads regarding rate legislation. Fancy the ruler of 80,000,000 people calling five of his subjects to Washington to consult them on matters pertaining to obedience to the law (of the people). These five men represented 2,500 railroads, who do an aggregate yearly business of $2,600,000,000, or $7,000,000 a day. In a year this is five times the whole world's output of gold. (These figures were quoted by the New York Times.) Surely, Mr. Worker, these figures explain why these five men have more power than the President of the republic.

Our Republican and Democratic Congressmen, up to twelve years back, had given away to railroads and other corporations 266,000,000 acres of the United States territory, and yet we bury many of the servant class in the "potter's field."

Mr. Worker, you receive 40 per cent. of the railroads' net earnings in wages. The railroads pay 3 per cent. of the state taxes. What did the Panhandle Railroad tell the 180,000 citizens of Columbus when they proposed to tax their property, a few years back? "We will move our shops." Yet, Mr. Worker, you are taxed full value for your little home, and if it was not for these homes of the servant class there would be no need of railroads. Homes create cities' wealth, for in the homes of the people lies the purchasing power. Why was it the gray-haired workers were given the key to the street in this city? These men have given their best days to produce the wealth that built these money tyrants' thrones. Why not abolish the costly, unnecessary city railroad ticket offices? Why not reduce the salaries of the many official orphans, whose most important duty is to keep their finger nails clean and draw salaries? Why not investigate the criminal acts of some purchasing agents' departments.

No, these acts would not be good policy, for the railroads have prospered by the methods of Capitalism, and the capitalist system exists by acts of thievery, bribery, and murder, if necessary. These kings of capitalism keep their tools in good positions at large salaries to keep them silent. Mr. Worker, with the "key to the street" in your pocket, why are you silent? If you had helped them (your masters) increase freight rates, you would not be out on the street, jobless. No; you stood by your class—the servant class. Why not vote with them. Vote for Socialism instead of Capitalism. Vote to prevent the lines of care appearing on your wife's features. Vote to save the home from the acts of Herod. Vote to work for the needs of all instead of to make weapons so the Master Class can compel you to produce profits for the few. Rejoice because our days of indifference are passing and victory is at hand. It will not be a battle with bullets. It will be won by working-class ballots—by Socialism.

JIM HENDERSON.

Victor L. Berger, of Wisconsin, Represents One Million Socialists of the United States. Taylor, of Columbus, Misrepresents Fifty Thousand Voters.

APRIL 4th, 1911.

"A Red Letter Day for the Working Class of America."

Victor L. Berger, of the Socialist Party of America, Is Sworn Into Office.

Washington, D. C., April 4, 1911.

Today, when Champ Clark, Speaker of the Sixty-second Congress, in "extraordinary session" assembled, called the name of Victor L. Berger, Representative from Wisconsin, and our first Socialist Congressman walked quickly down the aisle, and, standing with the other members of the House from Wisconsin and other states, solemnly pledged his loyalty to his country and his duty, there were two Socialist women in the members' gallery watching the scene with eager eyes and burning hearts, Victor Berger's comrade-wife and your correspondent. They knew that today the first real representative of thousands of workingmen, women and children was being sworn into office, and his oath of loyalty was one of allegiance to a cause greater than any party. It was an historic epoch in the struggle for human liberty; and Comrade Berger fully realised this. In his office in the "House" office building, before and after the session of Congress, he received throngs of comrades and friends, and to them all he was the same interested comrade as if we were all attending an ordinary Socialist meeting.

Occasionally he would say a word that would indicate that his heart was in Milwaukee, where today the fierce struggle is going on between the united parties of capitalism and the Socialist party. He laughed heartily over the fact that, in drawing his seat, his number "35" gave him a choice only of seats in "Cherokee Strip," over on the Republican side, Martin Littleton, Roosevelt's friend (?), being one of his neighbors. When his name was drawn in the choice of seats, nearly the entire House joined in applause. Cooper, the insurgent of Wisconsin, and many others walked over and shook hands with him as he took his seat. Even William Jennings Bryan cordially shook his hand. Bryan has been in the city for some days, and during the opening session was sitting quite near Governor Harmon of Ohio. They were not seen to "harmonize," however.

On Monday Carnegie had a conference at the Metropolitan Hotel, with Mr. Bryan. Wonder what it could have been about? Must have been either "Peace" or "Armor-plates." What else could such a Democrat and such a Plutocrat have in common?

Uncle Joe Cannon leaned over and took a look at Berger as he walked down the aisle. To some of the older politicians, who are reading the signs of the times, the real significance of a Socialist entering Congress was apparent. In the members' galleries the comments were amusing. One man was heard to remark, "They say that Socialism and anarchy are opposed, but if they go around the circle they will get to the same place." Another said, "Berger looks good natured and wholesome." They had evidently expected to see a fire-eater. Henry George, the Single-Tax Democrat, drew a lucky choice of seats and also attracted a lot of attention, but he is not going into this Congress as a representative of principles or ideas, but just as an ordinary Democrat. After all, Comrade Berger's vitality and endurance is remarkable. Ever since he came to Washington last week, with Comrade W. J. Ghent, his secretary, he has been overwhelmed with callers, correspondence and newspaper work. He is the most remarkable dictator of interviews to newspaper men I have ever known. It was my privilege last night to be in his hotel apartments as he dictated an interview to a newspaper man formerly from Milwaukee. As he walked the floor he made a complete address, not only outlining what he would like to do if appointed on the District Committee, but making a complete Socialist lecture, warming up to it as if trying to convert the reporter to Socialism. On Sunday evening, tired as he was, he went with other comrades to the regular Socialist meeting. With Comrades Mrs. Berger, Ghent, Erwin of Philadelphia, Kopelin and Bloor, he entered the room quietly, but Washington comrades spied him and gave him a hearty welcome. The speaker of the evening immediately gave him the floor, and he made one of his characteristic speeches. Said he knew they weren't used to his "Milwaukee German accent." Yet neither was Congress, but they would soon get as accustomed to it as they were in Milwaukee. He asked all comrades to bear with him and not expect too much from one man, all alone in Congress; but he was sure he would not be alone very long. Said there was another coming very soon from Wisconsin and another on the way from Columbus. Mrs. Berger being called upon, she said: "This is not my day, although you know how a comrade's wife is always a part of his work. While he works she has to settle 'with the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker,' but I am so absorbed in his work that to be 'Victor Berger's wife' is my work today." Mrs. Berger is fully as absorbed in Socialism as her husband. It is really true, as Comrade Ervin remarked the same evening, "Comrade Berger can not fail for two reasons—his wonderful wife and his saving sense of humor."

VICTOR L. BERGER,

Mrs. Berger's very soul is in the Milwaukee movement, too, and she constantly speaks of the comrades who are in the thick of the fight there.

Again Monday evening we all went out to a meeting of the workers, at Odd Fellow's temple. Comrade Robert Hunter, of Connecticut, addressed the Machinists' Union, and Comrade Berger made the opening address. The large hall was filled with union men and Socialists and they accorded Berger an ovation as one of "their own" come to Congress, as he is. He said, in opening his address, that in Milwaukee they didn't have any speechmakers, so they got right to work and "delivered the goods." He sympathised with the disfranchised men of the district, and said he would most surely present a bill to give them a vote, and not only the men of the district but the women, too. When Mrs. Berger was asked her views on woman suffrage she answered, "Why, every time I make a Socialist I've made a suffragist, too."

It was very characteristic of Mrs. Berger, yesterday, when we had both been invited to tea at a woman's club of non-Socialists, she exclaimed, "Oh, I don't want this kind of thing. I want to be with comrades." And today, as she fully realized that her husband, a real Socialist, was there in the Halls of Congress, taking his seat, she was the happiest woman in the galleries. It was like her, too, to give the only card of admission she had beside her own to your correspondent. Even Comrade Ghent could not gain admission, and when I told her she'd better take it back, she said, "No; I gave this to you; and those men can try to get in somehow. I want you to have it because you've waited and hoped for this time so long." Even with the cards, we found it almost impossible to be seated for an hour or more. The session lasted from 12 to 3. Comrade Abe Cohan, editor of the Vorwarts; Allan Benson, Comrade Reilly, of Brooklyn, and Washington and Baltimore comrades waited for hours to greet Comrade Berger in his office, where he received their congratulations and many beautiful bouquets of red roses. In the midst of the rejoicing there was a sad note to me. As I looked at the so-called "representatives" taking their seats and pulling their wires; heard the roar of Champ Clark's blatant promises in his inaugural address, and noted Joe Cannon's eagle eye glancing everywhere, and knew that in all the group there was just the one man to stand alone for our class interests, it seemed not only sad but incredible that America, the one land of full manhood, suffrage should be so far behind the nations of Europe in sending workingmen to represent their own class interests instead of the interests of capitalism.

I think it was Comrade Captain French who remarked, this morning, "It takes so long for them to see that it is just as bad to be crushed to death by an elephant as it is to be kicked to death by a jackass." The members of the working class need not choose either death today. This new, strong political force called Socialism will bear them on to new life and hope, and it's up to us all, especially in Columbus, to see to it that Victor Berger is surrounded by a group of Socialist representatives, and today when the great mass of Democrats waved American flags to celebrate the first Democratic majority in sixteen years I had a vision, and I'm not a prophet either, or the son of a prophet, but the vision came clear and bright of the day that is coming, as surely as morning follows night, when down that aisle will march together men and women who will pledge together their loyalty to the men, women and children who are today in abject slavery, and when the flags wave in that day the red will really mean freedom for all. The white will stand for purity for all and the blue for the truth that must prevail; and the cloud that now hangs over the great hall—the cloud of graft, greed and special privilege—will be dispelled forever by the rising sun of equal opportunity for all.

Socialists elected two aldermen and two county supervisors at Superior, Wis.; one alderman and one justice of the peace at Racine, Wis.

At Flint, Mich. the Socialists elected their entire city ticket, with the exception of treasurer.

At Beatrice, Neb., a city of 10,000, Socialists elected W. E. Griffen, a sprinkling cart driver, as mayor. He beat Mayor Rutherford (Dem.) 117 votes.

In Wymore, Neb., Socialists elected a mayor, city clerk, treasurer and two councilmen.

At Red Cloud, Neb., Socialists elected a mayor.

At Jamestown, N. Y., the Socialists lacked only five votes to elect one alderman.

INTERNATIONAL UNION OF BREWERY WORKERS OF AMERICA.

The Brewery Workers' Union will celebrate their twenty-fifth birthday in August, 1911. No international union in America has been fought so viciously as the Brewery Workers have been, yet it stands ready at all times to assist its weaker brethren with hard cash and wholesome energy. We congratulate our brethren on their past victories and we rejoice to see the flag of victory unfurled to the breeze over their enemies' castles. May the spirit of industrialism lead you on to greater victories.

GLASS BOTTLERS' UNION, NO. 106.

Vice President John Voll recently called on the craft in Columbus. Brother Miles and Mike Dunn report the good work moving along. Don't forget that Mr. Frank Carter is interested in the Beggs dry goods store automobile contest. If you have no other preference in the contest, help the wife of a good trade unionist by giving her your premium votes.

The blowers are making preparations for their coming national convention, to be held here this month. The gas question is one of particular interest to them. Should the gas company carry out their threat it would mean the moving of many of our best citizens, because gas is needed to heat the furnaces.

THEATRICAL STAGE EMPLOYES' UNION.

The Stage Employes will soon issue a list of all places of amusement that employ union stage hands and moving picture operators. The union will appeal for the support of organized labor all over the state to assist them by not patronizing the unfair houses. This matter will come up at the next Federation of Labor meeting.

PANHANDLE RAILROAD REDUCES ITS WORKERS.

The Columbus shops laid off one hundred and fifty men. Many of the discharged workers have grown gray in the service of the company. Railroads don't want gray-haired men. They burden the "Voluntary Relief Funds," and they are liable to reach the superannuation mark and then the company would have to reward them for long, honorable service. The papers hint that the railroads are punishing the people for interferring with their proposed increased freight rate proposition. Well, the people need the railroads, but they do not own them, no more than the workers own their jobs.

Before the lay-off came certain reverend gentlemen were talking about the ungodliness of the Socialists. These men are the main supporters of the capitalist system. They told the workers that Socialism was wrong, because it did not stand for the rights of private property. The private ownership of railroads allowed the railroads to give the workers the "key to the street;" now it's up to the servants of capitalism to plead with their benefactors to replace their friends in their old positions. The worker will always be in fear of losing his job while capitalism reigns supreme. Socialism demands that the state own the railroads, then they will be run for use and not to prolong the abuse of corporate power.

MITCHELL SPEAKS TO 5,000 RAILROAD MEN

Gathering Takes Place in Pittsburg—Unity of Brotherhoods Urged.

PITTSBURG, PA., April 2.—This afternoon and tonight more than 5,000 railway workers heard John Mitchell and their own leaders plead for a closer bond of union affiliation between the various branches of railway employes, in furtherance of the effort being made to form one great union, which will include all the present brotherhoods.

The meetings were closed to the public, the only admission cards recognised being union cards of the men themselves, and afterward it was impossible to get any to talk of what took place, except to deny that any particular railroad or combination of traffic interests was being aimed at.

Warren A. Stone, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Engineers, was an unexpected visitor at the afternoon conference. The principal speaker at the evening session was Frank L. Mulholand, of Toledo.

Leaders of the Pittsburg branches of the organizations were asked if any action was to be taken regarding the laying off of engineers and firemen at the Pittsburg shops during the past month. They denied there would be, saying the laying off of 74 engineers and 125 firemen was due to the falling off in business and not to any discrimination against union men.

None would make a statement as to what action would be taken in behalf of the shopmen and trackmen who have been denied employment during the past two months.

PANHANDLE EMPLOYES, HAVE YOU SUFFERED ENOUGH?

The C. C. C. and St. L. R. R. employes are going to organize the system thoroughly. The best lights in the field of organized labor are to be used to bring about one of the greatest centralized labor departments in the world. The American Federation of Labor is co-operating with the various railroad brotherhoods, and so far every goal has been reached. The workers realize that they must stand together independent of craft and other sectional lines. Briefly, the move notifies the employers that the spirit of the American labor union has been revived. It warns these industrial despots that injury to one worker will mean an injury to all.

FRANKLIN COUNTY COURT NEWS.

No Judge in the Land Can Convict Any One For Thinking.

A. N. Strader was sentenced to ten years in the pen. His crime was complicity with dynamiting, that occurred during the streetcar strike in Columbus. Strader's attorneys appealed to Judge Rogers to send their client to the Mansfield Reformatory. Judge Rogers refused to the appeal. Judge Rogers overruled a motion for a new triti.

Earl Lichtenwalter, the law student who killed the husband of the woman he was associating with, was sentenced (by Judge Rogers) to serve a term of imprisonment in the Mansfield Reformatory. The case will be carried to the higher court.

God save the Commonwealth, by teaching people to think!

LABOR AND PARKS.

The working class want all the pure breathing spots possible. Therefore, we are in favor of parks. The working class are in the majority, therefore they bear the burden of taxation, and taxation without representation is against the fundamental principles of democratically governed institutions. Parks are used as social centers. They are places where the people can meet to discuss matters material to their social well being. Therefore we are unalterably opposed to commission plans that recruit their membership by one-man appointments. It would be unwise for the working class to give the power of public assemblage into the hands of appointive boards, for, while the appointment guardian might have the purest of motives, there are others who have ulterior motives. For these reasons labor is suspicious of what that class of men might seek to govern over assemblage rights hereafter.

MODERN JUDAS ISCARIOTS.

The sad spectacle of the two West Side citizens, who, by the way, received an immunity bath in the Strader case and who also received a portion of the reward for their pernicious activities in spiriting away Strader and then taking the stand as they did for the state, looks bad on the face of it, without going into the merits of the case, the fact remains that the two business men who were guilty of being accessories, as Davis and Crammer were the goats; and this only shows that the tendency of the times is to protect Big Business, and Big Business is never without flunkies to serve its interests. The alleged innocence of this modern Judas Iscariot, who represented that he was procuring the automobile to take a friend on a trip, knowing that he was spiriting away a man that was wanted for dynamiting, makes this man either a hypocrite or a fool; and then when the payment of the reward comes we find him making a clean breast to the prosecuting attorney and securing a portion of the reward. The whole machinery of the law has become subservient to plutocracy, and we have had two miscarriages of justice in Franklin county because of that fact: one in the Brady case, when, under every principle of right, justice and decency, Brady should have been convicted, and the other in the Foty case; yet the influence of the Columbus Railway & Light Co. was able to prevent a conviction, and this will continue to be so us long as men are appointed for jury service who are prejudiced and biased against workingmen, and the rights of workingmen, and who are willing to become the pliant lickspittles and tools of the piratical corporations like the Columbus Railway & Light Co., that carries on its operations with ex-convicts and jail birds like Coach, and crooks and assassins like Brady and Foty. Ninety-five per cent. of the jurors that serve in Franklin county infer that a man is guilty when he is indicted by the grand jury, especially if the foreman of that grand jury happens to be a tin soldier, and every workingman in the bounds of Franklin county knows what this same tin soldier's feeling is toward labor and laboring men. The program seems to be to railroad every man to the penitentiary who interferes with the rights of property, and to give every man who shoots down innocent women and children the right to do the same thing again by allowing them to go free. If the jury commission will give us honest men to serve as jurors who cannot be debauched by the beast known as Big Business, and if the voters are given the recall so that they can recall the judges who are the mouth-pieces of Big Business, much of the injustice can be stopped, and there will be one law then for the workingmen and the capitalist and no distinction will be drawn between the two. Workingmen of Columbus, strike at the ballot-box next November and vote for your class interests.

WEST SIDER.

THE NEW COLUMBUS DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

GAS VS. THE PEOPLE.

To Our Would-be Rulers:

We pity the poverty stricken condition of our dear benefactors, the Columbus Gas and Fuel Co.

Your appeal, sent through the mail, caused the people to recollect that one of the charitably disposed gas officials lost a few dollars over our recent streetcar strike. Another dear creature, who holds a prominent official position with the Columbus Gas and Fuel Company, is living today on a fortune amassed by convict labor making bolts in the Ohio penitentiary. The state declared against this inhuman method of treating criminals, hence we realize that both these gentlemen deserve some sympathy. It would be well to remind these gentlemen that the people own the streets wherein lie the gas company's mains, and, while their attorneys may talk of property rights and state and federal consitutions, it would be well to remind them that the slave holders of the South defended their right to buy flesh and blood by passages found in the Bible.

It seems, gentlemen of the gas company, that you have forgotten the fact that you are talking of cutting off the supply of gas in the month of July. Perhaps it would be well to remind you of the historical fact that a few pounds of tea and excessive taxation will cause the people of this American republic to celebrate their independence three days after you propose to shut off their gas supply.

Now, gentlemen, this is the capital city of Ohio. We claim to have produced many presidents. Gentlemen, it is more than probable that we may create some new precedents in the city of Columbus and write a new Declaration of Independence.

The taxpayers of this city do not regret the action of councilmen who dared to stand up for the people's rights and the interests of future prosperity. Remember, gentlemen, that we teach our children that this world was created for all the people, and not for a selfish few. Therefore, consider well your future actions, for fear that future generations may be ashamed of your acts of tyranny toward the common people.

THE SWEAT-BOX.

Jack Menton, a cigar maker, was elected mayor of Flint, Mich.

Three hundred thousand New York workers will lay down their tools as a sign of mourning for the Triangle fire victims.

RED INK BRIGADE.

The Columbus veterans of three wars, namely, the Spanish-American, Columbus Streetcar Strike and the War of Transgression on the Rights of the Working Class of Old Mexico, we are given to understand, will be presented with tin medals of decoration. This emblem will bear the figure of a streetcar on one side and the picture of the gallant little drummer boy, "Bush," beating peaceable citizens over the head with a club, on the other side.

Fairfield County Notes.

After missing a week we are back on the job again, stronger than ever, and feeling fine over the increasing membership of our local, which was increased by two more young comrades at our Sunday meeting, the 2nd. The most pleasing feature of the additions is that the new members are almost all young and enthusiastic men, with optimistic views which we believe will be justified by future events.

The comrades and our friends are taking hold of the Strickland meeting in a manner which leaves no doubts of its success, and the local expects to be in shape after the meeting to enter the field at the fall elections for "bear."

Comrade Crampton reports a flattering outlook for the cause in this vicinity and claims people won't let him alone when he goes to their place of business. They all want to talk Socialism, and the comrade is perfectly able to give them all they want, and sometimes a little more.

Comrade Foreshaw was selected delegate to the state convention, which insures us as good representation as any local in the state. Comrade Crampton, alternate.

Comrade Nielson has secured permanent work and will stay and work with us.

Comrade Griffith was out of the city and we missed his smiling visage Sunday, but we have hopes of his return soon.

After the business of the meeting had been disposed of we discussed the attitude of certain churches and organizations against us, which was rather spirited at times. No one seemed able t place exactly the cause of the opposition, but all agreed that the greatest consideration for the opposition was the money and graft they were enabled to collect. All comes out of the workers' pockets. Great!

When you hear some smug-faced, smooth-tongued faker arguing against Socialism you can bank money he has a soft snap. This class and thugs are the same kind of people.

The C. & M. V. shops here, which had already cut the force to the straining limit, have gone further and dispensed with the services of 15 more men—men with families to care for—sacrificed them to capitalistic greed. How long, O Lord, are workingmen to stand this? Cheer up, brothers. In the near future the Revolution will have come, bringing you peace and prosperity. Just a few more days and the crater will burst with the pent up wrongs of humanity and engulf the masters in an awful flood of vengeance.

WHEN WOMEN APE MEN.

A man who keeps a women's shop is advertising a recent importation as an "unparalleled line of mannish gloves, collars and ties for misses' wear." Shade of the great Ann Bloomer, has it come to this? Heavy gloves, strongly sewed, if you will; stout collars to protect the neck; broad scarfs to be worn with a stickpin; but now actually "mannish" styles. The word shows by its termination that the thing described does not ring true. It means "in imitation of a man," or "aping the appearance or manners of a man," if we may trust the dictionary makers; an imitation for its own sake is always contemptible. We have seen women with native courage, endurance, self-reliance, initiative, all qualities we look for and admire in men; we have seen men with a wealth of charity, patience, sympathy with distress, and tenderness toward the helpless, which would have glorified a woman. We respect such traits as fine in themselves, and regard neither class as unsexed by them; for there is a vast difference between manliness and mannishness, or mere ostentatious masculinity, just as there is between womanliness and womanishness or effeminacy. It is no disgrace to a man to show womanly traits in the presence of conditions which call for their exercise, or for a woman to have a manly soul under the gentler exterior. But a womanish man or a mannish woman is a caricature. Next to the rule, "What God hath joined together let no man put asunder," let us respect its companion rule as just as important and just as sacred: That what God has made separate and different it is folly for woman or man to try to reshape in one mould.—Exchange.

MARY JOHNSON'S VISION OF THE GOLDEN AGE TO COME.

Man, man. Woman, woman. If not this that we are entering a happier land? Is it not better to go upon this so wonderful a journey of ours hand in hand? Do we want any longer masters and slaves, kings and subjects, governors and governed, owners and chattels? Do we not want allies, friends, comrades? Oh, this country that we are entering is a fairer and a greater country than the one that fades behind us. Here are lovers that are lovers indeed. Here are homes that are homes indeed. Here is romance that is romance indeed. It blooms all along the way. Trust is here, and understanding, and a mutual courtesy, and a great sweetness and a beauty not found before; and in this land Love has his capital city. Here is virtue that is virtue indeed, and here is honest dealing that is honest dealing indeed, and here is religion that is religion indeed. In this land grow purpose, and intention, and courage and high endeavor, and noble accomplishment. And one of the names of the country is Justice, and another is Altruism.

VIEWS OF WOMEN BY BALZAC.

When a woman pronounces the name of a man but twice a day, there may be some doubt as to the nature of her sentiment—but, three times!

In courting women, many dry wood for a fire that will not burn for them.

No man has yet discovered the means of successfully giving friendly advice to women—not even to his own.

Women are constantly the dupes, or else the victims of their extreme sensitiveness.

A man must be a fool who does not succeed in making a woman believe that which flatters her.

A woman full of faith in the one she loves is but a novelist's fancy.

The mistakes of a woman result almost always from her faith in the good and her confidence in the truth.

Woman is a charming creature, who changes her heart as easily as her gloves.

The man who can govern a woman can govern a nation.

In the elevated order of ideas, the life of man is glory; the life of woman is love.

The Indian axiom, "Do not strike even with a flower a woman guilty of a hundred crimes," is my rule of conduct.

Most women proceed like the flea, by leaps and jumps.

When women love us, they forgive us everything, even our crimes. When they do not love us, they give us credit for nothing, not even for our virtues.

There is one thing admirable in women: they never reason about their blameworthy actions; even in their dissimulation there is an element of sincerity.

SELECTIONS FROM "THE WOMEN DID IT" IN COLORADO," IN HAMPTON'S MAGAZINE.

The women of Colorado have learned something that has not been learned by the men of any state in the Union, unless you except Oregon and Washington. The men of New York do not know how to vote. The men of Ohio, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island have not learned. There would be no Tammany Hall in New York, no George B. Cox machine in Ohio, no Lorimer scandal in Illinois, no gang in Pennsylvania, if the men of those states knew how to vote. If the women of Colorado have done no more than to learn how to vote, their achievement is worthy of study, not only by men but by women—perhaps more by men than by women. The sex war in Colorado began when the men induced the women to vote for the man they would not have invited into their homes. He was a politician, a spoilsman, a tool of the interests. Then the women were unanimous in their demand that candidates for office in Colorado should be men of clean, virtuous private lives. They determined to acquire a knowledge of the ballot which should enable them to back up their demands. Their suffrage clubs were turned into study clubs. The women began to study the science of government. They had no ward bosses, no corner saloons. They overwhelmed bookstores with a demand for works on Political Economy, Sociology and Parliamentary Law. Later, to their surprise, they learned that they had progressed further in the science of government than had the men voters. The average man with whom they talked did not know what they were talking about. He would have hesitated to say whether the referendum were a soft drink or an outlying precinct.

The real period of enlightenment arrived when the women's clubs developed out of their Browning and pink tea and became intelligent bodies, doing civic, educational and reform work.

A long chapter could be filled with the details of the years of labor by the Colorado women who have persisted in fighting for efficient, honest government.

Look at this splendid record of results: Colorado today has the initiative, the referendum and the direct primary. Denver has the recall also, and within a very short time the rest of the state will have it. In Colorado the ballot has been shorn of its picture emblems, so that the voter must read his ballot before he casts it.

Colorado has the best juvenile court laws, some of the best child labor laws, several of the best marriage laws, and one of the most scientific educational systems in the country.

In Colorado, and nowhere else in the world, the mother, equal with the father, is next of kin to her own child. She may even inherit jointly with the father property left by the deceased child.

In Colorado the age of protection for girls is 18, instead of 14, which is the average in the United States.

No woman in Colorado may work more than eight hours a day at tasks which require her to be on her feet.

Every city of 25,000 population in the state has an employment office. All of this evidence of progressive thought and action were agitated mainly by women and were made into laws chiefly through the influence of women.

MOVING PICTURES.

Miss Florence King is an enterprising young woman, who has invaded the moving picture shows in New York City to promote the campaign carried on by the Woman Suffrage party. She persuaded managers to let her do a six-minute "turn," in which she puts on slides showing tenement house districts, unsanitary back-yards and sweat-shops, all of which she demonstrates can be greatly improved when women get the right to vote. As the audiences pass out she distributes suffrage literature printed in four languages. Between times Miss King canvasses tenement house districts, and when she has a spare evening she gives suffrage talks in halls and churches.—Exchange.

THE GAME OF FLOWERS FOR EASTER PARTIES.

For this game each guest is provided with a card shaped like a flower. On its face is a list of questions that are numbered, and on the back numbers to correspond, to which answers are to be added.

What is known as the modest flower? Violet.

What flower tells the time of day? Four o'clock.

What flower symbolizes thought? Pansy.

What flower symbolizes constancy? The forget-me-not.

What flower reminds you of a fortune hunter? Marigold.

What flowers show the secrets maidens long to know? Daisy.

What reminds you of Scotland? Thistle.

What reminds you of a minister? Jack-in-the-pulpit.

What signifies a buxom country lass? Bouncing Betsy.

What flower is patronized by lovers? Tulips.

What flower describes their feelings when separated? Bleeding heart.

What flower is known as the queen of flowers? The rose.

What signifies some nice young man? Sweet William.

What flower is the emblem of France? Fleur-de-lis.

A clever hostess can add many to this by looking over a dictionary.

Another jolly game with which some of our young readers may be familiar, but which will be new to the majority, is called "Catching the Snake's Tail," and comes to us from Japan, where it is a great favorite. The children form in line, each with hands resting upon the shoulders of the player in front. The one who is to act as "catcher" is left out. The first child in the line is called the "head" and the last one the "tail." The "catcher" is placed about fifteen feet from the "head," and, at a signal, he tries to catch the "tail," or the last child in the "snake" without touching any one else. The others may defend the "tail" by moving about, keeping the line unbroken, for if the line should be broken it is equal to the "tail" being caught, and that unlucky persons must become the catcher, while the last named goes to the head of the line.—From the People's Home Journal.

OUR FRIEND, THE SUN.

One day I sat at my window, and all of a sudden I felt a warm kiss on my cheek. Raising my eyes I saw the bright Sun looking down into my face as if he had something to say. With a smile I said: "Well, can I do anything for you?" With a merry twinkle in his eye and another warm kiss on my cheeks, he said: "Yes; please listen. I want to send a message to the girls and boys." And this is the message he gave me:

"Dear Children—I am your warm friend, the Sun. I am in the universe to make it better, and happier, and to spread sunshine. You may wonder how old I am. I have lived so many years I can not remember when my first birthday was. I have such a sunny heart that my face is always shining, as yours will be, my precious children, if you will only have kind thoughts and do good deeds; and you may laugh, too, in the merriest way if you are kind and good. I give people some very broad smiles sometimes, and then I go on my way happier.

"I have been very busy today, and happy, too; but you know that busy people are always happy. I can always find plenty to do; but I am never too busy to visit my little friends. They sometimes say, 'What a long way you have come, and you never seem weary in well doing! If the rain clouds hide your face you never fret, but you wait patiently till they pass by, when you seem to shine brighter than ever.'

"You see, I can not help anybody unless I am happy. I can not be happy unless I have a shining face. I can not have a shining face unless I have a kind heart. A shining face and a kind heart do a great deal of good in the world. Many times doctors say smiles and sunshine cure their patients. Now, by this time, you know of some of the work I have been doing.

"The spring has come, and that has meant still more work for me; for I have had to wake up the flowers that are asleep under the sod, and the trees, bushes and grass must have a good shaking to get them fairly awake, for they are much like sleepy children. Sometimes I will work hard to rouse them, and then a chill at night, a few cold drops of rain or a handful of snow will make them hide their heads.

"I can never sleep, for I must all the time be doing good. Now, when you see me in the early morning with my head coming up the Eastern sky, you must not think I have crept out of bed, nor again when my head is disappearing down the Western sky, you must not think I am tucking the clothes around me for a long sleep; for I never close my eyes. I am always doing good somewhere."—From the Little Socialist Magazine.

THE SCRUBWOMAN.

Only a scrubwoman! How often we hear people say that who think themselves much more than a scrubwoman.

And yet, is the scrubwoman not one of the most useful and beneficial persons in the yorld? If you go into the houses of the rich or into the business houses and offices you will hear the scrubwoman mentioned quite often.

The rich lady who does not wet her fingers except to wash them is very indignant if she finds her parlors dirty and her windows foggy. "Where is the scrubwoman?" will be her first words.

The business men comes to his office from his pretty and comfortable home on Monday morning. Woe to every one around the place if he finds that the floor has not been thoroughly cleaned or that his desk has not been dusted. "Confound that lazy scrubwoman, hasn't she been here today?"

The poor, poor scrubwoman! We would all soon be sick, and many of us would die, if it were not for the scrubwoman, who, with soap and hot water, destroys and scrubs away all the germs of disease which settle everywhere.

Yes, the scrubwoman can enter the parlor of the millionaire and make everything ready for the "ladies and gentlemen," who will call in the afternoon or evening to enjoy the work of the scrubwoman.

But horrors! How all these "high-toned" people would shrink away, how indignant they would all feel if the scrubwoman came in just then.

Never mind, poor hard working scrubwomen! We will all strive to make your lot a better one. Some day there shall not be ladies to look down upon you with a haughty look. We will not rest until people will honor the woman who works, and despise and shun the lazy lady.

Do you notice how "lazy" almost looks like "lady"? There is only a difference of one letter.—From the Little Socialist Magazine.

WOMEN'S DEPARTMENT.

AUSTRIAN WOMEN ASK FOR VOTE.

There is, in Austria, a law forbidding women from attending political meetings or even belonging to societies with political objects, so that the position of the "frauenrechtlerinnen," or supporter of woman's rights, is not so favorable as in many other countries.

Recently a deputation of the local Woman's Rights League called upon the leaders of the various political parties in the Austrian parliament, with the object of enlisting their sympathies and inducing them to do their best to alter the existing law with respect to women.

They pointed out, in a petition, that municipal and parliamentary votes had been accorded to women in many countries, maintaining that it was necessary for Austrian women to prepare themselves for similar responsibilities by taking a more active part in the political life than they had been enabled to do in the past.

The deputation was well received by all, and many hoped that, in view of the revision of the Austrian law of association in the near future, those leaders who expressed themselves as being in accord with the opinions expressed by the deputation would prove their sincerity by bringing about an alteration in the law.—Woman's Journal.

Local Party News.

Under this head will be published the news concerning the activities of the Ward Branches of the Socialist Party in Columbus and from Locals in Franklin county. All news and announcements should be sent in not later than Wednesday morning.

City Headquarters at 184½ South High Street.

CITY MASS CONVENTION.

The Socialists of Columbus are called to meet in Mass convention, at Woodmen Hall, 1211½ East Town street, Friday evening, April 14, at 7:30, for the purpose of electing seven delegates to the Socialist State Convention.

BY ORDER COMMITTEE.

THE EIGHTH WARD BRANCH.

At a meeting held Monday evening, April 3, the Branch voted to co-operate with Organizer Farrell and have twelve propaganda meetings in different parts of the ward, beginning April 1 and ending July 31. The first meeting will be held at our hall, 732 West Mound street, Monday evening, April 10. Comrade H. W. Margraf was elected literature agent.

O. G. VAN SCHOYCK,
Secretary.

TENTH WARD BRANCH.

The Tenth Ward Branch had a large meeting last Sunday afternoon; in fact, the comrades are awakening to the fact that Socialism in Columbus is coming, and they all want to do their part to help bring it about. Several visiting comrades from other branches were present, and after the regular order of business of the Branch was disposed of addresses were called for. The first to respond was Comrade Dr. Kinsell, of the Eleventh Ward Branch, who was a success from 'start to finish." Comrade Freeman, of the same Branch, explained a "corker;" when made known to all the Branches, they will say the same. Next came Comrade Radebaugh (wearing the "smile that never comes off"), pleasing the comrades to the fullest extent.

Comrade Dean, one of the Tenth Ward selected "soap-box" orators, gave a pleasing talk on Socialism. Other comrades also gave short talks. The Tenth Ward Branch has one comrade who is unfortunate to have but one leg, another who has no legs, except artificial ones, and yet, rain or shine, they climb two pairs of stairs to attend our meetings. We also have two blind comrades that attend regular. These comrades are referred to to give other comrades (that have two good legs, and eyes to see) an inspiration to attend their Ward Branch meetings.

TWELFTH WARD BRANCH.

Comrades Peter Kinnear and E. B Lewis will address the Twelfth Ward Branch, 174 East Fifth avenue, next Thursday evening. Everybody invited.

WOMAN'S SOCIALIST CLUB.

A meeting of the Woman's Club Committee of the Socialist party will be held Monday evening, April 10, at 7.30 p. m., at 184½ South High street. All lady members and sympathisers of the Socialist party are cordially invited to be present.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE VOTE.

The vote for three members of the National Committee of the Socialist party from Ohio has been tabulated by State Secretary Storck, and out of 42 candidates those receiving over 100 votes are as follows: Clifford, Cleveland, 649; Ries, Toledo, 458; Cook, Canton, 393; Bachman, Columbus, 278; Millard, Cincinnati, 272; Willert, Cleveland, 200; Ruthenberg, Cleveland, 178; Besseme, Cleveland, 172; Adel, Columbus, 146; Burke, Cincinnati, 130; Patterson, Toledo, 112; Cowen, Cleveland, 107; Shinn, Lancaster, 105; Spear, Findlay, 101.

Under the constitutional rule there is no choice, and the six highest will be resubmitted. They are Clifford, Ries, Cook, Bachman, Millard, Willert.

SOCIALIST BAND.

A Socialist band will be a great help to the movement, but two things are absolutely necessary, viz., instruments and musicians. All who will assist in organizing a "Red Card" Socialist band in Columbus (either financially or with their services) will please correspond with A. C. Eby, 174 East Fifth Avenue. It makes no difference whether you have had any experience in band or orchestra work if enough want to learn and mean business. I will start a band of beginners as well as one more advanced. It all depends on how many mean business. Those who do not care to play can assist in getting a set of instruments, to be owned by Local Columbus. Solicit funds from your sympathizing friends and see how quickly we can get down to business: In writing, please state amount of experience, if any, whether you have an instrument of your own and what kind; if not, whether you prefer to buy your own instrument. Now get busy and do your part.

COMRADES AND FRIENDS.

You will benefit by buying your Clothing, Shoes, Hats and Furnishings at the Liberty, 198-200 East Main street, between Fourth and Fifth streets, out of the High Rent District.

BUSINESS MEN'S HYPOCRISY.

Woman's Nine Hour Bill Amended So As to Include Retail Stores.

(S. B. No. 11.)

(From the Times-Democrat, Lima, O., March 23.)

In the Cincinnati Enquirer of the 20th inst. is an account of a protest made by a Business Men's Club of Cincinnati against the bill to limit the working day of women in factories to eight hours. A similar bill was killed in the previous legislature by the profit-making interests concerned. Here are some trustworthy statements made by the president of the club. He says: :

"The passage of this bill would work a serious hardship on the shoe manufacturers for the reason that the scarcest of all classes of labor in the State of Ohio is female labor. Never within our memory has the supply of this class of labor been equal to the demand." He may be sure that it never will until the unexpected happens.

Everywhere a superabundance of men in the labor market, everywhere a dearth of women! There are 8,000,000 women now working for wages, one out of every four, and still they cry more.

Why don't the Manufacturers' Association get into touch with the China Inland Mission, in whose field girl babies are killed, get these babies reared in China where it can be done cheapest, to the suitable or legal age, and then import and work them? That would give them relief gradually from the scarcity of female labor, the wage difference in favor or rather disfavor of women over men would quickly cover the cost and then there would be a constant stream of extraordinary profit coming in. This would be one way of mixing a little religion with their business and perhaps at the final judgment it would be as good a thing to fall back on as a Homestead free library.

And why not re-enact the law of Pharaoh and have the midwives and doctors slay boy babies at birth, or imitate Herod in having male children of two years old and under slain? That would check the inconvenient disproportion between men and women in the labor market and head off the growth of the discontented. In the past they have succeeded so well in getting laws made or killed in their own interest; why should they not adopt some program like this, it seems so simple and so sure?

The women work at piece-work prices, and "these are regulated by competition all over the United States," etc. Well, if the output per woman is cut down 20 per cent., will that not make the employers compete for labor instead of vice versa? And will that not raise price wages as well as any other kind? And will not raised wages draw more women to the shops? Would not Ohio, according to the sure enough laws of political economy draw women from the adjacent states which leave their women unprotected against the greed of the industrial captains? Have not the manufacturers protection against competition for their wages? Shall women and children alone be treated Cinderella fashion and subjected to the cruelest competition in making their livelihood? Shall the strong and the mighty only shield themselves behind the walls of the Aldrich Tariff and the weak and helpless be left to themselves?

The president of the Business Men's Club omits to call attention to the reason for the extraordinary demand for female labor.

He knows the reason well enough, but prudence dictates that it should be kept in the dark. It is a good deal more profitable than men's work. Here are Ohio concerns making a dollar a day on the side, as it were, on every woman employe, by paying so much less for the same work than they must pay men. This is known to be a fact by thousands who read this. Hence the demand for female labor. There is a reason for everything, and the reason for this thing is no mystery. Let the manufacturers pay to women, I will not say all they earn—that would be Socialism, and we are not ripe for that yet—but all they earn on the basis of a man's pay for a man's work, and then the woman will be just as well off as now, if they work but six or eight hours. The simple, naked undisguisable truth is that they are being robbed. It is a form of graft against which society has not yet set its face nor decreed the penalty.

And then, he says, the women themselves are against the bill. They just want to work 10 hours a day at least, with the speed of piece work, and overtime when business is good. He has petitions signed by hundreds of these crazy women. They rush to long hours as geese rush to water. I'll warrant that he can get 95 per cent. of the stockholders to go on the same petition. But we learned here at home, a few weeks ago, how such petitions are got up, and they don't weigh heavy.

A Columbus paper states that a Lima lawyer was down there lobbying against this bill. He had been hired and sent, presumably, on this particular mission, or maybe he was there just for his health. His name is not given. It would take a Billy Sunday to do justice, first to the senders and retainers, second to the lawyer, and third to the legislators who did not kick him downstairs.

Can me sow without reaping?

And the churches of Jesus are silent anent these hypocrisies and iniquities. Possibly all three in the above classification are members or even pillars, and the press does not raise its mighty voice!

Only that little band of "undesirable citizens," whose blood red banner of a common humanity and justice is spit and trampled on constantly uplifts its voice in protest and testimony.

THE CAT DISCOVERED

THE SECRET REASON WHY A SPECIAL ELECTION WAS CALLED.

When the petitions for a special election on the Park Commission project was filed with the Election Board, with a request that the day be set at the earliest possible time, the writer sought to learn why a special election was wanted. He was curious because he knew that a special election would cost about $8,000, the price of a park. He inquired of some of the big business men who were behind the project. They told him that, as a majority of the votes voting at the election was needed, they thought they could get that majority easier at a special election than at the general election, because at the general election many men would vote the city ticket and have no interest in and cast no vote on the park commission question; while, on the other hand, at a special election only those interested for and against would vote.

This looked reasonable. I believed it until I looked at the law and learned that the statement was false, for the law plainly says that, whether the question is submitted at a special or a general election, it shall be decided by a majority voting on the question.

Why, then, put the city to this great expense to have this question decided in April, rather than in November? I was sorely puzzled.

Then, one day one of my friends told me that they wanted the question decided and wanted the commission appointed early, and before the city council had reached the limit of city indebtedness. This did not enlighten me much. I, of course, knew that the city's limit of indebtedness was not yet reached; but that, during the spring, council would no doubt provide for bond issues up to the legal limit so as to extend the public utilities of the city. But what had that to do with the Park Commission? Surely council would use its power to provide the necessary extensions of sewers, water, fire protection and other essential utilities, and there would hardly be enough money then to provide necessaries, and there would certainly not be enough to provide for park extensions at the present time, and that, in any event, the Park Commission would have to wait for the new tax duplicate to take effect. Why not, then, save this $8,000?

Now, I have learned the truth.

There is a real fear that council may submit to the people the question of whether bonds shall be issued to extend the municipal electric lighting plant. This fear has been in the breasts of big business for months. They could think of no indirect way to stop it. But one day it was suggested: If a Park Commission was created, with our friends as commissioners, then we could try and get bonds issued in such an amount that there would be no margin left for other bonds. We would give the people parks, but be able to hold our lighting monopoly.

The idea was adopted. The park enthusiasts were taken to the bosom of big business. The money was provided for a campaign, which is proving expensive but effective. The latter is what counts, for when the monopoly of a public service corporation is threatened private purses are freely opened.

This is why the city is about to spend $8,000 on a special election.

VOTE AGAINST THE PARK COMMISSION.

Cast Your Ballot Early Next Tuesday.

Some Last Words Against the Park Commission.

The Socialist is the first and only paper in Columbus to protest against the Park Commission plan, as promoted by the Chamber of Commerce. Our position has been endorsed by the Socialist party, organized labor, and the united voice of the common people of the city.

All these elements, which are really one in sentiment, are naturally suspicious of any scheme urged by the exploiters of the producing class.

COMMON PEOPLE NOT ELIGIBLE.

The commission would be an appointive body, its members drawing no salary, but obliged to give bond of $5,000 each. No laboring man, no man of moderate means could serve on this commission, no difference how well qualified to serve. The people of Columbus are not paupers. They are able to pay and pay well for service rendered. They are not beggars, dependant upon the paternal philanthropy (?) of the lords of wealth. They have learned by bitter experience that when something is offered [illegible] tion some plan to fleece the recipients of the supposed benefaction.

OLD ADAGE ILLUSTRATED.

There is an old adage, "Beware of the Greeks bearing gifts." Thousands of years ago a great wooden horse, left outside the besieged city of ancient Troy, was dragged inside the gates by the citizens. From this gigantic horse, at night, an armed band of Grecians came forth, and Troy fell. In these days a favorite plan of tricksters is to put forward reputable men, with some proposition that is, of course, for the supposed good of all the people. At the proper time the political gangsters, who have been in hiding, step out, take charge, and then it is too late.

THE CASE BRIEFLY STATED.

The Socialist wishes to emphasize all it has said in previous issues about the Park Commission proposition. The thing is bad. It is wrong in theory and will be dangerous when put into practice.

1. Nobody knows who will be members of the commission. The voters will have nothing to say about who will be named.
2. No neglected section of the city has any assurance of being provided with parks.
3. When appointed, the commission can go ahead with some "pipe dream" program of parks and boulevards which will be of no use to the common people.
4. The people propose to run this city hereafter, and do not intend to be hampered by any irresponsible body of exploiters, backed by the Chamber of Commerce bunch.

VOTE NEXT TUESDAY AGAINST THE PARK COMMISSION. VOTE AGAINST THE COMMISSION EARLY IN THE DAY.

WHY SUCH HASTE.

Why such haste of the Chamber of Commerce and the Republican party to spend $10,000 (of the people's money) right now to secure the consent of the people to the Park Commission plan?

The Republican party is in power. The mayor—the Republican mayor—will have the appointing of the Park Commissioners.

Both Republican and Democratic parties favor the appointive Park Commission plan—they differ only on which party shall appoint the commissioners.

The Socialist party says the commissioners shall be elected.

The Chamber of Commerce favors the appointive plan.

How much interest has the Chamber of Commerce in the working class?

You remember the experience of the workers of Columbus during the car strike and the position taken by the Chamber of Commerce.

Why, then is the Chamber of Commerce so suddenly interested in the common people of Columbus? Is it merely to get parks for them and beautify the city, or is it to make profit out of the land transfers necessary to secure parks?

If neither of these, then what is behind this mysterious activity?

Does the large increase in the vote for Socialism inspire the Chamber of Commerce and the two old parties to suggest parks?

Will the Chamber of Commerce give the people more parks as a substitute for the true remedy assured by Socialism?

What have they always done in these matters?

Yards of talk and red tape, then the usual throw up of kid glove hands! Impossible!

What would be the course of an administration in the interests of the people?

Would it pass the law first or secure the options to the lands bordering on the rivers and congested districts that are now intended for parks?

The Chamber of Commerce, the Democratic and Republican parties would first pass the paw and then secure the options, thus giving capital—the profit system, men who already have options on the land—the benefit of the increase in value afforded by the law.

A Socialistic administration—true democracy—would quietly secure the options first, as it has done in Milwaukee, then pass the law in the interest of the people, making the commission elective, and not appointive, build good homes around the parks and rent to the working class at the cost of maintenance.

That is what Socialism would do in the present instance.

Later on, when Socialism gets control of the government, it will produce for use and not for profit.

The "coupon clippers" are putting up money to promote the Park Commision proposition. For evidence, see the seventh page of this paper. When that bunch spends a dollar they expect to get ten dollars in return.

WHAT THE SOCIALISTS WANT.

We want a chance to be suitably employed and to receive, each one, his entire social share of the product. Every one's share will be determined by the value of his services to society. But to be thus employed and to distribute the product among the workers it will be necessary to secure an [illegible] and raw materials in common ownership.

What we want is the industrial machine. In order to secure a title to this machine, we must have the law-making power. To secure the law-making power we must have a political party. The only way to possess a political party is to patiently build up one of our own.

We will obtain the government eventually, because the workers are the bulk of the voters and will, in the long run, follow their own interests. When we have secured the government, we will change its function entirely. Now it so regulates the people that capital (the machine) is protected. Our government (Socialism) will so regulate the machine that the people will be protected.

Socialist government will be much more simple and direct than capitalist government. Each industrial department will be self-governing. Society at large will hold each department responsible only for results. Industrial government will be administered by those who are engaged in industry.

We secure government, by political action, not for its own sake, but for the sake of the industrial power that government will give us. We want the political machine so that we may obtain the industrial machine.

Frederick Guy Strickland.

THE USE AND ABUSE OF THE WORKING CLASS.

EMPTY DINNER BUCKETS,
VS.
PARKS AND BOULEVARDS.

In the early Colonial days a character in history appeared, who stands today as a shining sample of reason to the present-day citizenship, because he had the confidence of the men and women whose valiant defender he was. His name was Red Jacket, and he was called the "Orator and Defender of the Senecas Indians." A missionary once left one of the neighboring towns to visit this tribe of Indians. He was met by Red Jacket, and led to the place where the assembled tribe had met to hear what the white man had to say to the red man. The missionary spoke of God as the Father of all men, who created the world for all men, and implored the red man to adopt the religion of the white man and follow in his footsteps. Then arose Red Jacket, and, in a clear, masterful manner, explained to the missionary why the red man was suspicious of the white man; and history records part of the oration with these words: "Yes, my brother, you come to tell us of the Great Spirit, who loves all men; but from past experience with your race the Indian has learned to weigh your words by your actions, for, while you may think a great deal concerning the welfare of our souls, we have learned to realize that you think more of our land, and in your desire for the possession of the same you have not pursued the virtuous course which you now advise us to do in worshipping the Great Spirit. We mean the mission of brotherly love."

This story illustrates the sentiments of the dinner bucket brigade. The working class of Columbus have all the respect and admiration for some of the men who represent the Board of Commerce on the Park Commission. We know in our hearts, from past experiences, that these men have some regard for the working class, but the men behind them we have a right to be suspicious of. We believe that their motives are not pure, that their main object is to increase their ill-gotten gains at the expense of the few. When the earnings of the newsboys on the street are decreased to keep them in palatial mansions and worldly luxuries; when working women are compelled to work in their unsanitary and unsafe workshops, at starvation wages, that result in immorality and industrial despondency, have we not a right to be suspicious? You may try to perfume these civic drains with parks and boulevards, but you can not plant flowers enough or erect buildings tall enough to keep down the civic stench which arises from yon industrial despotism.

Until such time as you, the favored few, endeavor to do something that will at least give living conditions you must expect us to vote and work against such plans as the fashionable clubs may get behind for financial investment or for popular fads. The working class should vote against the Park Commission because some ulterior motive is behind this civic bubble.

MR. MAN, WITH THE DINNER BUCKET, VOTE AGAINST THE PARK COMMISSION.

JIM HENDERSON.

THERE'S A DIFFERENCE.

Under Mayor Marshall's orders to close all clubs on Sunday, Detective Shellenberger closed a poolroom at 1374 South Parsons avenue when he found that the clubrooms in connection were connected with a saloon by a dumb-waiter. A week ago last Sunday, when a zealous policeman notified the aristocratic Columbus Club that it must obey the law there was a howl and the administration made all sorts of apologies. There seems to be a difference between the enforcement of law on East Broad street and Parsons avenue. The "coupon clippers" must not be molested, even by Saint George and his minions. [illegible] was ever thus!

The Socialist is informed that public school buildings are being used for meetings in the interest of the Park Commission. When workingmen, last week, asked for the use of ward schoolhouses for public assemblies, they were jeered at by board of education members. VOTE AGAINST THE PARK COMMISSION.

CITY MASS CONVENTION.

The Socialists of Columbus are called to meet in Mass convention, at Woodmen Hall, 121½ East Town street, Friday evening, April 14, at 7:30, for the purpose of electing seven delegates to the Socialist State Convention

BY ORDER COMMITTEE.

THE EIGHTH WARD BRANCH.

At a meeting held Monday evening, April 3, the Branch voted to co-operate with Organizer Farrell and have twelve propaganda meetings in different parts of the ward, beginning April 1 and ending July 31. TENTH WARD BRANCH.

The Tenth Ward Branch had a large meeting last Sunday afternoon; in fact, the comrades are awakening to the fact that Socialism in Columbus is coming, and they all want to do their part to help bring it about. Several visiting comrades from other branches were present, and after the regular order of business of the Branch was disposed of addresses were called for. The first to respond was Comrade Dr. Kinsell, of the Eleventh Ward Branch, who was a success from 'start to finish." Comrade Freeman, of the same Branch, explained a "corker;" when made known to all the Branches, they will say the same. Next came Comrade Radebaugh (wearing the "smile that never comes off"), pleasing the comrades to the fullest extent.

Comrade Dean, one of the Tenth Ward selected "soap-box" orators, gave a pleasing talk on Socialism. Other comrades also gave short talks. The Tenth Ward Branch has one comrade who is unfortunate to have but one leg, another who has no legs, except artificial ones, and yet, rain or shine, they climb two pairs of stairs to attend our meetings. We also have two blind comrades that attend regular. These comrades are referred to to give other comrades (that have two good legs, and eyes to see) an inspiration to attend their Ward Branch meetings.

TWELFTH WARD BRANCH.

Comrades Peter Kinnear and E. B Lewis will address the Twelfth Ward Branch, 174 East Fifth avenue, next Thursday evening. Everybody invited.

It makes no difference whether you have had any experience in band or orchestra work if enough want to learn and mean business. I will start a band of beginners as well as one more advanced. It all depends on how many mean business. Those who do not care to play can assist in getting a set of instruments, to be owned by Local Columbus. Solicit funds from your sympathizing friends and see how quickly we can get down to business: In writing, please state amount of experience, if any, whether you have an instrument of your own and what kind; if not, whether you prefer to buy your own instrument. BUSINESS MEN'S HYPOCRISY.

Woman's Nine Hour Bill Amended So As to Include Retail Stores.

(From the Times-Democrat, Lima, O., March 22.)

In the Cincinnati Enquirer of the 20th inst. is an account of a protest made by a Business Men's Club of Cincinnati against the bill to limit the working day of women in factories to eight hours. A similar bill was killed in the previous legislature by the profit-making interests concerned. Here are some trustworthy statements made by the president of the club. He says: :

"The passage of this bill would work a serious hardship on the shoe manufacturers for the reason that the scarcest of all classes of labor in the State of Ohio is female labor. Never within our memory has the supply of this class of labor been equal to the demand." He may be sure that it never will until the unexpected happens.

Everywhere a superabundance of men in the labor market, everywhere a dearth of women! There are 6,000,000 women now working for wages, one out of every four, and still they cry more.

Why don't the Manufacturers' Association get into touch with the China Inland Mission, in whose field girl babies are killed, get these babies reared in China where it can be done cheapest, to the suitable or legal age, and then import and work them? That would give them relief gradually from the scarcity of female labor, the wage difference in favor or rather disfavor of women over men would quickly cover the cost and then there would be a constant stream of extraordinary profit coming in. This would be one way of mixing a little religion with their business and perhaps at the final judgment it would be as good a thing to fall back on as a Homestead free library.

And why not re-enact the law of Pharaoh and have the midwives and doctors slay boy babies at birth, or imitate Herod in having male children of two years old and under slain? That would check the inconvenient disproportion between men and women in the labor market and head off the growth of the discontented. In the past they have succeeded so well in getting laws made or killed in their own interest; why should they not adopt some program like this, it seems so simple and so sure?

The women work at piece-work prices, and "these are regulated by competition all over the United States," etc. Well, if the output per woman is cut down 20 per cent., will that not make the employers compete for labor instead of vice versa? And will that not raise price wages as well as any other kind? And will not raised wages draw more women to the shops? Would not Ohio, according to the sure enough laws of political economy draw women from the adjacent states which leave their women unprotected against the greed of the industrial captains? Have not the manufacturers protection against competition for their wages? Shall women and children alone be treated Cinderella fashion and subjected to the cruelest competition in making their livelihood? Shall the strong and the mighty only shield themselves behind the walls of the Aldrich Tariff and the weak and helpless be left to themselves?

The president of the Business Men's Club omits to call attention to the reason for the extraordinary demand for female labor.

He knows the reason well enough, but prudence dictates that it should be kept in the dark. It is a good deal more profitable than men's work. Here are Ohio concerns making a dollar a day on the side, as it were, on every woman employe, by paying so much less for the same work than they must pay men. This is known to be a fact by thousands who read this. Hence the demand for female labor. There is a reason for everything, and the reason for this thing is no mystery. Let the manufacturers pay to women, I will not say all they earn—that would be Socialism, and we are not ripe for that yet—but all they earn on the basis of a man's pay for a man's work, and then the women will be just as well off as now, if they work but six or eight hours. The simple, naked undisguisable truth is that they are being robbed. It is a form of graft against which society has not yet set its face nor decreed the penalty.

And then, he says, the women themselves are against the bill. They just want to work 10 hours a day at least, with the speed of piece work, and overtime when business is good. He has petitions signed by hundreds of these crazy women. They rush to long hours as geese rush to water. I'll warrant that he can get 95 per cent. of the stockholders to go on the same petition. But we learned here at home, a few weeks ago, how such petitions are got up, and they don't weigh heavy.

A Columbus paper states that a Lima lawyer was down there lobbying against this bill. He had been hired and sent, presumably, on this particular mission, or maybe he was there just for his health. His name is not given. It would take a Billy Sunday to do justice, first to the senders and retainers, second to the lawyer, and third to the legislators who did not kick him downstairs.

Can me sow without reaping?

And the churches of Jesus are silent anent these hypocrisies and iniquities. Possibly all three in the above classification are members or even pillars, and the press does not raise its mighty voice!

Only that little band of "undesirable citizens," whose blood red banner of a common humanity and justice is spit and trampled on constantly uplifts its voice in protest and testimony.

(REV.) A. G. GEKELER.

THE SECRET REASON WHY A SPECIAL ELECTION WAS CALLED.

When the petitions for a special election on the Park Commission project was filed with the Election Board, with a request that the day be set at the earliest possible time, the writer sought to learn why a special election was wanted. He was curious because he knew that a special election would cost about $8,000, the price of a park. He inquired of some of the big business men who were behind the project. They told him that, as a majority of the votes voting at the election was needed, they thought they could get that majority easier at a special election than at the general election, because at the general election many men would vote the city ticket and have no interest in and cast no vote on the park commission question; while, on the other hand, at a special election only those interested for and against would vote.

This looked reasonable. I believed it until I looked at the law and learned that the statement was false, for the law plainly says that, whether the question is submitted at a special or a general election, it shall be decided by a majority voting on the question.

Why, then, put the city to this great expense to have this question decided in April, rather than in November? I was sorely puzzled.

VOTE AGAINST THE PARK COMMISSION.

Cast Your Ballot Early Next Tuesday.

Some Last Words Against the Park Commission.

The Socialist is the first and only paper in Columbus to protest against the Park Commission plan, as promoted by the Chamber of Commerce. Our position has been endorsed by the Socialist party, organized labor, and the united voice of the common people of the city.

All these elements, which are really one in sentiment, are naturally suspicious of any scheme urged by the exploiters of the producing class.

COMMON PEOPLE NOT ELIGIBLE.

The commission would be an appointive body, its members drawing no salary, but obliged to give bond of $5,000 each. No laboring man, no man of moderate means could serve on this commission, no difference how well qualified to serve. The people of Columbus are not paupers. They are able to pay and pay well for service rendered. They are not beggars, dependent upon the paternal philanthropy (?) of the lords of wealth. They have learned by bitter experience that when something is offered [illegible] tion some plan to fleece the recipients of the supposed benefaction.

OLD ADAGE ILLUSTRATED.

There is an old adage, "Beware of the Greeks bearing gifts." Thousands of years ago a great wooden horse, left outside the besieged city of ancient Troy, was dragged inside the gates by the citizens. From this gigantic horse, at night, an armed band of Grecians came forth, and Troy fell. In these days a favorite plan of tricksters is to put forward reputable men, with some proposition that is, of course, for the supposed good of all the people. At the proper time the political gangsters, who have been in hiding, step out, take charge, and then it is too late.

THE CASE BRIEFLY STATED.

The Socialist wishes to emphasize all it has said in previous issues about the Park Commission proposition. The thing is bad. It is wrong in theory and will be dangerous when put into practice.

1. Nobody knows who will be members of the commission. The voters will have nothing to say about who will be named.
2. No neglected section of the city has any assurance of being provided with parks.
3. When appointed, the commission can go ahead with some "pipe dream" program of parks and boulevards which will be of no use to the common people.
4. The people propose to run this city hereafter, and do not intend to be hampered by any irresponsible body of exploiters, backed by the Chamber of Commerce bunch.

VOTE NEXT TUESDAY AGAINST THE PARK COMMISSION. VOTE AGAINST THE COMMISSION EARLY IN THE DAY.

WHY SUCH HASTE.

Why such haste of the Chamber of Commerce and the Republican party to spend $10,000 (of the people's money) right now to secure the consent of the people to the Park Commission plan?

The Republican party is in power. The mayor—the Republican mayor—will have the appointing of the Park Commissioners.

Both Republican and Democratic parties favor the appointive Park Commission plan—they differ only on which party shall appoint the commissioners.

The Socialist party says the commissioners shall be elected.

The Chamber of Commerce favors the appointive plan.

How much interest has the Chamber of Commerce in the working class?

You remember the experience of the workers of Columbus during the car strike and the position taken by the Chamber of Commerce.

Why, then is the Chamber of Commerce so suddenly interested in the common people of Columbus? Is it merely to get parks for them and beautify the city, or is it to make profit out of the land transfers necessary to secure parks?

If neither of these, then what is behind this mysterious activity?

Does the large increase in the vote for Socialism inspire the Chamber of Commerce and the two old parties to suggest parks?

Will the Chamber of Commerce give the people more parks as a substitute for the true remedy assured by Socialism?

What have they always done in these matters?

Yards of talk and red tape, then the usual throw up of kid glove hands! Impossible!

What would be the course of an administration in the interests of the people?

Would it pass the law first or secure the options to the lands bordering on the rivers and congested districts that are now intended for parks?

The Chamber of Commerce, the Democratic and Republican parties would first pass the paw and then secure the options, thus giving capital—the profit system, men who already have options on the land—the benefit of the increase in value afforded by the law.

A Socialistic administration—true democracy—would quietly secure the options first, as it has done in Milwaukee, then pass the law in the interest of the people, making the commission elective, and not appointive, build good homes around the parks and rent to the working class at the cost of maintenance.

That is what Socialism would do in the present instance.

Later on, when Socialism gets control of the government, it will produce for use and not for profit.

The "coupon clippers" are putting up money to promote the Park Commision proposition. For evidence, see the seventh page of this paper. When that bunch spends a dollar they expect to get ten dollars in return.

WHAT THE SOCIALISTS WANT.

We want a chance to be suitably employed and to receive, each one, his entire social share of the product. Every one's share will be determined by the value of his services to society. But to be thus employed and to distribute the product among the workers it will be necessary to own in common the machinery and raw materials on which we in common depend.

What we want is the industrial machine. In order to secure a title to this machine, we must have the law-making power. To secure the law-making power we must have a political party. The only way to possess a political party is to patiently build up one of our own.

We will obtain the government eventually, because the workers are the bulk of the voters and will, in the long run, follow their own interests. When we have secured the government, we will change its function entirely. Now it so regulates the people that capital (the machine) is protected. Our government (Socialism) will so regulate the machine that the people will be protected.

Socialist government will be much more simple and direct than capitalist government. Each industrial department will be self-governing. Society at large will hold each department responsible only for results. Industrial government will be administered by those who are engaged in industry.

We secure government, by political action, not for its own sake, but for the sake of the industrial power that government will give us. We want the political machine so that we may obtain the industrial machine.

Frederick Guy Strickland.

THE USE AND ABUSE OF THE WORKING CLASS.

EMPTY DINNER BUCKETS,
VS.
PARKS AND BOULEVARDS.

In the early Colonial days a character in history appeared, who stands today as a shining sample of reason to the present-day citizenship, because he had the confidence of the men and women whose valiant defender he was. His name was Red Jacket, and he was called the "Orator and Defender of the Senecas Indians." A missionary once left one of the neighboring towns to visit this tribe of Indians. He was met by Red Jacket, and led to the place where the assembled tribe had met to hear what the white man had to say to the red man. The missionary spoke of God as the Father of all men, who created the world for all men, and implored the red man to adopt the religion of the white man and follow in his footsteps. Then arose Red Jacket, and, in a clear, masterful manner, explained to the missionary why the red man was suspicious of the white man; and history records part of the oration with these words: "Yes, my brother, you come to tell us of the Great Spirit, who loves all men; but from past experience with your race the Indian has learned to weigh your words by your actions, for, while you may think a great deal concerning the welfare of our souls, we have learned to realize that you think more of our land, and in your desire for the possession of the same you have not pursued the virtuous course which you now advise us to do in worshipping the Great Spirit. We mean the mission of brotherly love."

This story illustrates the sentiments of the dinner bucket brigade. The working class of Columbus have all the respect and admiration for some of the men who represent the Board of Commerce on the Park Commission. We know in our hearts, from past experiences, that these men have some regard for the working class, but the men behind them we have a right to be suspicious of. We believe that their motives are not pure, that their main object is to increase their ill-gotten gains at the expense of the few. When the earnings of the newsboys on the street are decreased to keep them in palatial mansions and worldly luxuries; when working women are compelled to work in their unsanitary and unsafe workshops, at starvation wages, that result in immorality and industrial despondency, have we not a right to be suspicious? You may try to perfume these civic drains with parks and boulevards, but you can not plant flowers enough or erect buildings tall enough to keep down the civic stench which arises from yon industrial despotism.

Until such time as you, the favored few, endeavor to do something that will at least give living conditions you must expect us to vote and work against such plans as the fashionable clubs may get behind for financial investment or for popular fads. The working class should vote against the Park Commission because some ulterior motive is behind this civic bubble.

MR. MAN, WITH THE DINNER BUCKET, VOTE AGAINST THE PARK COMMISSION.

JIM HENDERSON.

THERE'S A DIFFERENCE.

Under Mayor Marshall's orders to close all clubs on Sunday, Detective Shellenberger closed a poolroom at 1374 South Parsons avenue when he found that the clubrooms in connection were connected with a saloon by a dumb-waiter. A week ago last Sunday, when a zealous policeman notified the aristocratic Columbus Club that it must obey the law there was a howl and the administration made all sorts of apologies. There seems to be a difference between the enforcement of law on East Broad street and Parsons avenue. The "coupon clippers" must not be molested, even by Saint George and his minions. 'Twas ever thus!

The Socialist is informed that public school buildings are being used for meetings in the interest of the Park Commission. When workingmen, last week, asked for the use of ward schoolhouses for public assemblies, they were jeered at by board of education members. VOTE AGAINST THE PARK COMMISSION.

WHAT SOCIALISTS HAVE DONE.

They have grown from a little band of idealists, half a century ago, into an army of 25,000,000 persons today.

They have elected nearly 500 representational voting strength nearly three hundred fold within forty years—from 30,000 in 1867 to 8,503,000 in 1907.

They have become a recognized factor in the public life of twenty-five modern nations.

They have elected nearly 500 representatives into the national legislatures of various countries and placed 12,000 more into municipal offices.

They have built up political parties that are more democratic and less corrupt than any ever organized by business men.

They have founded a powerful press and circulated millions of pamphlets and leaflets.

They have produced a scientific and philosophical literature that commands the respect of scholars everywhere.

They have won over to their side many of the foremost thinkers, writers, scientists, orators, labor leaders and dramatists of the Old World and the New.

They have exercised a deep influence on present day thought and action.

They have helped the trade unions fight their battles for higher wages, shorter hours and better conditions.

They have done much to stimulate the demand for public ownership.

They have forced conservative governments to make important concessions to the working class and keep good their promises of reform.

They have won old age pensions for the workers in England, France, Belgium, Germany and Australia.

They have compelled the German government to adopt a scheme for insuring practically the entire mass of German workers against accident, sickness, invalidity and death.

They have abolished the slums from German cities by pulling down the rookeries and building model tenements in their stead.

They have introduced the feeding of hungry children in the schools of France, Belgium, Italy and Norway.

They have secured the passage of acts in England, Belgium, France, Finland, Denmark, Italy and Holland that ensure every worker substantial compensation from the employer for injuries received while at work without his having to fight for same through the courts.

They have done much to curb the evil of child labor—to limit the hours of labor in certain industries—to secure for certain classes of workers a higher wage—to enforce clean, wholesome, sanitary conditions in all sorts of industrial establishments—to protect trade union funds from damage suits—to make life a little more worth while to those who toil.

These are things they have SUCCEEDED in accomplishing here and now.

They have not accomplished all they want to accomplish, but the fact that they have accomplished this much in spite of the bitterest opposition; in spite, too, of their being everywhere in the minority, shows that they are hard fighters as well as dreamers, that they are practical statesmen as well as clever theorists.

But these achievements are a mere earnest of what the Socialists hope to accomplish in the near future.

They are sweeping forward to greater victories. As their power grows, so will their usefulness.—Cotton's Weekly.

TOMMY WRITES AN ESSAY.

Tommy goes to school, and, Friday being visitor's day, writes a composition on the workingman.

Here it is:

Th' workin' man is a funny feller, he chews th' rag 364 days in th' year 'cause he's in hard luck, then on th' 365th day goes and votes for 364 days more of hard luck.

He kicks 'cause th' street car companies charge high fares, give poor service, and kicks out union men; wants th' people to walk thro' rain or mud, or ride on other fellers' cars who's just as bad as the fellers' cars wot he's kickin' agin; then at the end of the year he votes the car lines back into th' hands of th' same fellers—so th' people kin walk another year, or if they don't want to walk they kin buy a horse and carriage—instead of votin' th' car lines into th' hands of th' whole people so's he would be part owner himself; then he could have some say as to how they should be run.

Why I'd know bettern that myself 'thout Ma tellen me.

They kick all year about the old parties, and old party politicians; then on 'leckshun days I haf to stay off the streets or I'd get rund over by those fellers hurryin' to th' polls to vote for one of th' old parties 'cause he's got one of his own.

He gits together and marches on th' streets two or three thousand strong—proud as a sojer, for labor and independence; on 'leckshun day he marches by himself and votes for capital and slavery.

I heard two fellers' once, they stretch' up like a feller lookin' in the round glass I saw once at the sojers home, they'se lookin' 'bout bein' free American citizens; not long afterward he got skeert he'd lose his job and he looked like some one had turned the glass half way round only he wasn't so thick through.

He kicks all year 'cause th' big fellers charge him big prices for meat, coal, and everything he buys, and then with th' money gives him free libraries that he ain't got time to read, then he goes and votes for another year's worth of th' same medicine.

He kicks 'cause he has to do all the work while th' other fellers go out after mushrooms and hickory nuts with their best girls in their ottermobeels.

Th' workingman's a funny feller.

Yours truly,
TOMMY Z. LYRE.

IN THE FULLNESS OF TIME.

"How long?" The cry goes echoing around the earth. Wherever the hope of the New Order is awaking in the breasts of the toiling and the enslaved, there is but one answer: "In the fullness of time."

It is not for us to say even, "Have patience;" for patience is not ours to commend or command, and whether we have patience or no matters nothing. The new order has been ages in the making, and the forces which are making for it reck nothing of our patience or impatience. They wait for none of us; they haste for none of us of our desperate need than the wrung withers of our yokefellow, the horse, or the pitiful moan of the ox dying beneath the butcher's pole-ax, or the brief agony of the ant we crush with careless heel.

From the emergence of the race of Man, forces have been resistlessly pressing him onward toward one goal, the solution of his economic problem—how shall he enjoy a life of the fullest with the least toil? To that purpose they have moulded his ways, have prompted his thoughts, while yet all unthinking and unwitting of the problem he strove to solve.

Through ages of battle and murder, debauchery and enslavement, toil and misery, famine and pestilence, the solution of that problem has been working out, not by the wit of man, but through causes unseen and unrecognised, but ever felt. Millions have wept and sweat and starved and frozen. Unheeding them, cold, relentless, silent, those forces work on. And shall they heed our poor cry? We, who are their creatures?

Naturally, our own welfare and ills are matters of prime concern to us, and should be. But we are apt to forget that in the process of race evolution we are but one of uncounted generations, and the advantage of an individual or a generation are mere incidental items to the advantage of the race. Former generations have been instrumental in bringing us to the present pass, and we are but some of the instruments toward further evolution.

"The thoughts of peoples and their ways and wills,
These, too, the great Law binds."

And so the very desire for and knowledge of a better social order are imparted and fostered in us by our environment.

"The great law" exposes to us our enslavement, teaches us to hate it, impels us to achieve our liberty, makes of us instruments for the conveyance of that knowledge and of that spirit of revolt to our fellows, to the end that, our economic problems solved, our race may enjoy the earth and the fullness thereof.

THE MISSION OF EVIL.

"You tempt men to sin," said I to the Devil.

"No so," said the Devil to me. "Men desire the apples of Sodom, which I give to them, that, by eating, they may find that they are filled with ashes."

"You are a bad paymaster," said I to the Devil.

"I am no paymaster," said the Devil to me, "for it is written, 'they shall eat of the fruit of their own way.' I only take care that they do."

"You trouble the world," said I to the Devil.

"Nay, I am the left hand of God," said the Devil.—Bolton Hall, in The Game of Life.

EASILY EXPLAINED.

"They have to admit in the old world," said a New York theatrical man, "that we've got them beaten on every count. Talk to them about the matter and they can only quibble.

"'Oh, yes,' said an English banker to me the other day, 'you've got a great country, the greatest country in the world, there's no denying that.'

"Then he gave a nasty laugh.

"'But look at your fires,' he said. 'Your terrible fires are a disgrace to mankind.'

"'Oh, our fires,' said I, 'are due to the friction caused by our rapid growth.'"

NATIONAL HEADQUARTER'S NEWS.

The elections held during the last ten days show that the increase in vote keeps pace with the splendid increase in the membership roll. Success at the polls for a host of minor officials have been reported from all parts of the country.

Some Figures About the Cost of War.

What Modern "Patriotism" Takes From the Pocket of Each Citizen.

To the Editor of The Socialist:

The average annual expense of the national government for the seven years ending June 30, 1910, was $591,405,814.00. This did not include the expense of the postoffice department, which is paid almost wholly by sale of stamps, nor extraordinary expenses such as Panama Canal, etc. This vast sum is made up of the following average annual items, given in terms of the nearest million: Pensions, $146,000,000; War Department, $134,000,000; Navy, $113,000,000; interest on public debt, $23,000,000; Indians, $15,000;000; other civil and miscellaneous expenses, $160,000,000. Included in this last item are all the expenses of the executive, legislative and judicial departments of the national government. This last item, barring extravagance, is what might be called legitimate governmental expense.

The other items, for pensions, war, navy, interest on public debt amounting to $415,000,000 is for war past or expected.

The State of Ohio contains between a nineteenth or a twentieth of the total population of the United States. For convenience we shall call it a twentieth. Since the expenses of the last year amount to $568,300,000 more than the annual average for the last seven, which we have given as $591,000,000, we shall for convenience call the average annual contribution, then, of the State of Ohio toward the support of the United States government for the last seven years has been $30,000,000.

The average number of votes cast in Ohio at the last seven state and national elections has been about 1,000,000. Each voter, then, has been contributing an average of $30 per year for the last seven years toward the support of the various schemes carried on by the United States government. This does not include the Postoffice Department, which is about the only one out of which the citizen sees that he gets service.

If we allow 50 cents per day for the board of each voter (that is what our sheriff gets for boarding prisoners in the county jail), 25 cents per day for heat, light, shelter and clothing, our 1,000,000 voters would have to work an average of 30 days each year, at a wage of $1.75 per day, in order to raise the $30,000,000 we turn over to the United States—almost three-fourths of which goes for war, past or prospective.

Thirty days per year for each voter in the county jail or workhouse would be considered a great hardship, and at the end of a few years the brightest and most intelligent voters would probably begin to think there was something the matter and wonder whether or not there was a possible remedy.

D. R. WILLIAMS.

April 4, 1911.

The following cities have been added to those already having Socialist mayors: Flint, Mich.; Butte, Mont.; Wymore, Neb.; Beatrice, Neb.; Red Cloud, Neb.; Victor, Colo.; Greenville, Mich.; Manitowoc, Wis.; Cardwell, Mo.; Girard, Kan., and Berkeley, Cal. Also some scores of aldermen, hundreds of minor city or town officials, and thousands of election officers have been added to the list of Socialist officials.

In each political contest since the fall election, wherever the Socialists had a ticket, a most satisfactory increase in the vote has been shown.

Comrade Victor L. Berger introduced a joint resolution in the United States Congress, providing for a withdrawal of the troops from the Mexican border. Petitions to the same purpose now in circulation, when all possible signatures have been secured, should be sent with dispatch to Comrade Berger, at Washington, D. C.

By a recent referendum in Massachusetts Comrade Charles E. Fenner, 554 Main street, Worcester, was elected a member of the National Committee, and Comrade Squire E. Putney, 32 Simmons street, Beverly, was re-elected to the same position.

Due to the activities of a few comrades at Chaffee, Mo., a local was formed the day before election. The meeting was held at noon on the railroad tracks outside of the repair shops of the 'Frisco system, and seventeen persons signed the charter application.

The Italian Socialist Federation has been for some time making preparations for a lecture tour of this country by Comrade A. Lorenzini, of Italy, and advance money had been forwarded for his expense. The Italian comrades are now keenly disappointed, for word has been received that it is impossible for Comrade Lorenzini to fill the engagement. The National Secretary of the Socialist Party of Italy will endeavor to induce another capable comrade to take up the mission, and in the meanwhile the Executive Committee of the Italian Federation will arrange for short propaganda trips for local speakers in different parts of the country.

Notice has been received that the Socialist Party of France (French Section of the International Workers) will hold its eighth national congress at Saint Quentin, Aisne, beginning the 16th inst. At the same time an invitation was extended to the Socialist party of America to send a representative to the congress.

The March issue of "The Open Letter," published monthly by Comrade J. V. Hogan, Spring City, Pa., contains excellent material on the "Boy Scout" movement and several striking cartoons from Comrade Kirkpatrick's book entitled "War—What For" Altogether it is an excellent antidote for the present attempt at fostering the military spirit. Bundles can be had at the rate of 80 cents a hundred. Orders should be sent to the publication office.

GENERAL SOCIALIST NEWS.

The Minnesota Socialist, a big weekly, is about to be launched at Minneapolis. It will be a state paper.

John Mitchell will not act as editor of the United Mine Workers' Journal, Michael Hology, a member of the Socialist party of Pennsylvania, will serve in that capacity.

The Canadian Labor Party Bulletin, the new weekly started at Toronto last week, starts out with 5,000 subscribers. It promises to make things sultry for the old crowds.

Socialists and unionists of Pennsylvania have secured 200,000 signatures calling upon the legislature to abolish the Cossacks, as provided in the bill of Representative Maurer, the Socialist plumber.

Bissolati and other Socialist members of parliament refused to enter the Giolotti ministry, although invited to do so in order to neutralise the demands of the workers in that country. The new ministry, as a consequence, has formulated a democratic program in which many of the demands of the working class are incorporated. But whether the politicians make good their promises is another question.

"I," said Andrew Carnegie, in an address before the National Civic Federation, "have made forty-three millionaires in my time."

"In the Carnegie Steel Company," says John A. Fitch in the American Magazine, "March and October are known as 'record months.' Machinery and men are speeded to the limit in the hopes of establishing new records of outputs. If a crew breaks a record each man gets a cigar."

Mr. Fitch spent several years in investigating conditions in the Pittsburg district, and says that a large majority of the steel workers toil twelve hours a day. They dare not organise, dare not even talk to each other on the subject, and are probably even afraid to think about it.

Since a gaping world is informed by the great philanthropist that he has performed the wonderful feat of making forty-three millionaires, doubtless curious people would be pleased to learn how many thousands of honest working people, who must have had something to do in making millionaires, have been transformed into helpless wage slaves.

The next war will be a war for the rich—but the poor will do the fighting.

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION.

News From The World Wide Movement Of The Workers.

NEWS FROM THE NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS

For the month of March, just closed, the receipts for dues at the National Office exceed the previous high record for any one month, which was made in December, 1910, by $186.05. The comparative receipts for the first quarter of 1910 and 1911 are as follows: 1910, $7,999.46; 1911, $11,873.70; increase, $3,874.24. The average paid-up membership for the year 1910 was 58,011, which was an increase of 16,000 over the previous year. The figures for the quarter just closed show more than 78,000 members, an increase of $20,000 for the three months.

Orders for the Proclamation, "Withdraw the Troops," and for petition forms upon the same subject are reaching the National Office in great volume. The petitions should be circulated with dispatch, and mailed, at latest, April 10, addressed to Victor L. Berger, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

The National Committee, by vote closing March 10, adopted Motion No. 1, approving the report of the Investigating Committee, the vote being as follows. Yes, 39; No, 2; Not Voting, 21. The votes of Comrades Amerlinger, of Oklahoma, and Ordway, of Vermont, were received too late to be counted.

Anent the Mexican situation the salient clause of the Dick Military Law is herewith submitted:

"That the militia shall consist of every able-bodied male citizen of the respective states and territories and the District of Columbia, and every able-bodied male of foreign birth who has declared his intention of becoming a citizen, who is more than eighteen and less than forty-five years of age."

The above may shortly be put into operation, for reliable reports are to the effect that the recruiting offices of the War Department, located all over the nation, are doing much less business than hoped for and expected.

In Marshalltown, Iowa, the Socialist candidate for mayor, in a poll of more than 3,000, was defeated by only 134 votes.

In Belle Plaine, Iowa, the Socialist candidate for mayor was defeated by 5 votes. Comrade E. L. Swinney was elected alderman.

In Colfax, Iowa, Comrade Frank L. Evans was elected councilman-at-large by a majority of one, and Thos. Bind was elected a member of the school board.

The special anti-military edition of The Progressive Woman is just what you want to prove your assertions regarding the Mexican "Dollar War." Address: The Progressive Woman, Girard, Kansas.

By a recent referendum in Minnesota, Comrade J. E. Nash, 723 Nicollet avenue, Minneapolis, was re-elected State Secretary; Comrade John A. Meyer, 510 Manhattan Bldg., Duluth, was elected a member of the National Committee, and Comrade David Morgan, 1916 Minnehaha street, St. Paul, was re-elected to the same position.

By a recent referendum in Massachusetts, Comrade James F. Carey, 14 Park Square, Boston, was re-elected State Secretary-Treasurer.

OHIO SOCIALIST NEWS.

(G. A. STORCK, State Secretary.)

Can any one dispute the fact that we are growing when Chillicothe sends in 13 applications at one time?

Maynard writes that prospects are very bright for Socialism and the Socialist party will make a good showing. Let us watch this new local and convince ourselves if they really mean it.

Midland coming into the organization has added another "tack" to the office map, and many are attracted by the way the map is beginning to prove the fact that Ohio is going to be the leading State in the Union before many days roll around in point of membership.

Do you comrades take notice of Local New Boston, and the way they are "sailing" along since a few of the old timers jumped into the harness again.

Two thousand copies of the Milwaukee addition of the Appeal to Reason did not supply the needs of the Norwood comrades, so 500 more were ordered.

Salem secured the services of Comrade Ella Reeve Bloor, and there is no use to question about results, as Comrade Bloor knows how to hand out the "goods."

Comrade Claude Ferguson was at Canal Dover for a couple of hours one day, and came away with 35 names upon a charter list. Just another "tack" on the map in the office.

Youngstown does not make much noise, but we feel positively that they are doing fine in that locality. Just a word from you occasionally and regular monthly reports and then all will be well.

Comrade Barriman, of Rittman, is working hard, and not for personal glory, either. The local has taken an activity, and this is due to a great extent to his work.

If all delegates will be present there will be about 210 at the convention during the last week of April, and from all indications there is going to be close to that number present. Some of the locals are already taking an active interest in making this the greatest convention ever held by our party in this state, by getting out their quota to represent their respective locals in the banner Socialist city of the state.

Middletown is doing herself credit by the distribution of vast amounts of literature. There is nothing better than this method of propaganda. Keep it up, comrades, and you will win.

Lorain never fails to send in the "clippings" taken from the capitalistic newspapers of that city when they write favorable articles about the Chicago Socialist Lyceum Course meetings, which have done so much good to further the movement in that city.

Comrade Frank Wickham will resume charge of the secretaryship of Local McComb, as Comrade J. A. Cooper is leaving town. Comrade Cooper was its former secretary.

Local Mansfield has never looked as good as now and much credit should be given the active comrades for their efforts against odds in that conservative town.

Akron reports good meetings and that everything is going extra fine. This local confines all its troubles to itself, like a number of other enterprising locals in the state.

Comrade Ora Brackney, secretary of Bellefontaine, is sending application duplicates in by the handsfull, and is making what seemed a hopeless case one of the strongest little locals in the state.

The Finnish comrades of Ashtabula are made of the real stuff, and this is even appreciated by the Ashtabula Beacon Recorder, which paper tells of their fine new home, which cost about $3,000, but which is valued at $5,000. Comrades giving service free lessened its cost at least $2,000, so the Recorder informs us. Cleveland, Conneaut and Ashtabula assisted in its dedication Sunday, March 19.

Summit Hill is one of the steadiest locals in the state, and is always prompt with reports.

Locals Lodi, Flushing and Holloway demand recognition on the state office map, and we were compelled to add three more tacks. A reporter from one of the local capitalist sheets admitted that the office map is beginning to look very "tacky."

Sidney has some good workers and they are live ones at that. They had a very fine meeting when Comrade Bloor spoke there, so we are informed.

Comrade Bloor is very well pleased with the St. Mary's organization and thinks that there is no question but what the Socialists will carry the day there at the next election.

Comrades of Local Loudonville are so well pleased with the fact that they are members of the Socialist party that they send an appeal to the state office to have their neighbor taken in also and ask that we invite Brinkhaven to come into the fold as soon as possible.

Comrade Murray, of Toronto, can always be relied upon as being prompt and energetic in the work for the Socialist party.

Spargo's meeting at Toledo was fine, so Comrade Bates informs, and was well attended.

Because those that voted the Socialist ticket got "snubbed" in Brown county we were able to get a list of names applying for a charter, and if they pass muster the lone "tack" will appear on the map, indicating that we have a local in a county that refused to admit of any Socialist votes being cast at the last election. Our votes will be accounted for hereafter.

Wilmington is going to have Comrade A. R. Shinn lecture on May 4, and expects a good turnout to hear him.

Fremont sent in nine new applicants and it makes one feel good to see that this place is growing steadily and will be a real live local if all indications can be relied upon.

Sandusky is growing and is one of the large locals now in the state. They are arranging for good meetings and are going to have some very good speakers to espouse the cause for them.

Pleasant City comes in with a smile and believes that it is essential to have a Pleasant City intermingling with our revolutionary hosts. None of us refused to admit her.

Local Hamilton is one of the liveliest locals in the state, and it is the intention of the comrades there to complete the thorough organization of the entire county.

Local Elyria was pleased with the lecture Comrade George R. Kirkpatrick gave them on the "War Problem," and they report that what they did to this monster was worth going miles to hear.

Local Lisbon is going to have some good speakers and build up their local. Comrade Bloor lectured there the 26th.

Local Wadsworth lost some of its most active comrades lately by the formation of two locals—Medina and Lodi. But they are not to be options by such circumstances as that. They are simply making good by taking in new members to sustain the good standing of that local.

GENERAL SOCIALIST NEWS.

There is nothing like plenty of confidence and assurance. In Washington, last week, a Socialist named F. F. Adams rigged up a wagon bearing a big banner which read: "Withdraw the Troops From Mexico! All Men Are Brothers!—Down With War!—Read Up on Socialism." Then he amazed the politicians by holding a parade up and down Pennsylvania avenue and blowing a bugle. He attracted big crowds, and announced further to the multitudes: "I represent the Socialist party of the country. That means 600,000 votes. We are going to break up this war!"

There was a hot fight on over in Pennsylvania at the State Federation of Labor convention about the Civic Federation. Resolutions were introduced to condemn the C. F. and the committee reported adversely. In the debate that followed political lines were closely drawn. The friends of the C. F. denounced the resolution as a Socialist scheme and meant to discredit John Mitchell, Sam Gompers and other labor members. The "Reds" were defeated, 54 to 44. Then the convention stunned around and re-elected Charles Lavin, the old Socialist tailor of Wilkesbarre, as delegate to the A. F. of L. C. F. Quinn, of Nanticoke, another Socialist, was re-elected secretary.

The North American Turner Bund, by referendum vote, adopted resolutions congratulating the Socialists on their victory in Milwaukee last year. The resolutions were introduced at the St. Louis convention of the bund last summer and adopted. But some of the members affiliated with the old parties raised a strong kick and challenged the majority to submit the resolutions to a vote of the rank and file of the turners. The challenge was promptly accepted, and the result has just been made known at Indianapolis. The resolutions were adopted by the turners by a vote of 1,397 to 1,655.

A cable from Berlin last week stated that the Reichstag, by a large majority today, rejected the Socialist motion calling upon the government to take "immediate steps leading to an international agreement concerning universal limitation of armaments and the abolition of the right of capture at sea." In another five years hence the cable will tell different stories.

Dr. Racovsky has been fired out of Roumania again. The government was afraid that he would have too great influence in the parliamentary elections, so the well-known Socialist leader was escorted to the border by a distinguished array of soldiers and told to cease himself.

Milwaukee Socialists Undismayed.

Result of School Election Clears the Situation and Enemy Is Now Revealed.

The practical fusion of the Republicans and Democrats, at the by-election held in Milwaukee, resulted in a so-called setback to the Socialists. This setback, however, can not be called a defeat in any sense of the word.

In fact, it can not properly be called even a setback. Seidel's vote at the by-election two years ago, when he ran to fill a vacancy for alderman-at-large, was 9,555. Comrade Hinkley ran this year to fill a similar vacancy, caused by the death of Comrade Suitaire. Hinkley's vote yesterday was 12,264, a gain of nearly 4,000.

The highest vote for the school director on the Social-Democrat ticket two years ago was 6,999. Yesterday the highest vote for school director on our ticket was 12,110.

In view of the tremendous efforts of the enemy to discredit the administration by every means, fair and foul, this gain at a by-election, when only a small per cent. of the vote came out, should be considered a real victory.

It is like the result in the last election for the German Reichstag, when the German Social-Democrats lost seats but gained votes.

It will be remembered that the Social-Democrats carried Milwaukee last spring in a three-cornered fight. They did not have a majority of all the votes cast. They understood that, sooner or later, the two old parties would combine against them and that when they did so this would mean that the Social-Democratic party would have to grow from a minority to a majority party in order to hold the city.

This is exactly what the old parties did in the campaign just ended. The Democrats put up a candidate for alderman-at-large to fill the vacancy of Comrade Suitaire, deceased—the only candidate besides judges and school directors to be voted for this year. The Republicans endorsed the Democratic nominee, forming a practical fusion.

As for the school board, the Roman Catholics put up a ticket, which was distributed in the Catholic churches, and the priests in their pulpits instructed their parishioners to vote for it. On election day the Catholic priests brought women voters to the polls in carriages. In one precinct where the Socialists were not entitled to election inspectors the priest marched the faithful right into the polling booth. The policeman in the booth meanwhile conveniently absented himself, so that it would be impossible to prevent this violation of the election laws. Even the Italian women, who can not read and know less of politics than a six-year-old child, were duly marched to the polls to vote the "Non-partisan Anti-Socialist ticket," as the Catholic slate was called.

Therefore, although the Social-Democratic vote for school director was nearly double their vote of two years ago it is not surprising that the Catholic ticket won.

Another heavy handicap for the Socialists was the capitalist daily press of Milwaukee, which constantly vilified the Social-Democratic administration and printed the most barefaced lies, while the Socialists had no adequate means of getting the truth before the people. Seven capitalist papers, pouring out poison seven days in the week, can not be counteracted by one bulletin, distributed once a week from house to house.

All of which goes to show that the Socialists must have a daily Socialist paper in order to hold Milwaukee next year.

The meeting held in Freie Gemeinde Hall to receive the election returns was, without exception, the finest Socialist meeting your correspondent ever attended. Not in point of numbers nor the eloquence of the speakers, but in the spirit of the comrades. Never before did they show the same resolute courage, the same solidarity, the same solemn determination, as in this meeting when these dampening returns came in. It is easy to be enthusiastic in the hour of victory. But the combined opposition of all the forces of capitalism, superstition and reaction has solidified and compacted the Socialist movement of Milwaukee to a degree before unknown.

The first thing the comrades did in their hour of disappointment was to start a subscription for a Socialist daily. Over four thousand dollars were subscribed in an hour, and the boom for the daily fairly launched.

Thus we shall be ready for the enemy next time. We must expect that the old parties will unite in the mayoralty election next year. But the Milwaukee Socialists do not fear the issue. With a solidified movement, with a daily press, and with a stern determination to win in the long war we can not lose Milwaukee.

SOME PERTINENT POINTS.

Coupon Clippers will sell their properties to the Park Commission and still own their homes fronting the parks, and ride their autos along the boulevards.

The workers still will live on the side streets and walk, and, if they get as far as the parks, will still find the signs, "Keep Off the Grass."

The people are opposed to appointive officers, as we have enough elective officers now to fully provide for the necessity, as it arises, for more parks for the benefit of the workers.

Therefore get out the voters on Tuesday, April 18, to vote against a Park Commission and head off a new GRAFT.

THE GAME OF LIFE.

A writer recently gave an interesting account of a chess game, played with human characters, on a board marked out on the ground. Chess is an interesting game at all times. It's a game that compels the players to put all their thinking machinery into operation. The game of chess, in many respects, is similar to the game af life. Napoleon Bonaparte was an inveterate chess player. It is said that most of his important campaigns were mapped out while enjoying his favorite pastime. Napoleon aimed to conquer the world. He failed in the attempt—because his thinking powers became stagnant.

To an audience the game of chess is not interesting because of the length of time taken by the players to consider each move; hence the players play alone, in silence.

In the game of chess each player directs sixteen pieces, namely, one queen, one king, two bishops, two knights, two castles, eight pawns. In the game of life the same number of pieces are used, under different names, namely, one president, one congressional body, one judiciary, one church, one soldier, one landowner, one mansion, one shack, and eight citizens.

Where is the game being played? At Washington, D. C. What are the stakes? The things necessary to preserve human life, namely, fuel, food, shelter and clothing. Considering there is so much at stake, why are not the interested 80,000,000 general public watching the game? And a social reformer replied, "They have gone home, disgusted." "Yes," chimed in the trade unionists, "We are going to give them 'h—l' from all over the country." "Better remove the player," said one of those dirty, contemptible, undesirable Socialists. Continuing, he said, "by your votes remove Rockyfellow and Morgan from the game. Let the players who take their place win the world for all the people." This should be the real game of life.

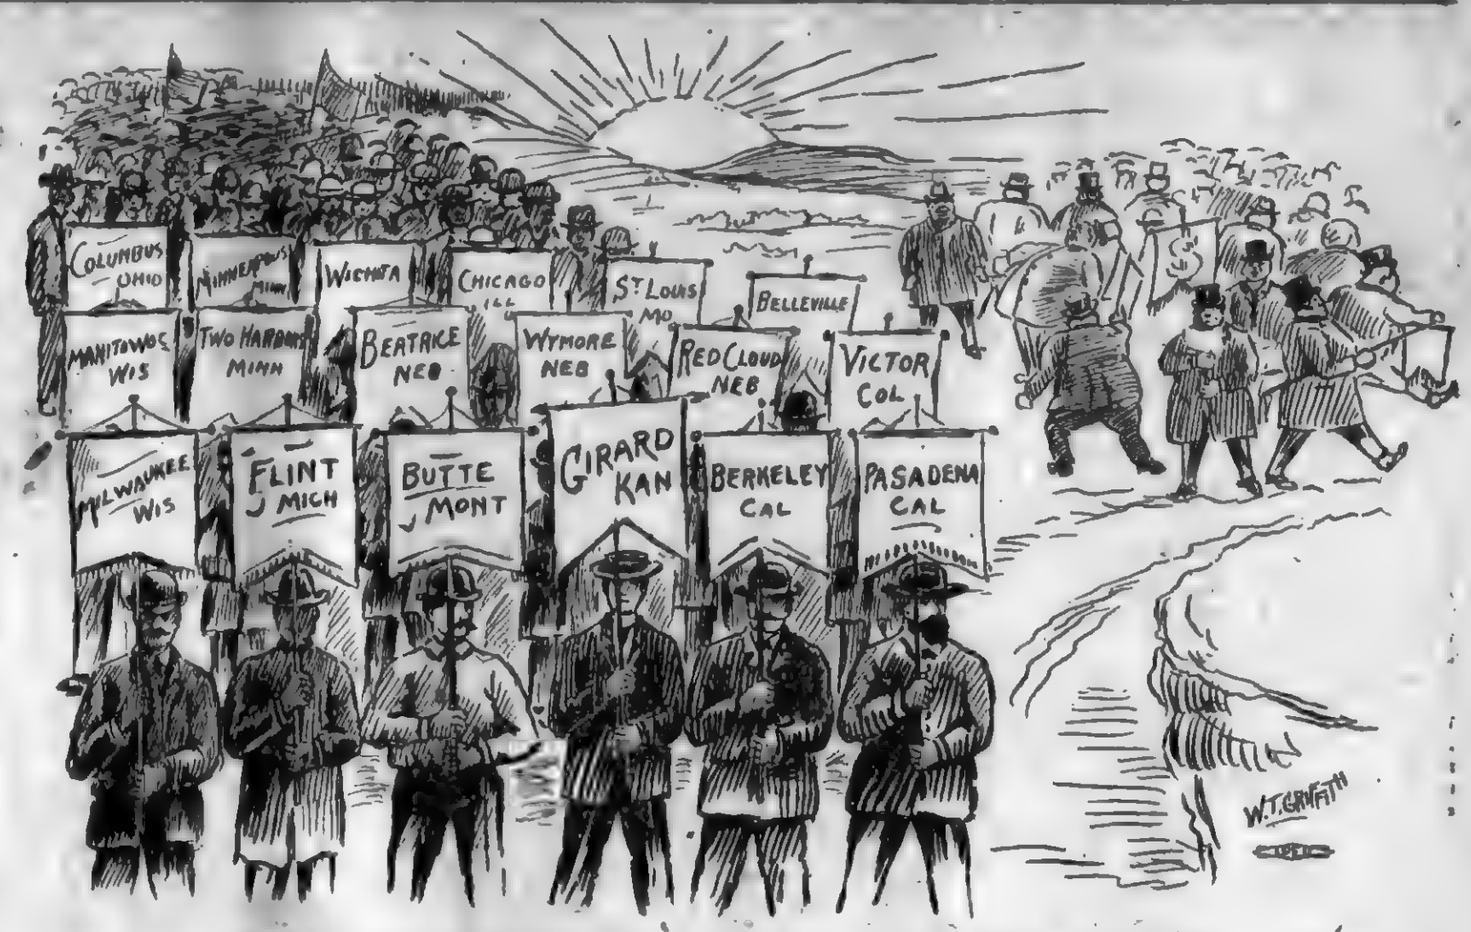
JIM HENDERSON.

BERGER STEALS MARCH ON THE PLUTES.

Political Washington woke up with a dark brown taste the other day, and, after rubbing its eyes, found that while it was celebrating and carousing the Socialist Congressman had stolen a march on them and spoiled its plans.

Ever since President Taft ordered out the troops to the Mexican border a great deal of rivalry developed among the Democrats and insurgents as to who should be the ones to make political capital out of the administration's blunder.

But when Congress opened the Democrats found that they had their "peerless failure" in their midst and the insurgents a few more wild-eyed ones with plenty of cash.



So while Bryan told funny stories and Congressman Billie Kent told of his political exploits in Washington's gay hotels, Congressman Berger introduced his resolution demanding the withdrawal of the troops. The papers, expecting a resolution of this nature and knowing its news value, grabbed for this resolution and put it on the front pages. Now that the Democrats and insurgents have sobered up, they learn the bitter truth.

Of course, both Democrats and insurgents cared only for the publicity side of the Mexican situation.

Neither gang meant to champion the cause of the oppressed masses of Mexico. So it is indeed fortunate that the first resolution in behalf of the Mexican rebels was introduced by a Socialist, who represents a party that has earnestly taken up their cause.

Every mail brings dozens of petitions, with hundreds of signatures, requesting that the troops be withdrawn. In fact, so many petitions have filled up a big drawer in Berger's office that it has been found necessary to enlist the voluntary help of Washington Socialists to get them sorted and classified by states.

It is desirable that all outstanding petitions be sent in at once. Congressman Berger expects to present them in the House in a few days, and would be pleased to have a formidable list of petitioners to startle his 390 colleagues.

The Vanguard of Socialism Appears; Capitalism Vanishes.

LABOR'S MIGHTY PROTEST AGAINST HUMAN HOLOCAUST

The Streets of New York City Shake With Tread of Marching Hosts.

The mightiest demonstration of labor that was ever seen in New York shook the streets of the metropolis on Wednesday of last week, as a tribute to the 145 toilers who perished in the human holocaust at the Triangle Shirt Waist factory. The New York Call says:

"Yesterday a great, black scar of quivering grief and indignation disfigured the face of New York."

"Two hundred thousand men and women who toil were in sackcloth, and two hundred thousand hearts were in rebellion.

"Because one hundred and forty-five were slain, two hundred thousand of their brothers and sisters in bondage passed in silence between walls of a million more who lined the way.

"Nature wrung her hands while her children bit their lips. Throughout the day soft, warm tears fell down from a sullen sky till the streets the marchers trod were reeking—and silent.

"Viewed from above the wavering black line of mourners seemed a broad ribbon of grief. Two hundred thousand were moving by like ominous phantoms.

"Silence reigned along the endless line, save where, at odd intervals, a small band of musicians repeated some solemn air.

"Even these rare sounds were more than half smothered by the falling rain, the drenched garments of the marchers; the dripping walls of buildings threw back no echo but the beat of human hearts.

"When day broke yesterday, hollowed-eyed and wet, voices on every side proclaimed the fear that such weather would keep indoors the hosts who sought to mourn their dead under the dull-sighted eyes of them who reap the profit and never count the cost.

RAIN DIDN'T MATTER.

"But they who were afraid in the morning were ashamed of their fears

"The dark day served only to deepen the grief of them who work. From every factory, sweatshop and tenement on the East Side and from the West Side, from the Bronx and Brooklyn and Brownsville, men and women poured out under the dripping skies.

"Before 9 o'clock in the morning ten thousand persons had gathered at Rutgers Square, and this number was increased to fifty thousand two hours before the procession was to set out, at 1:30 p. m. Twenty-second street, near Madison avenue, the meeting place of the uptown section, was packed with people at noon. Rain was falling heavily at this hour, but no one appeared to notice it. Long since they had ceased even to speak of it.

"What was a downpour of rain after a downpour of girls and young men from the windows of a skyscraper devoured by flames?

"New York's working class found itself yesterday.

"One hundred and forty-five girls and men did not die in vain."

SECRETARY STORCK'S TALK STIRS UP PREACHERS

Rev. F. L. Wharton Approves the Paper Read by Socialist.

Comrade G. A. Storck, State Secretary of the Socialist party, by invitation, last Monday read a paper before the Methodist Ministerial Association on the subject of "Socialism." In the course of his paper he said:

"Thousands of ministers, most of whom are drawing their conclusions from the sources from which they get their salaries, are today ridiculing and debasing Socialism.

"The minister that dares preach the gospel of the lowly Nazarene, as a rule, is compelled to seek employment elsewhere. That the present horrible conditions are changing and that we are going through a period of transition is in evidence by the fact that this morning, I, a working man, am preaching to the preachers.

PRESS AND PULPIT AS HINDRANTS.

"The press and the pulpit are being used to hinder the progress of Socialism and, as far as possible, are endeavoring to prejudice people against it. The charge that Socialism and religion can not be mixed is erroneous. The teachings of Socialism and Christianity are, to all intents and purposes, the same.

"When I consider the humble manner of the lowly Jesus and the way he dealt with the money changers, and contrast the Saviour's manner of doing things with the present attitude of the church, with its Rockefellers and Morgans, I can not let the opportunity go by to call your attention to the fact that I, as well as millions of other working people, am asking the question: 'How can you ministers, in the name of all things that are good, reconcile your minds as to the moral and intellectual standards of these sons of man?'"

AN END TO WARS.

After making the assertion that, instead of tearing down the home, Socialism, with its noble teachings and future possibilities, would build it up, Secretary Storck said:

"Under Socialism there will be no wars, and for the first time in the history of the world the teachings of Jesus will be put into execution.' The Bible of both ministers and working men says: 'Thou shalt not kill.'"

Comrade Storck's cool, calm and deliberate utterances angered some of the clergy.

Rev. Lucien Clark, pastor of the King Avenue M. E. Church, in support of a motion to table the motion of thanks, defended the church and said that, because it is working for the brotherhood of man, it must consider the capitalist along with the laboring man.

Rev. Fletcher L. Wharton, pastor of Wesley Chapel, said: "Secretary Storck is right. The church is not fulfilling its mission. We should thank him for coming to us and showing us the light."

The motion to thank Secretary Storck carried. Ministers like Rev. Wharton stand out like giants among the intellectual dwarfs who, "having eyes to see, see not, and having ears to hear, hear not." Of the other class, the least said the better.

R. R. "SCHOOL" RAIDED.

THREE HEADS OF CONCERN TAKEN INTO CUSTODY—OFFERED TO TRAIN MEN FOR RAILWAY JOBS, OR "MONEY BACK."

NEW YORK—Three business lights—George H. Baker, president; Jaul J. Gallagher, secretary, and John A. Jenkins, a director of the Railway Educational Association, which has elaborate offices in a four-story brownstone house at 37 Monroe street, Brooklyn—have been arrested on a charge of using the mails to defraud.

The complaint was made by Chief Inspector Warren W. Dixon, of the Postoffice Department, and the raid on its offices was by Postal Inspectors Daniel Parsons and Hugh McQuillan, and Detectives Duane and Selesko.

George H. Baker was arraigned before Judge Chatfield, in the United States Circuit Court, Brooklyn, and pleaded not guilty. He was held in $5,000 bail. The postoffice authorities said that the three men had obtained money by fraudulent pretenses and had maintained offices for short periods in New York, Chicago, Denver, Boston, St. Louis, St. Paul, and other cities.

Advertisements were inserted in the daily newspapers for men 18 to 35 years old to be trained as firemen at $100 a month, and brakemen at $80 a month. No experience was necessary, they said. All the applicants had to do, the circulars said, was to pay $30 for a course by correspondence for the fireman's job, or $15 to become a brakeman. The first were told also that they might become engineers at $200 a month and the latter become conductors, receiving from $130 to $160 a month. A position was "guaranteed" upon completion of the course, or "money would be returned." The association asserted that 400 men were placed monthly with the railway companies.

Chief Inspector Dixon, who had conducted the investigation that led to the arrests, said that out of twelve men sent by the association to the companies ten were rejected because they could not speak English, and of half a dozen others four were sent back on account of physical disability. The worst part of the business, he said, was that poor men paid their money for the course and then had to bear the expense of going to some distant city to see a railway company, probably to be rejected.

The Railway Educational Association was organized two years ago in this state, with a capital of $100,000, the directors being John A. Jenkins, Arthur R. Townsend, Bartholomew J. Madden, E. Bailey, J. J. Reed, J. M. Lindley, W. T. Egan and G. G. Patterson. The books and papers seized in the raid filled a big wagon. Judging by the number of letters the plan brought in about $40,000 a year, the first mail yesterday consisting of 640 letters. The inspectors said they had been after the firm since 1904. The postal inspectors hope to make several more arrests.

In a statement, George H. Baker said that among the company's shareholders were the New York Central & Hudson River, Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, Chicago, Indiana & Southern, Minneapolis & St. Louis, and Wheeling & Lake Erie railroads, and J. P. Morgan & Co.

The death of Tom Johnson of Cleveland is a big loss to the country. Johnson was an honest man and such men seldom get recognized until they are dead. It's sad true fact.

The miners of John Mitchell's home state are by no means unanimously opposed to the action of the Columbus convention in prohibiting members from holding membership in the National Civic Federation, as has been stated in numerous papers. The miners of the Southern Illinois sub-district held a convention in East St. Louis and, with only one negative vote, upheld the Columbus declaration. The sub-district embraces 17,000 members and the delegates announced with strong emphasis that they represented the views of the rank and file on the Civic Federation issue, no matter what might be printed in the newspapers.

THE PAINTERS' REVIVAL.

Last Wednesday night was one of pleasure and feasting, for the Painters. President, J. W. McLaughlin, Vice President Greenly and Secretaries Richardson and Lon Roe and Business Agent Denny Hill can feel proud of their successful efforts. The painters are preparing to enter the race for lead in the Building Trades labor movement. The last move of uniting the city business agents has put new life in the entire movement. The speaker of the evening was Brother Suddick of the Carpenters' Union. His remarks carried a demand for closer co-operation, assuring Business Agent Denny Hill of the co-operation of all the other crafts. Brother Suddick closed his remarks with an appeal for the unorganized to line-up and give Denny Hill the support he so richly deserves. The writer was glad to see so much enthusiasm prevalent among the painters and we are sure it will bring good results.

COLUMBUS FEDERATION OF LABOR.

The body convened April 16. Credentials were received from the Trainmen and Printing Pressmen. Resolution adopted calling upon the State Inspector of Workshops and Factories for a rigid inspection of the workshops in this city. Many of the shops were reported by the delegates as being unsafe in case of fire and particular stress was laid on the unsafe condition of the elevators. Committee appointed to entertain Glass Blowers' convention, to be held in Columbus. Trustees instructed to provide upper hall with furniture necessary for lodge purposes.

Picture shows located on Main and Washington streets and Main and Miller were declared unfair to organized labor, and the delegates instructed to carry the same back to their locals. Committee to confer with Musicians' Union appointed, regarding their rejoining the Federation. Delegates instructed to notify their locals that Nitschke Brothers, printers and general stationers, are rats of the worst nature. Any members who patronize this mentioned firm help the oppressors of labor. Label entertainment committee thanked for services rendered. Federation adjourned, to meet Monday, April 24, 1911.

THIS MAY OCCUR IN COLUMBUS, MR. WORKER.

A story was published in the Los Angeles daily press of Monday to the effect that a machinist was sentenced by a local police judge to work six months in a non-union shop.

For some time the machinist was employed at the Architectural Iron Works, at Long Beach avenue and Sixteenth street, but work became slack there and he was let out. Unable to find anything to do at his trade he went to Riverside, where he got a job in a butcher shop, but about two months ago he came back to Los Angeles to try to get work at his trade.

He searched in vain for work, and last week Detective O'Brien arrested him on a vagrancy charge. When taken before Police Judge Chambers the machinist said he had been idle, but insisted it was not his fault, as he had been trying to find work. On the court's order, Detective O'Brien investigated the statement and found it to be true. He also reported to the court that the superintendent of one shop said he had a job for the machinist, and Judge Chambers sentenced him to six months steady employment at this shop, which is the California Ornamental Iron Works, a non-union shop.

The machinist is not a union member, but he is in sympathy with the union. He does not believe in strike-breaking. He refuses to become a traitor to his union fellow-workers by taking jobs vacated by men who have sacrificed to make better the conditions of the workers.

He worked one day, and refused to fill the roll of strikebreaker any longer.

The Machinists' Union has taken the matter up, and will endeavor to find opt whether a police court can be made a recruiting office for non-union shops.

By what law the police judge can justify his conduct is, indeed, a puzzle.

THE ROAD TO RUIN—POLICE COURT INJUSTICE.

Our present police court methods of dealing with so-called vagrants is a disgrace to the community that allows it to exist. The cycles of reform are causing some men to become more faddists. There appears to be a seeming desire to make the people believe that it is possible to right civic wrongs from a source of effect instead of cause. Hence these miserable results.

When the unemployed workers leave home to seach for work, in some distant city, they start out as vagrants, because they leave their last cent with their wives and families.

The average police court judges are men who reach their decisions through the source of their own environments. They forget the fact that sometimes thieves and grafters cry reform to prevent their own sources of revenue being interfered with. The order has gone out in this city to arrest all suspicious characters. Many are arrested in the neighborhood of Spring and Chestnut streets. This locality during the street car strike was the loafing place for all the Coach thugs, murders and other suspicious characters. Why was not this order put in effect then? Some one must have evidently have heard their master's voice (?) As far as our investigations have gone, 99 per cent. of the men arrested as vagrants were traveling unemployed workers, seeking a job. In the last three months the city police court has done more toward making criminals than unmaking them.

Honest men always think first of keeping clean the family name. Hence, when arrested, they give in some other than their own, and while in prison they refuse to disclose their identity. What about the anxious wife and children, who daily wonder why father does not write? What must be the feelings of an honest man, judged a criminal by such a judge, who at the expiration of his sentence arrives home to find one of his children dead? Remember that after the first arrest sometimes the victim becomes adapted to the environments of his degraded position. He meets with men who exist by criminal practices. He comes outside the prison gate with these men. The world appears as cold and bleak as ever. His prison friends say "Come on," and he goes on—to a life of crime. Who is responsible? Why, the judge who understood the physical law, but did not understand the physical being, or the circumstances that surround their lives. Let us hope that some day county sheriffs will not be allowed to fatten their purses by keeping honest men in county jails, charging the county 50 cents per day for their keep, when the actual cost is only 10 cents; and that prison and workhouse contractors will not be allowed to rejoice because these dens of infamy are full, aye, overflowing. We need men with real humanitarian principles, and not billboard politicians, for judges.

RESOLUTIONS OF SUBORDINATE LODGE, NO. 175, BROTHERHOOD OF RAILROAD TRAINMEN.

On the 7th day of March, 1911, the startling news was flashed from coast to coast that the President had ordered 20,000 troops, or one-fourth of our regular army, to mobilize and hurried to the Mexican border. At the same time several American warships were ordered to proceed at full speed to ports on both coasts of Mexico. This order, being issued immediately after the adjournment of Congress, caused deep apprehension among the thinking work-people of our nation. What is the OBJECT of this MILITARY DISPLAY? What is the meaning of this HURRIED MOVEMENT of TROOPS TOWARD a FRIENDLY NEIGHBORING COUNTRY? The early explanation that "This movement was a mere war game" could not be accepted by organized labor as true; but, waiting patiently for the real cause, Labor was at last rewarded after conflicting statements from official circles and the truth was at last divulged, namely, CAPITAL versus LABOR.

Since the beginning of history of industrial revolts, when Moses led the children of Israel in a strike against the industrial oppression of Pharaoh, and in every chapter of history since that time, has been a repetition of the first labor strike: as the Boers against English tyranny; as the French wealth producers against the French oligarchy; as our forefathers against English capitalistic oppression. All these bear the same significant brand of oppression of labor by kings, feudal lords, and, in fact, capitalists under various names—the brand of oppression of the industrious poor by the idle rich; and, whereas

We recognize the justice of the revolt of the insurgents (or poor people) of Mexico against the tyrannical rule of Porfirio Diaz; and, whereas

We recognize the unjust stand that our government has taken to intimidate the insurrectos and whip them into submission to a life of abject brutal slavery to American capital and Mexican tyranny and oppression; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, Subordinate Lodge No. 175, That we extend our full sympathy and encouragement to the Mexican Insurrectionists; that we DEMAND of our National Government at Washington, D. C., that immediate and full recognition be made of the belligerency of these combatants. We furthermore DEMAND that our national forces—military, executive and judicial—shall maintain the strictest neutrality and that the full right of asylum be accorded to all political refugees across the border; and we further DEMAND that a copy of these resolutions be sent to our National Congress and a copy to the President of the United States, a copy to the Secretary of State at Washington, D. C., and a copy to the Grand Lodge of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and a copy placed on file in this Subordinate Lodge No. 175.

These resolutions adopted this, the 6th day of April, 1911.

BREWERY WORKERS' UNION.

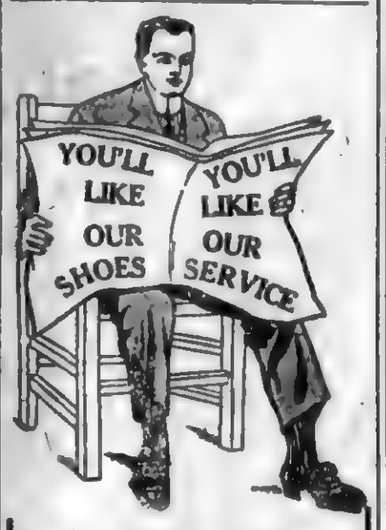
The writer wishes to call your attention to the union label advertisement of the brewery trades. This label advertisement is a token of progressive trade unionism. It represents an eight-hour workday and living wages, and it defies men of the "Selby" of Portsmouth, O., tribe to prove the existence of such conditions in their factories. This "Selby" is the labor crusher who demands the defeat of the woman's eight hour bill, and was chief stake-raiser for Revelation Billy Sunday.

FROM THE SUBLIME TO THE RIDICULOUS.

A certain police court judge recently went to church, and, during the sermon, he was seen to doze off into a sound slumber. The reverend brother in the pulpit warmed up to his subject to such an extent that one of the good sisters gave forth a loud "Amen!" The noise awoke the judge from his slumber, and, in a sotto voice, he was heard to exclaim: "Anything to say? Sixty days in the workhouse, and costs."

For the information of our correspondent, as far as we have investigated, we find no trace of any law that would compel the governor's military staff to wear socks at any time.

What is the matter with the citizens of Franklin county? Recently a discharged jury presented Judges Evans and Dillon with cuff buttons and scarf pins. Will they have to be hit with a street car before they wake up and send these poor sanctified creatures the necessary shirts and neckties to wear with their gifts on Easter morning?



Tomorrow will be the anniversary of the death of the people's friend, the lamented Mr. Justice, late of Franklin county. Like many other of our lamented dead, events lead us to believe that he met his death by coming in contact with the operating departments of the Columbus Rail-Light Company.

WOMAN—COMRADE AND EQUAL.

(Eugene V. Debs.)

The London Saturday Review, in a recent issue, brutally said: "Man's superiority is shown by his ability to keep women in subjection." Such a sentiment is enough to kindle the wrath of every man who loves his wife or reveres his mother. It is the voice of the wilderness, the snarl of the primitive. Measured by that standard, every tyrant has been a hero, and brutality is at once the acme of perfection and the glory of man.

Real men do not utter such sentiments. He who does so prostitutes his powers and links himself once more to the chattering ape that wrenches the neck of the cowering female, glorying as he does so in the brute force that is his.

Yet the sentiment is not confined to a moral degenerate who writes lies for pay, or to sycophants who sell their souls for the crumbs that arrogant wealth doles out to its vassals. It is embodied and embedded in the cruel system under which we live, the criminal system which grinds children to profits in the mills, which in the sweatshops saps woman of their power to mother a race of decent men, which traps the innocent and true-hearted, making them worse than slaves in worse than all that has been said of hell. It finds expression in premiers hiding from petticoated agitators, in presidents ignoring the pleadings of the mothers of men, in the clubbing and jailing of suffragettes, in Wall Street gamblers and brigands cackling from their piles of loot at the demands of justice. It is expressed in laws which rank mothers and daughters as idiots and criminals. It writes, beside the declaration that men should rebel against taxation without representation, that women must submit to taxation without representation. It makes property that god that men worship, and says that women shall have no property rights. Instead of that, she herself is counted as property, living by sufferance of the man who doles out the pittance that she uses.

Woman is made the slave of a slave, and is reckoned fit only for companionship in lust. The hands and breasts that nursed all men to life are scorned as the forgetful brute proclaims his superior strength and plumes himself that he can subjugate the one who made him what he is, and would have made him better had his customs and institutions permitted.

How differently is woman regarded by the truly wise and the really great. Paola Lombroso, one of the deepest students of mind that the time has ripened, says of her:

The most simple, most frivolous and thoughtless woman hides at the bottom of her soul a spark of heroism, which neither she herself nor anybody else suspects, which she never shows if her life runs its normal course, but which springs into evidence and manifests itself by action of devotion and self-sacrifice, if fate strikes her or those whom she loves. Then she does not wince, she does not complain, nor give way to useless despair, but rushes into the breach. The woman who hesitates to put her feet into cold, placid water throws herself into the perils of the roaring, surging maelstrom."

Bardou, the analytical novelist, declares: "I consider women superior to men in almost everything. They possess intuitive faculty to an extraordinary degree, and may almost always be trusted to do the right thing in the right place. They are full of noble instincts, and though heavily handicapped by fate, come well out of every ordeal. You have only to turn to history to learn the truth of what I say."

Lester F. Ward, the economist, the subtle student of affairs, gives this testimony:

"We have no conception of the real amount of talent or of genius possessed by woman. It is probably not greatly inferior to that of men even now, and a few generations of enlightened opinion on the subject, if shared by both sexes, would perhaps show that the difference is qualitive only."

I am glad to align myself with a party that declares for absolute equality between the sexes. Anything less than this is too narrow for twentieth century civilization and too small for a man who has a right conception of manhood.

Let us grant that woman has not reached the full height which she might attain—when I think of her devotion to duty, her tender ministries, her gentle spirit that in the clash and struggle of passion that has made her the savior of the world, the thought, so far from making me decry womanhood, gives me the vision of a race so superior as to cause me to wonder at its glory and beauty ineffable.

Man has not reached his best. He never will reach his best until he walks the upward way side by side with woman. Plato was right in his fancy that man and woman are merely halves of humanity, each requiring the qualities of the other in order to attain the highest character. Shakespeare understood it when he made his noblest women strong as men, and his best men tender as women.

Under our brutal forms of existence, beating womanhood to dust we have raged in passion for the individual woman, for use only. Some day we shall develop the social passion for womanhood, and then the gross will disappear in service and justice and companionship. Then we shall lift woman from the mire where our fists have struck her, and set her by our side as our comrade and equal and that will be love indeed.

PUDGIES AND SUFFRAGE.

The Massachusetts Anti-Suffrage Association calls attention to the fact that the late Judge Lowell was an "Anti." However able a judge may be, if he has never seen the practical workings of equal suffrage, he is less qualified to estimate its value than a score of judges who have seen them. Judge Lindsey, of the Denver Juvenile Court, has lately given us his opinion in emphatic terms. The chief justice of Colorado, and all the justices of the State Supreme Court, have signed a statement that no harm has resulted and that "the vote of the women is noticeably more conscientious than that of men." In Idaho, the chief justice and all the justices of the State Supreme Court have published a declaration that "woman suffrage has increased much in popularity since its adoption by our people, none of the predicted evils have resulted."

In Kansas, where women have municipal suffrage, a letter of inquiry was addressed to the chief justice and all the justices of the State Supreme Court. All concurred in substance with Chief Justice Johnson, who wrote: "In consequence, our elections are more orderly and fair, a higher class of officers are chosen, and we have cleaner and stronger city governments."

In Wyoming, where women have had full suffrage for forty-two years, testimony to its good effects have been given by a series of chief justices and judges too numerous to quote. Judge Brewer, of the United States Supreme Court, in the Ladies' World for September, 1909, pointed out that the preponderance of evidence from the enfranchised states was overwhelmingly in favor of woman's suffrage.

AN AMERICAN GIRL WHO MARRIES A FOREIGNER.

Mrs. Chas. W. Fairbanks says in Leslie's Weekly: "An American girl who marries a foreigner in a way has retrograded. She is accepting ideals of life which American men have outgrown for something decidedly better. I think the whole social fabric of Europe far below that of America in quality. Our men, in their dealings with women, are more honorable, and American women are more intellectual."

WOMEN WORKERS BUT MACHINES.

Under present industrial conditions, the women working in our factories are nothing but poor, exhausted, human engines, declares Mrs. Raymond Robins, who lectures as "The Woman and the Factory."

Mrs. Louise C. Jones, one of the four women members of the Colorado legislature, has introduced a bill against corrupt practices at elections. SOMETHING ABOUT A GRTAT PAINTER.

More than three hundred years ago, in the old city of Antwerp, a little boy was born, named Anthony Van Dyck. Where he lived there are many walls or dikes to keep out the sea, so the name Van Dyck means "on, or near the dike."

Anthony must have had plenty of good times, for he had eleven brothers and sisters. It was lucky for them that their father was rich, so that he could take care of them all comfortably.

Anthony had a pretty, dainty mother, who liked to do beautiful embroidery, but she died when he was only eight years old.

Even while Anthony was a very little boy he loved to paint pictures, and when his father and mother noticed this they sent him to an artist to learn how. In a short time he was allowed to study with the greatest painter of those times—the famous Rubens.

There were other boys learning to paint with Rubens, and sometimes when the master was out they used to have great fun together.

One day, when Rubens had gone for a horseback ride, they were scuffling about roughly in the studio and Anthony fell over backwards against the picture that Rubens had just left to dry. The paint all came off on Anthony's clothes and the picture was ruined. Anthony quickly seized a brush and painted the picture as well as he could remember it. The boys praised his work, but they were so afraid of Rubens' anger that they all climbed out of the window in a great hurry just before Rubens returned. The next day, they had to stand in line while Rubens questioned each one. Anthony confessed that he had painted the picture, but, instead of scolding, the master laughed and said that Anthony's picture was better than his own.

After that, Anthony was made first assistant, and painted so well that many people asked him to paint their pictures.

Then Rubens became a little jealous and advised the young man to go to Italy to study. Van Dyck agreed, and started off, riding on Rubens' own saddle horse.

After four years he went back to Antwerp, and this time had a studio of his own, where he painted court ladies and gentlemen of the Netherlands. Later he went to England, where he painted nearly one thousand portraits. His monument is in the great cathedral of St. Paul's, in London.—From the Little Socialist Magazine.

THE FARMER AND THE BOY.

Boy—Why do you dig up the earth every year?

Farmer—I do this so that I may plant the seed.

Boy—But could you not plant the seed without ploughing up all the earth?

Farmer—The ground is too hard for planting.

Boy—I can hardly believe that, because it is often so soft that frequently I sink into it up to my ankles.

Farmer—But did you not notice that it becomes almost like stone when the sun dries it?

Boy—Yes, you are right as far as that goes, but that does not prevent you from planting when the earth is soft, as it is just now.

Farmer—That is all very nice, my boy; but when the earth hardens after the seed is in, the young, delicate plant can not pierce it. The young plant, therefore, is smothered and must die.

Boy—Well, really, I never thought of that.

Farmer—But that is not the only reason why I must plough the ground.

Boy—Oh, I wish I could learn some more from you, but I must now hurry to school.

Farmer—that's right, my boy. Learn all you can in school, and do not forget that there is a good deal to learn everywhere.—From the Little Socialist Magazine.

The following story was written by a little girl twelve years old, who is a member of the East Side Socialist Sunday school, in New York City. The story is called

APRIL.

April is at hand. All the children know that. Most people wait impatiently for that month, because "April showers bring forth May flowers." But not everybody has time to think of it. It is true that in April spring has begun in earnest. The rich people rejoice. They know that they are going to the country the following summer. And the little country girl also waits for it impatiently, for she wouldn't have to go to another place to enjoy it.

But the poor ones that live in the city doesn't think much of it. No! Not at all. He hasn't very much time to think of it. He is only thinking of the dingy shop where he will have to work day in and day out. And many times his limbs ache very much after his day's work. For he works very hard. He doesn't think very much of the pleasant spring. Poor man!

THE STORY OF A LITTLE BOY WHO WAS TURNED INTO A BIRD.

(By Robert H. Fletcher.)

Once there was a little boy,
And, for no reason why,
From the day of his birth, nothing else in earth
Did he do but whine and cry.

He cried so very, very much
That no one would go near him;
The people said, "It beats the Dutch!
Why, the Man in the Moon could hear him!"

This boy's home was on the beach,
Where the sea-gull's scream is heard,
And if there's a bird knows how to screech,
The sea-gull is that bird.

They scream their best when the winds blow high
And the sky grows dark and hazy;
But let that boy begin to cry,
And he'd drive the sea-gulls crazy.

Until, at last, they said, "Oh, joy!—
We must be very dull—
This child's no use at all as a boy,
But he'd make a splendid gull!"

So off they flew and told the king;
They told him not to doubt it;
That this boy's scream beat everything!
That's all there was about it.

The king he saddled his best curlew;
He flew down the wind like mad!
(I think 'twas a funny horse, don't you?
'Twas the only kind he had.)

And when he heard that little boy yell
He thought his ears would split,
And so he turned him into a gull,
And nobody cared a bit.

A STUDY HOUR.

(By Laura E. Richards.)

Oh! What a mystery
The study is of history!
How the kings go ravaging
And savaging about!
Plantagenet or Tudor,
I can't tell which was ruder;
But Richard Third,
Upon my word,
Was worst of all the rout.

Alfred was a hero,
Knew no guile nor fear, oh!
Beat the Danes and checked the Thames,
And ruled the country well.
Edward First, the Hammer,
Was a slaughterer and slammer;
And Bruce alone
Saved Scotland's throne,
When 'neath his blows it fell.

Edward Third was great, too,
Early fought, and late, too.
Drove the French from Cressy's trench
Like leaves before the blast.
But Harry Fifth, the glorious,
He, the all-victorious,
He's the one
I'd serve alone,
From first unto the last.

Oh! What a mystery
The study is of history!
Queens and kings,
And wars and things,
All shut within the book.
Though sometimes a trifle bloody,
'Tis our best-beloved study.
If you want to see how good are we,
Why, only come and look!

WOMAN'S SOCIALIST CLUB.

The Woman's Club Committee held its first meeting last Monday night. The attendance was good, the enthusiasm better, and the loyalty for Socialism at its best.

A few men took their lives in their hands and ventured into the hall. Occasionally one would forget himself and start to make a motion.

The cold, formidable look on the feminine faces around him would bring him back to the strait and narrow path, and he would humbly finish with, "Lady Chairman, May I make a few suggestions?"

The club has decided to take up the study of the "Science of Government." To this study course every lady who is interested in the cause is cordially invited to be present.

Meeting every Monday night at 7:30, at the hall, 184½ Bough High street. The men will be permitted to attend, to take care of the children during the business session.

Because of the dance given by the Tenth, Eleventh and Twelfth Wards Monday evening, April 17, there will be no meeting on that date.

NORTH SIDE DANCE.

The joint entertainment of the Tenth, Eleventh and Twelfth Ward Branches, to consist of a dance and card party, will be given at High-Warren Hall, April 17. Admission 25 cents. The Socialists of the entire city should give the North Side Branches a boost in this entertainment. Tickets are for sale in every Branch.

Attention is called to the fact that the article in the issue of March 18th, on the "Formation of Labor Organizations," was not written by, but merely compiled by, Mrs. Winship from notes taken during a course of lectures given by Professors Ely and Scott, of the Wisconsin State University, in 1904, while these professors were lecturing in Racine, Wis., Mrs. Winship's former home.

Local Linden Heights meets every Sunday afternoon at McDonald's blacksmith shop.

FOURTH WARD BRANCH.

The Fourth Ward Branch had one of its regular, rousing meetings last Sunday evening. Comrade R. E. Radebaugh was the principal speaker of the evening. Comrade Dr. Ada M. Nichols, of Chillicothe, was present, renewing old acquaintanceships.

SUNDRY PRECEPTS AND WARNINGS.

(By Sylvia Vermillion.)

My children, incline thine ear to our teachings and follow not after the foolish Socialists. We must smite them with a mighty smote, for they are as numerous as the sands of the sea shore.

These Socialists cease not in their campaign, but worketh from the rising of the sun to the going down thereof.

Some time ago we lighted a candle and searched diligently for one Freeman, a maker of patterns, who dwelleth on Michigan avenue. We searched in vain, for, lo and behold! the Socialists had him and he was not.

Their irreverence is a reproach unto us. They testifieth that the stench that ariseth from the mere mention of the G. O. P. compelleth the family cat to take to the top of the cupboard.

For their hardness of heart and stiff-neckedness we offered to make of them a special subject of prayer in our respective churches where we belong. They had the brasonry to advise us to wait until after election and then pray for the Democrat and Republican parties, which we represent.

Who hath nerve unseemly? Who never saith die or quit? The Socialists of Columbus.

The park commission plan is the joy of our soul. The tinkling of the nickels and dimes that will flow in our pockets is music in our ear. Already in our dreams we beholdeth the rentals of the houses that border the parks arising heavenward like incense. The Socialists would have you believe that this is a skin game. Heed them not, but continue to bring us your tithes and offerings, that our store-houses may be full and yours empty.

We have redistricted the city so that they might be kept from the upper seat in the synagogue. But they continue to furnish like a green bay tree.

We rejoice with exceeding great joy that the churches continue to preach the proper subserviency of the poor to the rich; of master to slave. The churches do our bidding willingly and question us not. Would that the Socialists would do likewise.

LECTURE BY PROSSER.

Rev. W. A. Prosser, of Pittsburg, will speak at the Fifth Avenue Church of Christ, Tuesday evening, April 25, on the subject of "Socialism," under the auspices of the Northside branches Socialist party.

When it comes to good, consistent hustling we have in the Hub Board of Trade the most progressive set of business men in Columbus. They are always wide awake and on the job, studying the needs and providing the means to take care of the working people, who are their exclusive patrons. Being in close touch with them in their daily lives, as the Hub district is pretty nearly surrounded by homes of the workers, a large number of them are beginning to be pretty well versed along economic lines. This organization is planning to do something in the near future that will make some of the other business men sit up and take notice. Watch for it.

STRICKLAND COMING.

Frederick Guy Strickland will lecture next Thursday evening, April 20, at Odd Fellow's Temple, 196 South High street, under the auspices of the Sixth and Seventh Ward Branches Socialist Party of Columbus. His topic will be "Socialism and Religious Freedom. In view of much that has been spoken and printed in this city recently, this subject is a most timely one. The host of Socialists who know Comrade Strickland are confident that he will handle the question in the proper manner. Let every Socialists try to induce some friend who is interested in this phase of the most vital problem of the day to be present. Admission 15 cents.

Here are some of the things that have been said about Comrade Strickland's work:

"Frederick G. Strickland is one of the strong men in the Socialist movement. As an organizer he has exceptional qualities. As a speaker he stands among the most able and eloquent on the American platform. Mr. Strickland is a young man, imbued with the spirit of the Socialist movement, and one of its most earnest, enthusiastic and effective exponents."—Eugene V. Debs.

FRED G. STRICKLAND.

"His addresses delivered in Denver have not been surpassed by any of our speakers of national reputation. They were nothing less than great. The audiences were delighted beyond expression. Comrade Strickland is without doubt one of the most effective, all-round workers in the Socialist movement, and his return to Colorado is hailed with delight. I predict for him a very wide field for service in the Socialist Revolution."—Wm. H. Wise.

"Talent, culture and experience pre-eminently qualify Mr. Strickland for the platform on this special subject. He is a sociologist and orator. His discourse as well as subject is unique, his language and manner peculiarly graceful and pleasing. He knows what he knows, and can tell about it in a very lucid manner, and withal he is a finished platform orator. We hope we may be favored again by this young man, who is no doubt destined to great distinction in the lecture field. He has a mission, and time will bear him success."—The Cambria (Wis.) News.

The SOCIALIST

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF, BY AND FOR THE WORKERS

Vol. 1. No. 18. COLUMBUS, OHIO, SATURDAY, APRIL 22, 1911. PRICE, $1.00 PER YEAR. SINGLE COPIES, 3 CENTS.

Ohio State Library 53 Columbus, O

UNITED LABOR IN COLUMBUS WINS ITS FIRST VICTORY AT THE POLLS.

The Awakening of Mr. Worker.

ROUND ONE—PRIVILEGED INTERESTS KNOCKED OUT OF THE RING.

"DERN THEM SOCIALISTS.—MALCOLM KARSHNER."

The defeat of the Park Commission Plan, as submitted by the local Chamber of Commerce, and supported at the polls by active party organization men of both parties, can only be attributed to the Socialist Party, as it alone took stand against this thinly veiled scheme of building parks, boulevards and river driveways in the interests of automobile owners and interested property owners, that would have sooner or later unloaded their holdings on the city at a very fancy price.

To have accomplished the scheme in view would have taken the sum of $10,000,000 and the workers who really are in need of parks, would have had to be satisfied with the parks that they have now.

If these gentlemen that have taken such an interest in the workers of Columbus would have advocated that this commission consist of [illegible] workingmen to have their own close interests thoroughly at heart, and who should be the sole judges as to the need of parks, the objection would have been nil, and the worker always being modest and a firm believer in electing his respective class to office, would have gone to the polls and cast his vote unanimously in favor of such a commission, composed of workingmen.

The worker cannot help but look with suspicion at an organization of men that are too cowardly to come out in the open and leave the public be the sole judge as to their respective merits individually and the plan that they are fathering, but must hide behind a plan of being appointed by the mayor, who sooner or later would have to accept the odium that would be attached to such a procedure.

SOME OF THE EVENTS THE WORKERS HAVE NOT FORGOTTEN.

Last summer, when the Big Rich donated their automobiles and gave the poor children an outing, the children congregated on the State House grounds, waiting, and lo and behold they were ordered off the grass and grounds, into the streets, in the paths of the swiftly moving automobiles.

A few months later, troops were called to suppress these same children's fathers, who were on strike for better conditions, and lo and behold they camped on the same State House grounds for months and no one ordered them off the grass and grounds.

These things have not been forgotten.

"COMING EVENTS CAST THEI SHADOWS BEFORE."

Tuesday's vote shows the "hand-writing on the wall," and if we are not mistaken, a plan will be submitted next year for a Park Commission Plan, composed of workingmen who will be elected by their respective class, they will designate where parks, playgrounds and comfort stations shall be placed, and we guaratnee that they will not be placed where they are not needed, but where the worker lives and where he will not be compelled to pay street car fare to get a few breaths of nature's free air.

The word had gone forth since the Socialist party went on record against a Park Commission that it would have to be defeated as an object lesson that its influence was dead, and this being true, we must accept the fact that we are very much alive since the defeat of the Park Commission plan, as advocated and fathered by the Chamber of Commerce.

Truly, it was a victory of civic cleanness that the Socialist party can well feel proud of, and is only the forerunner of better things that are to come.

Congressman Berger of Milwaukee refused to accept $635 from Uncle Sam, his salary for March, because he was a member of the Milwaukee council until April 1 and received $80 for his services there. Of course, this is only common honesty, and is not remarkable in a Socialist, but it sets an unusual example to American officeholders.

Newsboys, take our advice. Hold tight on to that remaining cent.

TO THE RELIGIOUS MAN IN THE SOCIALIST MOVEMENT.

We welcome you!

It is likely that you have travelled a long and difficult road. It is more than likely that you have turned your back upon your own immediate material interests in order to enter our ranks.

But we welcome you as a comrade in the ranks of our new cause, not as a Reverend or a Rabbi. If we ever attach a title to your name, it is only to interest the man whose attention we have not as yet secured. Your title is of interest to the outside man, but to us, within our own ranks, you are simply and only a "comrade."

Our faith, the faith of our movement, is simply our conviction that we can build a new world-order, a society of justice. And so, we have faith in each other.

Whatever faith you have beyond this present task or be and this present world [illegible] your own private property and we will never invade your individual possessions.

But since we grant you this right, we also make a demand: We demand that you shall not make your superior, personal attainment in spiritual or intellectual matters the basis of a moral judgment on the rest of your comrades. Phariseeism can have no place in the Socialist movement.

Whatever finer moral equipment you possess should be laid upon the altar of our common service. The final task of class-consciousness is to end the class struggle by establishing industrial democracy. The ethics of the social revolution lead to human solidarity, not to the inquisition.

My religious brother, have you the faith that you can joyously lose your life in so cosmopolitan a task? Can you clasp hands with the down-trodden of the earth, the outcast and the scholar, the wise and the otherwise, and still press forward to the human goal? If so, we welcome you!

But we shall not welcome you to divide the toilers even in the name of a so-called morality. The new, working-class ethic is based on solidarity, not on exclusiveness. If you shrink from soiling your hands by contact with the common life, you are not of us. We shall part in sorrow, not in anger. We need your help, but not your censorship.

You will leave us, not because we drive you out, but because you must go elsewhere, to find the self-righteous synagogue with pews to let. Our temple is a temple of comradeship only.

Frederick Guy Strickland.

According to the Catholic Sentinel, "among the richer class, 343 persons in 1,000 live to be 80 years of age; in the middle classes, 175, and of the laboring classes, 156." It seems, in view of this showing, that the only way to promote long life is to make all rich in the sense that there will be no danger of want for all. The answer, as usual, in all social problems, is Socialism.

Keep off the grass. Keep out of the saloon. Keep off the street. Keep awake. Keep on breathing, BUT keep from making a noise. It's Sunday. Ring the curfew. Toll the mournful bell. Sandpaper undershirt would be comfortable under such a Regime.

No political boss controls the Columbus Federation of Labor.

PITY THE POOR HUNGRY WOLVES.

The Chamber of Commerce has spoken. "Hist!"

Charles J. Pretzman, president of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, has delivered himself of the following denunciation. "The Chamber of Commerce will expect the municipal authorities, both those in power and those that are to succeed them, to give proper attention to parks and playgrounds, the improvements of the rivers and streams to that side of the city generally. If this is not done, this august body, the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, will call another election." This is the greatest bunch of bunkum handed to the people in many years. What is the use of children's playgrounds? You know, Mr. Pretzman, that your organization fought every child-labor bill, and at the present time the Chamber of Commerce is against the woman's eight-hour bill now before the Ohio Legislature. When did you begin to attach playgrounds instead of boulevards to your schemes? No, the word playgrounds was used to hoodwink the people and the vote of the Sixth ward proved this fact. If your body was responsible for the circular letter and the Socialist literature that was sent out broadcast over the city, we thank you for helping the Socialists to victory, for it was void of Union label and lacked [illegible] as the [illegible] And the Columbus Chamber of Commerce threatens another election! Don't be so free with your jokes, Mr. Pretzman. Send them to Puck or Judge.

RAILROAD CHICKEN THIEVES.

The American farmer received $300,000,000 for his eggs.

The consumer paid $540,000,000.

Who got the difference, $240,000,000?

Why our legalized social highwaymen, the railroads and the express companies. Who gave them permission to rob the people?

Why the people themselves. How? By allowing the corporations to send their representatives to Congress and the United States Senate to make and unmake law so they can burglarize the food cupboards of the people with the graceful bearing of a polished diplomat. "Oh, Mr. Socialist, you are always kicking." What about you, Mr. Friend of the Capitalist? You believe in the rights of private property, do you not? Do you believe because the thug privately owns the weapon he pushes under your nose, has a right to do so because he holds you up with his own private property? Well, why should a railroad corporation be allowed to hold all the people up with their privately owned railroads?

THE SIGNIFICANCE OF LABOR'S RECENT TRIUMPH.

The word was sent out to all the party heelers to test the Socialist vote by carrying the election for the Park Commission. The Columbus Board of Commerce even went to the expense of providing the voters with transportation to the polls, and more than one automobile carried the victors to the polls. If the vote had gone the other way, certain labor fakers and unscrupulous politicians would have lived on "easy street" until the next fall election. When we think of the Big Business men who indorsed the proposition—President W. O. Thompson, Judge Samuel Black, General Speaks, et al., we realise that the working class do not take their suggestions like children taking medicine. Mr. Worker, you learning to vote for what you want for your own class interests. Keep up the fight. It has been proved that money could not buy you. Had this been possible, the slimy bosses would have won

THE SOCIALIST IS THE ONLY COLUMBUS PAPER THAT DARED TO STAND FOR PRINCIPLE.

We congratulate the working class on their victory. Rest assured that the Socialist is just throwing a few trial balls over the plate. We think we have a pretty good team. In fact it looks like a pennant winner. At the beginning of the season we were a little bit doubtful of the new bases, but the team seems to run them without much trouble. Wonder if Councilman Baldridge would like to umpire the big game this fall. Anyhow, the Socialists are satisfied with the way the redistricting committee lays out the ground.

Socialism: What It Is and Its Ultimate Aims.

(By G. A. Storck.)

[The following paper was read by Comrade G. A. Storck, State Secretary of the Socialist party of Ohio, before the Methodist Ministers' Meeting at Wesley Chapel, Columbus, on Monday, April 10. It aroused a storm of bitter invective from some of the clergy present.]

In espousing the cause of Socialism before you men, I want to be frank as possible with you.

I must try to do something that the great writers and orators of the past, up to the present time have been unable to do, and that is to convince you of the fact that Socialism is the most vital question of the hour. If I fail, it will not disappoint me, when we realize that after these great masters by mouth or pen have been unable to present this question so as to be clearly understood by you. However, I am somewhat interested in the fact that you are willing to listen to both sides of this argument, as I have been informed that the other side was presented by a prominent (local) man some time ago; that you have not locked the doors against me after hearing his side, is appreciated by me and I will endeavor to return the courtesy by confining myself entirely to the subject, SOCIALISM—WHAT IT IS AND ITS ULTIMATE AIMS. It becomes necessary for me not to only show the economic side, with its relation to the bread and butter problem, but also the ethical side which will naturally right itself when the former question has been settled. That the Socialists wish to be good, that they seek to make the world a better place to live in, is for you to judge or leave it to an after consideration at which time I will be glad to answer any question should my defense of Socialism not be clear to you. First, let me refer to a few definitions of what Socialism really is.

SOME DEFINITIONS.

The Century dictionary defines Socialism as follows: Socialism is any theory or system of social organization which would abolish entirely or in great part the individual effort and competition on which modern society rests and substitute for it co-operative action; would introduce a more perfect and equal distribution of the products of labor and would make land and capital as the instruments and means of production, the joint production of the members of the community.

Johnson Universal Cyclopedia defines it: Socialism is a moral reform. It is the vices of mankind and the miseries resulting from these vices, to which Socialism wishes to put an end, and it seeks its means not in a new religious issue, but in a new social organization.

The Standard Dictionary: Socialism is a theory of civil polity that aims to secure the re-construction of society, increase of wealth and a more equal distribution of the products of labor through the collective ownership of land and capital and the public collective management of all industries. Its motto is, "Everyone according to his deeds."

The Encyclopedia Brittanica: Ethics of Socialism and the ethics of Christianity are identical. The general tendency is to regard Socialistic any interference undertaken by society in behalf of the poor. In general it may be described as that movement which seeks by economic changes to destroy the existing inequalities of the world's social conditions.

Webster's Dictionary: A theory of society which advocates a more precise, orderly and harmonious arrangement of the social relations of mankind than that which has hitherto prevailed.

The American Year Book-Cyclopedia and Atlas: No word has been more abused and misunderstood than the word SOCIALISM. The Socialist is not an Anarchist. They are opposed in theory and practice. The Socialist does not propose to destroy the family, abolish religion or divide up property, nor does he seek to carry out his ideas by riot or bloodshed. If a single phrase Socialism means public ownership of the means of production and working-class control of the government, a chance to work for all who will and to all workers the full values of their product. The typical Socialist is rather a quiet and thoughtful workingman, serene in time of trouble and self-contained in the day of victory. He realizes that the world will move on very well after he is dead, but remembers that while he lives it is his business to help the world move. He considers himself an ally of the eternal laws of nature and is proud to do his little part in the great cause.

American Encyclopedia Brittanica Twentieth Century Edition: With regard to religion, Socialism has been and is still very frequently associated with irreligion and atheism. The same remark applies to continental liberalism and partly for a like reason; the absolute governments of the continent have repressed religious freedom. On religion as on marriage, Socialism has no special teaching.

Webster's International Dictionary: Socialism: a theory or system of social reform, which contemplates a complete re-construction of society with a more just and equitable distribution of property and labor. In popular usage the term is often employed to indicate any lawless revolutionary schemes.

MAIN PRINCIPLES OF SOCIALISM.

The three main principles of Socialism are the Class Struggles, Economic Determinism and Surplus Values. The names look formidable but the ideas which they represent are not particularly difficult to comprehend. Under the present system which is called capitalism, the chief industries are owned by the captains of industry and are called corporations or trusts. These captains of industry, through their ownership of these institutions have the power to exploit the toilers out of about four-fifths of their earnings, according to statistics. These toilers are dependent upon these modern captains of industry for their jobs, simply because the industries in which these workers must seek employment to secure enough to eak out a subsistence are owned by these modern masters.

In exercising the power which this ownership vests in their hands, the capitalist compells these toilers to work for them for a small share in return for the labor which they have given. Retaining the greater part for themselves, this surplus which the capitalists retain permit them to enjoy themselves, but which they do not earn, and this is called surplus value. Besides retaining the greater part of the earnings of the toilers at first hand, an additional drain is meted out to the workers in the way of extorting still more by charging excessive prices for those necessities which the workers are compelled to buy to sustain their ——— lives. The toilers of the farms are caught going and coming because they must pay vastly more for the machinery and supplies they they must procure in the game of competition, than what it really costs to produce them. They cannot set the price on thise things which they buy, and for their products which they have to sell; someone else also sets the price. It will thus be seen that the capitalist extort surplus value out of the great divisions of the entire working-class. There is no way in which we can compute the exact amount of exploitation but we all fully realize that capitalism is burdening all the nations on the globe and that finally something must be done in order to relieve the terrible distress that these calloused human beings are imposing upon their brothers.

THE CLASS STRUGGLE.

The workers constantly struggle against these masters to secure a larger portion of that wealth which they earn called surplus value, but as they are strenuously opposed by these masters, there can be no harmony of interests between these two extremes. It can readily be seen which side must usually submit. In its broadest analysis we will have to admit that surplus product or surplus value as it is generally called, is the cause of the class struggle; labor troubles, strikes and baycots are a part of this system and depicts the class struggle in all its realism. At the present time these captains of industry not only own the industries but they own the State and National Government which they obtain through economic and political power. All forces of government, the army, navy, militia, police force, judiciary and in many cases the pulpits, are absolutely in control of these modern kings. Society is divided into two classes and there is no possible hope of ever establishing the brotherhood of man under the present system called capitalism.

The present system means degradation, because it is necessary that these evils exist under the present order, and if they did not exist it would simply mean, that in the process of evolution, that we have either passed through the stage of capitalism, or that we are yet to enter into it.

WOES OF MINISTERS.

Millions of ministers could not change the moral status of capitalism—it is a concrete form—it is a thing or body within itself. The minister that dares preach the real gospel of the lowly Nazerine is usually compelled to seek employment elsewhere, where it is more congenial to practice what he preaches. That the system is changing and that we are going through a period of transition to a higher state of evolution is proven by the very fact that I am here today a workingman preaching to the preachers. But let us not linger too long on this fact; let it pass into history for the generations yet to come that they may know what events took place during the stage of capitalism. It may then be said by them that this was a part of the system and like the different organs of the body, each has its function to perform.

For a long time Socialism was confounded with Anarchy; that was done to retard its progress and originated in the foreign countries where conditions were the worst, and as Church and State were united, it meant that an act against the Church was an act against the State, and to rebel against the State meant to rebel against the Church. To believe in a republican form of government, democratically governed, was considered a crime and no church would have permitted an advocate of the principles of Socialism to step upon the sacred rostrum in defence of his cause.

But on the other hand the Press and the Pulpit was used to hinder its progress by prejudicing the minds of the people against its teachings. Even today thousands of ministers are ridiculing and trying to debase it, most of whom are drawing their conclusions from the same place that they draw their salaries.

Personally I want to defend Socialism, and while I may not voice the sentiments of all of the working class, yet I feel that thousands of them feel as I do in the matter.

I was born in a Christian home, rocked in the cradle of a Christian mother, reared under Christian surroundings from the home to the National government, having been taught that a Jesus once lived nearly 2000 years ago—that he was the most humble—that he was a common workingman, a carpenter—that he lived and experienced the life of the average workingmen of today—that he was a Jewish Priest—that he fought the money changers of that day, and that he preached to all humanity, the Brotherhood of Man.

When I contrast that with the conditions that we are experiencing today, the attitude of the church with its Rockefellers and Morgans, I cannot let the oppertunity slip by, to call your attention to the fact that I as well as millions of other working people are asking this question: How can you ministers, in the name of all things that are good, reconcile your minds as to the moral and intellectual standards of these sons of man?

SOCIALISTS OPPOSE WAR.

Under Socialism there will be no wars and for the first time in the history of the world the teachings of Jesus will be put into execution—"Thou shall not kill." The battles of the past have been fought by the working class; it was their blood that was shed, it was their families that suffered the sting of war.

As society is constituted today we fear that some one will accuse us of being unpatriotic if we do not favor war.

Give me a gun,
That I may blaze away
At him whom I ne'er met before this day;
Yes, e'en at him whose face I scarce can see,
He, afar off, a thousand yards from me.
Mad work? Yes 'tis, for both of us poor fools—
For me and him, both of us merely tools.

Give him a gun,
That he may fire at me
If chance he gets. For that—let Fate decree!
He's but a bolt, a dot upon earth's crust,
But now 'tis me or him must bite the dust.
Quarrel? Not me; ne'er met the man before;
We're simply fools and tools, I say once more.

Arm both of us,
That each may shoot at each.
At home—his home and mine—the parsons preach
"All men are brothers." That I don't deny.
But if 'tis so, then I would ask you why
We should be faced now, strange friends and me,
Having no quarrel? 'Cause 'tis fools we be.

. . . . . .

Give me my sight!
That's right!

. . . . . .

Mate, give me thy hand!
At last we understand;
....GAL SIX etaoinshrd
Guns, bayonets, swords, cannon and all hell's tools,
These no men need when human reason rules.
Thy home is thine; sacred thy fatherland,
Mine doubly safe, while true to Right we stand.
Hell's agents only—Vice, Ambition, Greed—
Thy foes and mine; from these we'll now be freed!

INDIVIDUALISM IS ANARCHY.

There is a kind of Mental Anarchy called individualism and which permeates society today, the individual selfish effort to save our own souls. This is practiced by a great majority of the people that call themselves Christians, at the same time they are promoting such conditions that will hold the majority in subjection causing a deterior of the race.

This degradation is the means of causing most of the crimes that exist, the supporters knowingly commit this crime against society, but rather than change these conditions so that it is possible for all to become good, they seem to be satisfied that only their own souls be saved.

The Socialist being a student and a thinker, being acquainted with the needs of the masses, and understanding the slow progress that can be made, and that only as a class can we advance, has contented himself by helping his fellow man onward and upward.

Scientifically this is possible, practically correct, religiously assured and morally divine.

WHAT SOCIALISTS WOULD ABOLISH.

The Socialist believes in abolishing all sorts of crime.

There will be no gambling.

There will be no sweat shops.

There will be no selling of human bodies for a living.

There will be no bread-line in times of plenty.

There will be no underfed school children.

Most crime will cease with the inauguration of the new commonwealth, and man will come up out of the gloom like the lily's bloom in the sunlight.

When we once see the light of Socialism we will marvel at the depravity and immorality that society permits in this stage of civilization.

Socialism will enoble human character, broaden the fields of knowledge and substitute for the present order the Brotherhood of Man.

If the political phase of Socialism meets with apparent defeat at intervals at the polls where an expression is given, it will be because the masses are as yet not clear as to what Socialism is, and as such we welcome occasional defeat. If it is an evolutionary movement it cannot fail; if it is inevitable, all the powers that be cannot stop it.

Will Socialism destroy the home? No, Socialism will only make it possible that each and every one may enjoy a real home—homes where love of family and the congenial surroundings and intellectual combination of two equally balanced, surrounded by intellectual offspring, the result of such Holy unions, will be the greatest attraction in the home, then the fireside will be the most pleasant rendesvous for all.

It has been said recently in our city that Socialism will destroy religion and that the fifteenth plank in our National Platform proves this statement. I will quote it as it reads and then you can judge for yourselves. Plank No. 15. National Platform Socialist Party: "The enactment of further measures for general education and for the conservation of health. The bureau of education to be made a department. The creation of a department of public health." It may be that the Fifteenth paragraph of the declaration of principles is what is alluded to. It reads: "The Socialist Party is primarily an economic and political question. It is not concerned in matters of religious beliefs."

SOCIALISM AND RELIGION.

The Socialist party leaves this entirely to the people as to what kind of religion they might choose or profess. We are not prepared to say what society will do under the new order, as it would be impossible for me to say what kind of religion the people will profess in years to come.

That there will be some kind of religion I feel assured, as it is human nature to incline that way. But I can safely say that if ever the efforts and teachings of the carpenter of Nazareth will be appreciated it will be when society will practice his teachings in their every day life.

There may be some within the hearing of my voice that would rather see those teachings expunged from the Scriptures than to see them put into practice, because they prefer capitalism. But I hope that you will be lenient with me should I be mistaken in my audience.

Socialism will do noble deeds when it lifts the terrible burdens of toil from off the backs of the wage-slaves. It will give woman freedom, that she may be independent and to only unite with man because of the real love that exists. It will permit a man to marry the choice of his love, assuring him that no poverty or privation will ever retard him in providing for the needs of the family. Every child will be guaranteed the opportunity to become educated and have an equal chance to associate with every other child. Education will be as free as the air we breathe. If this will destroy religion, then religion, if it must thrive on superstition, must go. But superstition is not religion.

To me religion means living a good and ideal life. If I am right, and this is the definition of true religion, then I will say that religion will flourish under Socialism.

There will also be preachers under the new order. Natural selection will be the process used in placing them there; like the mechanic, he will be placed where he is best fitted to do useful service to society. The teacher will be a teacher because of his abilities to feed minds (intellectually). The preacher, because he can support and will support the truth and because he takes a delight in his own accomplishments. He will not be mentally subjected, he will be permitted to expand and bring out the real power that lies within him; he will not be crucified upon the cross of superstition and ignorance, as he is compelled to be today.

The inventor will be encouraged in his work by the governments, which will assist him to promote his ideas. The average inventor is an inventor because he likes his work, and it is because he rejoices and delights in his work that keeps him from becoming mentally unbalanced. Few that are not natural inventors could stand half the mental strain to which he is subjected in his work.

Millions of inventors die poor, and the present society offers no excuse for his paupers' grave.

Socialism alone will give him his just reward.

Finally, the Socialist movement must first be concerned in the needs of the working class; that they be fed and comforted; that their physical bodies be protected against want and vice; that they be supplied with FOOD, CLOTHING and SHELTER.

This is the ultimate aim of Socialism.

Charity is the skim milk which the capitalists give back to the plundered workers after consuming the cream.

STRICKLANDS AT JACKSON, MICH.

The Patriot, of Jackson, Mich., says: "Fred Strickland, perhaps the most interesting and capable of the Socialist orators who have appeared in the city this winter, gave an excellent address at the Masonic Temple last evening, using as his theme "The Socialist Party." There was a good attendance and the value and interest of the lecture was in a supplementary talk given by Mr. Strickland's wife, May Strickland. In her lecture Mrs. Strickland touched principally on the familiar phases of the struggle for a livelihood, among the poor classes, traceable to the high cost of living, but her husband handled the subject of Socialism broadly, treating of the failures of both the Democratic and Republican parties to fulfill their promises, or legislate in the interest of the workingman, and gave hopeful predictions of what will be accomplished by the Socialist party when it is voted into power."

"SOCIALISM, WHAT IT IS AND HOW TO GET IT."

(By Oscar Ameringer, of Oklahoma.)

"Socialism, What It Is and How To Get It" is the title of the booklet, and the author, Oscar Ameringer, of Oklahoma, is known throughout the country as one of the most original and capable speakers in the Socialist propaganda field.

The book is solid argument from cover to cover, but is so interspersed with characteristic Ameringer humor that the various objections to Socialism are fairly ridiculed out of existence and capitalism is left without a peg to stand on.

It is an entirely new departure in the field of American Socialist literature, and every reader of The Socialist should send for at least a dozen copies to sell to his friends, neighbors and fellow-workers.

The price is 10 cents a copy; 75 cents a dozen. Address, POLITICAL ACTION, Brisbane Hall, Milwaukee, Wis.

GENERAL SOCIALIST NEWS.

Central Labor Union of Derby, Conn., passed resolutions endorsing the Socialist party and asking all workers to join it.

Luther Langston, secretary of the Oklahoma Federation of Labor and one of the best known orators in the Southwest, has joined the Socialist party.

Tacoma (Wash.) Central Labor Council and its paper, the Labor Advocate, have come out in support of the Socialist ticket. The rank and file in the local unions began to kick so hard that the central body woke up.

The free speech fight that has been waked by the Socialists in Brooklyn, N. Y., the biggest part of a year, seems to have been settled. All those who were arrested for street speaking have been discharged by the courts.

National Executive Committee Socialist party has voted to contribute $100 to assist the defense of the Free Press at New Castle, Pa., whose editors are held for "seditious libel," contempt of court and a few other things that the corrupt political hirelings of the United States Steel Corporation charged them with.

The tone of the United Mine Workers' Journal is distinctly progressive. The new editor, Michael Halapy, is barely 30 years of age, was born in Austria, is a linguist and self-educated. He announces that he intends to print everything that is advancing and uplifting in his mission to spread education among the miners.

Reports from Arizona show that the constitution of that state, which has aroused so much discussion around the country because of its radical features, has been ratified by about 75 per cent of the voters. Only Apache county gave a negative majority vote. The Apaches probably wanted to live up to their name, but in this case are more reactionary than the originals.

Victor Berger's first resolution in Congress calling upon Taft to withdraw the troops from the Mexican border and furnish the House with all documents relating to the maneuvers has aroused the big capitalist dailies, and they are asking what that demand has to do with Socialism, evidently overlooking the fact that the cardinal principle of international socialism is the abolition of war. Berger played the right card at the right time.

The Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial Appeal, one of the most influential dailies in the Southland, reviews socialism and concluded: "That is a safe and sane proposition. That system of government will reach perfection and human society will be in its full flower when every man can be assured that by honest work he will be able to maintain himself a wife, who may bear him as many children as nature intended for her to have, and that he may rear those children decently and support himself and wife in his old days."

Victor L. Berger, the Socialist Congressman, will introduce a number of labor bills in the near future and will press their consideration despite the fact that the Democrats, the so-called friends of labor, have already announced, their legislative program in which labor as usual is ignored. The extra session will last at least five months, according to the Democratic leaders, and will consider much legislation other than the tariff. The busiest office in the big marble House office building is room No. 249. That is where Congressman Berger, Secretary Ghent and a stenographer toil from morn to night conversing with talkative visitors, answering volumes of mail and filling large waste-baskets with alleged poetry and freak letters. It seems that everybody in the country who has a real or imagined grievance is now writing Berger all about it. The real ones are considered and the other ones are put in a large drawer labeled "Fakes and Freaks." Then the office receives the usual requests for free seeds, documents and Berger's opinion on this or that alleged national issue. All these things are keeping the Socialist office pretty busy. It is their belief that much of this flood of mail is due to the novelty of having a Socialist in Congress, and it is their sincere hope that future mail will only contain legitimate business matters. Otherwise the office force will have to be increased. Berger has been assigned a place on the Committee on the District of Columbia because of his knowledge of municipal matters. He will also be assigned on two more committees, one of which will probably be the Labor Committee.

HEAVY SOCIALIST VOTE IN ST. LOUIS.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—The heavy Socialist vote at last week's municipal election is the general topic of conversation, and the daily papers are compelled to editorialize about it. The Socialist candidates for city council—G. A. Hoehn, W. H. Worman, Otto Pauls, W. Kindorf, Otto Kaemmerer and M. Stopp—received an average vote of 12,000. This is a net increase of 4,000 over the Socialist vote at last November's elections.

In view of the fact that last November the total vote cast in St. Louis was 140,000, while yesterday only a total of 82,000 votes was recorded, the Socialist growth is most gratifying.

While the Republican and Democratic vote showed a decrease of about 40 per cent., the Socialist vote jumped from 3,000 last November to 12,000 yesterday.

In the Tenth Ward the Socialists had the most exciting political fight in the history of the St. Louis political movement. And the fight is not over yet, either.

THE KEEN DAILY PRESS FAILS.

All the daily newspapers of the city are against the Social-Democratic administration.

Now, each one of these papers has a staff of editors and reporters. These reporters go all over the city. They range over the city hall, jail, court house and coroner's office.

They scour and search every corner of all buildings and offices controlled by Social-Democrats.

Yet with all their searching, scouring, peering, tampering, investigating, they have not been able to raise one solid, lasting criticism of the administration.

These reporters have keen eyes and sharp wits. They know to a certainty all the big, important things going on.

They would get special credit from their editors if they could bring in some genuine facts that would shame the city administration.

If a reporter could get a true story about waste or incompetency or extravagance by the Social-Democrats, he knows that story would go on the front page of his paper with big headlines over it.

Aside from a few baseless rumors, and with the exception of interviews and speeches of the council minority and disgruntled office-hunters, the papers have had absolutely nothing about waste, incompetency, extravagance. It has been hard work for these keen, live reporters, with their keen eyes and sharp wits, to "put one across" on the Socialists.

They have looked for big schemes and for little tricks, by the Social-Democrats against the best interests of the city. But it has all failed.

They have done their work well—as well as it could be done with the purpose in view. But it has failed.

The present administration stands today and will stand tomorrow as "the best administration Milwaukee has ever had."

And once in a while comes the word to the Socialists from Milwaukee business men, who must perforce keep their names hidden from Socialist alliance, that we have today the most efficient, approachable, constructive city government Milwaukee has ever had. Still again, visitors, such as Dr. Eliot of Harvard, and others, not well enough known to break into public print, testify that there is rare grasp and intelligence now at the municipal helm in Milwaukee.

For this praise we are not lacking in appreciation. But our standards of service, and our ideal of the Better City—these we will not change. These we had and these we will stick to, no matter how high the praise we get, no matter how false and foul the condemnation.—Social-Democratic Herald.

WOMEN MUST SELL THEMSELVES FOR HOMES.

Professor Charles Zueblin, the famous sociologist, says some interesting things about marriage.

"The lack of economic independence," he said, "has compelled women to place a stigma upon their sex. It's a painful fact that, unless a man and woman love each other, or are sacrificing themselves for the sake of their children, they have no right to live together.

"Yet there are millions who do and must. If woman was given economic independence, it would relieve her of that stigma.

"It would seem also that it would relieve her of her chief moral defect—her circumlocution, by which she gets around men, whether during the illusions of courtship or the rifling of pockets after marriage.

"The difficulty is that not only is woman dependent upon man, but all her rich nature, the sum total of her personality, is dependent upon one man's income.

"Generally marriage is a spiritual relationship, a social institution. Love may be made in heaven and many marriages may be incensed with love, but it really is a social device for the protection of children."

THE OPEN (PEON) SHOP.

There are two classes in modern society—the capitalist class and the working class.

The capitalist class gets together on the field of EXPLOITATION and at the ballot-box, and thereby get 83 per cent. of the wealth, in spite of the fact that they do not produce ANY.

The working class have not yet gotten together sufficiently on the field of PRODUCTION nor at the ballot-box, and therefore they only get 17 per cent. of the wealth, in spite of the fact that they produce it ALL.

The capitalist class are going to try and disorganize the working class further, through the open shop, so that they may get 99 per cent. of the wealth they do not produce, and leave the working class one per cent. of the wealth they DO produce.

The purpose of the open shop is: Low Wages, Long Hours, Child Slavery, Prostitution, Dangerous Factories, Industrial War, and Mnurder, High Cost of Living and a General Demoralization and Degeneration, Mentally and Morally as well as Politically, of the mass of the people.

I challenge any Open Shopper to DENY IT.

MURRAY YOUTS,
Cleveland, Ohio.

The working class has been taught to worship its capitalist masters by subjecting itself and mind to them. "Not my will but thine be done," as symbolized in the Scriptures, is the way they have been taught to think. But you know, the pendulum swings as far one way as it does the other, and soon the workers will be saying, "Not thy will but ours be done." Then we will see the "upper cla(w)ss" earn their cake and milk to the tune of Socialist fiddlers.

The music of life is written with bank notes.

BATTLE CALL FROM MILWAUKEE.

The Republicans and Democrats in Milwaukee have united against the Socialists. The entire forces of capitalism have combined to overthrow, if possible, the workingmen's administration.

Workingmen and Socialists, will you through your inactivity permit this? Will you allow the one large Socialist city in the United States to be retaken by the enemy?

No! You Socialists of America will surely answer.

You will stand by Milwaukee, because the election of the first Socialist Congressman from Milwaukee makes the success or failure of the Milwaukee movement a matter of concern to the membership of the entire party.

We must not allow the one Socialist voice in the Congress of the United States to be silenced.

Now we may not be able to hold Milwaukee in the mayoralty and congressional elections next year unless we have a Milwaukee Socialist daily. In the by-election, just past, the capitalist press poured out the most monstrous falsehoods, calumnies and slanders against the Socialists and the Socialist administration. The Socialists had only one weekly paper to answer all these lies. It was like trying to silence nine big Krupp guns with one little shotgun.

You can figure it out for yourselves that one paper, printing the truth once a week, can not counteract nine papers grinding out poison every day.

We must have a Socialist daily in Milwaukee. But it must be a first-class daily in order to compete with the capitalist papers. To start fair, we must have $100,000.

Now the Milwaukee comrades can probably raise half of this sum. They have already subscribed nearly $15,000. But the Milwaukee movement is composed almost exclusively of workingmen. They are willing to sacrifice. One of the Milwaukee workingmen wants to sell his little home to help raise this sum. But, with all their sacrifices, they can not be expected to raise more than half of the one hundred thousand dollars.

Comrades of America, will you raise the other half?

Do you remember how cheered you were when you heard that Milwaukee had gone Socialist? And again, when you heard that a Milwaukee Socialist had broken into Congress?

There can be no doubt that the encouragement of the Milwaukee victories had a great deal to do with the wave of Socialist success and growth which is now sweeping America. It was an inspiration to the entire country.

Therefore we make this appeal. The funds for the Milwaukee Socialist daily will be raised in $10 bonds. These bonds will pay four per cent. interest yearly, beginning December 1. This is not a donation. It is simply a loan—an investment. We believe it is a good investment.

Any further information on this subject can be obtained from H. W. Bristorius, Brisbane Hall, Sixth and Chestnut streets, Milwaukee, Wis.

Ten thousand Socialists, each buying a $10 bond, will hold our one big Socialist city and keep our one Socialist in Congress.

Comrades, against the fusion of the capitalist parties, let us show the solidarity of Socialists.

Rally to the defense of Milwaukee!

Fraternally yours,
E. H. THOMAS,
State Secretary.

THE VAGABOND AND HIS VICTIM.

A certain state official recently made this expression: "Socialists are not citizens, they are vagabonds." What about the dirty, slimy creature from Hamilton county who never did an honest day's work in his life? A creature who was repudiated by the men of his own party, and yet this reptile has the impudence to come to Columbus to demand the removal of an honest man from the office he so faithfully filled for the last fourteen years so that some of his easy henchmen can be taken care of. Let John R. McLain keep his imps with him in Washington, D. C. Charles B. Galbraith will leave the office of State librarian with the esteem and respect of all who knew him and his admiring friends are legion in number. As State librarian he lived in a pure intellectual atmosphere and he never allowed his department to be contaminated or dominated by the social parasites who brought about his removal. He was a valuable servant to the State because he not only understood books, but better still he understood humanity. The victim of this political abuse retires with the honor of being one of the most coonciencious officials in the State of Ohio. What about the incentive under capitalism?

PARK AND PLAYGROUND ASSOCIATION.
Columbus, Ohio, April 17, 1911.
(Printed in a scab shop.)

Dear Sir:

You as a good citizen are of course in favor of taking our parks out of politics.

The park commission plans contemplates a commission of three high grade citizens who will expend the money now grossly misapplied.

No additional expense is involved, the commission being powerless to acquire funds except through the regular channels.

With the exception of some politicians greedy of power, THE SOCIALISTS ARE THE ONLY ORGANIZED BODY OPPOSING THE PLAN. THEY FEEL A VICTORY WHILE YOU SLEEP ON YOUR RIGHT TO VOTE WILL ADVANCE THEIR CAUSE.

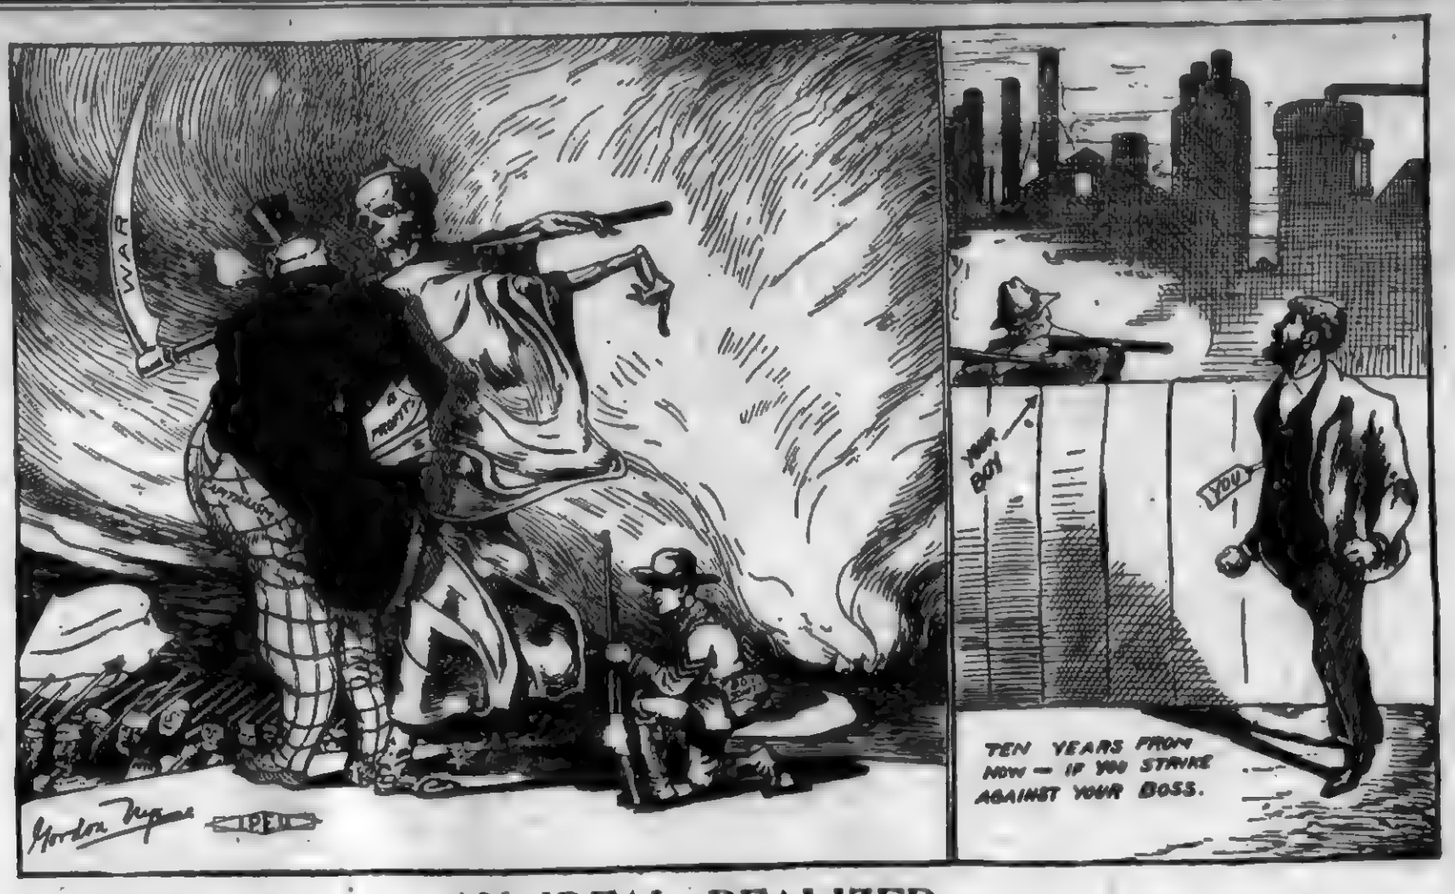
Every carrier of a RED CARD will vote NO. Please read the enclosed pamphlet of which 30,000 have been distributed by the Socialists. The statements are of course intended to mislead and arouse passion. Get out and vote yes, telephone your friend to vote.

PARK AND PLAYGROUND ASSOCIATION.

Election tomorrow, Tuesday, April 18th. No registration required.

OUR SCHOOL BOARD BUREAUCRACY.

Mr. Worker, it's about time that you was represented on the school board. For many years this institution has been made up of doctors and "has been repudiated politicians." You ought to have some say concerning the education of your children. The present board is afraid that you intend to do this, Mr. Worker, so they have reduced the membership from 15 to 11.



GEO. B. COX WILL BE TRIED BY HIS OWN JUDGES.

The State of Ohio had the impudence to tell George B. Cox that he was to be tried before an honest judge. Law and Cox are words of three letters. They appear to have the same meaning with our State Supreme Court. Hence, Dear George will be judged by the men he created. Capitalism stands for the rights of private property. Well, George owns the judges.

A Columbus bank has been mulcted out of $1,000 by cashing a check made payable to a man who had been dead for several years.

If a wage-earner had presented a check for $6.77, he would have received an icy glare and been asked to have some one "identify" him.

We would advise our readers to watch the daily papers for land sales. These lots will be located along the Scioto river and Alum Creek." Wonder who really is holding the bag?

The Socialists of Curransville elected James Perkins mayor.

Joseph Watson was elected Socialist councilman from the Fourth ward of Rossdale.

The Socialists of Elroy elected an alderman in the Second ward. There was no mayoralty election.

Henry Stolse, Jr., was elected mayor of Manitowoc, the Socialists also getting everything but one alderman and one supervisor.

August Weisse, Socialist, was elected town chairman of Allouez county, also representing Green Bay on the county board.

In the school elections at Milwaukee the Socialist vote showed a large increase over the vote cast in a similar election two years ago, but, owing to the co-operation between both of the old parties the Socialists were unable to elect their candidates.

The Socialists of Mellen elected an assessor, comptroller and alderman.

STILL THEY COME.

Four Socialists Elected.

CHICAGO.—An unusually large vote polled in numerous Illinois cities and towns where elections were held this week for the first time under the new commission form of government, is said by advocates of the plan to indicate an increased interest in civic affairs by citizens. Four Socialist mayors were elected, at Franklin City, Grafton, O'Fallon and Davis. Neither wets nor drys scored any decided victory.

The above are the dates assigned for Comrade Fred G. Strickland's first lecture tour under the auspices of The Socialist. It seems to be the best possible arrangement that could be made. Advertising matter has been sent to the various locals, and now all that is needed is some activity on the part of the comrades in each place in order to make every one of these meetings a grand success. Comrade Strickland will do his part. He knows how, and any town he speaks in receives a new Socialistic shake-up.

UNIFORM SCHOOL BOOK BILL KILLED.

The lower house, late Thursday of last week, effectually put to sleep the Gebhardt uniform school book bill, and thereby destroyed all chances of enacting into law another section of the Democratic party platform. Democrats aided largely in the slaughter of the bill. It was defeated by a vote of 31 to 44.

Speaker Vining left the chair to fight for the bill on the floor. All day long the representatives listened to arguments for and against the measure. It was the bitterest verbal battle of the year in the lower house. Neither side hesitated to hurl invectives and insinuations.

This is only another evidence of the fact that the "big business interests" control the Ohio General Assembly, body and soul. It is utterly depraved.

President Taft has accepted the honorary presidency of the International Peace Forum. The Rev. John Wesley Hill, of New York, who made a tour of the country with Taft in the last campaign, is active in the organization and asked the President to become its honorary head. J. Wesley's League for Social Justice seems to have died young. It was formed to annihilate Socialism, but, like other similar movements, has dissolved like a soap bubble.

More men are worn out by toil or rusted out by idleness than die by malignant disease.

While poor criminals go to jail, the rich criminals go to England to see the coronation.

NEWS FROM THE NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS

The next meeting of the National Executive Committee will be held in the city of Boston, beginning April 29. Invitations to hold the meeting were received from Locals Indianapolis and South Bend, Ind., and Boston, this in keeping with the action taken in the December session to meet in different cities from time to time, upon invitations from local organizations.

Comrade Cora Martin has resigned as State Secretary of Arizona, and Comrade George H. Newsholme, No. 2 Monihon Building, Phoenix, Ariz., has been elected secretary pro tem.

By a recent referendum in Pennsylvania the following comrades were re-elected as members of the National Committee: James H. Maurer, 1516 North Tenth street, Reading; John W. Slayton, McKeesport; Thomas F. Kennedy, 736 Fredericks street, McKee's Rocks. Comrade Joseph E. Cohen, 3085 Kensington avenue, Philadelphia, was elected as the additional representative on that committee.

The State Convention of the Socialist party of New Hampshire will be held at Elks' Hall, Hanover street, Manchester, Thursday, April 27, beginning at 10:30 a. m.

In order to keep pace with the rapid increase in the membership the Socialist press is also rapidly increasing. The comrades in Detroit, Mich., are issuing a weekly working-class paper, entitled "Emancipator," at 574 Grand River avenue, Detroit. Subscription price $1 a year. The Memphis Social Democrat is another new Socialist weekly, and is published at 1385 Indiana street, Memphis, Tenn. Price 50 cents a year. The Socialists of Everett, Wash., have also fallen into line, and are publishing a weekly entitled "The Commonwealth," at 815 Commerce Building, Everett. Price $1 a year.

Comrade B. Ford Rogers, of Lewiston, Idaho, reports that the comrades there are ready to publish a weekly Socialist paper and that they are in need of a competent newspaper man to take charge as general manager.

NOTICE TO LOCALS.—In the matter of endorsing proposed national party referendums the locals are requested, when sending notice of a second to any proposal, to also state in the same communication the number of good-standing members enrolled in the local. This will avoid further and unnecessary correspondence. The constitution provides that referendums shall be submitted "Upon the request of locals representing at least five per cent. of the entire membership of the party on the basis of due paid in the preceding year."

Comrades are earnestly requested to send the names and addresses of all college men and women, graduates and undergraduates, who are interested, or likely to become interested in Socialism, to Harry W. Laidler, organizer of the Intercollegiate Socialist Society, at Room 902, Tilden Building, 105 West Fortieth street, New York City.

THE REINCARNATION OF ARNAMAS.

New History of the Columbus Street Car Company.

The Electric Railway Journal for March, reprints a pamphlet issued by the Columbus Rail and Light Company, giving their side of the past issues of the memorial car strike. The article is not signed by Mr. General Manager Stewart, but the juggled facts of the article lead us to believe that he had some say in the makeup. "Liars need good memories," is an old saying.

Read this extract. Notice how merciful the good, benevolent E. K. Stewart, General Manager, is made to appear:

"The general manager carefully read the paper and stated to the men that he was sorry that they thought it necessary to go to the trouble to get up a petition on a matter of this kind, for the reason that the subject of increase of wages had already been up before the board of directors and a substantial advance had been decided upon to take effect in the early spring, just as soon as it could be conveniently arranged, and that the company had made advances from time to time in the way of increased dividends to employes by reason of increased dividends to the stockholders of the company (this company having several years since adopted the plan of distributing dividends to its employes on wages earned in the same ratio that dividends are paid to stockholders of the company). This seemingly had been overlooked by the men, although as a matter of fact it was equivalent to an increase in wages.

"The men complained of the increased cost of living, which the general manager could not deny, but in reply said: 'Well, boys, the company is hardly responsible for that state of affairs, but we are all alike in that particular, and about the only thing left for all of us to do is to try and get along and if possible live more economically.'"

You will notice that "beans and rice" are missing—and "I want to get my fighting blood up," expressions used by General Manager E. K. Stewart.

The Columbus Rail and Light Co. have gone back on their word so many times, that the entire citizenship pay no heed to their statement. Then history of the past has been one of graft and boodle. And when the strike broke out the General Manager thought he could handle some of the labor leaders like some of the councils were handled in past days. The testimony of the street car officials before the State Board of Arbitration is one of the vilest documents on record in the State House. Its pages brand these officials as trained tools who act and talk like trained parrots at the will of the chief imp. We present this extract for the personal judgment of our readers:

"The deductions from the findings of the State Board of Arbitration showed that of about 50 charges made by the men against the company less than 20 per cent were sustained by the board. Of those sustained, more than one-half were sustained on the supposition that men who were in fact still working had been discharged from the service; in fact the whole 50 charges simmered down to the discharge of two men. The findings of the board were made public late Saturday evening, July 22, and at four o'clock the following morning (Sunday), without conferring further or seeking to ascertain even whether the company would or would not abide by the award of the board, the union men went out on a strike and inaugurated the warfare that for 12 weeks and 2 days disgraced the State and its capital with lawlessness and a reign of terror."

The people want the world to know that the street car company not only own our streets, but they also own the Columbus Board of Commerce and the sheriff and most of the judiciary of Franklin county. And when Mr. Stewart's ex-convict companion, Coach of Cleveland, arrived in our home city, it was not a riot, but rather the voice of an indignant, suffering public. The men who represent the Columbus street car company will some day be forgotten, also the judges and other fawning county officials who heard their "master's voice" and answered the same with infamous actions. But the "cause" has kindled the fires of liberty and some day this city will free itself from the clutches of this greedy crime-besmirched monster known as the Columbus Rail & Light Co.

METAL POLISHERS WIN BIG VICTORY.

Unionize Grand Rapids, Michigan, Musical Instrument Plant After Long Fight.

Timothy Daly, president of the Metal Polishers, Buffers and Platers' International Union, announced yesterday that he has succeeded in unionizing the musical instrument plant of York & Sons, of Grand Rapids, Mich., after a fight which has lasted three and a half years.

The company has agreed to reinstate all their old employes and discharge all the scabs in their employ. They also agreed to pay the union scale of wages, and the plant will now be operated under union conditions. The firm will hereafter use the union label of the Metal Polishers on all the instruments manufactured by them.

The fight against this firm started as a result of the determination of the polishers to unionize the plant. The firm has done its utmost to prevent organization, and when the men joined the union they were locked out.

The polishers conducted an energetic fight against the firm and carried on a campaign against ther products. The polishers consider this a great victory, as this was one of the most desperate battles ever carried on by the organization.

Daly will stay in town and take charge of the fight of the polishers of this city, who have been out on strike against the Chandelier Manufacturers' Association for nearly eight months.

RAILWAY EMPLOYES BETRAYED

Eugene V. Debs, in the April 8th edition of the Appeal to Reason, tears the mask from the grand chiefs of the railroad brotherhoods and they stand revealed as tools in the employ of the railroads.

Documentary evidence is submitted which shows that the railroad men have been duped for years by as smooth a brace of scoundrels as ever disgraced the labor movement.

Pat Morrissey, former grand chief of the Railway Trainmen, is now pulling down a salary of $12,000 a year as president of the "American Railway Employes' and Investors' Association," an organization formed solely in the interests of the poor railroads.

Railroad men throughout the country are now being coerced into joining this association, which proposes to make a fight against any reduction of freight rates.

Debs challenges either Morrissey or Lee to face a representative of the Appeal to Reason before railroad employes if they think an injustice has been done them. It is safe to say that none of the men involved will care to do this. It's about time the railroad brotherhoods were cleaning house.

OHIO FEDERATION OF LABOR.

The Executive Board met in Columbus on Tuesday, April 18. The following members of the board were present: President Voll, Secretary Harry Thomas, Hitchens, and Thomas Farrell. The Employers' Liability and the Woman's Shorter Workday measures are soon to come to a vote. Legislative Agent Ike Byrum reports the need of continual letter writing to the representatives in behalf of the workers' legislation.

HAVE POST OFFICE EMPLOYES SOULS?

Postmaster Krumm appears to be afraid of his job. Many of the larger cities are closing up the post offices on Sunday, but in Columbus, with Mr. Big Business in control, a man's soul receives little if any consideration. Write to Congressman Berger, at Washington, D. C. Tell him that the Columbus postmaster is heeding the requests of the few instead of the demand of the many. Let us find out whether Mr. Krumm is the "master" or servant of the people.

THE GOVERNOR'S STAFF BE-[illegible]

Lieutenant Hamilton J. De Weese will not leave for Old Mexico right away, because this noble warrior has to stand trial for graft. Wonder if the "little bush" will be able to get on the jury?

"Bush" will soon leave for Mexico. Good riddance to all things unnecessary.

THE DISPATCH BUILDING FUND.

The Dispatch Newsboys' Band, we understand, are practising a ballad entitled "Every little bit taken from what we ought to have got makes the poor news-boys awful sore."

CARPENTERS' UNION.

Business Agent Baggs can be found at his office any morning before 8.30 and after 3:30 in the afternoon. Look here, Mr. Socialist, if you are not in the union of your craft, get in line. It's a duty you owe the dead for their past efforts. If you want to get some carpenter work done, call Citz. phone 1V10.

COLUMBUS FEDERATION OF LABOR.

Next Monday night will be an important meeting. First, we shall meet in the large hall. One of the important issues will be the forming of an organization to arrange for the working class to be represented in the coming constitutional convention.

UNITED MINE WORKERS.

This organization has none of its membership located here. It's only representatives consists of the state secretary and a clerical force.

NEWS FOR JOBLESS WORKERS.

Mr. Atlee Pomerene, United States senator of Ohio, recently dined with President Taft. In the next campaign Mr. Pomerene will tell the workers not to vote for Mr. Taft, or his people, but the workers realize that it is a question of "two souls that have one single thought, two hearts that beat as one"—in the interests of capitalism.

Lieutenant Chamberlain, a gallant member of Governor Harmon's military staff, and likewise a mud-bespattered hero of the Columbus street car strike, is at the present time acting as secretary to this peace loving senator, Mr. Atlee Pomerene. The workers have no reason to believe that Mr. Chamberlain is at Washington in their interests. Mr. Chamberlain's interests are to burden the people with unnecessary military appropriations. But then this is an age of civilization. We burn some men up in an electric chair for killing individuals on the street, and we decorate and pension others for killing men by the thousands on the battlefields.

FILTHY PRINT SHOPS.

Some of the print shops in Columbus are not fit to keep a hog in. Many of the spittoons have not been emptied for months and the stench is enough to make a man try for admission to the Columbus Club. In many of these dismal dungeons men feel their way to sickness and death. We would suggest that some of the ministers remind some of these indifferent Egyptians that cleanliness is next to godliness. Who wants to be a booster for a living graveyard?

PLUMBERS AND GAS FITTERS.

Business Agent Tom Bertsh is the busiest man in town. The lazy legislature is keeping most of the representatives busy these days.

FRANKLIN COUNTY JAIL.

Fat Men Reduced to Skeletons.

Recently an article appeared in a morning paper headed "Lines Tighter Drawn on Visitors in Jail." The official charge was that somebody sumggled some saws into the jail to be used by some prisoners in breaking out of the jail, but we have reasons to believe that these tools were to be used to cut up some of the leather imported into the jail as meat. An incident is quoted where one of the inmates tried to escape down an elevator. This is a joke story, for this man weighed at least 175 pounds, and, after being under the care of our street car sheriff, the prisoner was able to pass through a dumb waiter 10 1/16 inches square. We do not know who the sheriff's press agent is, but many stirring stories are being written at the office of the Columbus Railway & Light Co., and we have reasons to judge the source of these jokes.

SHIP OF STATE, ETC.

Secretary to U. S. Senator Atlee Pomerene Defends the School Book Trust.

Trust Headquarters, Hartman Hotel, at $16 Per Day—Occupied the Same All Winter.

The Uniform Text Book Bill legislative hearing exposed the worst bunch of legislative pirates that ever uttered a prayer or scuttled a ship. Mr. A. P. Black of Ashland, Ohio, the chief pirate who is soon to leave the Ohio legislature to fill the places of secretary to U. S. Senator Pomerene was the leader of this academic crew. We cheerfully give him this recommendation. Should the U. S. Senate see fit to unseat U. S. Senator Lorimer of Illinois, the privileged interests could not find a better tool than Mr. Black of Ashland, Ohio, to shape laws in their interests. Mr. Warren of Holmes county, the member who was supposed to represent all the citizens of that county, admitted that he was there in the interest of 26,000 school teachers. The members arrogance was worthy of notice. It was a play to the galleries from start to finish, and considering that the school book gang had two stenographers in the visitors' gallery taking down everything that was said we hope he made good. But what about the widow who has to wash to provide these criminals with their legislative spoils? President Thompson of the Ohio State University was charged with lobbying in the interest of these diplomatic robbers. Some people appeared to doubt the sincerity of this statement, but from a worker's standpoint these men appear to be our oppressors' most pliable tools and just as long as the State employes are allowed to practice their subsidized actions, just so long will the working class be robbed by the infamous American School Book Trust.

THE LEGISLATIVE VINDICATION OF THE HON. C. A. THATCHER.

The Ohio Bar and the Closed Shop.

Labor all over the State of Ohio should rejoice, because an honest man has been reinstated to the practice of the law. Our friend was disbarred for daring to criticise the worst bunch of court jugglers that ever kissed the Bible and shamed its pages, or wore a black gown as real token of their wretched infamies.

By a vote of 79 to 7 our noble friend rode to victory. What was his crime? Mr. Thatcher took the case of a man who lost his legs in the service of a railroad corporation. He won the suit for damages. But the judge was owned, soul and body, by the railroad corporation and he set the verdict aside. At the next election when this judge came up for re-election, Mr. Thatcher took the platform against this enemy of labor, and the truth juggler was defeated. Of course you have heard the old saying, "there is honor among thieves." Well, the corporation parrots known as the Ohio Supreme Court, declared themselves to be an aggrieved party. The Ohio Bar Association being a closed shop, they took away Mr. Thatcher's working card. This forbid him working at his trade as a lawyer. And now the Legislature has given him back his working card and we, his friends, are watching the movements of that slimy crowd of corporate leaches that infest the Ohio Legislature, for fear that they may try to thwart the will of the people. Workers, be vigilant!

UNIVERSAL PEACE.

(John M. Work.)

If the cause of genuine human freedom ever demands it, we Socialists will shoulder our guns and get in line.

But we are in favor of universal peace just the same. And we are in favor of the only economic measures that can insure universal peace.

Every war has an economic cause.

Under the present capitalist system the industries of each nation are owned by a few capitalists. They hire wage-slaves to do the work. Modern machinery has made the productivity of these wage-slaves enormous. The capitalists pay them as wages on an average just about enough for them to live on and raise their children. As this is only a fraction of the value of their labor, it naturally follows that they are able to buy back only a fraction of the product. The capitalists and their retainers are unable to consume all the balance. Consequently there is a great surplus that has to seek a market abroad.

Every civilized nation is in this same condition. Every civilized nation is, therefore, constantly on the lookout to preserve its markets abroad, to secure new ones if possible, and also to gain or retain opportunities for the investment of surplus capital.

Right here lies the cause of all recent wars.

Here lay the cause of the Spanish-Cuban war.

Here lay the cause of the Spanish-American war.

Here lay the cause of the Philippine war.

Here lay the cause of the China-Japanese war.

Here lay the cause of the Boxer war.

Here lay the cause of the Boer war.

Here lay the cause of the Russo-Japanese war.

Every one of these wars was fought ing foreign or colonial markets, and for the purpose of gainong or retaingaining or retaining opportunities for the investment of surplus capital.

Here also lies the reason why all the nations of the world are at swords' points.

They are all maintaining immense navies for the sole and only purpose of gaining and retaining foreign markets and opportunities for investment.

Socialism will abolish war, because it will put an end to the fierce contest for foreign markets and investments.

When Socialism is established, the men and the women who do the necessary and useful mental and manual labor of the world will receive the full value of the product. They will consume the product themselves. If they are not able to consume it all, they will shorten their hours of labor and not produce so much. As a matter of course, they will exchange products with other nations, each nation getting those things which it desires for use. But they will have no occasion at all to engage in a scramble for foreign markets or investments.

Therefore, when all nations are socialized, the cause of war will be gone.

The navies can be placed in the Socialist museum.

Some people have scoffed at us because of our opposition to war. They have contemptuously declared that our expectation is Utopian.

But, when the cause of war is once realized, it is easy to see that Socialism will remove that cause, and that therefore the abolition of war is a certainty instead of an idle dream.

The Socialists have already made their influence felt in preventing war.

When Norway withdrew from Sweden, the capitalists of Sweden wanted to force her back into the alliance, because the two nations combined could exercise more porew and influence in foreign affairs—that is, in the gaining and retaining of foreign markets and opportunities for investments. But the Socialists of Sweden declared that they would refuse to fight against the workingmen of Norway. And, as a very large proportion of the workingmen of Sweden are Socialists, the capitalists were compelled to abandon the war project.

Likewise, when France and Germany got into trouble over Morocco, because French and German capitalists had money invested in Morocco and wanted markets there, the French and German Socialists were unanimously of the opinion that the workingmen of France and Gremany had no quarrel with each other and that it would be folly for them to help their masters, the capitalists, to fight with each other over markets and investments. Without a doubt, it was their influence that caused the two nations to settle the question peaceably.

So, the Socialists have already prevented war to a considerable extent, and prevented the shedding of a vast amount of human blood.

It is useless for the capitalists to enter into a war, unless they can foment hatred among the people, so that they will go forth and fight the battles, while the capitalists themselves keep at a safe distance.

For the capitalists never fight battles. They may not be invincible in peace, but they are certainly invisible in war. They always stay at home and rake in the money while the workingmen spill each other's blood.

When the workingmen are not foolish enough to consent to do the fighting, the war has to be called off.

As fast as the Socialists become more numerous, war will become less frequent.

When the Socialists gain control of all the nations, war will cease altogether.

We will then have universal peace.

We will then realise Tennyson's dream of a federation of the world. As August Bebel predicts, there will be a world parliament, formed of the representatives of all the civilised nations, which will regulate international relations and render them more and more stable.

THE AMERICAN FLAG.

No doubt the opponents of Socialism will object to the Socialists claiming our national flag as the emblem of Socialism. Nevertheless, the component parts of the emblem symbolizes the principles of Socialism very completely.

The seven red stripes in the national flag stand for the same idea as the red flag of our party, "the symbol of the common red blood which flows in the veins of all mankind;" in other words, international unity.

The six white stripes are the symbols of purity in national, state and municipal government; purity in politics, purity in social and domestic life.

The field of blue is the emblem of loyalty and fidelity to principles and truths and our highest conception of justice and right under all conditions; and the stars in the field of blue symbolizes the unity of nations and the common interest of all.

These are the principles for which Socialism stands, among all nations and all peoples, and we are proud to own allegiance to the flag which symbolizes them.—M. Herbert Sommers.

FORBIDDING TO MARRY.

Harvard's most brilliant exponent of economics has a corking good remedy for poverty. During an evening chat in the university building, while Professor Carver was "interpreting" a page of Socialist's economics to some two dozen students, he stated that Socialism was too radical to be of much avail in eliminating poverty, but suggested the following specific: "Since owing to the fact that wages are lowered by competition among the laborers, the state should pass laws prohibiting marriage among low paid laborers, which, of course, would reduce further production of unskilled labor; the law of supply and demand will automatically adjust itself by the resultant increase in wages." How is this for logic?—Exchange.

THE BONNET.

I found it in a cedar chest
With samplers old and frayed,
And high-heeled slippers, once the joy
Of some coquettish maid,
This ancient bonnet, quaintly shirred
With cap and faded wreath
Of little rosebuds, matching once
The cheek that blushed beneath.

It still exhales a faint perfume
Of lavender and musk,
As sweet as some forgotten voice
That speaks from Memory's dusk;
And in the dainty ruche of lace,
That framed her forehead fair,
Is tangled yet a single thread
Of glittering, golden hair.

Though she is dust for many a year
Who once so neatly tied
The silken strings beneath her chin,
And viewed herself with pride,
Return it to the chest with frill
And fan and furbelow,
It still belongs to one who lived,
A century ago.

—Minna Irving.

CONSERVATISM AND REFERENDUM.

The referendum, to which Conservatism in this country points with alarm and horror, is apparently becoming a staple plank in the platform of Conservatism in England. Mr. Balfour, leader of the Conservative party, has again advocated it, recently declaring before the Constitutional Club that the referendum should be made a permanent feature of the British constitution.—Saturday Evening Post.

Carson, Nevada.—The question of woman's suffrage is now to be submitted to a vote of the people of the state, the senate having passed the referendum bill, previously passed by the house.

THE ZOO NURSERY.

(By Laura Crozier.)

The Zoo baby doesn't grow just like Topsy or like its wild prototype; in fact, it is surrounded by more care and comfort than fall to the lot of some human babies, and the New York Zoological Society in the Bronx has perhaps the largest nursery in the United States, where its animal babies receive the care of their own keepers and, if possible, of their own mothers.

Animal mothers, like human mothers, vary in temper—some are devoted to their babies and some are not. As a general rule, lionesses and tigresses and bears are less trustworthy than others.

Little Jo-jo, the eyeless, earless, pink morsel of a Siberian bear born last spring, found a mother that cared for him two days and then deserted him in the middle of a bitter night.

Bedouin Maid is an example of an lioness that has always taken care of her own cubs. Born with eyes tight shut, they are tawny reddish balls, covered with black spots which fade as their coats grow yellow. She feeds them constantly and washes them with her broad tongue like a cat, holding them down with one powerful paw. At two months old they weight ten pounds, when their teeth begin to come, and at six months they are weaned and fed on meat-broth.

Some of the animal mothers are even charitable enough to adopt the the deserted babies of others. Five baby lemurs arrived in the nursery of the monkey-house within a period of two days last winter, an unprecedented event, for previously only one or two monkeys had been born there. The nursery was naturally overcrowded, and some of the mothers and babies had to be kept in the same cages. On the morning of the second day the keeper found that one mother had deserted her baby, and another had adopted it, caring for it with her own, carrying one in her arms in the usual way and the other on her back, without a shadow of partiality.

But the Zoo nursery is not intended for happy families and adopted foundlings alone. It must take care also of the orphans acquired by purchase, and usually young, that they may grow up accustomed to their surroundings. These the keepers must bring up by hand if there is no mother of the same species to adopt them. Armed with a bottle of milk or of a patent animal food properly diluted to suit the needs of his charge, the keeper becomes a nurse in earnest and usually a most successful one. Last spring a baby porcupine from Canada grew up to sturdy quillhood on the bottle.

Dohong, the talented ape that learned to dress and eat at table like a human, was a bottle-fed baby for months in the nursery of the monkey-house. He found an affinity in Polly, a chimpansee, and for years she shared his meals with him to the delight of the New York school-children. Two tiny marmosets recently came all the way from India wrapped in cotton-batting, and fed by their keeper on sweetened milk and bits of fruit.

Just as a human baby sometimes gets beyond the care of his mother and his nurse, and has to have the doctor, so the Zoo baby sometimes needs medical or even surgical attention. Little bear and lion cubs have a really dreadful time getting their teeth, which are not all through until they are two years old, and their swollen gums often have to be lanced. Sometimes the trouble is even more serious. Congo, a little elephant purchased a year or two ago by the New York Zoo, was a most unpromising youngster when he arrived for both hind legs were so badly sprung that he walked upon his ankles. The cure was simple. Doctor Blair fitted him with a pair of leather braces, and in six months his legs were straight and strong. During his convalescence, however, he had been so petted by his keeper and visitors that he developed a very amusing trick. The public has been forbidden to feed the animals ever since several monkeys were found dead with thimbles, bits of glass, and hairpins in their stomachs. (Consider the depravity of the human brutes that gave such things to them.) But Congo's appealing trunk thrust through the bars of his stall was not to be resisted, and he began to receive pennies and even nickels in the place of peanuts. A cash register was finally arranged for him, by means of which he was taught to ring up his gifts, which now pay for his daily allowance of hay and six quarts of peanuts on Sunday as well as for other little treats which his less talented neighbors do not get.

VALUABLE BABY ANIMALS.

Another, big baby patient was the rhinocdros purchased two or three years ago. When it arrived it had a queer swelling on the side of the neck, which on examination was found to be an abscess. This the doctor lanced and evacuated, cleansing the cavity with the four per cent solution of cocaine which he uses in many of his animal operations. The little rhinoceros stood quietly during the operation as if understanding what was being done.

There are two hospital rooms for the hardy animals, and there the buffalo calves, kids and fawns, first see the light. They need little care unless deserted by their mothers, and even then some other mothers can usually be persuaded to adopt them.

"It seems to be essential that the first feeding should come from the mother herself," says Doctor Blair. "We can take an animal on the second day and be reasonably sure of raising it by the help of some other animal or upon artificial food. The formulas for this have to be as carefully worked out to suit every special case as they would be for a human baby. But even when we find something that they will take and thrive on, we can not be sure that the lion and bear cubs will live until they are two years old and have all their teeth."

Why all this trouble over a baby which, after all, is only an animal? Because each of these babies has a real market value, measured by its rarity and by the difficulty of capturing it in the forest. A pink and hairy baby elephant would bring $500 to $600, a giraffe $2,000 to $3,000, and a chimpansee, should one ever be born in captivity, $250 to $300.

Asiatic deer and wolves, on the other hand, breed so rapidly that it is impossible to give them away. And yet next to the crowned wolf pens at the New York Zoo is the little gray Arctic fox, a gift of the Rainey expedition, and valued at $1,500, because his like is nowhere else to be found below the Arctic circle. So the keeper-nurses work faithfully, the doctor makes his daily visits, and the photographer takes the babies' pictures. And when it comes to the baby's name, not only his official family undertake to supply him with one, but the whole city of New York apparently bends its mind to the problem, and suggestions pour in as soon as the papers chronicle a new arrival.—From Collier's.

IF I WERE YOU.

(By George H. Murphy.)

If I were you, I often say
To those who need advice,
I'd always look before I leaped;
I'd always think it over twice.
And then I heave a troubled sigh—
For, after all, I'm only I.

I'd ne'er discuss, if I were you,
The failings of my fellow-men;
I'd think of all their virtues first,
And scan my own shortcomings then.
But though all this is good and true,
I am but I; I am not you.

If I were you and half so vain,
Amidst my folly I would pause
To see how dull and light a fool
I was myself. I don't, because—
(And here I heave a pitying sigh)
I am not you; I'm only I.

If I were you, no selfish care
Should chase my cheery smile away;
I'd scatter round me love and hope;
I'd do a kindness every day.
But here again I find it true
That I am I, and you are you.

I would not be so very quick
To take offense, if I were you;
I would respect myself, at least,
Whatever others say or do.
Alas! Can no one tell me why
I am not you, instead of I?

In short, if I were only you,
And could forget that I was I;
I think that little cherub wings
Would sprout upon me, by and by.

THE NAUGHTY SUNBEAMS.

The little sunbeams assembled around the sun, to get their traveling orders for the day.

One sunbeam said:

"I want to go into the palace."

The second said:

"I wish to run along the boulevard."

The third cried:

"I want to roam on the fields."

The fourth begged:

"Let me float on the ocean bed."

All had picked out the loviest places and hurried off from the sun. But the sun called them back again. "Hold on there, you little rascals, there is still one spot to be visited. It is the dingy prison cell, in which a lone prisoner sits sadly for years."

All the sunbeams thereat began to cry and they made a great noise.

"It is so dark in the prison cell; it is so damp in the prison cell; it smells so mouldy in the prison cell; we don't want to go into the ugly prison cell."

Such and other complaints were heard on all sides.

This made the sun very angry and a cloud passed over his face. He took hold of one sunbeam by the hair and said:

"You were very mischievous and naughty yesterday. You crept and peeped into many forbidden places. You stood on a looking glass and teased a little girl's eyes. Since you did not behave, you will have to go into the prison cell."

So the naughty sunbeam went into the hated prison cell, but the poor prisoner was overjoyed to see him. It was as good as a holiday to him.—From the Little Socialist Magazine.

MILWAUKEE AND THE IDLE.

The newspapers of the country have made much ado about the unemployed in Milwaukee, and charge the Socialist administration with the condition that exists.

Are there a lot of unemployed in Milwaukee? Perhaps. Is there a larger proportion than before? Maybe.

If so, what is the reason?

Two main factors enter into this:

1. The Socialists are aware of the fact that the unemployed are victims, not criminals. For this reason these unfortunates are treated in a humane manner. Other cities treat the unemployed brutally and inhumanly.

So, of course, these unemployed try to find a place where the authorities do not break their heads after they have starved their stomachs.

2. The Socialists are workers, and understand the predicament in which the unemployed are. The Socialists, therefore, do their best to secure employment for workers and give them as much consideration as possible.

Because of this attitude the capitalist press has heralded abroad that the Socialists have promised jobs to all unemployed, and so these men naturally drift toward the city where they think they stand a chance to get work.

Of course it is impossible to give work to all until the industries are in the hands of the city, and that can not be done before the laws are changed—that is, for the present.

So if there is a larger proportion of unemployed in Milwaukee now than before, it is for the above-named reasons.

And the capitalist papers know they can embarrass Milwaukee by getting the unemployed to flock in.

No shops or mills have closed down in Milwaukee. Industry is better in Milwaukee under the Socialists than before. If it had not been for an abnormal influx of unemployed Milwaukee would be considered the most fortunate city in the country from the point of view of employment.

But now, since there are many unfortunates within its gates, Milwaukee goes forth to help.

So the city administration held a ball, charging 25 cents admission. Blocks of tickets were also sold, so that the income aggregated over $5,000.

Whenever did the Chamber of Commerce, in Columbus, do anything like that for the workers?

The capitalists give the unemployed the policeman's club. The Socialists give them a dance and all the proceeds.

Which do you prefer?

AT THE MINE MOUTH.

A press dispatch from Throop, Pa., where seventy-three men were smothered in a mine fire, says: "The undertakers fairly fought for the bodies, believing that the company would stand for a good, round charge, and scenes that were disgraceful resulted. Police authorities had to interfere to preserve some aspect of decency."

The same conditions that had driven the miners to their death had turned the undertakers, for the time being, into beasts, and for the money they hoped to get, for the money on which they themselves could live, they fought with one another for the possession of the dead.

The dispatch further says: "A canvass of the victims shows 45 widows and 137 children." There were more children than this, two of them, sons of John Stoyak, lie dead with him. Some of the married men had just reached manhood, and as yet, fortunately, there were no children. In other cases there had been children, quite a number of them, but in the mining districts many of them perish in infancy. As an illustration of what happens outside the mine, of the death that prevails everywhere, the story shows that the body of one miner was brought to a house where two of his children lay ill, one with typhoid, the other with scarlet fever.

Frenzied women were about the mine all day, watching until the body of husband or son was brought to the surface. Among them were the 45 widows with the 137 children. That is not quite up to the Rooseveltian standard of four children to each family. But life is often crushed out early in the mines, and it is hard for the miners to breed sufficient human material for the workings. Consequently new crowds of men must constantly be imported. The ranks must be kept filled up, for there is little time ordinarily for the fathers to train their sons to the business.

In the mining district not only is there the ever present menace of death in the mines themselves, but everywhere about are disease, poverty and death. But the mines yield huge incomes to those who own them. They have made rich, prosperous and happy hundreds of families. But these were the families who lived far away, who did not have to run any of the risks, and who feel none of the suffering connected with the production of the wealth they enjoy.

SHUTTING DOWN THE NEW ENGLAND MILLS.

Many of the largest New England cotton mills are going on a four days a week schedule so as to curtail the production and relieve the market. It does not happen that the people of this country are any too well clothed, but even during these so-called no-panic times poverty resulting from lack of work is widespread. In fact, the recovery from the crash of a few years ago, ironically called a rich men's panic, has not been up to the usual standard of recoveries. There has been no widespread boom, no demands in the labor market that wholly relieved the pressure.

One of the reasons is that industrial mechanism has reached a wonderful state of development. Another thing is that new areas of industry have been opened up. Some of the New England mill owners, who doubtlessly weep because they have to throw so many people out, have been systematically improving Southern mill production, or have been investing in Southern mills some of the profits wrung from the workers in Northern mills.

Through this ability to invest, the mill owner shows there is indeed no North and South, none at all, when dividends are concerned.

In the South, moreover, there are no bothersome laws against child labor. Little tots work at the looms, and are supposed to be thankful to the good capitalists who permit it.

As this is done at the expense of men and women—a great many of them pitifully young—an agitation should be started for the abolition of child labor laws in the North. Then the little ones might be able to support their parents. It is a plan that might appeal to Charles W. Eliot, for trades unions had something to do with passing these obnoxious laws, and trades unions interfere with liberty.

LOAN SHARKS UP AGAINST IT.

Loan sharks have not fared easy under Socialist administration in Milwaukee. Two have been haled into police court and fined fifty dollars. One had his license revoked and has left the city.

Twenty-five cases of extortionate charges were adjusted to the satisfaction of all concerned. Interest rates have ranged from 50 to 600 per cent. The close watch kept on this shady [illegible] has resulted in a general lessening of the loan shark evil.

It is recognised that no thorough and lasting improvement in this matter can come until the municipality can conduct a loan bureau. Toward this end it is hoped the bill drawn by City Attorney Hoan, now before the state legislature, will pass. The success of Dusseldorf, Hamburg and other continental cities of Europe, which have municipal loan bureaus, is pointed to. The loan sharks, however, have their representatives lobbying at Madison, and the fate of the loan bureau bill can not be foretold at the present time.—Political Action.

What Socialism Stands For.

Human life depends upon food, clothing and shelter. Only when these are assured are freedom, culture and higher human development possible. To produce food, clothing and shelter land and machinery are needed. Land by itself does not satisfy human needs. Human labor gets raw materials and food out of the soil by creating machinery and using it upon the land. Whoever has control of land and machinery has control of human labor, and with it of human life and liberty.

Today the machinery and the land used for industrial purposes are owned by a rapidly decreasing minority. So long as machinery is simple and easily handled by one man it does not make its owners so powerful that they can dominate the sources of life of others. But when machinery becomes more and more complex and expensive, and requires for its effective operation the organized effort of many workers, its influence reaches over wider circles of life. The owners of such machinery become the dominant class.

The Masses in Subjection.

In proportion as the number of such machine owners compared to all other classes decreases, their power in the nation and in the world increases. They bring ever larger masses of working people under their control, reducing them to the point where muscle and brain are their only productive property. Millions of formerly self-employing workers thus become the helpless wage slaves of the industrial masters.

The more the economic power of the ruling class grows, the less useful does it become in the life of the nation. The overwhelming bulk of the useful work of the nation falls upon the shoulders of the classes that either have no other productive property but their manual and mental labor power the wage workers — or that have but little land and little machinery outside of their labor power—the small traders and small farmers. The ruling minority is steadily becoming useless and parasitic.

A bitter struggle over the division of the products of labor is waged between the exploiting propertied class, on the one hand and the exploited, propertyless class on the other. In this struggle the wage working class cannot expect adequate relief from any reform of the present order from the dominant class of society.

The wage workers are therefore the most determined and irreconcilable antagonists of the ruling class. They are also the class which suffers most from the curse of class rule. The fact that a small number of capitalists is permitted to use all the country's resources and social tools for their individual profit, and to make the production of the necessaries of our lives the object of their competitive private enterprises and speculations, is at the bottom of all the social evils of our time.

Modern Industry Plankless.

In spite of the organization of trusts, pools and combinations, the capitalists are powerless to regulate production for social ends. Industries are largely conducted in a planless manner. Through periods of feverish activity the strength and health of the workers are mercilessly undermined, and during periods of enforced idleness the workers are frequently reduced to starvation.

The climaxes of this chaotic system of production are the regularly recurring industrial depressions and cries which paralyse the nation every fifteen or twenty years.

In this mad and reckless race for profits the capitalist class is bound to exploit the workers to the very limit of their endurance and to sacrifice their physical, moral and mental welfare to its own insatiable greed. Capitalism keeps the masses of working men in poverty, destitution, physical exhaustion and ignorance. It drags their wives from their homes to the mill and factory. It snatches their children from the playgrounds and schools and grinds their slender bodies and unformed minds into cold dollars. It wantonly disfigures, maims and kills hundreds of thousands of workingmen annually in mines, on railroads and in factories. It drives millions of workers into the ranks of the unemployed and forces large numbers of them into beggary, vagrancy and all forms of crime and vice.

Public Intelligence Corrupted.

To maintain their rule over their fellow men, the capitalists must keep in their pay all organs of the public powers, public mind and public conscience. They control the dominating parties and, through them, the elected public officials. They select our executive, bribe our legislatures and corrupt our courts of justice. They sway our educational institutions. They own the nation politically and intellectually just as they own it industrially.

The struggle between wage workers and capitalists grows ever fiercer, and has become the only vital issue before the American people. The wage working class, therefore, has the most vital and direct interest in abolishing the capitalist system. But in abolishing the present system, the workingmen will free not only their own class, but also all other classes of modern society: The small farmer, who is today exploited by large capital more indirectly but not less effectively than is the wage laborer; the small manufacturer and trader, who is engaged in a desperate and losing struggle for economic independence in the face of the all-conquering power of concentrated capital; and even the capitalist himself, who is the slave of his wealth rather than its master. The struggle of the working class against the capitalist class, while it is a class struggle, is thus at the same time a struggle for the abolition of all classes and class privileges.

Must Conquer the Political Power.

The private ownership of the land and means of production used for exploitation, is the rock upon which class rule is built; political government is its indispensable instrument. The wage workers cannot be freed from exploitation without conquering the political power and substituting collective and democratic administration for private ownership of the land and the means of production used for exploitation.

The basis for such transformation is rapidly developing within the very bosom of present capitalist society. The factory system, with its immense labor, is rapidly destroying all vestiges of individual production in manufacture. Modern production is already very largely a collective and social process, while the great trusts and monopolies which have sprung up in recent years have had the effect of organising the work and management of some of our main industries on a national scale, and fitting them for national use and operation.

An End to Class Rule.

In the struggle for freedom the interests of the workers of all nations are identical. The struggle is not only national, but international. It embraces the world and will be carried to ultimate victory by the united workers of the world.

To unite the workers of the nation and their allies and sympathizers of other classes to this end, is the mission of the Socialist. In this battle for freedom the Socialist movement does not strive to substitute working class rule for capitalist rule, but by working class victory to free all humanity from class rule and to realise the international brotherhood of man.

Now Get Busy!

The Socialist Wants 10,000 More Subscribers in Columbus Right Away.

The Workers in "The Storm Center Of Socialism" Have A Chance To Make Good.

All That Is Needed Is "A Long Pull, A Strong Pull, and A Pull Altogether."

The Socialist Makes Fair Proposition To Secure The Co-Operation Of All For The Next Campaign.

READ EVERY WORD OF OUR OFFER.

The Socialist wishes to co-operate with the City Central Committee, the Ward Branches and the precinct workers of the Socialist party of Columbus in educating the voters and organizing our forces so that we may reap the full benefit of our educational work.

We believe that one of the most effective means of educating the workers and of propagating Socialism is through the columns of a good Socialist paper. The paper goes each week into the home and carries some message, some truth, to each of its readers. While we make no apology for our paper, we are determined that each issue shall be an improvement over the previous one.

The subscription list is the life of any paper. Without it, it dies. We want at least 10,000 subscribers on our books before the campaign opens. We must have them if The Socialist is to be the power for good that it should be in the fight of 1911 in Columbus, "the Storm Center of Socialism."

OUR PLAN.

Here is our plan to put money into the treasuries of the City Central Committee and of the Ward Branches for use in organization and propaganda work, as they may determine:

1. We will pay to each Ward Branch 12½ per cent. of all money for subscriptions collected and turned in by its members to The Socialist.

2. We will pay over to the treasury of the City Central Committee of Local Columbus 12½ per cent. of all money collected and paid in by the Ward Branches for subscriptions to The Socialist.

LIST OF PRIZES.

As Prizes or special rewards for the workers we offer the following:

1. To the Branch turning in the largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist, in proportion to membership of the Branch in good standing, we will give $75 in books, to be selected by the Branch, or in money.

2. To the Branch turning in the second largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist, under the foregoing conditions, we will gice $50 in books or money.

3. To the Branch turning in the third largest amount of money on subscriptions as stated we will give $25 in books or money.

INDIVIDUAL REWARDS.

1. To the individual turning in the largest amount of money on subscriptions to The Socialist we will pay $25 in gold.

2. To the individual turning in the second largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist we will pay $15 in gold.

3. To the individual who turns in the third largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist we will pay $10 in gold.

CONDITIONS.

The only conditions we impose in this contest are that the members of Branches will get all their sub. cards from the literature or special agent of their respective Branches and that this agent will at all times have on hand a supply of sub. cards and make returns to The Socialist of all subscriptions received not later than Wednesday of each week. Sub. cards will be supplied by this office at any time. This contest will be limited to Branches and Locals in Franklin County.

This Contest Began On Saturday, Feb. 11, and Will Close Tuesday, November 7, 1911

Information as to details of this contest will be cheerfully furnished by this office.

SOCIALISTS PICK DELEGATES.

At a convention of Columbus Socialists held last Friday night at 131½ East Town street, A. C. Eby, James Henderson, M. C. Green, J. W. Freeman, E. B. Eubanks, N. C. Rickey and Dr. E. E. Adell were elected delegates to the state convention, which will be held in Columbus, April 27-30, inclusive.

NINTH WARD BRANCH.

At a meeting of the Ninth Ward Branch, n April 13, Comrade Anna Quinby spoke on the "Legal Phases of Socialism." Comrade Schame gave us a synopsis of the address delived by Comrade Storck before the Ministerial Association, showing that some of the daily papers garbled it and that some of the many leading ministers misstated things said by Comrade Storck. The Literature Agent reported sales amoutning to $2.86 for the week. Two applications for membership were received.

PROPAGANDA MEETING.

Eighth Ward—Thursday eveing, April 27, D. J. Farrell and F. E. Johnston.

FALSE PRETENSES.

THE OFFICIAL FIGURES.

Voters of Columbus rejected the plan to place the city's park system under the control of a commission of three members, Tuesday, by a majority of 895 votes.

The total vote cast in the election was 13,291, as compared with 27,261 in last fall's election.

The plan was favored only in the Third Fifth, Sixth and Twelfth wards, and in these it received only small majorities.

VOTE BY WARDS.

The vote by wards was as follows:

	For.	Against.
First ward	310	1055
Second ward	476	[illegible]
Third ward	884	509
Fourth ward	600	640
Fifth ward	510	[illegible]
Sixth ward	436	[illegible]
Seventh ward	261	[illegible]
Eighth ward	224	[illegible]
Ninth ward	535	[illegible]
Tenth ward	340	[illegible]
Eleventh ward	543	[illegible]
Twelfth ward	1072	[illegible]
Totals	6196	[illegible]

The News says, in commenting upon the result: "Republican organization forces were active in support of the commission plan and had workers in many of the precincts of the city. Politicians regard the defeat as an indication of growing Socialist strength and evidence of the formation of a formidable working organization by this new factor."

The News has expressed a fact that the political tricksters of this city are slow in realising. The machines of both the old parties backed the Chamber of Commerce Park Commission plan. It was defeated. The worst is yet to come for the bosses.

MAY FESTIVAL.

Socialist Glee Club Forward Will Celebrate International Labor Day.

The comrades should not forget the May Festival to be given by the Socialist Glee Club Forward at Red Lion Hall, Monday evening, May 1, for the benefit of the treasuries of the Ward Branches. A high class concert will be rendered in the upper hall, in which several eminent artists will participate. There will be a concert in the lower hall for the young folks. All kinds of refreshments will be served.

DOUBLE TREAT IS GIVEN SOCIALISTS OF COLUMBUS

Haywood and Strickland Address Meeting at Odd Fellow's Temple.

The large audience that assembled at Odd Fellow's Temple, Thursday evening, to hear Comrade Frederick Guy Strickland lecture on "Socialism and the Religious Problem" were given a double treat in hearing Comrade William D. Haywood, a hero of the Western Federation of Miners' battle with the mine masters.

He said that his visit was without significance, as he merely stopped over for a little rest between speaking engagements at Steubenville and Zanesville.

The congress at Copenhagen attended by 900 delegates from 21 nations, he said, represented 10,000,000 voters. "Socialism is the next transition in politics, and nothing can stop it," were his words. He detailed briefly the spread of Socialism in the mining camps of the West.

Strickland defined the purpose of Socialism as being to give to every worker his share of the entire gain, measured by the value of his labor of hand or brain in contributing to it. "We don't propose to hand over our private property; we haven't much to hand over. We do propose that the state shall own that upon which all the state depends for its living. We are out to secure private property, not to get rid of it.

NOT OPPOSED TO RELIGION.

"The Nazarene carpenter said 'Blessed—or happy—are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth.' We are meek enough now, but we have never gone out and claimed our inheritance. The Bible bids us love our neighbors as ourself, but if a man doesn't love himself how can he love his neighbor to any advantage? We are not opposed to religion, ours is purely an economic organization, solving an economic problem. We are going to give all of our religious friends a chance to practice what they preach.

"The reason we want the bread problem solved is because we want a little time to do something else than grub for bread."

In conclusion, Strickland defended the Socialist party from the stricture of being an enemy to the home. When a Republican or a Democrat runs away with another man's wife the newspapers in stating that fact do not give his politics, but if a Socialist does such a thing they are sure to mention it, he said.

Socialists, he said, will not fight. "They may get a few ignorant boys to go to Mexico," he remarked, "but not any Socialists."

HUB MERCHANTS BEGIN SPRING CAMPAIGN.

The merchants of the district centering around Main and Fourth streets and commonly known the Hub, are preparing a great spring welcome to their patrons, the citizens of Columbus, and as many more from the surrounding towns as can conveniently avail themselves of the invitation to come.

They have announced a big hunt to last from May 2 to 9. During that time several thousand dollars' worth of valuable prizes will be distributed absolutely gratis to those who may happen to hold tickets calling for them. These tickets will be distributed to the 40,000 homes throughout the city and no one will know, least of all the merchants, which will call for prizes and which will not.

The Hub Board of Trade has shown its enterprise in many ways. One of the most public spirited was in providing the splendid lighting system in East Main street, in the judgment of most students of municipal affairs, the finest bit of lighting in Central Ohio. That they are broad, liberal and quick was shown when the Hub Board of Trade was the first organization in Columbus to provide a special cup for the horse show which is to be held at the Driving Park in June.

The stores of the Hub are stores of the people. They are large and roomy, almost without exception confined to the ground floor, well lighted and with ample exits. The country trade is cared for with great consideration and as a result many people from out the city prefer to deal there to any other section of Columbus.

Being out of the high rent district, without many of the extra expenses that other merchants have to meet, the prices generally will be found lower than elsewhere in Columbus.

Because these facts are generally known, there is every prospect of one of the most tremendous outpourings of people that Columbus has ever known, while the hunt is in progress. When you find the numbered Hub ticket, left at your home, keep it, and when the hunt is on, visit the stores in the district and if you find anything displayed in any of the stores with a number on it corresponding to your ticket number, claim it, for it will be yours.

OUR BOOSTERS.

There just isn't room to note the work of our boosters, but we desire to state that during the past two weeks 148 new subscribers have been added to our list. Keep it up.

THERE WAS A CHANGE.

"The Assyrian came down like a WOLF on the fold,
His cohorts were gleaming in purple and gold"—

But what a change when the returns came in from the Park Commission election!

The rich do not and will not pay their just taxes. In this they as certainly confiscate some of the property of the poor, who have to pay full assessments, as if they took it directly out of their pockets or had broken into their homes and taken it. Yet the rich are very indignant about any one talking of having the public own the industries, denouncing it as confiscation. They want to do all the confiscating themselves. An article in the American Magazine shows how the rich of New York escape their taxes by cunningly devised laws—paying nothing whatever on personal holdings. The rich are setting the example for all the immorality of the nation. What can be expected from the poor when they see the rich stealing?—Reading Advocate.

Socialism is simply the organized union of all labor and intelligence to promote the common welfare.

If you are a workingman, don't allow your son to become a member of the Boy Scouts. He may, in later years, be compelled to turn the gun on you because you strike for better conditions.

How true the saying, no truly great man ever had a great son. History repeats itself in the case of the present Count Leo Tolstoy, who is here to study big (?) men and American social conditions. He has arranged to meet President Taft, Colonel Roosevelt, Andrew Carnegie and John D. Rockefeller.

I would compromise war. I would compromise glory. I would compromise everything at that point where hate comes in, where misery comes in, where love ceases to be love, and life begins its descent into the valley of the shadow of death. But I would not compromise truth. I would not compromise the right.—Henry Watterson.

Forget nationality; think only of humanity. Princes and kings only have diverse interests; the people of all countries are friends.—Victor Hugo.

The SOCIALIST

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF, BY AND FOR THE WORKERS

Vol. 1. No. 19. COLUMBUS, OHIO, SATURDAY, APRIL 29, 1911. PRICE, $1.00 PER YEAR. SINGLE COPIES, 3 CENTS.

Master Class Strikes Again at Labor.

"Whom the Gods Would Destroy They First Make Mad."

On April 13, James McNamara and Ortie McManigal were arrested and confined in chains by the capitalist detective agencies and for ten days kept prisoners without being allowed to call for attorney or resort to legal protection. On Saturday, April 22, the same detectives raided the headquarters of the International Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, and kidnaped John J. McNamara, its secretary, and spirited him off to Los Angeles.

This is the most brutal outrage that the Master Class has attempted since the effort to send Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone to the gallows.

This latest dastard deed, coming just before International Labor Day, on May 1, should arouse the host of labor to the danger that threatens all. The Sleeping Giant should awaken and at the ballot-box strike a solar plexus blow at Capitalism.

BERGER ACTS PROMPTLY.

A congressional investigation of the arrest and extradition of J. J. McNamara, who was being spirited from Indianapolis to Los Angeles, Cal., in charges of dynamiting, is asked in a resolution introduced in the House by Representative Berger, Socialist member from Wisconsin, last Thursday.

Mr. Berger declared that McNamara has been deprived of his constitutional right of liberty, without due process of law, and that Congress should take official cognizance of his sensational arrest.

The resolution asked for a special committee composed of the members of the House and Senate.

The working class at last has a man on guard in the halls of Congress, and the tools of Master Class must go on record.

WORKERS HAVE NO RIGHTS.

"After the police had taken McNamara away detectives made a thorough search of the headquarters of the organization. They inspected all correspondence, letters, papers, records, books and everything else they could find, but no one would say anything about the work. The board members were detained while this investigation was in progress."

Workers have no rights. Unions have not the right to preserve their records the same as other bodies have. Policemen or members of private detective bureaus may intrude on any union meeting, may seize any records they desire, and can scrutinize all records, letters, minutes and other papers. The workers can only protest. They connot prevent it. They can obtain no redress when it is done.

If the books of a corporation are desired a long legal fight is usually necessary to obtain them, and then they are in the custody of the courts. Judges protect the corporations' right to hold their records secret, and unmistakable evidence of wrongdoings must be given before the records can be obtained.

But labor unions cannot shield themselves behind any such right or privilege as this. The records of the unions are looked upon as open to the police when and where they choose to investigate them. Union headquarters may be entered at any time. Union officials may be detained as suspects, merely because they are union officials. In the invasion of the headquarters of the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers at Indianapolis, in the detaining and questioning of the national board, and in the examination of the records and papers of the organization, there was committed a crime second in magnitude only to the kidnapping of the secretary of the organization.

Still this violation is characteristic of the whole conduct of cases against workers.

Workers have no rights the capitalists are bound to respect.

All workers are criminals in the eyes of the capitalist class, and of the tools of the capitalist class, the police.

"The Socialists can be beaten by my power," was the constant declaration of Michael Callahan, 20, who was adjudged insane Monday by Judge Black and ordered committed to the state hospital.—The Citizen.

The extinguished members of the Chamber of Commerce might be under the same judgment—since the park commission election.

THE MANGLED CHILD.

(By Charles Reece Fenimore.)

(Written for The Columbus Socialist.)

With awkward gait and shambling march he comes,
Leaning upon a crooked stick that seems
Almost as large as his poor twisted limbs,
Which threaten at each halting step to sink
Beneath his weight, which looks too great to bear.
This is the child who toiled his endless days,
Deep in the bowels of that hell-hole from whence
They carried him, a mangled little wreck,
A small misshapen mass of broken bones,
From which the tortured, bleeding flesh was torn.

Behold this thing the masters of our land
Bequeath to us in memory of their power,
Lest we forget the high and kingly throne,
To which Almighty God hath pleased to call!
Gaze on this pallid, boyish face, which bears
Mute witness 'gainst its years of sunless days,
These knotted, gnarled and battered little hands,
This useless, twisted foot, which evermore
Will drag, broken and dead, to all but pain.
Can you look on this picture and be dumb?

Come peer within these aged, staring eyes,
Where mirrored lies the tragedy of death!
Here lurk grim shadows of a host of wrongs
More grievous yet than those which crushed him down
To earth from whence he ne'er shall rise again,
That made of him a hideous mockery
Which wanders aimlessly o'er desert wastes,
Where there is naught of joy, nor life, nor love,
But only vultures and the wolves which wait
Until he falls forsaken in the dust.

HOLY HOWL FROM ORGAN OF THE PLUTES.

For the first time the morning paper, which is the organ of private interests, has recognized the existence of The Columbus Socialist. Last Saturday it reprinted the editorial in our last week's issue upon the result of the park commission election. Its headlines were as follows: "Socialists Glory in Park's Defeat," "Party Organ Says Result of Special Election Due to Socialists' Efforts," "Attacks 'Big Rich' and Advocates Class Distinction in Park Management."

The Journal misrepresents when it says The Socialist attacks the "big rich." We have attacked the system which produces the "big rich," and we have, it seems, been successful in exposing a deeply laid plot to exploit the people of Columbus through a park commission. As to advocating "class distinction in park management," The Socialist would ask, Why not?

The working people produce all the wealth, why should not they have something to say about the management of public affairs? The benevolent (?) despots of the Chamber of Commerce pretended that the parks were to be for the benefit of the workers; why should they not control them? The park commission plan was a "class" scheme, really promoted by real estate sharks and the political machine bosses of the Republican and Democratic parties. Certain reputable citizens were used in an effort to conceal the actual plotters. The effort failed.

When The Socialist speaks of the workers it means all who labor with hand or brain or both. We speak for this class, and epithets from capitalistic sheets are a compliment.

STILL PLOTTING.

The Chamber of Commerce bunch, defeated by the people at the polls, have not given up their efforts to put through their pet park commission deal. They now seek help in the legislature and will try, in some dark and devious way, to get a bill passed, or a "sleeper" in some measure, which will enable them to realize upon their investments in real estate options on land in the vicinity of prospective parks. You are being watched, Messrs. Schemers, and you had best be careful, for the "goblins"—otherwise those "derned Socialists"—will surely get you.

Two years is not a long time. In February, 1909, a proposition to assist a Socialist newspaper, was submitted to the Letter Carriers' Association of Brooklyn. The mere mention of Socialism then was sufficient to cause the speedy dropping of the proposition without a dissenting voice. In February, 1911, the Letter Carriers received a similar proposition. They voted unanimously to extend the aid asked for. What this unusual change means we do not know, but certainly the word Socialism carries less alarm than it did. People are interested in what it contains of good, and are not frightened by its remote, theoretical side.—Collier's Weekly.

JOIN THE PARTY.

Every one who is a Socialist ought to join the Socialist Party. Get in and help work. If it is not exactly what you think it ought to be, get in and help make it right; for, through the referendum, the rank and file can make it what they will. It is the only party in America which the rank and file can directly control by means of the referendum. And the more "people of the right sort," like yourself, who come into the party, the better it will be.

To vote the Socialist ticket does not make you a party member. It is necessary to join the party organization and pay dues.

You may inquire why it is necessary for you to join the Socialist Party and pay dues, when you do not pay dues to any other party. This is the reason. The Socialist Party is conducted in the interest of but one class. It is impossible to expect any other class to be interested in the welfare of your class, therefore, if you desire to better your condition in life you will have to unite with other members of your class in bringing about the desired results.

The people who pay the campaign funds of any other party dictate what that party will do if it wins. Therefore, the workers by paying their own campaign funds dictate the tactics of the Socialist party. When you pay dues in the party you help pay the campaign funds, and have the same rights as any other member.

You workers who find it impossible to make both ends meet, what are you going to do about it? Are you going to continue to support a system that will continue these deplorable conditions or will you be men and assert your manhood?

Never before has the future looked as bright for the Socialist party in the United States as it does today.

There does not seem to be anything too big for it to accomplish during the next few years.

When Berkeley, Cal., was swept into the Socialist fold on Saturday, April 1, and J. Stitt Wilson was made Socialist mayor, the prediction was that something unusual would happen at the regular spring elections.

This something unusual did happen on Tuesday, April 4, when the stream of victories from coast to coast stampeded the capitalist press into heralding every near-victory as a defeat.

It's a wonderful situation. Instead of ignoring our occasional victories, as has been the case in the past, they are seeking consolation from our defeats.

We know that our defeats nearly always show a big increase in our vote and is a prophecy of big victories in the near future.

"The dues-paying membership of the Socialist party at the present time is about 78,000," is the news that comes from the national office of the Socialist party located in Chicago.

"We will start the new year (1912) with 100,000 dues-paying members," says National Secretary J. Mahlon Barnes.

And the next presidential and congressional campaign comes in the fall of 1912, only a little more than a year away.

The reports that come from France say that the dues-paying membership in that country is only 63,358, while they cast a vote of double the Socialist vote in the United States, or about a million and a half.

There will soon be a hundred members of the Socialist party in the French chamber of deputies, corresponding to our House of Representatives.

As a result of the high tide of sentiment toward Socialism in this county at the present time 1,000,000 votes would be the lowest mark that we should set for ourselves in the 1912 presidential campaign.

The organization of the Socialist party, national, state and locally, merits a vote of 1,500,000, which is only double the amount that we have at the present time.

A wave of 1,500,000 votes could easily sweep half a dozen or more Socialists into Congress and send a hundred Socialists into many of our legislatures.

The wonder was in this spring election, the first anniversary of the Milwaukee victory, not so much how many cities that we captured, but the large number that we nearly captured, and also the phenomenal votes that we cast in many places with a solid opposition.

TWENTY CENTS FOR FARMING AND EIGHTY CENTS FOR WAR.

The recent congressional appropriations should warn the people of the danger of being overburdened with an huge army of military parasites. The following figures will explain WHY:

For Agriculture, $16,900,016; for Rivers and Harbors, $23,855,342; for Navy, $126,479,338; for Army, $92,374,755; for Pensions, $153,688,000. These are official figures.

Andrew Carnegie gives the people libraries, and then the people, through the Senators and Congressmen, return favors by giving him the greater part of appropriations in the form of gun and armor-plate contracts.

OUR NEEDS IN EDUCATION.

(Joseph E. Cohen.)

What are our present needs in education?

To answer this question we must first of all understand just what the school in this country is.

For instance, we are told that:

According to the census of 1900, 223,208 white children, 10 to 14 years of age, born in the United States, could neither read nor write. Altogether, 577,649, white and colored, or 71 in every 1000, were illiterate. In Germany, Norway and Sweden, the proportion is 1 to 1000; in Switzerland it is 2 to 31000; in Finland, 16 to 1000; in France, 49 to 1000, and in England it is 58 to 1000.

Moreover, of every 1000 pupils who enter the American public schools only 263 reach the high schools, and of these but 56 remain in the high schools until the fourth year. That is to say, 73 in every 1000 never complete the course in the elementary schools; 94 in every 100 never complete the full 12 years' schooling to the end of the high schools. See Scott Nearing's book, "Social Adjustment, published by Macmillan's.)

It would seem from the above that the first need is to have the children go to school.

This is being attempted by truant officers in many cities. But that is a very superficial method. At best it drives unwillingly such such children as are too young to go to work or loaf on the streets.

It does not make schobl attractive. And if schools were attractive, and if other things were equal, the truant officer would be unnecessary.

To make the schools attractive, they must be properly built, so as to let in plenty of sunshine and fresh air, and be surrounded by trees and gardens. That is rarely the case in large cities. Indeed, ramshackle tenements are sometimes put to school purposes, and the example set by the city fathers in this direction is anything but wholesome.

Then, too, the schools are often overcrowded. This requires that the children be put on part time, and is demoralizing to discipline. And there is very frequently an excess of pupils to teachers.

Teachers, in turn, are insufficiently paid, so that they have not the incentive to render the best service, or are not in a position to equip themselves properly, where the incentive is not lacking.

But aside from all that, it is not enough to get the children to school. For the greater number of our youngsters are children of the poor, and are not prepared to improve their time to the best advantage. They may go breakfastless some days; they may suffer from chronic underfeeding and malnutrition; in some towns they still have to purchase their text-books. Too much emphasis can not be placed upon the fact that an undernourished, vitiated body makes for an undeveloped, warped mind.

Having thus even casually glanced over the present school situation, we are ready to forenulate certain definite requirements.

Schools should be physically attractive. The pupil should be glad to be in school, because of the pleasant appearance and invigorating surroundings.

Text-books should be supplied free. Children should be fed and clothed, where need be, at the public expense; this to be done in such a way as to carry no taint of pauperism.

Pupils should be examined regularly for physical or mental defects; physicians, dentists and nurses should be at the disposal of school principals, and employed by the city.

Physical culture should form an important part of the work. Excursions should be made to places of natural, historical, artistic and commercial interest, and as much of the studying should be done out of doors as possible.

While education should aim at uniformity, so far as the work in the graded classes is concerned, the merit system of marking should be so flexible as to permit the pupil to develop in whatever direction he is most apt, and not compel him to cram himself full of stuff which he does not care about.

In the same way, the curriculum should be drawn up with some idea of preparing the pupil for his life work. This is now done, in a measure, by providing manual training and commercial high schools. But even in the regular courses, and before the high schools are reached, care should be exercised to impress the pupil with the actual facts of our present social relations and business methods, so that the child of the poor will have a fairer chance to make his way.

Trade schools should be under the supervision of labor unions, that they may turn out skilled artizans, instead of cheap laborers.

The school spirit should be that of international fraternity, instead of national jingoism; it should be a healthy antidote and prophylactic for the boy scout movement; it should be the basis of a better and higher form of civilization.

Yet, a large part of the school problem exists entirely outside the school itself.

If the pupil is to be interested in his studies, home life must be agreeable. As a general thing, stunted conditions in the study room will make for stunted development. Where the study-room is the kitchen, or the only living room with heat in winter, as it is in hundreds of thousands of tenements and homes of the poor, even though arrangements at school be satisfactory, still the general results would be far from gratifying.

To cope with the school problem in its entirety, the municipality and the state must do something in the way of providing better housing, cleaner streets, insure employment to the adult, and protect him in case of sickness, injury, old age or death.

That is to say, we can not properly handle the school question until we have a very healthy public opinion, a public opinion that recognises its obligations to the children of the working people.

The free school system was largely won by working people; but since this class today has no appreciable influence in government, and since for the man of large means the safety vault is his shrine of devotion, the public schools are regarded much as a by-product of the factory. A new public opinion must, therefore, be developed, in which direction women have taken, and must continue to take, a great part.

With such a public opinion, permeated with Socialist thought, it will be only a question of time before the nation's children will be given every opportunity to grow in mind and body, among happy schoolmates and playmates, so that when the child reaches maturity his faculties will be fully developed, and so that the human family will mount to better standards from generation to generation.

PATTEN'S GIFT.

James A. Patten, who amassed a fortune of many millions of dollars by wheat speculation, and in amassing it helped increase the price of bread to the people of this country, has given $3,000,000 for a campaign against tuberculosis. His heart has been touched by the thought of the suffering caused by consumption, and so some of the money he got by causing other suffering is to be used in medical research and in building hospitals. When he was speculating in wheat, when he was ruining thousands of people and making harder the struggle for existence of millions, his heart was not in the least touched. That was business, and as he is a shrewd business man there is little doubt that business enters into the gift he has made.

While all members of society are liable to contract the disease, it finds its victims chiefly in the working class, and some trades are its special breeding ground. Those are, for the most part, the ones in which wakes are low. Thus consumption is usually a disease of poverty, and as the only way to fight it is through rest, fresh air and plenty of wholesome food, the very things the workers can not get, thousands succumb.

Mr. Patten's plan, as outlined, is to fight tuberculosis when it develops. The victims will be taken care of in the hospitals, and doctors will search for cures. No provision whatever is made for putting an end to the causes that lead to consumption. No individual can do that. Patten might give his whole fortune, and he could only fight results. Causes can be reached by the working class itself.

As poverty is the leading cause of consumption, it is poverty that must be fought. There is more than enough food for all, and there is ample room for decent homes in this country for hundreds of millions of more people. But they must continue to eat inferior, doped or poisonous food, and they must continue to live in dismal, pestiferous tenements, while their chances of making a living remain in the control of another class. Men like Patten, through speculating in necessaries of life, may give back a few millions to found hospitals, but the hospitals, while they may cure a few individual cases, will do little toward ending the disease. Such an action is the same as if a robber, after he had beaten and stripped a victim, handed him a box of salve to dress his wounds.

Yet there is a significant and a highly encouraging thing about the growth of philanthropy in recent years. The fact that so many hundreds of millions of dollars can be given in so-called charity indicates how highly profitable plundering the working class is. It does not necessarily indicate that the hearts of men have changed for the better. On the contrary, it indicates that they fear the very success of the system of which they are the great beneficiaries. Giving back to society and doling out to the poor are sometimes actions performed in panic and fear, fear that unless some is given back all may be taken. Their conscience gets to work only where there is something to dread.

In the past twenty-five years their "benefactions" have amounted to untold millions of dollars. For all that, any real advance the working class has made it has to thank itself. It has had to fight every step of the way. It has had to force concession, and it is not to be placated by gifts when, before the gifts can be made, widespread suffering is caused to those who toil.

HOW DOUGLAS GOT HIS DOUGH.

One of those ready-made bank advertisements that look alike in all the papers has in it this bit of information: "W. L. Douglas, the great Boston shoe manufacturer and former governor of Massachusetts, first saved and banked $500 that he got for making and mending shoes. This was his start in life. Today he is worth many millions."

Yes—oh, yes—but suppose Douglas had kept on making and mending shoes and had gotten wealth in no other way, would he ever have been worth a million, or half a million, or a quarter of a million? You say that the $500 he made by working was his start in business. You are right. It started him in the business of starting other people to work for him. He was a very shrewd man. Not necessarily a bad man at all. But there was no public shoe factory in existence, and he saw how, under private ownership of the means of producing shoes, he could use his $500 so as to put other people making shoe FOR HIM, while HE rested from shoe making the balance of his life and watched them tote it to him. Nobody can blame him for that.

Under public ownership of the means of producing shoes he could never have gotten anything out of the shoe industry except what he himself earned, and all those who have been working FOR HIM instead of FOR THEMSELVES would have gotten all THEY earned, so that the "many millions" now owned by Douglas as a result of other people working for him would have been retained by those people and enjoyed in the form of better houses, better food, better clothing, better education and better everything, and by the consumers of shoes in the form of lower prices. And this applies to all other industries as well as the shoe industry.

Oh! why do the men who make the good things of the world continue to support with their ballots a private ownership system that takes those good things away from their families, when they could, by the power of their ballots, usher in a public ownership system under which their families, and not men of the Douglas class, could keep and enjoy those good things? Workingmen, all of you—farmers, miners, railroaders, factory employes, all—it is only by the tools and means with which you work being privately owned by men of the Douglas type instead of being publicly owned by all men, including YOUR OWN TYPE, that men of their class today have "many millions" while your families have poverty and toil and a future that looks dismal and dark. The Douglases could not own these millions if they did not own the tools with which you made the millions. And you made those tools, too, and they are yours by right, and you are treating your families wrong by letting the Douglases keep and control them to your hurt.—The Farmers' Journal, Abilene, Texas.

CHRIST WAS A SOCIALIST.

A Socialist thinks that the land is the Lord's,
That the earth was not made for a few;
That ye should do to others the way that ye would
That others should do unto you.
If ye would not toil for another one's gain,
Do not force him to do so for you.
Though the churches deny it, we know by His word
That Christ was a socialist, too.

A Socialist thinks that you cannot love God
And injure your dear brother man.
The worst way to hurt is to do it by law,
For he cannot get even again.
If you love your neighbor the same as yourself,
No injustice to him will you do;
The doctrine that all are the children of God,
Shows that Christ was a socialist, too.

A Socialist thinks that the one is a thief.
Who gives not all that is earned,
And Christ called them thieves when the temple within
Their tables of change o'erturned.
When the Socialists today strive the lowly to aid,
Persecutions they have to go through;
Christ laid down His life for his love of mankind,
So He was a socialist, too.

The Socialists preach the glad news to the poor,—
They seek to uplift the oppressed—
The same as the Christ went about doing good,
Relieving the weak and distressed.
And He said, "He that loves not the one he hath seen,
And loves him as I have loved yo,
Cannot love the Father he never hath seen."
So that Christ was a socialist, too.
—J. A. Williams in Portageville Critic.

PUT THE WORLD TO SLEEP.

A certain western ex-Governor is at present on a lecturing tour through this section of the country. In the course of his lecture he tells of many grand and sublime theories involved in the principles of Socialism, yet, he says that the general adoption of it as a form of government would put the world to sleep. No doubt he is right in a way. The general adoption of Socialism would cause the most refreshing slumber the world has known since that enjoyed by our distant relatives, Adam and Eve, in the garden ever so long ago. But the world would soon wake up again, especially when the workers, both mental and manual workers, realized that henceforth they were to enjoy the full product of their labors. Don't worry, Governor, the sleeping sickness will not be heard of under Socialism and the sand-man will have to go almost entirely out of business.

"EAT CAKE."

The amous Hope diamond has become the property of an American capitalist, Edward B. McLean, son of John R. McLean, editor of the Cincinnati Enquirer, and nephew of Mrs. George Dewey. He has presented the diamond to his wife, and in future the ill-starred "blue triangle" will be worn by her at functions in the national capital. The stone has an ugly history. No less than eighteen tragedies are recorded relating to the unfortunate possessors of the jewel; among them Marie Antoinette, George IV. of England, and Sultan Abdul Hamid. If no serious harm befalls the present owner, there will at least be considerable worry on her mind in caring for her treasure. A former secret service man has been engaged to guard the stone, in turn two private detectives will guard him. During the day the diamond will be kept at the owner's mansion and each night deposited in a safe deposit vault. When the beautiful Mrs. McLean wears the jewel to balls and receptions, the safe deposit building will be kept open awaiting the close of the function. A special automobile has been purchased to convey the guards to and from the house to the trust company's building.

Once upon a time, a fair owner of this very stone heard her subjects in the street calling upon her for bread. Turning around in her haughty dignity, she answered, "EAT CAKE." No doubt the same answer would be given today by the present owner of the stone if the poor in our nation's capital called upon her for bread. One day, they, the poor of every land, will eat cake. In that day, however, the Hope diamond will no longer be in the possession of any private individual who must need hire guards to protect it from thieves. There will be no thieves in that day, for there will be no need to steal. And where will the Hope diamond be? Adorning the brow of the true Goddess of Liberty's statue, in the public thoroughfare, where all may stop and admire the dazzling brilliancy of one of God's beautiful gifts to mankind.

REV. MR. AKED BOOSTS CAUSE OF SUFFRAGETS.

New York.—"I believe that to give the woman the ballot would bring as great a blessing to the world as the coming of Christ," declared the Rev. Charles F. Aked, the retiring pastor of the Baptist Church, in an interview.—Exchange.

When she was near the end of her long life, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe said to a friend that the world grew constantly more interesting to her. Every year she got more pleasure out of the passing days, and she was 90 when she said this. The bowl of life, she said, grew sweeter as she drank it; all of the sugar was at the bottom of the cup—Exchange.

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION.

News From The World Wide Movement Of The Workers.

SOCIALISTS WHIPPED.

Party's Death Knell Sounded.

Such is the shout of the capitalistic papers in Milwaukee.

By combining the Republican and Democratic parties, the tax dodgers, the boodlers, the grafters, and certain church elements, the capitalists succeeded in electing a few candidates to the school board and judiciary.

So now they think they have killed Socialism.

It isn't the first time the capitalists thought they had killed Socialism.

Socialism can never be killed.

However, we want our comrades of America to realize fully what a desperate struggle is going on in Milwaukee, and what a desperate battle we are going to have to fight for the next year in order to hold this city.

They can not beat us by fair means. But that doesn't matter to them.

The truth is on our side in every detail and in every respect.

The Socialists of Milwaukee have made good, as the Socialists have in every other city, state and nation under the shining sun where they have been given any degree of power.

In a score of great, comprehensive propositions, and in a thousand details the administration has shown its striking superiority over every former administration in the city.

But the problem is how to get this information to the people.

No matter how good or true the work of an administration, its value may be lost unless the people know the facts. And the capitalistic press is pouring out a tremendous volume of misrepresentation, falsehoods and lies about us. If the population of this city, the thousands and thousands of workingmen and women, read every day, morning, noon and night, about the Socialists and the Socialist administration, one reiterated story of anarchy, atheism, free love, awful, increased taxes, bankruptcy, unemployment—some are sure to be influenced by it.

In fact, prejudices and bigotry are the hardest things to overcome. And every power that the capitalistic system can marshal will be used from now on to create this sort of thing.

The capitalistic press, not only in Milwaukee, but throughout the country, will steadily and persistently misrepresent us. We must expect that. Religious prejudices will be appealed to.

Every little detail of the work of the Socialist administration that can be distorted, misrepresented, twisted out of its true meaning—all this will be done to prejudice the people against the administration.

There is only one possible way to meet all this. We must have a daily [illegible].

Comrades of America, MILWAUKEE MUST HAVE A SOCIALIST DAILY PAPER. Will you help establish it?

The Milwaukee Socialist daily will be established by the sale of $10 bonds, paying 4 per cent interest after Dec. 1. Fifteen thousand dollars' worth of these bonds have been already subscribed. One hundred thousand dollars is the capital necessary to start the daily. And we will get it—with your help.

Remittances should be sent to H. W. Bistorius, Brisbane Hall, Sixth and Chestnut streets, Milwaukee, Wis. Comrade Bistorius will also furnish any other information desired.

The newly elected Woman's National Committee has been called upon to make nominations for the position of Woman's General Correspondent. Nominations will close May 2.

The State Committee of New Jersey has decided that Comrade Fred Hartmayer, 1355 Pear street, Camden, shall act as National Committee member from that state during the absence of Comrade Krafft, who has gone on an extended tour of Europe. Comrade Hartmayer received in the last election the next highest vote to the successful candidate.

Comrade L. F. Stewart, formerly of Arkansas and leader of the Red Special band in the campaign of 1908, now secretary at Nampa, Idaho, reports as follows: "We organized here last July with a charter membership of 16, and in the city election just closed we polled for mayor 501 votes against 740 votes for the Citizens' ticket, there only being two tickets in the field."

The secretary of Local Chelan, Wash., reports they organized the local on election day last November, with 14 members. They are located forty miles from a railroad, but now have 36 members in good standing.

Comrade Charles H. Otten, State Secretary of Oregon, reports the expulsion, by Branch No. 1 of Local Portland, of Wm. H. Daly, president of the State Federation of Labor, for accepting a nomination on the Republican party ticket.

By recent referendum, Comrade W. S. Richards, of Albany, was elected a member of the National Committee for the State of Oregon.

The Russian Socialist organization has gotten out a set of five post-cards, containing revolutionary pictures. The subjects are as follows: "Bloody Sunday," "The Russian Eagle Rending Finland," "May First," "The Marseillaise," and one containing excellent engravings of Marx, Engels, Liebknecht and La Salle. All are artistically executed and will attract attention going through the mails, or may be used for framing. The price for one set is 10 cents, or $1.50 per hundred; either of one kind or assorted. Orders should be sent to The Russian Agitation Bureau, 205 West Washington street, Chicago, Ill.

By a recent referendum in New York the following comrades were elected members of the National Committee for that state: Algernon Lee, 1186 Madison avenue, New York City; Mrs. Esther Wright, 24 Seneca street, Geneva; Fred Paulitsch, 843 Jennings street, New York City. Comrade Gustave A. Streibel, 716 McBride street, Syracuse, was also re-elected to the same position.

During the week the municipal elections held in towns of Illinois showed big gains everywhere for the Socialists. Socialist mayors were elected in Granit City, O'Fallon and Davis. A number of aldermen were elected, the city of Canton holding the record by electing six out of nine.

WISCONSIN NOTES.

To counteract in part the persistent and constant lying of the Milwaukee capitalist papers, the Milwaukee comrades have decided upon two measures.

First, they will distribute campaign literature from house to house all the year, thoroughly covering the entire city once a month.

Secondly, the city council has voted henceforth to hold its meetings in the evening instead of in the afternoon. This will give the Milwaukee workingmen a chance to attend the meetings of the city council and see for themselves which way the fight there is really going.

The capitalist press has a way of its own in reporting these meetings. After the Socialists in the council have put up a particularly good fight, and beaten the capitalist aldermen to a frazzle, out comes your capitalist paper with a long report of what the Democratic or Republican alderman said and scarcely a line of the telling speeches of the Socialists. Thus the workingman has received the idea that his representatives were constantly getting the worst of it. Unless he had a day off, he could not see anything of these inspiriting combats, and had an entirely wrong impression of their outcome.

Under the new rule, workingmen will replace in the galleries the disreputable clique sent there by the contractors to applaud the defenders of their graft.

Of course, these evening meetings of the council were bitterly fought by the capitalist politicians, who hate to be watched by the working class, and denounced as a "play to the galleries" by the capitalist papers, which have thus lost a little of their monopoly of the news and their splendid opportunity for lying to the workingmen without being challenged.

Meanwhile, the work for the establishment of a Milwaukee Socialist daily is steadily going forward. Fifteen thousand dollars have now been subscribed for bonds for the daily. A truly Socialist spirit of self-sacrifice prevails among the comrades, and even the children have caught the feeling. One young girl, an ardent lover of music, asked her father to discontinue the payments on her piano and apply the money toward the fund for the daily.

The union of the capitalist forces against the Socialists has thus aroused the solidarity and the class-consciousness of the Milwaukee comrades.

E. H. THOMAS,
State Secretary.

INTERCOLLEGIATE SOCIALIST SOCIETY.

When Victor Berger, the first Socialist Congressman, speaks on May 4 in Carnegie Hall, under the auspices of the Intercollegiate Socialist Society, the hall will be gay with college flags and the platform crowded with students from Harvard, Yale, Cornell, Columbia and other colleges throughout the East. For the society's sudden and recent growth among the colleges from Maine to California marks a new and significant step in the spread of Socialism in America.

The society was organized in 1905, "FOR THE PURPOSE OF PROMOTING AN INTELLIGENT INTEREST IN SOCIALISM AMONG COLLEGE MEN AND WOMEN, graduate and undergraduate, through the formation of study clubs in the colleges and universities.

Thomas Wentworth Higginson, J. G. Phelps Stokes, Jack London, Upton Sinclair, Clarence Darrow and Charlotte Perkins Gilman were among the organizers.

In the next few years it won a foothold, a slowly widening circle of individual members. In 1908 a regular organizer was engaged; he visited many colleges, and the first study chapters were formed. From that time on the growth has been swift. In the last three months alone the undergraduate membership has doubled. Chapters are now firmly established in over a score of colleges, east and west. The largest are as follows:

Harvard, 50; Yale, 30; Cornell, 40; Columbia, 20; Barnard, 25; University of Pennsylvania, 25; Michigan, 30; Wisconsin, 25; New York State University, 20; New York City College, 25, and the University of Rochester, 28. There are also chapters at Brown, Stanford, Clark, Union Theological Seminary, Connecticut Agricultural College, Kansas Agricultural College, Marietta, Meadville Theological School, Morris Pratt Institute, New York Dental Colleges, and the University of Washington. And chapters are about to be formed in Princeton, where there already exists a Faculty Socialist Club; at Trinity, Dartmouth, the University of California, the University of Missouri, Wesleyan, Purdue, and others. And the New York body has already over 200 members.

The second annual convention was held in New York on December 29-30, 1910. At the dinner given the night before, undergraduates and graduates were present from 65 American and five foreign colleges. The total number of guests was 325. William Dean Howells sent his "Hail to the students who include Humanity in their Humanities." The main time of the convention was given to discussion by student delegates as to ways and means of spreading their influence through the undergraduate bodies. Enthusiasm was intense.

Since that time, with the formation of 11 new chapters, the society's New York office has been a busy center; the organizer, the secretary, their assistants and volunteer helpers often at work until late at night. Tens of thousands of pamphlets and leaflets have been sent out, including lists of books and outlines of couses of study. The Yale chapter alone has distributed over a thousand leaflets. Five thousand copies of a pamphlet by W. J. Ghent are to be sent out in the coming month, and still other pamphlets are soon to be published. The society also issues bi-monthly a printed bulletin in which each student chapter reports on its activities, so that each may gain by the experience of the others and the bonds of organization be strengthened. Lists are also given here of available lecturers, current magazine articles and recently published books on social questions. This bulletin has already a circulation of 2,000.

The society's membership is made up of "students or former students of colleges or educational institutions of similar rank, or persons connected with the educational system of the country as instructors." There are also many non-collegiates among its honorary members. Undergraduate members pays $1 yearly dues. Dues for other grades of membership are from $2 to $25. The organization is controlled by an Executive Committee, made up of alumni, elected by a referendum vote. The committee elects the officers. Through its organiser it keeps in constant touch with the secretaries of the student chapters and also with individual students. It grants charters to new chapters. And to announce meetings in the colleges it provides large posters to be put up on the college campus.

It provides lecturers. Among the lecturers this year were Lincoln Steffens, Charles Edward Russell, Eugene V. Debs, J. G. Phelps Stokes, Rose Pastor Stokes, Alexander Irvine, Robert Hunter, Morris Hillquit, Charlotte Perkins Gilman, Dr. Stanton Coit, Charles Zueblin and Frederic C. Howe. The lectures arranged by the Harvard Chapter this year have had an average attendance of 500.

A most successful lecture tour was made for the society last month by John Spargo, a member of the Socialist Party's Executive Committee. In three weeks he visited 16 different colleges, going as far west as Chicago, and in almost every college his lectures were crowded, in one case with over 1,000 students. At Dartmouth the Economic professors combined their classes for his lecture. In the University of Rochester, on the other hand, the president forbade the use of a college hall for the lecture. But upon this, the Psi Upsilon Fraternity promptly opened its chapter house. And since then a chapter of 36 has been organized.

"Though much has been accomplished by the society in the past," says the last bulletin, "its achievements have been small when compared with its future possibilities. The progress made by the society in those colleges in which its aims have been properly set forth clearly demonstrate that every educational center of the country presents a fertile field, needing but to be cultivated to yield a rich harvest. The society will only have reached its goal of effort when every college graduate and undergraduate in the country is thoroughly informed concerning the fundamentals of the Socialist Philosophy."

It is interesting to compare this new movement with the Socialist clubs already established in the English universities, Oxford, Cambridge, London, Manchester, Edinburgh and Glasgow. A writer in the Outlook says: "Perhaps no organization in Oxford can boast of such an array of distinguished students as can the Fabian Socialist Society. With what amazement would the Oxford Vice-Chancellors of the past have viewed the spectacle which their successors beheld at the close of the last Michaelmas term! For they would have seen their dons and students in gowns joining with the local Socialists and the workmen from Ruskin Hall to make the classic walls of famous Balliol College re-echo with that famous hymn of the Revolution!"

The organizer, Harry W. Laidler, would be glad to receive the names of all interested in the work of the Society.

For the first time in the history of Grand Rapids, Mich., two women have been elected to the school board. There was a fight waged by two factions to elect their respective candidates, and in consequence the two old parties were mowed under by the women's vote.

THE SOCIALIST STATE CONVENTION.

The state convention of the Socialists of Ohio is now in session in this city. It is needless to state that the Socialists of Columbus are glad to see our comrades from all over Ohio present in this, the "Storm Center of Socialism." There is not quite the same kind of excitement that there was about a year ago when you met here, but there have been many changes since then in the situation here. We desire our visiting comrades to feel at home, and we hope they will find time during their stay to find out a lot about the local movement. We also desire to have the frankest expression of opinion or criticism from all. We are in a great battle here, and every town and city in Ohio is interested in its outcome.

The party in this, the capital city of the state, is "finding itself," and settling down to earnest work. As a democratic organization we have our differences, but that is only a sign of real life. There is no need to worry about Columbus. We have a great deal to learn, but we are learning it.

The state convention has much to do. There are two important matters that should not be overlooked. Members of a state constitutional convention are to be elected this year. The Socialists will have a chance at this. Then there will be elections in every village and city this fall. The convention may see fit to submit an outline of a municipal program to guide the locals in presenting the principles of Socialism as applied to municipal affairs. We hope this will be done. The Socialist party is taking control of cities and towns—we must act wisely. We are with you for the REVOLUTION, comrades of Ohio.

"Lest We Forget."

THE BILL OF RIGHTS DEMANDS JUSTICE FOR ALL MEN.

Since the beginning of the world governments have existed through conspiracies conceived at a throne and matured by courtiers who surrounded the same with homage for mercenary motives. During the Colonial days, the State of Virginia was ruled by the lackeys of a foreign king. The records of history of these times besmirch the very name of civilization. In these days the command of a Colonial governor was the voice of the king. Men and women who dared raised their voices against this reign of tyranny were dragged from their home and hung upon the nearest limb of a tree, while their wives and children begged for their loved ones' lives before the tyrant's throne. It was the rule of might against right. One day the worm turned, and the flames of revolution began to spread over this land. Armies were recruited and untrained men began to march forward to the shores of human liberties. They were not led by the strains of martial music sounded forth from instruments of brass. No, they were led by the soul of righteousness—the music of Israel marching to the promised land. At last the day of victory appeared, and, after the smoke of battle had cleared away, men and women began to reason together, and their thoughts on the sufferings of the past caused to be born in the cradle of liberty the the famous document, "The Bill of Rights."

Lest we forget the meaning, we reprint this extract:

"Rights of Accused.—Among the worst abuses of tyranny in all ages have been the corruption of the courts and the denial of the rights of common justice. To guard against these it is expressly provided that the writ of HABEAS CORPUS shall not be suspended except in cases of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require it.

"That the accused shall be informed of the nature of the charges against him.

"That he shall be confronted by the witnesses against him.

"That he shall be heard in his own defense, and may have the BENEFIT OF COUNSEL.

"That he shall not be deprived of life, liberty or property, except by due process of law."

No citizen of the United States would deny the justice of these declarations. They are so reasonable it seems strange that they should have ever been questioned. But in enumerating them we are treading on sacred ground. Their establishment cost our ancestors hundreds of years of struggle against arbitrary power, in which they gave their blood and treasury.

Labor demands that all men shall be equal before the law. The day of industrial tyranny must cease, lest the worm be compelled to turn again.

JIM HENDERSON.

GROSS MISREPRESENTATION.

Senate Bill No. 255 by Tod is a pretty fair sample of the misrepresentation Franklin county is getting in the present legislature. This is a bill to reimburse the Chamber of Commerce for $6,121.60 claimed to have been spent last summer in their aid to the street railway company in defeating the strike. The money, they claim, was spent in paying assistants and deputies and in procuring arms and ammunition and for transportation to the sheriff and his assistants for the purpose of preserving peace. This money was furnished (if at all) in aiding the Columbus Railway & Light Co. in destroying the Carmen's Union. As I understand the matter, no part of the sum was claimed to have been used until after the Chamber of Commerce advised all persons to ride the cars and insisted that the strike was over. There would be as much justification in a bill to reimburse the Columbus Railway & Light Co. for their expense during the strike. But as we have seen the legislature defeat a bill allowing the people to vote on a proposition to own street railways, and knowing their subserviency to corporate interests, we can expect to see the state mulcted out of this amount.

The county commissioners saw the injustice of this bill, and refused payment, and now the Chamber of Commerce comes before the state and expects it to indorse them in their dirty work by payment of this claim.

INHUMAN INDIFFERENCE.

DYING BOY LIES TWENTY MINUTES UNDER STREET CAR.

The street car company added another child victim to their death list. For many years the Long street car line has been run to suit the "men at the other end of the line." The corner at Cleveland and Long street is one of the worst in street car death-traps in the city. The reasons for this lie in the fact that sometimes the motormen stop on one side of Cleveland avenue to wait for Mount Vernon cars to pass on to Long street, while at other times they speed pass the stopping place.

On the evening of April 26 a little 6-year-old boy met his death at this point. The child lay crushed under the car for twenty minutes. The safety fender failed to work, and the victim was compelled to lie under the car, with the motorman on the outside begging the passengers to sign a legal witness form, with this appeal, "You are not signing this to help the company, it's to save me."

While this inhuman tragedy was being enacted the street car officials were hunting for a screw-jack to lift the car off the child victim's head.

Don't blame the motorman. Blame the men at the other end of the line. Had the street car company been compelled to carry jacks, the life of the child might have been saved. But this will never be as long as these social highwaymen own our courts and legislatures.

STATEMENT FROM COMRADE BELCHER.

Announcement was made on Thursday of this week by one of the local dailies that Comrade Charles E. Belcher had declined absolutely to become the candidate for Mayor on the Socialist ticket. When asked whether he had authorized the announcement, Comrade Belcher said:

"No, I did not authorize it. I have been asked frequently whether I would be the candidate, and have invariably answered that I will not be. My application for membership in the party was made last fall, before the election, and to my Socialist friends I made it plain that my name was not to be used in connection with any office. I have personal acquaintance with but a few Socialists, having been in the party so short a time, and the talk of nominating me comes almost entirely from friends outside the party. To these I have always stated I will not be a candidate, and I am sure the Socialists of the city will have the good sense to know, when I say this, that, while I recognize the binding force of the party's mandate, I have the strongest and best of reasons for wishing to remain in the ranks.

"With a good candidate for Mayor, the Socialists will doubtless win in the next city election. I do not want to be Mayor, even if it were handed to me without effort on my part. Consequently, I do not want the nomination, and request the party members to confer the honor of being the first Socialist Mayor of Columbus on some one else."

A BILL.

To reimburse the Columbus Chamber of Commerce for money expended by it in paying assistants and deputies to the sheriff for the purpose of maintaining peace and order in Franklin county, Ohio, during the months of August, September and October, 1910.

Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio:

Section. 1. That the board of county commissioners of Franklin county, Ohio, be and said board is hereby authorized and empowered to appropriate from the general expense fund and to pay to the COLUMBUS CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, as trustee, the sum of SIX THOUSAND ONE HUNDRED THIRTY-ONE DOLLARS AND SIXTY CENTS ($6,131.60) to reimburse the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, as trustee, for money expended by it in paying assistants and deputies to the sheriff of Franklin county, Ohio, AND IN PROCURING ARMS AND SUPPLIES, AND FURNISHING TRANSPORTATION FOR THE SAID SHERIFF AND HIS ASSISTANTS AND DEPUTIES, for the purpose of preserving peace and order during the disturbances occurring in Franklin county, Ohio, through the months of August, September and October, 1910.

The Columbus Federation of Labor, at their last meeting, condemned the enactment of this piece of underhanded, infamous legislation. Write your representative and tell him to vote against this commercial hold-up scheme.

WOMAN'S SOCIALIST CLUB.

The woman's club committee held its regular meeting Monday night. The club is gaining in members, zeal and enthusiasm for the Socialist cause. Comrade Quinby was elected chairman of the evening. After the regular order of business was dispensed with Comrade Mrs. Southard led the study course.

We were honored by two reporters, representing popular papers in Columbus. Because we did not split hairs on parliamentary law these unduly men took advantage of the situation and wrote up master-pieces for their respective papers, misrepresenting the meeting entirely. However, we were not surprised at this, as these papers are experts along that line and have been misrepresenting the Socialist party for so many years that they could not tell the truth for a salary.

Because of the May Festival next Monday night there will be no meeting of the club.

Every lady interested in Socialism is very cordially invited to be present at these meetings. Next meeting May 8, at 7:30 p. m.

Communication sent to State Factory Inspector Thomas Kearns, inviting him to address the Federation at the next meeting. Same carried without a dissenting vote. Resolution protesting against the passage of a bill known as Senate Bill 268, introduced by Senator Tod of Franklin county, to pay the Columbus Chamber of Commerce the sum of $6,000 for expenses incurred in supplying their deputy sheriffs during the Columbus street car strike with ammunition guns and other supplies. Same carried, and the Legislative Committee ordered to give the same all publicity possible.

CIGAR MAKERS' UNION.

The San Felice cigar is one of the scabbiest cigars on the market. The San Felice cigar is made by the Deisel-Wemmer factory, at Lima, O. This company is being hit pretty hard, so they paid a scab Lima paper to put this headline in their paper: "Deisel-Wemmer Girls Organize." But it turned out to be a "Golden Rule Club" for the promotion of charity. Demand the Blue Label when you buy cigars.

INDUSTRIALISM SPELLS VICTORY

Brewery Workers Victorious in Los Angeles.

In spite of evictions from homes, in face of the pictures of starvation and industrial despotism, our Brewery brethren in Los Angeles are rapidly storming the enemy's castles and adding new laurels to fame as stalwart fighters. After eleven months of battle the black flag of scabdom only flies over one unfair brewery. We congratulate the Brewery Workers, and we hope that some day the A. F. of L. will adopt the policy of industrialism. It spells VICTORY.

FEASTING INSTEAD OF FIGHTING

The machinists are congratulating themselves on their fast growing membership. The honor for this achievement belongs to the various committees, who strive to entertain their fellow-members with music and feastings. The last meeting was one of good cheer and the pleasurable mission of renewing old acquaintances. President Todd and Vice President Hart expressed thanks for the esteemed co-operation of the membership. The entertainment committee consisted of Brothers Lyons, Liddy, Jones, Howald and Roth. It was a glorious event, and everybody went home happy and contented.

National Vice President Thomas Wilson will soon arrive in Columbus, and the membership will have an opportunity of hearing one of the noblest characters in the American labor movement.

RESOLUTIONS ON FIRE PROTECTION.

In regular assembled convention, Wednesday, April 19, 1911, the City Central Committee of Local Columbus of the Socialist Party adopted the following resolutions:

"Whereas, The catastrophe which occurred in New York City on Saturday, March 25, 1911, by which 142 working people, principally young girls, were killed, and many more injured, was plainly due to insufficient measures provided for the protection of the workers in the shop, and is thus another instance of the ruthless sacrifice of working class lives to the greed and unbridled appetite of the capitalist class for profits, at no matter what cost of human life; and

"Whereas, It is plainly evident that there is right here in Columbus just such gross negligence on the part of city and state authorities, whose duty it is to see that proper safeguards for life and limb are provided in the shops and factories of this city and state, and that full and effective measures are not taken by duly empowered authorities to insure escape in cases of fire or other disaster; and

"Whereas, A catastrophe as great or greater than the one which happened in New York City is liable to occur here at any time on account of such negligence and insufficient laws to correct such defects, be it further

"Resolved, That the City Central Committee of the Socialist Party of Columbus hereby demands the enforcement by the city and state authorities of all laws now on the statutes relating to the protection of working people against fire or other catastrophy in factories, and the erection of other laws for further protection, to the end that such slaughtering of working class men and women be made impossible in this city."

By order of the City Central Committee of Local Columbus.

J. C. SCHAWE,
Local Secretary.

IRON MOULDERS' UNION.

No. 98 is glad to welcome back our old friend, Bro. Pritchard, who has been working in Newark, O. The death of Bro. Harry Day was reported. A communication was received notifying the local that Bro. Jordan was sick in Huntington, W. Va. Bro. Arnold was elected delegate to the Columbus Federation of Labor. These two brethren will be heard on the floor. The entertainment committee is reaching good results.

TOBACCO WORKERS' UNION.

Look for the union label on all packages of chewing a. 1 smoking tobacco.

SHOULD THE WORKING CLASS BE REPRESENTED ON THE SCHOOL BOARD?

Two school houses have been erected in Columbus with non-union carpenters. These buildings are located on Haig avenue and Schiller. Francis Brothers were the contractors, and the working class will pay the bills. What are you going to do about it, Mr. Worker? Better vote for those who will serve your interests, and none but the working class can do this successfully.

WHAT ABOUT COLUMBUS?

The Union Hall Association of Racine, Wis., has accepted plans for a three-story labor temple, to be erected this summer, at an approximate cost of $25,000. Two thousand union men of the city have agreed to donate one day's wages each to the building fund. It would be well for the local officials to get into communication with the Racine central body, with a view of doing the same thing in Columbus.

WOMAN'S DEPARTMENT.

WHY THE PROFESSIONAL WOMAN SHOULD BE A SOCIALIST.

Women in great numbers have entered the professions. They have become doctors, journalists, actresses, artists, teachers and lawyers. To many women this has seemed an escape from the slavery of the housewife.

The professional woman has first been obliged to take a long and sometimes expensive course of education before she could enter her profession. This is especially true of the doctor and the teacher. When the professional woman begins her work she imagines that she will find in it some degree of liberty, that she is in a way removed from the class of wage-earning women and has the power to make independent choice in her work.

Examination of facts shows that this is not true. The journalist must, first of all, just like the factory girl, find an employer. If she secures a place on the staff of a city paper or a magazine she finds that these papers are run in the interest of the great vested powers, that they are the organs of political machines, and that in order to maintain her position she must write her articles and color them to please her employer. She starts with the belief that she can find expression for her individuality, only to discover that she must force her eyes to see from the point of view only of her employer. She is not a household slave, but she is another sort of a slave just as truly as is the woman who works at the factory.

It has been difficult for the professional woman to feel that she is in the same class as the warge-earning woman. She holds aloof from united action, believing that a salaried position places her on another plane. Wherein does she differ fundamentally from the factory worker?

The teachers make up another class of professional workers. They spend many years in preparing for their work. Then they find their profession already over-crowded and the wages below those of a good stenographer or janitor. They also work for an employer. They have absolutely nothing to say about their work, its course of study, and little about the methods used. They are put in charge of fifty or sixty children, and eight years of the work leaves them almost as much nervous wrecks as are the housewives. As conducted, her work makes her narrow in her own outlook, all because she has no power of self-expression and is too worn with the work to be able to grow through outside study or contact with other phases of life.

For instance, the woman physician. Often her practice takes her among the well to do. She may feel that her employment depends upon these people. She must bow to their will and accede to their demands. Is she independent? In no profession is the competition fiercer than in the medical profession. Perhaps such a woman physician has ideas of hygiene and public health, but she soon finds that she is handicapped at every turn in her efforts to put any of these into action. The doctor, more than almost any other class of professional women, must realize the effects of a society in which the few control the means of life of the many.

The actress believes, perhaps, that her profession is not on the same basis as that of the shop girl. But she can not work unless she is able to secure a position through some agency. Unless she is a star she must accept the salary her employer stipulates. She must please a fickle public, and, if the play is a failure, run the risk of finding herself out of work in a strange town. She begins her work with high ideals of wishing to interpret the best in life for the people, only to find that her work is confined to a narrow round of commonplaces.

Socialism would make it possible for women who do this kind of work—the teacher, doctor, actress, journalist—to have the power of self-expression. They would not be merely echoes of those who employ them. They would be sure of a wage according to the merit of their work. They would be freed of competition in their profession that today destroys any possibility for anyone to do her best, and makes even the artist a commercialized worker, meeting the demands of a freakish public.

There is a common interest between the working women, whether wage-earners or professional workers. Too long, because their patronage has depended on the capitalist class, our professional women have failed to recognize this common bond, although all have felt the oppression of the present system.

"Socialism stands for all that is best in science, in literature, in the social life, in the home life." These are the words uttered by a professor in one of our largest universities, to his class of graduate students. The time has come for the professional woman to investigate their truth.

MAY WOOD-SIMONS.

"TO THE PURE ALL THINGS ARE PURE."

Because of their objection to the nude statues in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, Bishop Willard F. Mallalieu of the Methodist Episcopal church and a number of other clergy of Boston and vicinity have sent out a circular in opposition to a bill pending in the legislature to permit the city of Boston to appropriate $50,000 yearly for maintenance of the museum. They refer to the statues as "immodest art", "indecent exhibitions" and "abominations", and until there is a reform in the museum, ask that no more money be squandered on its maintenance. Poor, deluded Boston clergy! Have you fallen so far from grace that the nude in art must be styled indecent by you? "To the pure all things are pure." Have you forgotten the text? When men and women, especially clergymen, can no longer look upon the works of art and admire it for art's sake without having evil thoughts, it is time rather for a reform in the ministry than in the museum. The human body is God's most perfect handiwork and not intended to be classed among the abominations of the earth.

To quote from Woods Hutchinson in Saturday Evening Post: We haven't yet completely outgrown and lived down that miserable monkish conception of our bodies and our looks as something to be ashamed of and to despise.

The Greeks had none of this diseased self-consciousness, and and look what men and women they had!—not merely the fine athletes, the most stalwart fighters, the most beautiful and perfect models of manly and womanly grace and beauty that the sun has ever shone upon, but the ablest statesmen, the profoundest philosophers, the greatest empire builders, the most gifted artists and architects, the most brilliant dramatists and the most inspired poets of all time!

MONSTER PETITION TO BE PRESENTED BY MISS ECKSTEIN AT THE WORLD PEACE CONGRESS.

Miss Anna B. Eckstein of Boston, has been traveling over the world for the purpose of securing two hundred million names to her petition for international arbitration and disarmament, to be presented to the delegates of the world peace congress which will assemble at The Hague in 1913.

Miss Eckstein's mission is a self-imposed one, and she reports great kindness shown her from all countries and hearty support of her cause.

WOMAN THE FIRST EDITOR.

A woman, Mrs. Elizabeth Mallet, published the first daily newspaper, the Courant, which made its appearance in London, March 11, 1702. In the first issue the editor announced that she "will not take it upon herself to give any comments or conjuectures of her own, but will relate only matters of fact, supposing the other people to have sense enough to make reflections for themselves."

A WOMAN PRESIDES OVER THE COLORADO LEGISLATURE.

Mrs Agnes L. Riddle, who, outside the legislature is the popular secretary of the Colorado Grange, has had the honor of presiding over the House of Representatives of Colorado.

Called to the chair during a fierce debate on child labor laws, she piloted the House through parliamentary mazes and party moves coolly and successfully. No appeal was taken from the feminine "chair".

Mrs. Riddle is the owner and operator of a big dairy. She rises every morning at 3 o'clock, prepares breakfast for her dairy hands, gets the children ready for school, attends to various household duties—and then rides six miles to the city, where from 10 a. m. till 5 p. m. she helps make the laws of Colorado. At night she goes back to her home duties. She is against passes, and returns them as fast as the railroads send them to her.

In the legislature she has won the favor of men and women alike by her keen humor, quick wit, hard sense and capable parliamentarism.—Exchange.

Under male suffrage, there were only three dry towns in Colorado. There are now fifty dry towns and twelve dry counties. Denver is one of the few cities in the land that has no saloon-keepers in its council.—Judge Ben B. Lindsey.

Jane Addams has just contributed to the Hearst papers four admirable short articles in favor of woman suffrage, treating the question in quite a new way.

A GHOST STORY.

"I say, boys, do you like honey?" asked Teddy Taft of his dearest boy friend.

"You bet," answered Billy Bowers readily.

"Well, I know where there is slews and slathers of it," continued Teddy mysteriously. "Smithers took up a lot of hives before he put his stock into the Winter bee house—more'n a dozen of the ones that didn't have honey enough to winter the bees in good shape. They are all in that old shop behind his barn this very minute. Hive honey is awful good and thick."

"But he's meaner dirt. He never'd give away any," cried Frank.

"I didn't say he would, did I? I wouldn't want to be the boy to ask him for any," and Teddy chuckled in a way that hinted that he could tell more if he wanted to.

"Well, if you have anything to say, why don't you say it?" ejaculated Billy impatiently. "How will we get it then?"

"Easy enough, my son, take it! We'll never get it unless we do," answered Teddy with a guilty flush.

"Oh-h-h-h!" breathed Frank.

"It isn't as if he didn't have more'n he knows what to do with," suggested Billy, in an attempt to quiet his conscience.

"What little we'd take wouldn't be missed anyway," said Teddy confidently. "We'd better go tonight before he moves the hives. Meet at the cross roads at ten o'clock."

At the appointed time the three boys started across the field toward Mr. Smither's house, waited impatiently by the stone wall until every twinkling light went out in the farmhouse, then crept forward to where the shop stood in the shadow of the barn. They had nearly reached it when Billy stopped short, clutching an arm of each of the others.

"Let go—What's the matter with you?" snapped Teddy.

"There!" breathed Billy, pointing to a figure near the corn.

"I don't see nothing," declared Teddy, and his voice was weak for so brave a boy.

"Step over here—I do," confessed Frank in a trembling voice. "Seems as if it came right out of the corn, for it wasn't there a minute ago, I know."

"See, it is waving its arms at us!" gasped Billy.

Nothing was heard save the rustling of the corn as the wind passed through it, and the suppressed breathing of three very startled boys. For a time they could not move, but watched that gray figure in fascinating horror.

"It is dressed just like old man Smithers used to dress," breathed Frank. The older Mr. Smithers had died the year before.

They watched the awful figure in silence for a moment or two? It surely came no nearer but, at intervals, it waved its long arms in entreaty or command, they could not understand what it was.

"Let's see if we can't go backwards so still that it'll not notice us," suggested Billie, as he slid back a few inches.

Step by step, noiselessly and carefully, they retreated until the stone wall was reached, and the longest row of corn nearly hid the ghostly figure from view, but feeling that it might start in pursuit any second.

"All together! over now!" whispered Teddy, and three pairs of heels disappeared over the wall with alacrity. "Now run for it like you never did in your lives—run!"

The next morning dawned as bright and fair as though no ghosts walked at night. Billy was up very early, for he made a discovery after he got home the night before which caused him some uneasiness. His knife, Uncle Jack's Christmas present, was missing. It had an ivory handle with his name on a silver plate, and five nice keen blades. He had various reasons for wanting to find it again. He did not want to lose so good a knife, and he certainly wanted no one else to find it, for he felt sure it was in the field by the corn. And Mr. Smithers was a quick-witted man; he had often been heard to say that he was a boy once himself.

Billy remembered that he had it at the stone wall, but he could not decide whether he put it in his pocket again or not. So he dressed in haste and crept out into the dewy freshness of the fields. Sure enough, he found his knife, but that was not all. He stared in amazement for a moment, then a boyish grin swept over his puzzled face and his lips puckered to give vent to a prolonged whistle.

Near the longest row of corn, its long, armless sleeves waving in the morning breeze, stood a fine scarecrow clad in a discarded suit of homespun gray!

"Of all things!" ejaculated Billy, "what dunces we were not to think of that! I'll go tell the boys."

"One moment, Billy," said a voice, and Mr. Smithers' head appeared above the wall near by. "I heard your plans and put the scarecrow there to try your courage. Better not say too much about it—I won't. And, Billy, if you boys want to have a little spread I'll furnish the honey. I was a boy once myself."

Billy thanked him some way, he never knew how, and went to tell the invitation. They had the spread, but the honey didn't taste just as they thought it would after all.—Ella H. Stratton, in The People's Home Journal.

LEO DEUTSCH—REVOLUTIONIST.

He is a very simple man, gentle and quiet in his ways. When I met him in New York a few weeks ago, it was hard to believe that he was the hero of four remarkable escapes from the prisons of the czar of Russia. Leo Deutsch is not old in years, only 55, but he shows in his face the effects of his life of struggle.

But he is not without hope, in spite of the saddening condition of Russia since the failure of the Russian revolution and the light of a dream and faith in its fulfillment shines forth from his clear eyes.

I wish all of the children who read the Coming Nation could see him and feel the little thrill in their hearts when they say, "This is really a man who is not afraid of tyrants, and who can believe and dare and do without flinching."

When he was only 18 years old, Leo Deutsch became a revolutionist. That is 37 years ago and since then he has never stopped for one moment preaching the social revolution and the coming of the Socialist commonwealth. Since then he has escaped twice from Siberia, where the political enemies of the Russian government are sent and twice from massive prisons in Russia. This is the story of his first escape from prison. It happened when he was 19 years old, hardly more than a boy, you see.

It was decided that he should try to make his escape from the bathhouse, which was not connected with the prison. After securing permission to take a bath, Deutsch went out, accompanied by three soldiers. One stationed himself outside by the window; the other stood by the door, and the third entered the bath with Deutsch. It seemed that it would be impossible to escape without risking being struck down by a bayonet or bullet.

When Deutsch entered the third room, which was the steam room, he found there two of his comrades. Without speaking to one another, they motioned to him, indicating the place where they had prepared everything necessary for his escape.

Deutsch came out to dress himself. The soldier was waiting for him in the first room. He put on his underwear, and under the pretext that he needed a pail of water for his feet, he went back to the steam room, where he found the things hidden in a corner by his comrades. Dressed in civilian clothes, he came out and walked past the soldier who was waiting for him.

"Our eyes met," says Deutsch in his account of his escape, "and I felt a shiver through my body. But that lasted only a moment. I soon found myself at the door, where another guard was standing, and I had to look at him as I passed him. 'Any one coming out of the bath would look at him,' I thought as I did so. My knees were bending, and still I had to pass by the third sentinel, who stood by the window. I did not look at him, but after I had passed him it seemed to me that I aroused his suspicions and I was anxious to start to run. I had to make a great effort to control myself and walk.

"There were but few pedestrians on the street. At a distance I recognized my comrade, who was waiting for me. Will I be able to reach him? I felt my strength was failing. How hard it was to restrain myself from running! No, I could not hold out any longer, and I quickened my pace. When I came up to my comrade I cried in a frightened voice: 'They have discovered that I escaped, they are running after me. Quick, let us get a cab!' But unfortunately there was no cab in sight. We started off on foot. Finally we noticed a cab; we waved our hands; the cab came up to us, we boarded it and drove off. But the poor horse hardly moved its legs. So we paid the cabman and walked. Another few blocks and we were at my comrade's house. I heaved a sigh of relief. I was free.—From the Coming Nation.

Mrs. Alicia Stebbins Wells recently addressed the Reciprocity Club of Los Angeles on "Some Things a Woman Should Know." Among the things enumerated by Mrs. Wells was the need of patrolwomen in Los Angeles, to help care for the women and children. At present Mrs. Wells is the only policewomen in that city.—Exchange.

THE LEAF.

Jane had the habit of breaking off leaves and flowers, as she went through the garden, and tearing them into small pieces and scattering the bits all along the pathway. Her mother spoke to her of this, as a bad habit. "But," said Jane, "what is the use of such a little, mean thing as a leaf? It might as well be destroyed as not."

"Do you call a leaf mean?" asked her mother. "Why, my little girl, no man, if he studied ever so hard, and is ever so skillful, can make anything half so beautiful or perfect as a leaf."

Jane looked as if she did not understand; but a few days after her mother took her to a friend's house, where there was an excellent contrivance for making things look larger, called a microscope. This friend told Jane to bring a leaf which he put under the microscope.

How astonished Jane was at the wonderful thing she saw! What fibres! What veins through which the life blood that nourished the leaf seemed to run! What fine holes, throughwhich it seemed to throw off part of the sap! The friend called these pores. The leaf was all covered, too, with little bristles or hairs, as if for protection and clothing. Jane never again called a leaf a "mean thing."—Little Socialist Magazine.

THE BUSY CHILD.

I have so many things to do
I don't know when I shall be through.

Today I had to watch the rain
Come sliding down the window-pane.

And I was humming all the time,
Around my head, a kind of rhyme;

And blowing softly on the glass
To see the dimness come and pass.

I made a picture, with my breath
Rubbed out to show the underneath.

I built a city on the floor;
And then I went and was a War.

And I escaped; from square to square
That's greenest in the carpet there.

Until at last I came to Us—
But it was very dangerous.

Because, if I had stepped outside,
I made believe I should have died!

And now I have the boat to mend,
And all our supper to pretend.

I am so busy, every day,
I haven't any time to play.

—Josephine Preston Peabody, in Harper's Magazine.

THE BOOK OF THE YEAR.

"The Workers in American History."

How they lived, struggled and died for four centuries in America is told in this book.

Do You Know

That the white workers who first came to America came as slaves?

That because of their terrible poverty some sold themselves to pay their passage to America?

That as many as 5,000 a year were kidnapped in European cities and sold like negroes in this county?

That they were branded like cattle, loaded with chains and auctioned off by speculators known as "soul drivers?"

That fugitive slave laws were enacted in all the colonies applying to these white workers?

That father, mother, and child were sold to different buyers?

That William Penn, George Washington, Benjamin Franklin and other "patriots" were either interested or dealers in these white slaves?

That they were auctioned off within the shadow of Independence Hall for fifty years after the adoption of the Declaration of Independence?

Why You Don't Know.

Because history is written by capitalist historians and they don't give these facts in books intended for popular circulation. These facts are contained in costly works written by professors in American Universities and their cost places them beyond the reach of workingmen.

Do You Know

That child labor was a fact before the American Revolution?

That inNew England poor children were sold into slavery and that their fathers rotted in filthy debtor's prisons?

That kidnapped children were sold to planters in Virginia and other colonies?

That the daughters of the poor who were sold were sometimes violated by their masters?

That when they gave birth to illegitimate children their terms of servitude were increased.

Do You Know

That merchant smugglers, "soul drivers," dealers in rum and negroes, land speculators and southern slavers fomented the Revolution?

That when the workers fought the battles of the Revolution and returned home they found the wealthy classes were confiscating their cattle and goods for debt?

That they were thrown into vile debtors' prisons by the thousands?

That they rebelled against this shameless treatment and the constitutional convention met behind closed doors to crush their revolt?

That this secret convention, was in session four months and only one man favored giving the workers the ballot?

That for fifty years thereafter they were disfranchised in nearly all the states?

That when they formed unions to improve their conditions they were indicted for "conspiracy" and thrown into dirty prisons?

Why You Don't Know.

Because the early history of capitalism in America is so black that the historians have not dared to place the facts in the school books or popular histories. It is based on fraud, piracy, confiscation, white servitude and historical deception.

"The Workers in American History" is a book that places these facts in your hands, facts that are taken from the historical works not intended for general reading. Every important statement is enforced by reference to an eminent historian, the name of author and work being given.

Second Edition Ready.

The first edition of this book was sold in less than three months. The second edition is now ready.

The book shows how capitalism came to be and the methods employed by ruling classes to enslave the workers and establish class rule.

Every Socialist should know these facts. Every speaker, writer, and student will find the book indispensable.

The 239 references to historical authorities enable one to pursue investigation further in any well-equipped public library.

GIVE AND TAKE.

(For the Public.)

"Why do you come to me?" said the Millionaire. "I am not to blame for what you gave me. Surely you would not be heartless enough to take it away again. And, then, you must remember, that I am a Captain of Industry, while you are only Vox Populi."

"But," said the Citizen, "we make the laws and can do as we please."

"Laws which I do not like are very apt to be unconstitutional," quoth the Captain.

"But certainly we are entitled to a fair share of what we produce," said the Labor Unionist.

"The trouble is you have produced too much," replied the Captain.

"But," said the Single-Taxer, "the value of land is purely social, and should belong to society."

"Those who have the supreme pleasure of basking in the sunlight of my society have all the land they need," rejoined the Captain.

"But the whole system is wrong," said the Socialist.

"You are a revolutionist," hissed the Captain.

"All systems are wrong," said the Anarchist.

"The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away," said the Minister.—Ellis O. Jones.

FROM THE SOUL OF A MAN.

Through fear of losing a position,
A slave we have been for many years;
But through the ballot box we realize
Our freedom now is near.

We can go and vote on election day,
Place the mark where we please;
And when we workers all see this alike,
The government we will seize.

When we educate ourselves to this,
It will be the grandest move we've ever made;
We have had strikes and strikes for many years,
And still we are underpaid.

Mr. Worker, stop and realize,
We are eighty per cent or more.
We can clasp our hands in a brotherly way
That would reach from shore to shore.

And on that day we will demand our rights
And will not be sent to jail;
For we know our cause is right,
And right always will prevail.

The Socialist represents a cause that's right,
Read our literature and then remember;
We know we are right and we are in the fight
On the Seventh day of November.

SKILLED ARTISANS.

(Bolton Hall, in The Independent, New York.)

"I want my coat shaped so," said I to the tailor.

"It is not according to my pattern; it will not make a good job," said the tailor.

"But I want it so."

"Then, my dear sir," said he, "you must cut it yourself or find another tailor."

So I tried to cut it myself.

"I want my life shaped so," said I to God.

"It will not be well for you," said God. "It is not according to my law."

"But I want it so," said I.

"Then, my dear son," said God, "you must shape it yourself or find another God."

So I tried to shape it myself.

IN REGARD TO THE RECENT NEW YORK FIRE.

"These girls were all shirtwaist makers. As I looked at the heaps of dead bodies I remembered their great strike of last year, in which the girls demanded more sanitary workrooms and more safety precautions in the workshops, and fire-escapes on the building. I REMEMBERED THAT THE STRIKE WAS 'BROKEN' BY STARVATION, AND HERE I SAW THE BROKEN BODIES OF THE SHIRTWAIST MAKERS."

COMRADES.

"Over the parting oceans,
O'er the dividing lands,
We call to your, our brothers:
We stretch to you comrade hands.

Why should we strive for bondage?
Or way for the warring kings?
If we fight, let us fight for friendship,
And not for the meaner things."

What Socialism Stands For.

Human life depends upon food, clothing and shelter. Only when these are assured are freedom, culture and higher human development possible. To produce food, clothing and shelter, land and machinery are needed. Land by itself does not satisfy human needs. Human labor gets raw materials and food out of the soil by creating machinery and using it upon the land. Whoever has control of land and machinery has control of human labor, and with it of human life and liberty.

Today the machinery and the land used for industrial purposes are owned by a rapidly decreasing minority. So long as machinery is simple and easily handled by one man it does not make its owners so powerful that they can dominate the sources of life of others. But when machinery becomes more and more complex and expensive, and requires for its effective operation the organized effort of many workers, its influence reaches over wider circles of life. The owners of such machinery become the dominant class.

The Masses in Subjection.

In proportion as the number of such machine owners compared to all other classes decreases, their power in the nation and in the world increases. They bring ever larger masses of working people under their control, reducing them to the point where muscle and brain are their only productive property. Millions of formerly self-employing workers thus become the helpless wage slaves of the industrial masters.

The more the economic power of the ruling class grows, the less useful does it become in the life of the nation. The overwhelming bulk of the useful work of the nation falls upon the shoulders of the classes that either have no other productive property but their manual and mental labor power the wage workers — or that have but little land and little machinery outside of their labor power—the small traders and small farmers. The ruling minority is steadily becoming useless and parasitic.

A bitter struggle over the division of the products of labor is waged between the exploiting propertied class, on the one hand and the exploited, propertyless class on the other. In this struggle the wage working class cannot expect adequate relief from any reform of the present order from the dominant class of society.

The wage workers are therefore the most determined and irreconcilable antagonists of the ruling class. They are also the class which suffers most from the curse of class rule. The fact that a small number of capitalists is permitted to use all the country's resources and social tools for their individual profit, and to make the production of the necessaries of our lives the object of their competitive private enterprises and speculations, is at the bottom of all the social evils of our time.

Modern Industry Planless.

In spite of the organization of trusts, pools and combinations, the capitalists are powerless to regulate production for social ends. Industries are largely conducted in a planless manner. Through periods of feverish activity the strength and health of the workers are mercilessly undermined, and during periods of enforced idleness the workers are frequently reduced to starvation.

The climaxes of this chaotic system of production are the regularly recurring industrial depressions and cries which paralyze the nation every fifteen or twenty years.

In this mad and reckless race for profits the capitalist class is bound to exploit the workers to the very limit of their endurance and to sacrifice their physical, moral and mental welfare to its own insatiable greed. Capitalism keeps the masses of working men in poverty, destitution, physical exhaustion and ignorance. It drags their wives from their homes to the mill and factory. It snatches their children from the playgrounds and schools and grinds their slender bodies and unformed minds into cold dollars. It wantonly disfigures, maims and kills hundreds of thousands of workingmen annually in mines, on railroads and in factories. It drives millions of workers into the ranks of the unemployed and forces large numbers of them nto beggary, vagrancy and all forms of crime and vice.

Public Intelligence Corrupted.

To maintain their rule over their fellow men, the capitalists must keep in their pay all organs of the public powers, public mind and public conscience. They control the dominating parties and, through them, the elected public officials, They select our executive, bribe our legislatures and corrupt our courts of justice. They sway our educational institutions. They own the nation politically and intellectually just as they own it industrially.

The struggle between wage workers and capitalists grows ever fiercer, and has become the only vital issue before the American people. The wage working class, therefore, has the most vital and derect interest in abolishing the capitalist system. But in abolishing the present system, the workingmen will free not only their own class, but also all other classes of modern society: The small farmer, who is today exploited by large capital more indirectly but not less effectively than is the wage laborer; the small manufacturer and trader, who is engaged in a desperate and losing struggle for economic independence in the face of the all-conquering power of concentrated captital; and even the capitalist himself, who is the slave of his wealth rather than its master. The struggle of the working class against the capitalist class, while it is a class struggle, is thus at the same time a struggle for the abolition of all classes and class privileges.

Must Conquer the Political Power.

The private ownership of the land and means of production used for exploitation, is the rock upon which class rule is built; political government is its indispensable istrument. The wage workers cannot be freed from exploitation without conquering the political power and substituting collective and democratic administration for private ownership of the land and the means of production used for exploitation.

The basis for such transformation is rapidly developing within the very bosom of present captitalist society. The factory system, with its immense labor, is rapidly destroying all vestiges of individual production in manufacture. Modern production is already very largely a collective and social process, while the great trusts and monopolies which have sprung up in recent years have had the effect of organizing the work and management of some of our main industries on a national scale, and fitting them for national use and operation.

An End to Class Rule.

In the struggle for freedom the interests of the workers of all nations are identical. The struggle is not only national, but international. It embraces the world and will be carried to ultimate victory by the united workers of the world.

To unite the workers of the nation and their allies and sympathisers of other classes to this end, is the mission of the Socialist. In this battle for freedom the Socialist movement does not strive to substitute working class rule for capitalist rule, but by working class victory to free all humanity from class rule and to realize the international brotherhood of man.

SOCIALISM AN IDEAL.

Some of us are good haters. We work for Socialism because we hate capitalism. But I believe most of us will do more effective work under compelling force of love than under the incentive of hate. We Socialists are looking toward a great ideal. One that we believe will realize its consummation on this earth. We no more question this than we question the rising of the sun tomorrow—because Socialism has its roots in a scientific basis, just as has the workings of the sun. But we know our ideal can not be realized unless we love it, work for it, identify ourselves with it, become a part of it. This we are doing. This we must do from the very fact that it is part of the process, and we can not help ourselves. But intelligent application of our love for our ideal will help a very great deal; will make smoother the way, and hasten the process. Let us work, comrades and friends, as we never did work, to carry the message of Socialism into homes that need it. Into hundreds of thousands of capitalist-ridden homes.—Progressive Woman.

Mrs. J. G. Phelps-Stokes (Rose Pastor), the Socialist worker, recounted, at a Socialist meeting in New York an amusing experience among alum children. "Not long ago," she said, "I saw on the street a little boy and girl whose clothes looked as though they had grown upon them. Speaking to them I urged them to lead me to their mother who politely informed me that it was her custom at the beginning of cold weather to sew the little ones up in flannels, freeing them with the return of spring. I persuaded the mother to put buttons on the clothes and to bathe her children regularly. Then last week I visited her gain. 'Well,' I said, 'how do the winter baths go?' 'The children don't like it, ma'am,' said the mother, 'and Johnny refused positively yesterday. He said you could do as you liked and he liked. You like to be cold and clean, and he likes to be warm and dirty.'"—Cosmopolitan.

Nothing but labor makes wealth, but money is made by schemes.

The rich exploiter loves you—as the master loved his slaves.

NOW GET BUSY!

The Socialist Wants 10,000 More Subscribers in Columbus Right Away.

The Workers in "The Storm Center Of Socialism" Have A Chance To Make Good.

All That Is Needed Is "A Long Pull, A Strong Pull; and A Pull Altogether."

The Socialist Makes Fair Proposition To Secure The Co-Operation Of All For The Next Campaign.

READ EVERY WORD OF OUR OFFER.

The Socialist wishes to co-operate with the City Central Committee, the Ward Branches and the precinct workers of the Socialist party of Columbus in educating the voters and organizing our forces so that we may reap the full benefit of our educational work.

We believe that one of the most effective means of educating the workers and of propagating Socialism is through the columns of a good Socialist paper. The paper goes each week into the home and carries some message, some truth, to each of its readers. While we make no apology for our paper, we are determined that each issue shall be an improvement over the previous one.

The subscription list is the life of any paper. Without it, it dies. We want at least 10,000 subscribers on our books before the campaign opens. We must have them if The Socialist is to be the power for good that it should be in the fight of 1911 in Columbus, "the Storm Center of Socialism."

OUR PLAN.

Here is our plan to put money into the treasuries of the City Central Committee and of the Ward Branches for use in organization and propaganda work, as they may determine:

1. We will pay to each Ward Branch 12½ per cent. of all money for subscriptions collected and turned in by its members to The Socialist.

2. We will pay over to the treasury of the City Central Committee of Local Columbus 12½ per cent. of all money collected and paid in by the Ward Branches for subscriptions to The Socialist.

LIST OF PRIZES.

As Prizes or special rewards for the workers we offer the following:

1. To the Branch turning in the largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist, in proportion to membership of the Branch in good standing, we will give $75 in books, to be selected by the Branch, or in money.

2. To the Branch turning in the second largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist, under the foregoing conditions, we will gice $50 in books or money.

3. To the Branch turning in the third largest amount of money on subscriptions as stated we will give $25 in books or money.

INDIVIDUAL REWARDS.

1. To the individual turning in the largest amount of money on subscriptions to The Socialist we will pay $25 in gold.

2. To the individual turning in the second largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist we will pay $15 in gold.

3. To the individual who turns in the third largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist we will pay $10 in gold.

CONDITIONS.

The only conditions we impose in this contest are that the members of Branches will get all their sub. cards from the literature or special agent of their respective Branches and that this agent will at all times have on hand a supply of sub. cards and make returns to The Socialist of all subscriptions received not later than Wednesday of each week. Sub. cards will be supplied by this office at any time. This contest will be limited to Branches and Locals in Franklin County.

This Contest Began On Saturday, Feb. 11, and Will Close Tuesday, November 7, 1911

Information as to details of this contest will be cheerfully furnished by this office.

STRICKLAND AT LONDON.

He Opens the Eyes of the People to the Light of Socialism.

Comrade Strickland came over from Springfield last week, and gave London its first Socialist lecture. The crowd that greeted him at the Court House assembly room was not a big success, owing to the inclement weather and a conflicting entertainment, but the lecture was grand.

Comrade H. H. Pringle introduced the speaker in true oratorical style. The Socialist movement is developing orators from unexpected quarters.

Comrade Strickland didn't abuse anybody, but, as he smiled blandly, he hit the system some knock-out jolts. One old-time party sinner said Strickland's talk affected him something like an old country-cured ham is supposed to affect a Jew: "Thou almost persuadeth me to be a Socialist." Give us Strickland and decent weather, and we'll fill the Court House to hear him.

BERGER SUBMITS PETITION WITH 90,000 NAMES

Washington.—Ninety thousand citizens of the United States petitioned Congress last week to withdraw the troops from the Mexican border.

It required three men to carry to the speaker's platform, where the house convened, huge bundles of petitions submitted by Victor Berger, the Socialist member from Wisconsin.

"What is all this?" asked speaker Clark, in surprise.

Mr. Berger explained that the petitions had been received from residents of every state except Delaware and from every territory except Alaska. They declare that the presence of the troops is aiding in the suppression of what the petitioners believe to be a just struggle for liberty.

BRIBERY GALORE IN OHIO LEGISLATURE.

Capitalistic Methods Are Being Revealed by Grand Jury Probe.

Crooked Methods of Lobbyists and State Solons Are Coming to Light.

The arrest of three men employed by the Burns detective agency, at the instance of Representative George B. Nye, of Pike county, in the Ohio General Assembly has precipitated one of the most sensational legislative scandals in the long history of political corruption in the United States. Dr. Nye charges that the accused men paid him $100 to vote against the women's nine hour bill and $100 to vote against the bill to tax the surplus funds of insurance companies doing business in Ohio. This has caused the detectives to submit to the grand jury of Franklin county a mass of evidence which, it is alleged, will implicate, as bribe-takers, [illegible] members of the House.

The Socialist has, more than once, declared that the present Ohio legislature was the worst that ever met in the capitol building. This conclusion is amply verified by the disclosures thus far. The Socialist says, "LET NO GUILTY MAN ESCAPE, WHETHER LEGISLATOR OR BRIBE GIVER.

In saying this we also desire to say that the wholesale corruption which has prevailed in Ohio during this and previous sessions of the General Assembly is an inherent part of Capitalism. The Big Business Interests can not perpetuate themselves without this resort to bribery. The astounding dishonesty, which has been long known and may now be uncovered, only shows how useless it is to elect "good men" to office under Capitalism. With few exceptions the members of the Ohio General Assembly came to Columbus with characters as good as it is possible for business and professional men to have under the present system. From the first day of the session they have been surrounded by the paid agents—male and female—of the Big Business Interests. Every weakness of the flesh has been ministered to, every influence called into use. Men have been analyzed. Those susceptible to the animal passions have been separated from those that would yield to the almighty dollar, and both of these classes from those who could be swayed only by argument.

It is hoped that the work of exposure will be thorough, although we doubt it. It looks to an outsider as though the corrupt lobbyists and their backers, frightened by the possibility of being brought to justice, have turned on the small rascals who have been their tools and are seeking safety by uncovering enough to send a few boodlers to prison or disgrace while the bribe-givers who have profited by the work of their underlings will escape.

Will the grand jury and the Burns detectives show up the means by which the uniform text-book bill and the coal mine screen law were killed? Will they expose the means by which every measure proposed for the advantage of the working class has been defeated or buried?

One thing is true and that is the conviction and imprisonment of every grafter in Ohio would not lighten the lot of the working class. Only the abolition of the wage system will do that.

The fact that the bribe-givers have turned state's evidence to punish the bribe-takers for going too far in their demands will not help.

CONVICT EVERY CROOK, WHETHER LEGISLATOR or DETECTIVE. The man who induces another to commit a crime is a criminal.

Mrs. Hetty Green, of New York, according to the tenants of a four-story, downtown building in St. Louis, has forgotten she owns the building. The tenants have not paid rent for ten months, because no authorized collector had called on them.

Isn't it a great system that piles up so much wealth for a small class that the owners forget about their possessions.

THE SPECIALIST.

(Written for The Columbus Socialist.)

The Socialist believes in the specialist. We want the most highly developed form of social and industrial organization. And specialization is the only road.

We welcome the large, power-driven machines. We welcome the trust form of business. They subdivide the work. They bring the specialist.

No one man is large enough in these days to master all the knowledge of any particular line. If he master a department, he does well.

Science grows because it welcomes the specialist. It is special knowledge which leads us farther and farther into the unknown.

The Socialist party organization has this same lesson to learn. Any movement, to be successful, must train its men to do the particular work or the particular parts of the work required.

We are learning this fact, but we have not yet grasped it fully. There are many comrades who look upon an official position as an "honor," not as a position of specialized service. Hence they want the "honors" passed around among as many of the "good comrades" as possible.

The comrades are all good, and there is no occasion for special honors for any of them. From among these comrades we want those who have sufficient native ability to prepare themselves for the special fields of journalism, organizing, secretary work and lecturing. Until we do this thoroughly we have not fully demonstrated our own philosophy.

Frederick Guy Strickland.

THE SOCIALIST STATE CONVENTION.

The state convention of the Socialist party of Ohio was in session in this city, beginning Thursday morning of last week and closing last Sunday evening.

To people who do not understhnd the basic principles of the Socialist party it would appear that much time was wasted. Such was not the case. The question of the admission of the delegates from Dayton was an issue. Had the assemblage been a Republican or Democratic convention, the State Central Committee and the Credentials Committee would have settled such a matter in fifteen minutes. Not so in a Socialist convention. For three days and nights the delegates heard testimony on both sides of the controversy, and the steam-roller did not roll until midnight Saturday. This did not finally dispose of the question, for the voluminous record of the hearing will be submitted to the locals and every party member in Ohio will have a chance to vote for or against the decision of the convention, which was against Local Dayton. The Socialist party is different.

The Big Business Men are always talking about the poor idle convicts. Let them beware of the vast increasing army of idle workers, who are at large with "the key to the street" in their pockets. "Hungry men know no law."

Senate Bill 255, introduced by Senator Todd, of Franklin county, is a graft of the worst nature. Who requested the Chamber of Commerce to expend this money? Who owns the city of Columbus? Who elected Hanby Jones one of the Finance Committee who voted the bill out of the committee after a public hearing had been requested?

We, the CITIZENS OF COLUMBUS, DEMAND THAT the Columbus Chamber of Commerce be compelled to publish an itemized account showing where and how this money was expended. If the Chamber of Commerce fails to do this, they are playing a farce comedy in talking about clearing up legislative graft.

The badly decomposed body of an unidentified man was found in an empty refrigerator car on a Pennsylvania side-track, near Grandview, shortly before noon Tuesday. Silas Sovill, a car inspector, living in McKinley avenue near Grandview, made the discovery while inspecting the long string of cars on the siding. The car in which the body was found had been on the siding for more than a month.

The body was on a pile of weeds and old newspapers, in one end of the car. A loaf of bread, which had not been unwrapped, was found near the body, while an empty strychnine bottle was lying near. Another tragedy is added to the death list for which capitalism is responsible.

WHAT THE SOCIALIST MOVEMENT IS.

(By Clyde J. Wright.)

"The conquest of political power does not happen at one stroke," says Von Vollmar in his "State Socialism," but dutiful Socialists that you are you don't care to waste time in an argument, but the first stroke is about to happen—has happened.

"Every success of our party"—now we have found the word—"SUCCESS;" this does not consist of winning elections any more than to see you enter a kitchen tells us that you are a cook.

Formerly you heard Socialists say: "Educate the voters." Economic uncertainty has bred a discontent which is not going to wait for education. "Socialism" is seeming to sound better to a large number of people chiefly because other party names are sounding worse. We just can't help it if many voters seek "Any port in a storm," even if the Socialist party does happen to be one of the "Any," or perhaps the "only."

This in no way affects the Socialist's philosophy, but it makes that word "SUCCESS" look like letters of fire. If party elections beat party organization to the goal then that word "SUCCESS" will look like more fire—most fire; yes it will look like * * * * * (plenty).

It might be worse; we have a few real fighters who are going to shoulder the burden, and whether it is a square deal or not makes no difference, if you won't get under the load, these few will fight their own battles and yours, too. THEY ARE NOT WAITING FOR "SUCCESS," THEY WILL MAKE IT "SUCCESS."

"Socialism" is a philosophy. The "Socialist Movement" is founded in that philosophy—the object is the "Co-operative Commonwealth."

The "Co-operative Commonwealth" presupposes the collective ownership and control of all public utilities and resources which are used publicly. "Socialism" is simply an analysis of the economic laws and unerringly points out the absolute necessity of a complete change in our governmental system. BUT WHAT IS THE NATURE OF THE "SOCIALIST MOVEMENT?"

We are face to face with the extreme difficulty of somehow persuading the Socialists to learn the difference between "Socialism" and the "Socialist Movement."

The "Socialist Movement" is neither Socialism nor the Co-operative Commonwealth any more than a farmer is a crop of corn; but a crop of corn depends mightily upon how much the farmer knows about farming and how willing he is to work at it.

Our American people are very much "American"—moving with very little ceremony after they are ready. We are now going to get the votes; the "Socialist Movement" is responsible for what we are going to do with them. Frederick Engels, speaking of the German movement in 1895, said: "To maintain this growth unbroken, until of itself it rises above the heads of the ruling system of government, that is our principal task."

Satisfied, now, that Socialism is irrefutable, the routed plutocracy can only hope and pray that the "Socialist Movement" will fail;

—that the Socialists will lack endurance;
—that the Socialists will fail to stand the financial strain;
—that the elected Socialist will not be qualified for political action;
—that the elected Socialists will make blunders;
—that the local organization may be incompetent to intelligently direct;
—that the elected Socialists can be made to "hob-nob" with the "silk shirt" gentry and perhaps yield to corruption;

The above, this is what the interests pray for, this is what the Socialists must prepare for; this is what the "Socialist Movement" exists for.

On the other hand the elected Socialists confront two distinct internal dangers—one is a poorly organized and unread membership, whose advice is of no value; the other is the same kind of membership with a disposition to criticise and direct without equipping themselves with an understanding of the political situation.

Charges that graft entered into the purchase by the Socialist common council of lands valued at $1,000,000 to use for a city park received a quietus at the hands of Judge Neelen in the District court at Milwaukee. The judge ruled there was no evidence to support the allegations.

The case followed accusations by Alderman J. P. Carney, a non-Socialist, and William S. Berg, a liquor salesman, that a "certain alderman" made a large amount of money in graft in connection with the purchase.

Mayor Seidel, backed by the Socialist majority in the council, demanded an immediate investigation.

Resolutions Passed by the Ohio State Convention

Socialist Party, April 27—30, 1911.

MUNICIPAL PROGRAM

Adopted by the Ohio State Convention, April 30, 1911.

The first consideration in all municipal affairs should be the interests of the working class. The Socialist party is not organized to elect good men to office, but to control the powers of political government in order to guarantee to the workers the possession and operation of the means of production and distribution and the full social product of their labor. Various issues will arise in the communities of Ohio, and the Socialist party stands firmly for the rights of the producing class. The party declares:

1. For the initiative, referendum and recall in municipal affairs.
2. The public ownership of all public utilities. For the abolishing of the contract system in public improvements and the doing of all such work by the municipality direct.
3. For the eight-hour day for all laborers employed on public improvements and in municipal departments.
4. For the rigid inspection of workshops, factories and places of public assembly.
5. For the enforcement of the laws to protect the lives of workers while engaged in industries.
6. For the best sanitary conditions in tenements and elsewhere.
7. For parks and playgrounds located within reach of the workers.
8. For free text-books in public schools.
9. For the free administration of justice, and the appointment of a public "defender" as well as a prosecutor, as at present.
10. The enforcement of the legal requirements as to weights and measures.

BANDOW RESOLUTION.

Whereas, Since the last state convention, death has taken from our midst Comrade Robert Bandow, of Cleveland, who, during thirty years of service, was an active and earnest worker for working class emancipation, and who as a member of the Socialist party rendered great service to our cause, be it

Resolved, by the Socialist party in state convention assembled, That we deplore the loss of our fellow-worker and express our admiration for his lifelong efforts to promote the interests of the organizations engaged in the struggle for equality and justice for those who toil.

DAYTON RESOLUTION.

Resolved, Whereas the evidence is undeniable that Local Dayton has not complied with the requirements of Section 2, Article 12 of the State Constitution, reading as follows: "Sec. 2. Each Local shall pay to the State Executive Committee the sum of 25 cents for every new applicant for membership, which shall be forwarded, with duplicate application, to the State Secretary immediately after acceptance of the member." We hereby revoke the charter of Local Dayton; and be it further

Resolved, That Dan P. Farrell be recalled as a member of the State Executive Committee by this act, and be it further

Resolved, That all official papers, all books and literature and all money pertaining to belonging to Local Dayton shall be turned over to the State office, and be it further

Resolved, That this convention receive nominations and elect an organizer who shall organize a local at Dayton, providing the above action is sustained by referendum vote of the membership, and be it further

Resolved, That this resolution be submitted to the membership independently of the other proceedings of this convention and at the earliest possible moment, to be returned to the State office within thirty days of the date of submission.

NEGRO RESOLUTION.

Whereas, the negro in his long training in slavery and being recently emancipated, holds a peculiar position in society, therefore be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that we invite the negro to join the Socialist party, which would give him an equal opportunity to receive the full social product of his labor, and urge that competent speakers be employed by the State Executive Committee to organize the negro voters of Ohio into the Socialist party.

KIDNAPING RESOLUTION.

The Socialist Party of Ohio, in convention assembled, declares the kidnaping of the two McNamaras and McManigal by the Burns Detective Association to be another Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone case.

In loud and unmistakable tones we denounce the kidnaping of working men, denying them their constitutional and legal rights and railroading them from one state into another.

These men were taken from the same state which shielded Ex-Governor Taylor of Kentucky, a fugitive from justice, and taken to California, where prejudice against unionism runs high.

We declare that working men are not equal with capitalists under the law, and until the working class gains control of the powers of government they will be discriminated against in the interests of the class in control.

We call upon the workers of the United States to rally to the defense of these men, and to stigmatise their treatment as a blow aimed at organized labor and in the interests of the enemies of organized labor.

We call upon the working class everywhere to organize industrially and politically, and by the power of organization to force the already tottering and frightened powers of capitalism to recognize the demands of labor and finally and ultimately to this force the overthrow of capitalism, with its inequalities and injustices, and in its stead establish the rule of man.

Signed by the Committee.

MEXICAN RESOLUTION:

Resolution adopted by the Socialist Party of Ohio, in convention, April 28, 1911:

Whereas, The Mexican Liberal Party of Mexico, now in revolt against the Diaz government, is composed mostly of working people; and

Whereas, The Mexican workers are fighting for their economic and political rights, such as speech, press and assemblage; and

Whereas, The Socialist Party of the United States is even now engaged in a similar struggle; and

Whereas, Our comrades and fellow-workers of Mexico are in fact oppressed by the Diaz government, and that the capitalists of the United States are aiding in this oppression, therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Socialist Party of Ohio, in convention assembled, that we declare our unity with our Mexican comrades and fellow-workers in their struggle, with all financial and moral support within our power, and

Resolved, That this convention request the National Executive Committee to take similar action throughout the United States.

OUR NEEDS IN EDUCATION.

(Anna A. Maley.)

Education, we are told, is mental development. That is, education serves to make strong, orderly and efficient mental equipment, and this equipment should enable us to give more effective direction to our life's activities.

Which is the chief of life's activities? That which takes up most of the time of most of the people—the industrial activity.

With the advance of time, "the struggle for mere bread has been replaced with men, but the struggle for wealth in general—a struggle of man with men and nation with nation, for the plainly avowed purpose of acquiring a wealth produced by others, and acquiring it by force and diplomacy, which latter is only another word for fraud." (Michael A. Lane, "Man in Perspective.")

Life's chief activity, it seems, has adopted a predatory method, and as far as this method is accepted as proper by our educators, today's education tends to make us well-trained thieves.

Into our world of plunder and prey comes the young engineer, who in shop and factory so organizes and perfects the mechanical plant that the worker yields over a greater result from his labor; the young lawyer, who so shapes the legal structure, that piece of social mechanism, that the worker has neither joy nor benefit from his increased productivity, the industrial master absorbing everything down to the limits of the worker's miserable existence; the young minister who preaches master-class supremacy as God's own dispensation: and the teacher who poisons the intellectual life of society at its springs by impressing upon the minds of the young the standards of a master-and-slave order of life.

Now and again your J. Howard Moore, your Veblen, your Giddings or your Lester F. Ward goes out consciously to raise the social ideal, to expand the social consciousness. But while John D. Rockefeller presents the Chicago University with $35,000,000 in interest-bearing stocks and bonds, the faculty of that institution will not be likely to unsparingly condemn the system which forces ignorant workers to donate to the university the annual interest on these securities.

Nor do we marvel that the educator is a prostitute. Rather do we wonder at the intrepid few-teachers, ministers and journalists (your jurist is a more consistent lickspittle), who go out in the teeth of disaster to assert their honest convictions. Woe be unto them! Their bones bleach by the upward trail.

Our prime need in education is a new soil in which to root educational institutions—a free economic soil. The spirit of freedom will not be found in our educational institutions until the fact of freedom has been established in our bread-getting field. For by "freedom is meant, under present bourgeois conditions of production, free selling and buying." And trust domination has limited even this "unconscionable free trade" to the free buying by masters of human beings—or what comes to the same thing, their labor power—in the competitive market.

One purpose of industrial concentration is to enable those in control to restrict the output of products and thus maintain the price of the limited output. But competition among the workers cheapens them to the masters, and those who own no means of production are held up and forced to sell their one commodity—labor power—on a market which is utterly demoralised by the excess of the supply of labor energy over the demand for it.

We workers are always on the market and continuously making forced sales. In this respect the position of your teacher does not differ essentially from that of the common laborer. Your mechanic sells himself into a machine shop, where he becomes an attachment to a social instrument, an institution, where he must mould young minds for service according to a master-class ideal.

And it makes little difference in the final result whether Rockefeller and his group own the schools directly or whether they own the sources from which school revenues are drawn. The school boards, like other "people's officials," from poundmaster to president, are the obedient choreboys of the masters of the bread.

There will be no freedom in education until the opportunity to get bread is free. Meantime, we must faithfully support our own press and such schools as have been established for the propagation of the new ideals. But more important than all is Socialist control of school boards. Just as the workers must own the industrial system of the country before we shall have an industrial democracy, so must they control the school system before we shall have a people's education.

Every boy may not be president; but every boy should have an opportunity to qualify for the presidency or any other position to which he may aspire.

No individual is great of himself—we are of society, and we owe to society the gifts which it places in our hands. "He who lives to himself is dead, though the ground be not upon him." The student who regards himself as an individual who must achieve power and place by clambering pell-mell over the prostrate bodies of his fellows has need of the vision of that "association in which the free development of each is the condition for the free development of all."

ANNA A. MALEY.

BERGER AMUSED BY SHOW IN CONGRESS.

May Deliver His Maiden Speech Any Moment—Victor's Views.

WASHINGTON.—Expecting at any moment to make his maiden speech in Congress, Socialist Representative Berger has consented to give his impression of Congress for the benefit of the Socialist press.

"As yet," said Berger, "the questions before the House are such as interest the business section of the population. The reciprocity treaty with Canada, for instance, is eminently a trader's question.

"It is of importance to the meat trust, the paper trust and others of the same stripe. As to the practical effect of the reciprocity treaty itself—this will be very small indeed.

"Personally, I enjoy the discussions hugely.

"It is rather amusing to hear the Democrats show plainly what swindlers the Republicans are and always were.

"And I," said Berger, "conscientiously applaud both sides, because both sides always prove their case."

Hardly had the general laughter which followed this remark subsided when Berger's face became set and serious.

"This trouble," said Berger with emphasis, "is only, when one looks closer, the situation is not humorous at all. It is rather tragic, because the working people are fooled both ways."

According to Berger, the representatives of the two old parties in Congress are simply two committees through which our capitalist society is doing business today.

"Until very recently," said Berger, "the working class did not exist in Congress. The few union men in Congress are simply representatives of the business men's parties—North and South.

"The existence of the working class will only be felt in the degree as it will be possible for the Socialist representative to make his influence felt in the House."

The speeches on reciprocity, said Berger, reminds him in some respects of a Chinese play.

"A Chinese play," he said, "usually lasts three or four days in succession. However, one can come in at any time and get the whole plot in five minutes.

"One could also learn the whole plot in five minutes at any time while listening to the villains of either side of the show in Congress."

Competition and the law of supply and demand are forcing the workers to toil for smaller and smaller wages and thus preventing millions from marrying. And so those few workers who do happen to get married are so driven to their slavery and kept as it were "with their noses to the grindstone," that, besides their toil their relaxation has but one string to play on, namely, reproductive love. So this system forces those who do marry to supply the full quota of slaves to carry on the accursed profit making for the idle capitalists. Change the system by voting Socialist and all will be able to marry and live properly.

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION.

News From The World Wide Movement Of The Workers.

NEWS FROM THE NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS

Relating to the kidnaping of officials of labor organizations, and attempted conviction by detective stories in the press, the following motion was sent by wire on April 24 to the National Executive Committee:

"That an investigation of the facts be conducted by the National Office at an expense not to exceed $150, report to be made to the National Executive Committee and the Socialist and labor press."

Affirmative votes were received by wire from the following members of the committee: Comrades Carey, Goebel, Hillquitt, Hunter and Spargo. Comrade Lewis also voted in the affirmative.

Upon receipt of a majority vote Comrade J. C. Carroll was at once dispatched upon the mission to Indianapolis, Ind., the headquarters of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers.

A telegram from Los Angeles states that, according to statements printed there, fifty persons, including the mayor, other city officials and members of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, had knowledge of the illegal detention of prisoners and of the plans of Detective Burns to kidnap J. J. McNamara, secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers. The newspapers are printing sensational stories of alleged confessions and doing everything possible to inflame public minds. The whole affair hourly takes on a stronger aspect of a gigantic conspiracy.

PROPOSED NATIONAL PARTY REFERENDUM.

"Motion adopted by Local Rosedale, S. P., Pierce county, Washington, February 26:

"Moved that Article II. of the National Constitution of the Socialist Party be amended so that a husband and wife may become members in good standing by the presentation of one red card or by payment of one assessment for dues.

"Comment: The aim of the Socialist Party is to secure votes, not dues. Those who join a local are pledged to vote for Socialist candidates. Those who do not join may talk for Socialism and vote for capitalism.

"All money raised by dues is used for organization or propaganda work. If we can secure more votes right at home by cutting down the expense of joining to new members it answers the same purpose as if the State and National Offices had received more dues and used the money in some other way.

"We want the women in the locals, and they are not coming under the present dues system. We want farmers and their wives, and must make a special effort to secure them.

"Yours fraternally,

"(Signed) MRS. ALICE FARNELL,
"Local Correspondent."

WISCONSIN NOTES.

The Milwaukee Socialists have called the bluff of the enemy.

For months the anti-Socialist minority in the Milwaukee city council has been making all sorts of charges against the Socialists, except the charge of graft. Even the capitalist press, while abusing them in every conceivable fashion, has always had to admit that they are strictly honest—or, as one newspaper man put it, "All the graft of the Milwaukee administration would not fill your hollow tooth."

But now one of the anti-Socialist aldermen has made charges of dishonesty against the Social-Democrats. He called their purchase of the Milwaukee River Park "the biggest steal ever perpetrated in the history of the city."

Right away the Socialist aldermen in the council demanded an investigation of the entire transaction. They called upon the alderman making the accusation to present his proofs to the city attorney at the earliest possible moment, "in order that immediate action be taken in the matter, the grafters caught, prosecuted to the limit and impeached in office, that the reputation of the city may be cleared from the blot which these allegations have brought upon it."

This resolution, introduced by a Socialist alderman, was passed by an almost strictly party vote, only two non-Socialist aldermen voting for it!

Moreover, a resolution, introduced by another anti-Socialist alderman and calling for a grand jury investigation, was promptly put through by the Socialists without discussion.

The district attorney has accordingly begun proceedings. He has subpoenaed this alderman to appear before him and tell all he knows.

Thus the bluff of the enemy has been called most completely.

This puts the anti-Socialists in an especially awkward plight, because the anti-Socialist alderman making the charge of a "steal" was the very man whom they want to run for mayor next spring on the Anti-Socialist ticket. This foolish move on his part has considerably damaged his prospects by putting him in a very ridiculous light.

The capitalist press accordingly show their chagrin by complaining of the extravagance of the Socialists in voting for "a grand jury probe for the sake of establishing something about which there is no question." For, says one of the papers most bitter against us, the Socialist administration "may lack sound judgment, and it may dream idle dreams, but beyond doubt it is honest in money matters."

This prompt action of the Socialists has thus taken the wind out of the enemy's sails.

Meanwhile, the Milwaukee Socialists keep on sawing wood. They are especially pushing the sale of the bonds for the Milwaukee Socialist Daily, which is the prime necessity of the Milwaukee Socialist movement.

Last week the subscription to the bonds for the daily averaged $1,000 a day. Over $20,000 have now been subscribed for bonds, or over one-fifth the amount required. We feel that with persistent pushing we may launch the daily next fall.

E. H. THOMAS,
State Secretary.

PECULIAR WISDOM.

(By A. B. Shinn.)

Wm. Shay was elected mayor of Starr City, W. Va., on the Socialist ticket, January 5, 1911. Four councilmen were also elected on the Socialist ticket. They were J. W. Kennedy, John Brasner, Frank McShaffery and G. B. Strausberg. Judge Mason, of Morgan district, very carefully viewed the situation and qualifications of the elected Socialists. At last, on February 14, 1911, he ruled: That said William Shay was not eligible to the office of mayor, because the law requires that the mayor shall pay taxes on property amounting to $100 or more, and the deed for the property of William Shay was a joint deed made to William Shay and his wife. Tax receipts were produced to show that taxes had been paid on more than the required amount of property, but the crime was that Mr. Shay had permitted his wife's name to enter the deed.

Now, according to this new peculiar wisdom, citizens be careful; be very careful, if your faithful wife helps you to get a home, that you take every most bit of it from her and make her a pauper if you fail to do this you are a criminal and unfit to act as mayor of a city, even if elected by an overwhelming mapority.

Is a man who fails to rob his wife of everything or who permits her to share his home a villain!

The wisdom of our judges rule that it is not a crime to buy votes, buy the way to office; but if a man gets in office without buying his way, he is unfit for the office because his wife shares his property, and if we dare to say the courts are unjust we can be sent to jail for contempt of court, at the voice and will of the one man of whom we dare to speak the truth.

You are dreaming this is a free country, while your kings rule over you at their will.

A pawnbroker was awakened in the middle of the night by a furious knocking at his door. Opening the window, he looked out and asked:

"What's the matter?"

"Come down!" demanded the knocker.

"But——"

"Come down!"

The pawnbroker hastened downstairs and peeped around the door. "Now, sir?" he demanded.

"I wan'sh know the time," said the reveler.

"Do you mean to say you knocked me up for that? How dare you?"

The midnight visitor looked injured. "Well, you've got my watch," he said.—Ladies' Home Journal.

"What are they doing?" asked a visitor to the United States Supreme Court.

"They are handing down a decision declaring those Chattanooga lynchers are in contempt of court unless they show cause by October," said an ancient doorkeeper.

"Is it such a serious thing to be in contempt of the Supreme Court?" persisted the visitor.

"Serious thing!" exclaimed the doorkeeper. "Why, sir, just stop and think it over. There ain't nobody left to appeal to but just Providence."—Chicago Chronicle.

Comrade Berger Is Now An Alderman at Washington

When the great American public awakened the next morning after the last Congressional election, after rubbing its eyes and pinching itself, it found a number of remarkable things had taken place over night. True, a so-called Democratic landslide had been freely predicted and was probably generally expected, but there must have been genuine astonishment when it was discovered that Milwaukee had elected a Socialist Congressman; that the entering wedge had been driven, and that in the long drawn out battle for that which our Constitution—peace to its ashes—generously guarantees, but does not give—equal rights to all—the first substantial victory had been achieved. Congress is now in session, and Victor Berger, of Milwaukee, is seated in the House of Representatives.

Few members of his party, perhaps none, are better known than Victor Berger. He is not only an enthusiastic Socialist, but is a practical politician and a man of real brains and ability. The latter qualities are not as common as they might be, in either the upper or lower house, and it is devoutly to be hoped that the little leaven injected by Milwaukee will leaven the whole loaf.

It has been a matter of some conjecture just how Washington would take to the new Socialist Congressman: whether, with its capitalistic scorn for his theories, the press would hurl shafts of anathema and vituperation, as has been the case with past apostles of some new creed, or whether it would ignore him with a studied indifference. Contrary to all expectations, it has done neither, but has made a sort of lion of Mr. Berger because of the novelty of his position, as the Socialist minority in Congress, and as a result he has enjoyed an average of about one column of free newspaper advertising per day right out on the front page. For once the capitalistic press has seen fit to mention that there is such a thing as Socialism.

The rampant majority in the House of Representatives has also been confronted with the proposition of how to dispose of Mr. Berger. With an amount of discretion scarcely to have been anticipated in this august body the powers that be must have taken stock of the personal qualifications of the Milwaukee alderman, for he has been given a membership in the House Committee on the District of Columbia, thus in effect making him alderman of Washington, D. C. In doing this a double, in fact, a triple result was accomplished. Mr. Berger was given official recognition, so that, superficially at least, they would seem to be playing fair; second, he was placed on a committee on which he could not do any harm to the interests they represent, and, third, the minority membership of the G. O. P. on the committee was reduced by one point.

If, however, they did intend to place the gentleman from Wisconsin upon the shelf it may well be doubted whether this purpose has been accomplished. There is much opportunity to do things, even on the District Committee, and the new alderman, as he calls himself, has already made a good start to do them. The local papers announced, the other day, that Mr. Berger is about to make a personal investigation of conditions in the District of Columbia, particularly with reference to the high cost of living. In order that measures may be taken to improve the conditions under which residents of this district exist. The word residents is used advisedly, for the people of this community, being disfranchised, and thereby placed in the same plane as lunatics and criminals, can not in justice be called citizens.

There is no question but that the cost of living is abnormal here, even for these abnormal times. It is said that a man may go from here to Baltimore, purchase a suit of clothes, and return and after adding to the price of the suit the amount of his railroad fare still be well within the price of the same suit here. Other things, including the necessities of life, correspond. There are several reasons for this. Washington probably enjoys a larger population of snobs than any other city in the United States, with the possible exception of New York. From the silk-hatted and frock-coated diplomat down to the poorest government clerk a large percentage attempt to convey outwardly the impression of opulence. It is common to see a very ordinary specimen of the genus homo attire himself in a "plug" hat, a Prince Albert coat and a frivolous cane and stroll out on Sunday afternoon to astonish the natives. Now, it may be very commendable to wear a silk hat, when you can get away with it, but a man pushing a pen at a yearly salary of $1,800 or less looks top heavy, to say the least. Naturally such a citizen, by his willingness to pay high prices so that he may appear more affluent than his neighbor, is an easy mark for the dealer whose business is to tax his wares all the tariff will bear.

But aside from this, Washington is a corporation-ridden town. The street railway companies, the gas company, the real estate sharks, the telephone company, in fact every form which corporate greed may take, has always been carefully represented either by person or influence in one of the other of the district committees of the two houses of Congress. One of the most brazen and most flagrant of these corporations is the Washington Gas Light Company. A little discussion of this concern may not be without its personal interest inasmuch as the individual who rules the destinies of this corporation has accused himself, at various times, of being a citizen of the great commonwealth of Ohio, when by reason of a shift to Democratic control in that state there seems to be some possibility of his knocking a plum from the graft tree. It is not the intention in this article to name any names, but in case any reader is unable to guess the initials of this ingenuous individual they are John E. McLean, who has been in Ohio twice in the last quarter of a century, once to be defeated for governor, and once to think he was going to be a candidate for senator. The story that McLean tried to pick the Doctor's pocket the day he was born is without doubt a fabrication, inspired by the jealousy of a rival newspaper man, but there is no question of his ability to distinguish the salient characteristics of a dollar bill at a distance of five thousand, two hundred and eighty feet much more readily than he can determine in whom the legal title is vested. By reason of his inaccuracy in this last respect, coupled with a powerful interest in the bi-partisan machine which dominates our legislative body, the Washington Gas Light Company has been enabled to filch from the pockets of the "ultimate consumer" large dividends on watered stock, and even recently contemplated "cutting a melon" in the very face of an agitation to lower the price of gas from 90 cents to 80 cents per thousand. Finally, seized with cold feet, the rate has been voluntarily reduced to 85 cents, in the hope that this would stave off a congressional investigation. By all means we commend the Hon. Mr. Befrger to the gas company as one of the reasons for the high cost of living. There are others. May he be successful in driving all the money changers from the temple.

POLICE COURT METHODS.

Grove City, O., April 4, 1911.

Editor The Socialist:

A copy of your paper came to me in a rather singular manner, and I feel moved to write a letter of felicitation on many things, especially in regard to the manner in which the police court is conducted. Only last Tuesday's Columbus News has the following:

Here's a New Record; 66 Cases in 37 Minutes.

Justice came near exceeding the speed limit in police court Monday. When court opened the docket was found to contain 63 new cases and 3 continued. Judge Osborn took his place on the bench at 8:30. In just 37 minutes the bailiff adjourned court. In that brief time 66 cases had been disposed of, an average of about 1 1-3 minutes to each case.

Would any man—no matter how sincerely attached to his party—call such work justice? What does Judge Osborne draw a large salary for—for presiding over his court 37 minutes in a day? Does any one think for a moment that he judged those 66 cases? Did the unfortunate ones have any chance to prove themselves innocent of the charges against them? Is it any wonder, under such methods, that the workhouse and county jail are overflowing? There surely is need of a good lawyer to defend these convicted—without fair trial—ones, as has been talked of lately. If there was a baseball game that morning, it would help some to explain this unusual (?) haste. It takes something more than a political pull and a swelled head to make a satisfactory police judge. Roy Wildermuth found that out when he offered his services the second time, and may not this be a fair warning to others?

Truly the time has arrived that was foretold by the prophet Isaiah, Chap. 59:14, 15: "Judgment is turned away backward and Justice' standeth afar off, for truth is fallen in the streets and Equity can not enter. And the Lord saw it, and it displeased Him that there was no judgment." When you consider the work that women have undertaken to reform, these abuses, do you think that such a state of affairs would exist as now exist in the police court if women helped to administer justice?

May God bless the Socialist movement?

Respectfully,
(MRS.) E. E. ALDRICH.

THE AWAKENING OF THE SILENT CROWD.

Every page of history teaches the workers of the existence of a class struggle.

Some historians have the audacity to record events as occurring in "reformation periods." They describe the horrors of the "Inquisition." They lead their readers to the Tower of London, the most famous chamber of horrors the world has ever known. One of the entrances is along the river Thames. It is known as Traitors' Gate, yet beneath the dismal passageway leading to some hidden dungeon has passed some of the martyrs who died on the torture rack or at the headsman's block for the cause of human liberty.

The readers of history have become so saturated with the prevailing fashion of "going with the crowd" that they laugh at the sacred memorials erected to commemorate the deeds of those who were burned at the stake, while a cowed and sullen crowd looked on in horror. These were the acts of yesterday. No more will the sullen crowd view the executions behind the bayonets of infantry and at the call of death be dispersed by cavalry. Why? you ask. And the echoes of past events seemingly replies, "Because the crowd has realized its strength. The working class have awoke from the slumber of centuries.

The past has been the rule of animalism—the future is to be the rule of Humanism.

Jim Henderson.

THE GUGGENHEIMS.

The Guggenheims are thrifty. They have many "interests," hence need the protection of the law.

Besides, they want more. Why not? That is human. They want Alaska. A small matter for a large family. Pinchot protested in the name of the people. Pinchot got fired. Served him right. He should have known better.

To get Alaska they need somebody "higher up." A United States senator, for instance.

Why not send one of their own family? So they quietly bought him the senatorship of Colorado.

When he got to Washington he was met by his friend, Penrose. "What do you want?"

"Oh, I want Alaska and a few other trifles."

"All right," says Penrose; "YOU ARE APPOINTED ON THE COMMITTEE OF PUBLIC LANDS."

Berger is appointed to inspect the streets of Washington—Guggenheim to steal, pardon us, we mean inspect, the coal mines of Alaska.

Why don't you laugh?

It appears that the Columbus Chamber of Commerce is to get, through the legislature, the $6,000 alleged to have been furnished the sheriff of Franklin county last summer to aid the Rail-Light in crushing the street car men's union when a living wage was demanded. The Master Class will always get what it wants from councils, legislatures, courts and executive officers, as long as the workers keep the old parties in power.

Indiana served as a land of refuge for ex-Governor Taylor, and the governor of the state refused to honor or sign extradition papers, even with proof of guilt and a public demand for the papers. Now we have working men involved. Now we see the governor grant a secret conference to a private detective, honor extradition papers at once, and all is over. It is a matter of but little consequence in the latter case, just mere workmen, while with an ex-governor there is a fraternal spirit, a sort of community of interests. We can see the governor's point of view? Of course.

"The International Socialist movement," writes Prof. Charles Zeublin, the well-known lecturer and author, who was fired out of Rockefeller's Chicago University because he insisted on telling the truth, "is without exception the most pregnant movement of modern times. It is the creation, not of one man or of any set of men, but of the titanic forces of social evolution. It is becoming a mighty force of social evolution. It is becoming a mighty force in all civilized countries. It has built up a powerful press, and, furthermore, has produced a scientific and philosophical literature that commands the respect of scholars everywhere. It numbers among its advocates many of the foremost writers, artists, thinkers, economists, orators and scientists of the old world and the new.

THE BEAST IS WOUNDED.

SOCIALIST STATE CONVENTION MEETS

Four Days Session Filled With Strenuous Doings Every Minute.

The Socialist State Convention, which met in this city April 27-30, was a most strenuous one, but that is the case with all Socialist conventions. Comrades Dan McCartan, of Coshocton, and A. C. Eby, of Columbus, acted as secretaries throughout all the sessions. Comrade J. M. Henderson, of Columbus, was chairman during the first three days, and on Sunday Comrade J. G. Willert was elected to preside. The question of seating the delegates from Local Dayton or revoking the charter of that organization was considered Thursday, Friday and Saturday until midnight, when the vote was taken adverse to Dayton, 40 to 29.

Stung to the quick by their expulsion from the ranks of the party, 300 members of the Dayton branch of the party, headed by a brass band and waving banners of peace and Socialism, came to Columbus Sunday morning. Notice of the action of the delegates in expelling the Dayton local for alleged irregularities will be sent to every local in the state, to be ratified or rejected by a referendum vote of the members.

The convention also selected John M. Work, of Chicago, to reorganize Local Dayton in case the revocation of its charter stands.

On Sunday the convention got down to the regular order of business. The principal resolutions passed will be found on the second page of this paper.

In addition to these the convention passed a resolution demanding an amendment to the interstate commerce laws prohibiting the interstate transportation of convict-made goods. The following was also adopted:

Resolved, That we demand the repeal of the Dick military law, and that Victor L. Berger, as our only representative in the United States Congress, be asked to use his power and to secure its immediate repeal.

It was also recommended that the State Executive Committee donate the sum of $100 to assist New Castle Free Press in its fight against the tyranny of unjust courts.

The convention directed that the State Executive Committee employ an attorney to prefer charges against the members of the board of elections of Brown county for not certifying the 34 Socialist votes cast in that county last November. State Secretary Storck, Comrade W. G. Williams, of Cincinnati, and Organizer Shinn have unearthed some startling facts in regard to election methods in Brown county.

The state constitution was amended in several details. One was the restoration of the state committee, consisting of one member from each congressional district.

The convention was a typical Socialist assembly, and did business.

State Secretary Storck's report showed a wonderful growth during the past year, and the auditing committee found all the books to be in correct shape.

Resolutions were adopted against the Burns detectives arrested here Saturday night in connection with the alleged legislative bribery scandal, and the convention went on record as favoring the swift conviction of the wrongdoers whoever they are.

The following nominations were made for secretary of state, to be ratified by a referendum vote of the locals in the state: J. C. Schawe, Columbus; L. A. Zitt, Cincinnati; Edward Smith, Warren; W. M. Ralston, Fostoria, and F. E. Vernia, of East Liverpool. The following names were placed before the convention for state executive committee, six of whom will be chosen: J. W. Freeman and James Henderson, Columbus; Dan McCartain, Coschocton; Edward L. Schnaidt, Newark; Robert Johnson, Piqua; Walter Bagby, Portsmouth; S. W. Custer, Marietta; John D. Varelman, Lockland; C. E. Ruthenberg, Cleveland; J. P. Dennison, New Philadelphia; John E. Willert, Cleveland; Anna K. Storck, Lorain; Josephine Bates, Toledo; Margaret Prevey, Akron.

SUNDRY PRECEPTS AND MAXIMS.

(Sylvia Vermillion.)

We are glad the Franklin county grand jury has begun its probe of legislative bribery charges. With such men in the lead as Governor Harmon, Judge A. E. Blair of Scioto county, and Detective Burns, who so recently distinguished himself for bravery by kidnapping the McNamaras with only eleven men to help, the probing can only be resultant of good.

Judge A. E. Blair was criticised by the common herd because he did not prosecute the men who bought as well as the ones who sold their votes in Adams county. The judge did perfectly right. If he had prosecuted the men who had plenty of money with which to buy votes, it would have placed them on the same level. And the fact that we, Big Business, are different clay and can do no wrong, must be impressed on the common people at every opportunity.

Some are hinting that we have been bribing the legislature all winter. And that if our dear brother Pretzman got a chance to take an envelope with money in it, he'd do it. The idea is preposterous! Catch Mr. Charles Pretzman taking an envelope with only two hundred dollars in it! Why he's after bigger game than that. For proof we cite you to the Park Commission deal. And if those meddlesome Socialists had kept out, we would have pulled it off, too.

We are so proficient in the—now you see it—and now you don't—kind of politics that we expect to cover ourselves with glory and make a big impression by this investigation.

It is hard to understand why the common people have lost faith in us. My dear children! Our only thought for years has been for you! To bleed you for every dollar possible. We sometimes wonder that we ever attained this high degree of superiority being compelled to shake hands with the vulgar horde before each election.

In order to teach a much needed lesson of humility to the workingmen and women of Columbus, we have decided to organize them into a rough walker's brigade.

The Hon. E. K. Stewart of the Railway and Light has kindly consented to take charge, knowing that he has the love and respect of all honest people in Columbus. He has outlined the following line of march to take place every day after working hours:

'To form in Goodale Park and march to headquarters of the C. of C. where the hands with bared heads will chant: "How just and holy are all thy works, Oh Chamber of Commerce!" Then to the gas offices where the workers will sing: "Oh to be nothing, nothing, only to sit at thy feet."

In the front of the Railway and Light these humble followers will prostrate themselves until E. K. gives them the command to "Arise! depart in peace." We feel sure this will have the desired effect as these vulgar toilers are much too independent since the defeat of the Park Commission plan.

Each hand will be furnished with a flag bearing the emblem of the C. of C., a ten dollar gold piece.

J. Pierpont Morgan wired us that, at the suggestion of Colonel Roosevelt and Prof. Charles Eliot, he is going to have a law passed compelling all wives of workingmen to have at least twelve children. The girls are to be placed in our factories and mills at three years of age and work submissively under our orders. The boys to enter the Boy Scout movement when four years old so as to be able to protect our sacred rights of property when they reach manhood. All the weaklings will be chloroformed at birth.

When the Socialist women heard of this splendid plan they boldly suggested to us that we capture Mr. Roosevelt and Eliot, put rings through their noses and have them on exhibition in a stall in the live stock department at the coming State fair. Verily these Socialists are a thorn in the flesh! How long, Oh Lord, how long!

ONE COMRADE'S OPINION.

City, May 2d, 1911.

Mr. Editor:

Comrade—The "legislative bribery scandal" is being turned into a "burlesque" by "Burns." Unless checked he will play his game; he and his gang were hired to bribe the "legislature" in the interest of the "big ones" and why he has not been arrested in the question that is being asked by not a few. He bossed the job, and it would be a ten strike to have him 'pinched.' His hobnobbing around with Pretzman and lunching at the Columbus Club with the Chamber of Commerce gang is enough in itself. Burns' remark: "I am more than satisfied we have this thing cinched." is a bluff pure and simple. Burns is a tool for the big interest; they well know the kind of sneaks and snakes, to employ—get him—COMRADE.

ONE THING AND ANOTHER.

This glory is for men.

That lives upon its young.
—Charlotte Perkins Gilman.

Mother (at lunch)—Yes, darling, these little sardines are sometimes eaten by the larger fish.

Mabel (aged five)—But, mamma, how do they get the cans open?—London Ideas.

Very often the little working fish is eaten by the trust fish because he can not get his eyes open.

Old Rocksey—Why did you quarrel with the count, my dear?

Miss Rocksey—He called me his treasure and it sounded altogether too suggestive.—Smart Set.

"So the millionaires gave a mask ball? Was it a success?"

"No(, but it would have been a success save for Percy Lavender."

"What did he do?"

"Why, he went disguised as a process server, and all the millionaires jumped out of the windows."—Chicago News.

The Legislative Committee of the lower House in Wisconsin has reported in favor of the woman suffrage bill. It had already passed the Senate by a vote of four to one.

The international marine strike, which will affect the world's ports, will, it is said, take place during the third week in May. A strike fund of $300,000 for the British and has been raised. Seamen of all countries will join the strike, including Chinese, who have a separate union at Hongkong.

Electrical workers of Indianapolis, Ind., have been granted an increase of 2½ cents per hour.

THE COLUMBUS FEDERATION OF LABOR.

May the 8th will be an interesting session. The committee on constitutional convention will make its report and the delegates will listen to an address by State Factory Inspector Kearns. The organization committee desire the name and addresses of all the sheet metal workers in the city. Requests have been made for the organization of a local. Send all communications to Columbus Federation of Labor, Organization Committee, 121½ East Town street. The Federation of Labor is receiving requests along these lines every meeting. Keep up the good work, brethren.

HORSE SHOERS' UNION.

The Horse Shoers are doing good work. They will soon issue a list of all the firms who have their work done in union shops. This will consist of Ice Men, Mineral Water, in fact, every class of public trade. These are times when we are learning to stick together. If the man you purchase your goods from does not believe in the union label, he does not believe in your principle. Don't patronize your enemies; recognize your friends all the time.

BARBERS' UNION.

The last meeting of the barbers brought into the fold of unionism many new faces. The barbers thank the friends of labor for the good work done in their behalf. Look for the union mirror card. It stands for cleanliness and good workmanship. One of the non-union shops on High street, whose name we will publish at a later date, does not want the working class trade. In the meantime, be on the safe side. Don't give your work to any shop that does not carry the Barbers' Union Card.

WHAT ABOUT COLUMBUS?

The Union Hall Association of Racine, Wis., has accepted plans for a three-story labor temple to be erected this summer, at an approximate cost of $15,000. Two thousand union men of the city have agreed to donate one day's wages each to the building fund. It would be well for the local officials to get into communication with the Racine central body with a view of doing the same thing in Peoria.

BREWERIES WORKERS STILL GAINING VICTORIES.

Brewery workers in Chicago, including brewers and maisters, beer bottlers, laborers, bottle beer drivers and keg beer drivers and helpers have negotiated a new three-year agreement with the brewers which gives all the workers an advance in wages. The brewers and bottlers receive an increase of $2 a week; the laborers $1.50 a week increase and the drivers $5 a month. The women and girls employed in the bottling department were given an increase of only 50 cents a week, which does not appear altogether fair to them, but all are satisfied. The drivers formerly belonged to the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, but transferred their allegiance to the Brewery Workers' International Union. The engineers, firemen and coopers in the breweries belong to the respective organizations of their craft, but the contract with the brewery workers was signed with the understanding that the other trades would be given the same consideration.

BRITISH LABOR NEWS.

The National Amalgamated Coal Porters' Union of Inland and Seaborne Coal Workers have passed a resolution protesting against class prejudice in public schools, and instancing one case in which a clever lad of the working classes had been driven from school by this means.

The half-yearly Report of the London Building Industries Federation has just been issued, and it shows that some useful work has been done in respect to organizing the workers in the building industry. The aims of the federation are to successfully link the Trade Unions in London in the building trade to assist in the strengthening of each, and to combine, by federated effort, the protective and defensive influence of the whole.

LABEL WARNING.

The Rexall Drug Company, known as the Liggett Company, late Columbus Pharmacal Company, do not carry the union label on the printing. Don't patronize your enemies.

MR. DOOLEY ON LABOR AND CAPITAL.

It was different whin I was a young man, Hinnisky. In thim days capital and labor were frindley, or labor was givin' its board an' lodgin'a. Naythor intrefered with th' other. Capital wint on capitalizin' an' labor wint on laborin'. In thim golden days a wurrkin' man was an honest artisan. That's what he was proud to be called. Th' week before illiction he had his pitcher in th' funny paperes. He wore a square paper cap an' leather apron, an' he had his ar-rum arround capital—a rosy, binivolent ol' guy, wid a plug hat an' eyeglasses. They were goin' to th' polls together to vote for simple ol' capital. Capital an' labor walked a-rum in a a-rum insted of havin' both hands free, as at prisint. Capital was contint to be capital an' labor was used to bein' labor. Capital comes ar-round an' felt the ar-rum of labor wanct in a while, an' ivery year Mrs. Capital called on Mrs. Labor an' congratulated her on her score. Th' pride iv ivery artisan was to wurruk as long af his task as th' boss could afford to pay th' gas bill. In return fr his fidelity he got a turkey ivery year. At Christmas time Capital gathered his happy family 'round him /n in the' prisince iv the' ladies in th' neighborhood give thim a short oration. "Me brave la-ads," says he, "we've had a good year. CONDITIONS THAT MAKE SOCIALISTS.

True Inwardness of Pennsylvania's Fight on Unions.

A startling charge was made against the Pennsylvania railroad and its method of treating its employes by a man formerly prominent in its management of several of the country's big lines, but who is now retired. The charge was corr borated by the union officials and statistics shown to prove it.

"The real reason the Pennsylvania is laying off so many of its old employes in the shops," said the veteran railroad official, "lies deeper than a mere desire to smash the union. That's one reason, probably, why the older employes are being laid off all over the system, but the main reason is one of niggardliness.

"You see the company realizes that many of the old employes soon will be eligible for pensions after they have completed their thirty years or more of continuous service.

"Now, if the company can find ever so light a pretext to lay off these older employes it means a big saving on the pension appropriation. Oh, there are lots of ways for getting around that pension fund.

"The methods of the Pennsylvania railroad corporation are contemptible. It merely shows what certain corporations will do, even at the sacrifice of the men who have helped to make them powerful."

THE NATIONAL WOMEN'S TRADE UNION LEAGUE OF AMERICA—THIRD BIENNIAL CONVENTION.

The third Biennial Convention of the National Women's Trade Union League opens in Boston on Monday, June 12, 1911.

The purpose of the League is the organization of women into trade unions to be affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

During the two years since the last convention, which met in Chicago, the work of the League has grown and broadened tremendously. Its members have gained in experience in both the matters of organization and legislation. In the great Shirt Waist strikes of New York and Philadelphia and the strikes of the Garment Workers in Chicago, the League has done active service and brought many thousands of unorganized women workers in touch with the American labor movement.

Delegates coming fresh from such experiences and the regular League work will make the sessions abound in vital interest to all those who have the raising of working standards at heart, and the results of the convention cannot fail to have a telling effect upon the conditions of women in industry.

The daily sessions will be from 9 a. m. till 12, and from 2 p. m. till 5:30, and with the exception of executive sessions, will be open to the press and public.

Public Meeting.

Friday Evening.

TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION

Meets Sunday, May 7th, at 2 p. m. in the large hall of the Columbus Federation of Labor, 121½ East Town street. Matters of importance will come before the meeting. The paramount issue will be the nomination of officers, including a delegate to the International Convention at San Francisco. It is probable that the government will be requested to give passport papers to prevent the successful candidate being kidnapped at Los Angeles.

Bert Brown and Charles W. Drumm have already agreed to risk the journey to 'Frisco.

The Allied Printing Trades label proposition carried.

TALE OF A TEMPERANCE WORKER.

A young woman rushed up to a young man on Superior avenue the other day and shook hands with him cordially, says a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. "I have a confession to make to you," she gurgled. "You won't believe it, but I always thought you drank."

The young man fingered for a clove and tried not to blush.

"And now," she pursued, "I find that you are actually a temperance worker. Now I see you are trying to be modest and deny it, but you can never fool me again. I overheard my brother saying, in his slangy way, you were a great booze fighter. Oh, he was in earnest. Why, he said that you had punished more of it than any other ten men in Cleveland. I'm proud to know you; will you ever pardon me for misjudging you."

She was gone before he got through choking.

CAUSE FOR STRIKE OF MUSCATINE BUTTON WORKS.

Shops Unhealthful.

Conditions in the shops are fearful The cutting plants where the blanks are cut are breeding places of disease as the cutting out of the blanks for the buttons must be done at a rush, there is no telling when the work is going to stop.

While the saws are cutting the blanks out of the mussel shell a constant stream of water plays on the same. This keeps the lime dust out of the air, but makes everything soaking wet, causing the men to stand in what is practically a pool of water.

The girls who do the facing, drilling and sorting of the buttons have a worse time of it. The lime dust from the drills flies through the air and coats the lungs of the workers; most of the machinery is unprotected, the manufacturers fighting the state labor commissioners at every step. Unprotected belts are ready to catch the clothes or hair of the workers and carry them to a smashing death, on the floor or ceiling.

Lungs Suffer.

The result of the lime dust on the lungs is terrible.

The button manufacturers as a rule pick out old buildings and remodel them for their purposes. There are never enough toilet facilities or sufficient ventilation. State factory inspectors always have something to say about the button factories.

Piece-Work Scale.

The workers are paid a piece-work scale, except the very young children, who are paid $3 per week. These are under 16 years of age. By setting pacemakers who will keep up a high speed the price paid per gross is automatically kept at a dollar a day. If a girl is very efficient and makes more she is made a pacemaker and the price adjusted to the minimum.

The buttons are weighed instead of counted and the girls are not allowed to see the buttons weighed. They are docked and fined with great regularity and precision. They are worked overtime without any extra compensation.

Union Formed.

Seeing that an organization would be needed to combat the evils of the industry the workers started to organize their union Nov. 1 of last year. The first month only twenty-five women and seventy-five men joined the union. After the women started to join they all started to come in and for six weeks 100 were taken in each week until nearly all had joined the union, with the exception of some of the men who belonged to the state militia.

There are now 2,300 members in the organization. This was the first of four attempts to come out successfully.

Balked Labor Right.

Captain Long of Company C, state militia, had refused to allow some of the men to join the union. A delegation called on him and obtained the honorable discharge of the men involved. Organization was complete.

The manufacturers had to pay attention to this, so they met in the parlors of the Grand hotel at 5 p. m., Feb. 25, and at 8 o'clock that evening all the workers were informed that the plants would close down on account of over-production. The only exception to the lockout was the plants of Leo Hirsch, which was out of the combine. A flood of telegrams and a personal visit from the members of the combine to that firm's headquarters in New York produced results and a week later that plant also closed. The lockout was complete.

COMPULSORY BAYONET ARBITRATION.

MUSCATINE, IOWA.—Company C of the 54th Iowa National Guards, the local company, today is again under arms as a result of the gathering of a mob last night, which was followed by a bayonet charge on the rioters by the troops. Further trouble is feared.

The troops were ordered out by Sheriff Vanatta when the mob gathered. A message from Adjutant General Guy E. Logan, commending him for his action, even though it was done without permission, was received today.

HOT FROM THE WIRE.

One of the largest contracts placed for new railroad equipment this season was announced yesterday when the Pittsburg & Lake Erie Railroad gave the order for 2,000 all-steel cars, representing a cost of $2,000,000, with two car building companies. The Pressed Steel Car Company of Pittsburg took one-half of the order and the American Car and Foundry Company secured the other half. The order calls for two types of freight cars. They are known as gondolas and coke cars, and in their construction there will be required approximately 24,000 tons of steel plates and shapes, besides 16,000 car wheels, 2,000 sets of air brakes and all of the equipment necessary for each car. Steel men say that a number of car orders were listed to come out this spring which have thus far not appeared, and the appearance of the Pittsburg & Lake Erie order yesterday is the first important break in a somewhat extended quiet market.

The two international unions of paper makers have united in a war against the long-hour system of the writing paper trust, known as the American Writing Paper Company, manufacturers of writing and bond paper. The Holyoke (Mass.) Central Labor Union has issued a circular letter to all central bodies, in which it is shown that eleven and thirteen hours is an average workday and that this system has forced competitors to do likewise, which has made the writing paper business a sweated industry. Unionists and friends are called upon to write General Manager Caldwell, Holyoke, Mass., and notify him that you intend creating public sentiment against the methods of his twenty-two mills.

The Waitresses' union of San Francisco voted to impose a fine on any member who in the future does not display her badge of membership while on duty.

A new piece of leather can now be transformed into a pair of boots in thirty-four minutes, passing through the hands of sixty-three people and through fifteen machines.

The Denver & Rio Grande railroad at Denver, Colo., last week advanced its wages of passenger and freight conductors, respectively, 10 and 7½ per cent.

The San Jose, Cal., woolen mills were closed last week. Machinery worth $200,000 was sold to a junk dealer. At one time the mill is said to have paid in net profits $65,000 annually.

Height lines to determine whether or not a child is entitled to free car rides are used by a Pittsburg interurban car line. The average height of a five-year-old child is forty-one inches.

The San Francisco Bartenders' union voted to assist the Retail Grocery Clerks' union by placing a picket in front of a Fillmore street grocer because the firm refuses to allow one of its men to join the union.

Assemblyman Shifferdecker introduced an amendment to the New York labor law in relation to the size of factory rooms. The bill calls for an increase from 500 cubic feet of air space to 600 cubic feet to each employee.

Fort Worth, Tex., printers signed a five-year contract with the daily papers which gives the timemen who worked six hours per day an increase of 92 cents per day and the men who work eight hours per day an increase of 42 cents.

WHY I WANT THE BALLOT.

(By a Home Woman.)

If some one had asked me, a few years ago, whether I wanted to vote I would have replied that, while I thought the granting of franchise to women was a matter of justice, I did not personally care about the ballot. Today the matter has become one of vital interest to me. What has brought about the change? By way of introduction let me say that I am a happy woman. I am happily married and have my full quota of respect and affection from my family. No "grouch on men," as a New York anti-suffragist puts it, has been responsible for the growth of my inclination. In the second place, I am a conservative woman. I make friends and form opinions slowly and gradually. I have not been the victim of a sudden and overwhelmingly brilliant speech, nor have I followed because some others of my particular class have led.

There have been, however, certain causes contributing to the changed attitude of my mind toward the question of equal franchise, the discussion of which may help to clear the way for some woman who has a similar problem to solve.

AT FIRST "TOO LAZY."

To be frank, one reason why I did not care about the ballot was because I was too lazy to care! Another duty meant another responsibility; another responsibility meant added thought and study, for this duty would demand investigation and observation. Notwithstanding that a large percentage of male voters never vote understandingly, never have even the merest understanding of economic laws, civic problems or political development, I know that I, as an individual, could not vote conscientiously unless I had a better knowledge of many things than I then possessed. And such knowledge indolence prevented me from ardently desiring. Perhaps one of the primary causes contributing to the overcoming of this passive and indifferent attitude has been a residence in a capital city where, during at least four months of the year, the very atmosphere is rife with politics. With my husband's entrance into state departmental work came daily scanning of newspapers for political news, attendance at legislative sessions and keeping track of pending legislation along various lines. With a memory for details, I have become acquainted with the kings and the pawns on the political chess-board and with general conditions in certain parts of the state.

So much for awakened interest in civic and political questions. It has furnished a motive for individual thought and opinion. To what conclusions this thought has led me I have already hinted. Let me go somewhat more into detail.

I combine in my experience three classes, more or less distinct: the business woman or wage-earner, the taxpayer and the married homekeeper. For thirteen years I have been much of the time in industrial life—starting out, a sixteen-year-old girl, to earn a college education and a living. I have made my own way, have aided in earning a home, and have helped a younger brother through college. I have studied and worked and thought with the desire to make myself a useful and intelligent factor in the world.

As an individual, I think I have earned the right to register my opinion at the ballot-box as a business woman, not because my opinion is better than a man's—my husband's, for instance—but simply because I am I, a rational, industrial unit in the world of activity.

WHO WILL REPRESENT ME AT THE POLLS?

As a taxpayer I have been assessed equally with my husband, yet when the question of municipal water-works was submitted to the votes of the town wherein lay our village property I had no voice in deciding for or against, though we taxpayers were paying an enormous water rate to a private company, securely sheltered behind a long lease from a friendly village board. It might be well to add that the family living in the rented house next door could poll three votes to our one, yet one of the sons was a semi-invalid and "sheltered in the home."

As a homekeeper, for such I have also been a part of my life, I am aware that I am supposedly represented at the polls. But am I? If I am, my father or my husband or my brother, who will be a voter at the next election, must represent me. My father, though a most conscientious voter, does not at all believe as I do on certain political lines, neither is he likely to change his views at my instigation. Besides, as he is already representing my mother and my grandmother, he is already sufficiently sub-divided. My husband, I am proud to say, often asks my advice and opinion on many political matters. He is, however, a strict "party" man, while I am more or less of a radical. I should never dream of asking him to vote as I thought best, nor should I respect him if he changed his views to suit mine because I requested it. Thus I have no one to register my thoughts except myself. Why shouldn't I do so?

WHY THE HOUSEKEEPER SHOULD VOTE.

As a housekeeper, too, I have waged incessant war with the dust-cloth against the black soot which is spoiling our towns as pleasant and sanitary locations for homes; I have trudged through mud ankle deep on Main street because a village board did not require, or at least demand, ordinary board or cement walks; I have used inadequately filtered water, uninspected milk, and shoped in markets where inspection of sanitary conditions was never dreamed of; and I have visited schools and seen children housed in a building where sanitary conditions were all but unbearable. Yet these are only a few of the ways in which politics affect the home.

AN AMUSING DEFINITION OF THE IGNORANT VOTE.

"But are you not afraid of the ignorant vote? And what about the foreign vote? And the vote of the immoral element?" I hear you say. Yes, I wondered about those things, too, but I have been finding out why I need not fear them. I heard a good story the other day, told by Miss Forbes-Robertson, the English suffragist. A Fifth avenue lady went into a New York department store, and, while buying a pair of gloves from the saleswoman, said to her: "What do you think about suffrage?" "Well," replied the girl, "I don't quite know. I'm kind of afraid of the ignorant vote."

"Why," exclaimed the lady, "don't you think the working women are fit to vote?" "Oh, yes," replied the other; "you see, we're in the midst of things and know what is going on. It's the Fifth avenue crowd I am afraid of!" So you see there is some doubt as to just what constitutes the ignorant vote!

WHAT EQUAL SUFFRAGE WILL BRING.

Personally, I do not believe that the enfranchisement of women will purify politics, nor will their votes display any superiority of intelligence over the votes cast by men. There is no alarm to be felt over the foreign-born vote, however, for there are, I understand, twelve times as many native-born women as foreign-born, and only about one-fifth of all immigrants are women. The shifting female population of the "red light" districts is not anxious to register name or residence at the polls.

I believe that there will, with equal suffrage, come increased facilities for better school work, better legislation and enforcement of laws concerning children and child labor. This is not because men wish to be neglectful or thoughtless in these respects, but because women stand just a little closer to children and conditions affecting them than do men. And with the mothers the children will and should come first.

Sanitary conditions of municipalities and laws affecting laboring women will also come in for a share of attention. Women who are near the top of the industrial scale do not particularly feel the need of the ballot as a means of protection, but should strive to attain and use it for the sake of the sisters at the bottom of the ladder. With the "chips on the shoulder" attitude of some women in regard to the suffrage question, I have no sympathy. I do not wish to usurp the place or the power of the men in my family. I only have come to want a human being. We are comrades and my own power as an individual and co-workers, and with them I want to express my opinion through the ballot as a true and faithful helper in a sound government of the people, for the people by all the people, not simply by the masculine part of the people alone.

The women have won a noteworthy triumph at Springfield, Ill. That city has just held its first election under the commission form of government. The women centered their efforts on electing two women to the school board in place of the candidates who belonged to the local machine of United States Senator Lorimer. Eight hundred women braved the rain that fell throughout the day, and by voting and working, secured the election of Mrs. S. J. Magnes and Mrs. H. T. Morrison.

Women ushers in the Parisian theatres have formed a labor union.

HOW NILS SAVED THE SHEEP.

How little Nils became changed into an elf and accompanied a flock of wild geese on their summer journey through Sweden to Lapland is a charming story for boys and girls, told by Selma Lagerlof, in one of her latest books, "The Wonderful Adventures of Nils," published by Doubleday, Page & Co., of New York.

Selma Lagerlof is the most talented woman writer in Sweden and has just this year received the Nobel Peace Prize for her literary work.

The little story following is one of the adventures of Nils, when the flock of geese was driven by a hard storm upon an island where a flock of sheep was threatened with all being killed by three voracious foxes. You shall hear how Nils and the geese saved them and perhaps you will care to get the book out of your public library and read the rest of it for yourselves.

The next day the big ram of the the flock went around with the boy on his back and showed him the islands.

"This is really a favored land," said the boy. "You live in a pretty place, you sheep."

"Oh, yes, it's pretty enough here," said the big ram. "If you go about here alone you must look out for the crevices, which run all around the mountains," he continued after a little. And this was a good warning, for there were deep and broad crevices in several places. The largest of them was called Hell's Hole. "If any one fell down there, it would certainly be the last of him," said the big ram.

Then he conducted the boy down to the narrow strip of shore. Although it was pretty down on the shore, the boy liked it still better on the mountain height. It was ghastly down here; for everywhere they came across dead sheep. It was here that the foxes had held their orgies. It was heart-rending to see how the wild beasts had thrown themselves upon the sheep just for sport—just to hunt them and tear them to death.

Then the big ram went on up the mountain height again; but when he was up there he stopped and said:

"If some one who is capable and wise could see all the misery which prevails here, he surely would not be able to rest until these foxes had been punished."

"The foxes must live, too," said the boy.

"Yes," said the big ram, "those who do not tear in pieces more animals than they need to eat, they may as well live. But these are felons."

"The peasants who own the island ought to come here and help you," insisted the boy. "They have roved over a number of times," replied the ram, "but the foxes always hid themselves in the grottoes and crevices, so they could not get near them to shoot them."

"You surely can not mean, father, that a poor little creature like me should be able to get at them, when neither you nor the peasants have succeeded in getting the better of them!"

"He that is little and spry can put many things to rights," said the big ram.

They talked no more about this, and the boy went over and seated himself among the wild geese who fed on the highland. Although he had not cared to show his feelings before the ram, he was very sad on the sheep's account, and he would have been glad to help them.

"I can at least talk with Akka and Morten goosey-gander about the matter," thought he. "Perhaps they can help me with a good suggestion." (Akka and Morten goosey-gander were two of the flock of geese.)

A little later the white goosey-gander took the boy on his back and went over the mountain plain, and in the direction of Hell's Hole at that.

He wandered, care-free, on the open mountain roof—apparently unconscious of how large and white he was. He didn't seek shelter behind tufts, or any other protuberances, but went straight ahead. It was strange that he was not more careful, for it was apparent that he had fared badly in yesterday's storm. He limped on his right leg, and the left wing hung and dragged as if it might be broken.

He acted as if there were no danger, pecked at a grass blade here, and another there, and did not look about him in any direction. The boy lay stretched out full length on the goose-back, and looked up toward the blue sky. He was so accustomed to riding now that he could both stand and lie down on the goose-back.

When the goosey-gander and the boy were so care-free, they did not observe, of course, that the three foxes had come up on the mountain plain.

And the foxes, who knew that it was well-nigh impossible to take the life of a goose on an open [illegible] thought at first that they wouldn't chase after the goosey-gander. But as they had nothing else to do, they finally sneaked down on one of the long passes, and tried to steal up to him. They went about it so cautiously that the goosey-gander couldn't see a shadow of them.

They were not far off when the goosey-gander made an attempt to raise himself into the air. He spread his wings, but he did not succeed in lifting himself. When the foxes seemed to grasp the fact that he couldn't fly, they hurried forward with greater eagerness than before. They no longer concealed themselves in the cleft, but came up on the highland. They hurried as fast as they could behind tufts and hollows, and came nearer and nearer the goosey-gander—without his seeming to notice that he was being hunted. At last the foxes were so near that they could make the final leap. Simultaneously, all three threw themselves, with one long jump, at the goosey-gander.

But still at the last moment he must have noticed something, for he ran out of the way, so the foxes missed him. This, at any rate, didn't mean very much, for the goosey-gander only had a couple of yards headway, and, in the bargain, he limped. Anyway, the poor thing ran ahead as fast as he could.

The boy sat upon the goose-back—backward—and shrieked and called to the foxes: "You have eaten yourselves too fat on mutton. You can't catch up with a goose' even." He teased them so that they became crazed with rage and thought only of rushing forward.

The white one ran straight to the big cleft. When he was there, he made one stroke with his wings, and got over. Just then the foxes were almost upon him.

The goosey-gander hurried on with the same haste as before, even after he had gotten over Hell's Hole. But he had hardly been running two yards before the boy patted him on the neck, and said: "Now you can stop, goosey-gander."

At that instant they heard a number of wild howl behind them, and a scraping of claws, and heavy falls. But of the foxes they saw nothing more.

The next morning the lighthouse keeper on Great Karl's Island found a bit of bark poked under the entrance-door, and on it had been cut, in slanting, angular letters: "The foxes on the little island have fallen down into Hell's Hole. Take care of them."

And this the lighthouse keeper did, too.—From the Coming Nation.

THE FIRE FLIES AND THE STARS.

The sun was just going down in the West. The little birds and insects were looking for beds in the trees and bushes and also in the grass. But another army of animals began to wake up from the sleep which they had enjoyed in the caves, and on the underside of large and small leaves.

Some fireflies also awoke and blinked at each other. Soon more and more awoke, and before long they were busy calling upon one another in a friendly visit. They crawled around lively and they conversed with each other in such a manner that one would think something very important was going on.

At last, when it had grown quite dark, they flew up, sometimes to the top of the trees, and spoke to the stars which had now appeared in the sky: "You dear little stars. You must surely be tired from your long watch every night. Go to sleep a little while and we will let our lights shine while you sleep!"

The stars smiled to each other, and, in a joke, hid behind some clouds. The firebugs flitted about all night, opening and shutting their little lamps, and when the sun appeared in the morning they went to bed again, having believed that they had lit up the darkness of night.—From The Little Socialist Magazine.

NURSERY RHYMES REVISED.

(By James W. Babcock.)

Mary had a little lamb,
To eat it, made her sigh;
They charged her ninety cents for it,
Which seemed a trifle high.

Did you ever, ever, ever,
Any time, time, time,
Buy something worth a penny
And pay a dime, dime, dime.

Three blind mice,
Hear how they squeal!
They all ran after the packer's wife,
She cut them to pieces with cleaver and knife,
You never sausage a thing in your life,
They sold as veal.

Johnny Armstrong bought a calf,
Smith—retailer—got one-half.
The packer made a lot, 'tis said,
And Johnny ate it—now he's dead.

MAX EASTMAN'S VIEW.

"The industrial era—for all the ill we may say of it, we must say this great good, that it has made possible and inevitable the physical and social and moral and intellectual liberation of women. The simplification of home life through invention and manufacture, the growth of large cities with the popular education, and above all the division of labor, have given her a free place in the active world. This fact is the distinctive feature of this age. To a distant and universal historian—a historian who writes the lives of peoples—that change in the position will appear not only the most striking but the most excellent achievement of our age. For we will never evolve a heroic race of people on the earth until we give them a two-fold inheritance and tradition of active, intelligent virtue.

That we have begun to do. And no step at the present time can more urge and certify this great step in the history of life than to give it a political expression and guarantee. Citizenship will rouse and educate women. It will develop our ideal of them; therefore, it is a dominant necessity of advancing civilization that they have it. It is a heroic step that we take with nature in the evolution of a symmetrical race."

The women graduates of Trinity College, Dublin, have sent a largely signed petition for woman suffrage to the two representatives of Dublin University in Parliament.

Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay has resigned the presidency of the Equal Franchise Society, which started less than three years ago with only 16 members and has grown to 672.

John Burroughs, the naturalist, has made himself popular with the Southern California suffragists by declaring himself in favor of votes for women. He says: "Women are the equals of men, and suffrage consistent with democracy is a step in progress. The coming of suffrage is as inevitable as the shining of the stars, and it can only have the effect of enlarging the influence and sphere of the home."

OLIVE SCHREINER HAS WRITTEN A NEW AND REMARKABLE BOOK ON "WOMAN AND LABOR"

Dr. Anna Blount utters the following: "It is impossible to separate the home and politics. Every place you turn it is politics. It is politics that makes the water of the village in which I live impure. It is politics that keeps the milk which the children of the city drink from being clean and [illegible]

As [illegible] about my practice as a physician [illegible] that it is politics that is at the root of ills of all varieties. If the place of the woman is in the home. It is her duty to protect that home. And she cannot protect it unless she aids in selecting the people who are to administer the laws whose chief effect is on the home."

PLAY BY JULIA WARD HOWE.

"Hippolytus," a drama by Julia Ward Howe, never before produced, will be performed soon by Miss Margaret Anglin and her associates. The play has an interesting history. It was written by Mrs. Howe in 1858, at the request of Edwin Booth and Charlotte Cushman, to be played by them. Mr. Booth actually began to rehearse the drama, of which he expressed a very high opinion, both as to its literary and artistic qualities; but its production was for some reason abandoned. Mrs. Howe often expressed her deep regret that the play had never been produced, and now Miss Anglin has great pleasure in performing her labor of love.—Woman's Journal.

Miss Adelaide Steele Baylor has been appointed manuscript clerk in the Department of Public Instruction of Indiana. In addition to the examination of manuscripts from applicants for teachers' licenses, she will inspect high schools and visit County Teachers' Institutes. She will receive an annual salary of $2,000.

If anything seems clear to the average fair-minded person, it is that when a married woman is obliged to live apart from her husband for justifiable cause he should not be allowed to collect and spend her earnings. Indeed, most states now allow a married woman the control of her own earnings, whether she is living with her husband or not. It is, therefore, edifying to read the following in the Detroit Journal: "Shrieks of wrath from the suffragette camp made the house judiciary committee this morning report out the bill allowing married women a right to their earnings when they are living apart from their husbands."

The executive committee of the Morristown (N. J.) Civic Association has passed resolutions favoring making women eligible to vote on local issues. The committee advocated that, if necessary, the association should retain counsel in its efforts to bring the matter to a favorable conclusion.

THE CHRISTIAN SOCIALIST.

The other day a young girl was asked what political party her father belonged to. She answered that her father was a Socialist, but hastened to add that he was a Christian Socialist. Right here it might be well to state that there is no other kind of Socialists. Socialism is applied Christianity. It is not something to be preached about and read of on Sunday, but a standard to live by every day in the week. Christ preached, taught and lived Socialism, but in his day, as now, there were only the few who would accept the beauties of his doctrine, the golden law of the golden rule.

Even the exceeding great virtue of the rich young ruler was not sufficient unto salvation, unless, as Christ commanded, he sell all his goods and give to the poor.

Then again, Christ taught that, above all else, one must have charity, or they were as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. They might even given their bodies to be burned, but unless they had charity, it would avail them nothing. What is this charity more than the principles of universal brotherhood, as taught by Socialism? If we are Socialists at all, we are believers in the Socialistic precepts of Christ, therefore, Christian Socialists.

AN OBJECT LESSON.

Miss M. Love of Missouri writes in the Woman's Daily: "One of the first influences which led me to ponder over the justice of woman's suffrage was an article I read about a block of buildings which happened to have mostly women owners. When the question came up as to what kind of pavement should be used on this street, the two or three men who owned property in the same block wanted a brick pavement; but the women all wanted asphalt, and argued that vehicles running over a brick pavement made too much racket, and would be especially annoying if any one of them or their children should be sick. But the few men decided to have brick, and the many women had to pay for it."

WOMAN SUFFRAGE WINS IN ILLINOIS SENATE.

Without discussion or explanation of votes, the woman suffrage bill, with the local option amendment, was passed in the senate by a vote of 31 to 18.

Miss Harriet Grim, a University of Chicago girl, was the only suffragette present when the bill was passed. She immediately rushed to a telephone room to send the news to other leaders in the state.—Exchange.

MONMOUTH, ILL.—The Socialists who lost the school board election Saturday by a narrow margin have made charges that fraudulent voting was practiced by the voting of minors.

The officials elected ran on a ticket known as the caucus ticket and represented a fusion of parties. Only by the most desperate efforts to get out the vote were they successful. The successful candidates are: John C. Allen, president, 728; trustees, O. B. French, 704; Mrs. Mary Patterson, 703.

The Socialist vote polled was as follows: For president, F. H. Williams, 308; trustees, McProud, 288; Mrs. Peterson, 339.

BECKEMEYER, ILL.—The results of Tuesday's elections show that the Socialists elected a member of the village board.

Aldermen in La Salle.

LA SALLE, ILL.—Harry Halpin, Socialist, was elected alderman from the Second ward of this city at Tuesday's election. Another candidate for alderman on the Socialist ticket, Valentine, only failed of election by 9 votes. Halpin is a clerk in a furniture store.

Keon Not Elected.

GRAFTON, ILL.—Early returns which indicated the election of John J. Keon, Socialist, as mayor of this city, later proved untrustworthy. The final count gave Keon 180 votes and Mayor William Journey, candidate for re-election, 189.

Run Strong in Herrin.

HERRIN, ILL.—The Labor party carried Tuesday's election, putting into office C. E. Anderson for mayor, who polled 450 votes; the Republican candidate, W. B. Walker, 115; and the Good Government candidate, H. T. McKinney, got 1353. E. E. Burkett, Socialist candidate for city clerk, polled 300 votes. Joseph M. Bond, labor party candidate for that office, won with 396 votes. R. E. Batty, Socialist candidate for city attorney, got 284 votes. Joseph H. Crighton, candidate for that office on the labor ticket, won, getting 457 votes.

Des Plaines Vote Strong.

DES PLAINES, ILL.—The Socialist candidate for president of the village board, W. M. Lawson, polled 103 votes on the Socialist ticket here at Tuesday's election. A year ago there were no Socialist votes here.

Miner Elected.

MARYSVILLE, ILL.—The Socialists elected a village clerk and one village trustee here, Eugene R. Armstrong, a miner, received 58 votes, and his nearest opponent 45. President of the board of trustees, J. C. Mainwaring; trustees, Tony Bollette, Burnell Williamson, Evan Watkins.

What Socialism Stands For.

Human life depends upon food, clothing and shelter. Only when these are assured are freedom, culture and higher human development possible. To produce food, clothing and shelter, land and machinery are needed. Land by itself does not satisfy human needs. Human labor gets raw materials and food out of the soil by creating machinery and using it upon the land. Whoever has control of land and machinery has control of human labor, and with it of human life and liberty.

Today the machinery and the land used for industrial purposes are owned by a rapidly decreasing minority. So long as machinery is simple and easily handled by one man it does not make its owners so powerful that they can dominate the sources of life of others. But when machinery becomes more and more complex and expensive, and requires for its effective operation the organized effort of many workers, its influence reaches over wider circles of life. The owners of such machinery become the dominant class.

The Masses in Subjection.

In proportion as the number of such machine owners compared to all other classes decreases, their power in the nation and in the world increases. They bring ever larger masses of working people under their control, reducing them to the point where muscle and brain are their only productive property. Millions of formerly self-employing workers thus become the helpless wage slaves of the industrial masters.

The more the economic power of the ruling class grows, the less useful does it become in the life of the nation. The overwhelming bulk of the useful work of the nation falls upon the shoulders of the classes that either have no other productive property but their manual and mental labor power the wage workers — or that have but little land and little machinery outside of their labor power—the small traders and small farmers. The ruling minority is steadily becoming useless and parasitic.

A bitter struggle over the division of the products of labor is waged between the exploiting propertied class, on the one hand and the exploited, propertyless class on the other. In this struggle the wage working class cannot expect adequate relief from any reform of the present order from the dominant class of society.

The wage workers are therefore the most determined and irreconcilable antagonists of the ruling class. They are also the class which suffers most from the curse of class rule. The fact that a small number of capitalists is permitted to use all the country's resources and social tools for their individual profit, and to make the production of the necessaries of our lives the object of their competitive private enterprises and speculations, is at the bottom of all the social evils of our time.

Modern Industry Plankes.

In spite of the organization of trusts, pools and combinations, the capitalists are powerless to regulate production for social ends. Industries are largely conducted in a planless manner. Through periods of feverish activity the strength and health of the workers are mercilessly undermined, and during periods of enforced idleness the workers are frequently reduced to starvation.

The climaxes of this chaotic system of production are the regularly recurring industrial depressions and cries which paralyze the nation every fifteen or twenty years.

In this mad and reckless race for profits the capitalist class is bound to exploit the workers to the very limit of their endurance and to sacrifice their physical, moral and mental welfare to its own insatiable greed. Capitalism keeps the masses of working men in poverty, destitution, physical exhaustion and ignorance. It drags their wives from their homes to the mill and factory. It snatches their children from the playgrounds and schools and grinds their slender bodies and unformed minds into cold dollars. It wantonly disfigures, maims and kills hundreds of thousands of workingmen annually in mines, on railroads and in factories. It drives millions of workers into the ranks of the unemployed and forces large numbers of them nto beggary, vagrancy and all forms of crime and vice.

Public Intelligence Corrupted.

To maintain their rule over their fellow men, the capitalists must keep in their pay all organs of the public powers, public mind and public conscience. They control the dominating parties and, through them, the elected public officials. They select our executive, bribe our legislatures and corrupt our courts of justice. They sway our educational institutions. They own the nation politically and intellectually just as they own it industrially.

The struggle between wage workers and capitalists grows ever fiercer, and has become the only vital issue before the American people. The wage working class, therefore, has the most vital and direct interest in abolishing the capitalist system. But in abolishing the present system, the workingmen will free not only their own class, but also all other classes of modern society: The small farmer, who is today exploited by large capital more indirectly but not less effectively than is the wage laborer; the small manufacturer and trader, who is engaged in a desperate and losing struggle for economic independence in the face of the all-conquering power of concentrated captital; and even the capitalist himself, who is the slave of his wealth rather than its master. The struggle of the working class against the capitalist class, while it is a class struggle, is thus at the same time a struggle for the abolition of all classes and class privileges.

Must Conquer the Political Power.

The private ownership of the land and means of production used for exploitation, is the rock upon which class rule is built; political government is its indispensable instrument. The wage workers cannot be freed from exploitation without conquering the political power and substituting collective and democratic administration for private ownership of the land and the means of production used for exploitation.

The basis for such transformation is rapidly developing within the very bosom of present captitalist society. The factory system, with its immense labor, is rapidly destroying all vestiges of individual production in manufacture. Modern production is already very largely a collective and social process, while the great trusts and monopolies which have sprung up in recent years have had the effect of organizing the work and management of some of our main industries on a national scale, and fitting them for national use and operation.

An End to Class Rule.

In the struggle for freedom the interests of the workers of all nations are identical. The struggle is not only national, but international. It embraces the world and will be carried to ultimate victory by the united workers of the world.

To unite the workers of the nation and their allies and sympathisers of other classes to this end, is the mission of the Socialist. In this battle for freedom the Socialist movement does not strive to substitute working class rule for capitalist rule, but by working class victory to free all humanity from class rule and to realise the international brotherhood of man.

The Workers in "The Storm Center Of Socialism" Have A Chance To Make Good.

All That Is Needed Is "A Long Pull, A Strong Pull, and A Pull Altogether."

The Socialist Makes Fair Proposition To Secure The Co-Operation Of All For The Next Campaign.

READ EVERY WORD OF OUR OFFER.

The Socialist wishes to co-operate with the City Central Committee, the Ward Branches and the precinct workers of the Socialist party of Columbus in educating the voters and organizing our forces so that we may reap the full benefit of our educational work.

We believe that one of the most effective means of educating the workers and of propagating Socialism is through the columns of a good Socialist paper. The paper goes each week into the home and carries some message, some truth, to each of its readers. While we make no apology for our paper, we are determined that each issue shall be an improvement over the previous one.

The subscription list is the life of any paper. Without it, it dies. We want at least 10,000 subscribers on our books before the campaign opens. We must have them if The Socialist is to be the power for good that it should be in the fight of 1911 in Columbus, "the Storm Center of Socialism."

OUR PLAN.

Here is our plan to put money into the treasuries of the City Central Committee and of the Ward Branches for use in organization and propaganda work, as they may determine:

1. We will pay to each Ward Branch 12½ per cent. of all money for subscriptions collected and turned in by its members to The Socialist.

2. We will pay over to the treasury of the City Central Committee of Local Columbus 12½ per cent. of all money collected and paid in by the Ward Branches for subscriptions to The Socialist.

LIST OF PRIZES.

As Prizes or special rewards for the workers we offer the following:

1. To the Branch turning in the largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist, in proportion to membership of the Branch in good standing, we will give $75 in books, to be selected by the Branch, or in money.

2. To the Branch turning in the second largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist, under the foregoing conditions, we will gice $50 in books or money.

3. To the Branch turning in the third largest amount of money on subscriptions as stated we will give $25 in books or money.

INDIVIDUAL REWARDS.

1. To the individual turning in the largest amount of money on subscriptions to The Socialist we will pay $25 in gold.

2. To the individual turning in the second largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist we will pay $15 in gold.

3. To the individual who turns in the third largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist we will pay $10 in gold.

CONDITIONS.

The only conditions we impose in this contest are that the members of Branches will get all their sub. cards from the literature or special agent of their respective Branches and that this agent will at all times have on hand a supply of sub. cards and make returns to The Socialist of all subscriptions received not later than Wednesday of each week. Sub. cards will be supplied by this office at any time. This contest will be limited to Branches and Locals in Franklin County.

This Contest Began On Saturday, Feb. 11, and Will Close Tuesday, November 7, 1911

WHY I WANT THE BALLOT.

(By a Home Woman.)

If some one had asked me, a few years ago, whether I wanted to vote I would have replied that, while I thought the granting of franchise to women was a matter of justice, I did not personally care about the ballot. Today the matter has become one of vital interest to me. What has brought about the change? By way of introduction let me say that I am a happy woman. I am happily married and have my full quota of respect and affection from my family. No "grouch on men," as a New York anti-suffragist puts it, has been responsible for the growth of my inclination. In the second place, I am a conservative woman. I make friends and form opinions slowly and gradually. I have not been the victim of a sudden and overwhelmingly brilliant speech, nor have I followed because some others of my particular class have led.

There have been, however, certain causes contributing to the changed attitude of my mind toward the question of equal franchise, the discussion of which may help to clear the way for some woman who has a similar problem to solve.

AT FIRST "TOO LAZY."

To be frank, one reason why I did not care about the ballot was because I was too lazy to care! Another duty meant another responsibility; another responsibility meant added thought and study, for this duty would demand investigation and observation. Notwithstanding that a large percentage of male voters never vote understandingly, never have even the merest understanding of economic laws, civic problems or political development, I knew that I, as an individual, could not vote conscientiously unless I had a better knowledge of many things than I then possessed. And such knowledge indolence prevented me from ardently desiring. Perhaps one of the primary causes contributing to the overcoming of this passive and indifferent attitude has been a residence in a capital city where, during at least four months of the year, the very atmosphere is rife with politics. With my husband's entrance into state departmental work came daily scanning of newspapers for political news, attendance at legislative sessions and keeping track of pending legislation along various lines. With a memory for details, I have become acquainted with the kings and the pawns on the political chess-board and with general conditions in certain parts of the state.

So much for awakened interest in civic and political questions. It has furnished a motive for individual thought and opinion. To what conclusions this thought has led me I have already hinted. Let me go somewhat more into detail.

I combine in my experience three classes, more or less distinct: the business woman or wage-earner, the taxpayer and the married homekeeper. For thirteen years I have been much of the time in industrial life—starting out, a sixteen-year-old girl, to earn a college education and a living. I have made my own way, have aided in earning a home, and have helped a younger brother through college. I have studied and worked and thought with the desire to make myself a useful and intelligent factor in the world.

As an individual, I think I have earned the right to register my opinion at the ballot-box as a business woman, not because my opinion is better than a man's—my husband's, for instance—but simply because I am I, a rational, industrial unit in the world of activity.

WHO WILL REPRESENT ME AT THE POLLS?

As a taxpayer I have been assessed equally with my husband, yet when the question of municipal water-works was submitted to the votes of the town wherein lay our village property I had no voice in deciding for or against, though we taxpayers were paying an enormous water rate to a private company, securely sheltered behind a long lease from a friendly village board. It might be well to add that the family living in the rented house next door could poll three votes to our one, yet one of the sons was a semi-invalid and "sheltered in the home."

As a homekeeper, for such I have also been a part of my life, I am aware that I am supposedly represented at the polls. But am I? If I am, my father or my husband of my brother, who will be a voter at the next election, must represent me. My father, though a most conscientious voter, does not at all believe as I do on certain political lines, neither is he likely to change his views at my instigation. Besides, as he is already representing my mother and my grandmother, he is already sufficiently sub-divided. My husband, I am proud to say, often asks my advice and opinion on many political matters. He is, however, a strict "party" man, while I am more or less of a radical. I should never dream of asking him to vote as I thought best, nor should I respect him if he changed his views to suit mine because I requested it. Thus I have no one to register my thoughts except myself. Why shouldn't I do so?

WHY THE HOUSEKEEPER SHOULD VOTE.

As a housekeeper, too, I have waged incessant war with the dust-cloth against the black soot which is spoiling our towns as pleasant and sanitary locations for homes; I have trudged through mud ankle deep on Main street because a village board did not require, or at least demand, ordinary board or cement walks; I have used inadequately filtered water, uninspected milk, and shoped in markets where inspection of sanitary conditions was never dreamed of; and I have visited schools and seen children housed in a building where sanitary conditions were all but unbearable. Yet these are only a few of the ways in which politics affect the home.

AN AMUSING DEFINITION OF THE IGNORANT VOTE.

"But are you not afraid of the ignorant vote? And what about the foreign vote? And the vote of the immoral element?" I hear you say. Yes, I wondered about those things, too, but I have been finding out why I need not fear them. I heard a good story the other day, told by Miss Forbes-Robertson, the English suffragist. A Fifth avenue lady went into a New York department store, and, while buying a pair of gloves from the saleswoman, said to her: "What do you think about suffrage?" "Well," replied the girl, "I don't quite know. I'm kind of afraid of the ignorant vote."

"Why," exclaimed the lady, "don't you think the working women are fit to vote?" "Oh, yes," replied the other; "you see, we're in the midst of things and know what is going on. It's the Fifth avenue crowd I am afraid of!" So you see there is some doubt as to just what constitutes the ignorant vote!

WHAT EQUAL SUFFRAGE WILL BRING.

Personally, I do not believe that the enfranchisement of women will purify politics, nor will their votes display any superiority of intelligence over the votes cast by men. There is no alarm to be felt over the foreign-born vote, however, for there are, I understand, twelve times as many native-born women as foreign-born, and only about one-fifth of all immigrants are women. The shifting female population of the "red light" districts is not anxious to register name or residence at the polls.

I believe that there will, with equal suffrage, come increased facilities for better school work, better legislation and enforcement of laws concerning children and child labor. This is not because men wish to be neglectful or thoughtless in these respects, but because women stand just a little closer to children and conditions affecting them than do men. And with the mothers the children will and should come first.

Sanitary conditions of municipalities and laws affecting laboring women will also come in for a share of attention. Women who are near the top of the industrial scale do not particularly feel the need of the ballot as a means of protection, but should strive to attain and use it for the sake of the sisters at the bottom of the ladder. With the "chips on the shoulder" attitude of some women in regard to the suffrage question, I have no sympathy. I do not wish to usurp the place or the power of the men in my family. I only have come to want a human being. We are comrades and my own power as an individual and co-workers, and with them I want to express my opinion through the ballot as a true and faithful helper in a sound government of the people, for the people by all the people, not simply by the masculine part of the people alone.

The women have won a noteworthy triumph at Springfield, Ill. That city has just held its first election under the commission form of government. The women centered their efforts on electing two women to the school board in place of the candidates who belonged to the local machine of United States Senator Lorimer. Eight hundred women braved the rain that fell throughout the day, and by voting and working, secured the election of Mrs. S. J. Haynes and Mrs. H. T. Morrison.

Women ushers in the Parisian theatres have formed a labor union.

HOW NILS SAVED THE SHEEP.

How Little Nils became changed into an elf and accompanied a flock of wild geese on their summer journey through Sweden to Lapland is a charming story for boys and girls, told by Selma Lagerlof, in one of her latest books, "The Wonderful Adventures of Nils," published by Doubleday, Page & Co., of New York.

Selma Lagerlof is the most talented woman writer in Sweden and has just this year received the Nobel Peace Prize for her literary work.

The little story following is one of the adventures of Nils, when the flock of geese was driven by a hard storm upon an island where a flock of sheep was threatened with all being killed by three voracious foxes. You shall hear how Nils and the geese saved them and perhaps you will care to get the book out of your public library and read the rest of it for yourselves.

The next day the big ram of the the flock went around with the boy on his back and showed him the islands.

"This is really a favored land," said the boy. "You live in a pretty place, you sheep."

"Oh, yes, it's pretty enough here," said the big ram. "If you go about here alone, you must look out for the crevices, which run all around the mountains," he continued after a little. And this was a good warning, for there were deep and broad crevices in several places. The largest of them was called Hell's Hole. "If any one fell down there, it would certainly be the last of him," said the big ram.

Then he conducted the boy down to the narrow strip of shore. Although it was pretty down on the shore, the boy liked it still better on the mountain height. It was ghastly down here; for everywhere they came across dead sheep. It was here that the foxes had held their orgies. It was heart-rending to see how the wild beasts had thrown themselves upon the sheep just for sport—just to hunt them and tear them to death.

Then the big ram went on up the mountain height again; but when he was up there he stopped and said:

"If some one who is capable and wise could see all the misery which prevails here, he surely would not be able to rest until these foxes had been punished."

"The foxes must live, too," said the boy.

"Yes," said the big ram, "those who do not tear in pieces more animals than they need to eat, they may as well live. But these are felons."

"The peasants who own the island ought to come here and help you," insisted the boy. "They have roved over a number of times," replied the ram, "but the foxes always hid themselves in the grottoes and crevices, so they could not get near them to shoot them."

"You surely can not mean, father, that a poor little creature like me should be able to get at them, when neither you nor the peasants have succeeded in getting the better of them!"

"He that is little and spry can put many things to rights," said the big ram.

They talked no more about this, and the boy went over and seated himself among the wild geese who fed on the highland. Although he had not cared to show his feelings before the ram, he was very sad on the sheep's account, and he would have been glad to help them.

"I can at least talk with Akka and Morten goosey-gander about the matter," thought he. "Perhaps they can help me with a good suggestion." (Akka and Morten goosey-gander were two of the flock of geese.)

A little later the white goosey-gander took the boy on his back and went over the mountain plain, and in the direction of Hell's Hole at that.

He wandered, care-free, on the open mountain roof—apparently unconscious of how large and white he was. He didn't seek shelter behind tufts, or any other protuberances, but went straight ahead. It was strange that he was not more careful, for it was apparent that he had fared badly in yesterday's storm. He limped on his right leg, and the left wing hung and dragged as if it might be broken.

He acted as if there were no danger, pecked at a grass blade here, and another there, and did not look about him in any direction. The boy lay stretched out full length on the goose-back, and looked up toward the blue sky. He was so accustomed to riding now that he could both stand and lie down on the goose-back.

When the goosey-gander and the boy were so care-free, they did not observe, of course, that the three foxes had come up on the mountain plain.

And the foxes, who knew that it was well-nigh impossible to take the life of a goose on an open [illegible] thought at first that they wouldn't chase after the goosey-gander. But as they had nothing else to do, they finally sneaked down on one of the long passes, and tried to steal up to him. They went about it so cautiously that the goosey-gander couldn't see a shadow of them.

They were not far off when the goosey-gander made an attempt to raise himself into the air. He spread his wings, but he did not succeed in lifting himself. When the foxes seemed to grasp the fact that he couldn't fly, they hurried forward with greater eagerness than before. They no longer concealed themselves in the cleft, but came up on the highland. They hurried as fast as they could behind tufts and hollows, and came nearer and nearer the goosey-gander—without his seeming to notice that he was being hunted. At last the foxes were so near that they could make the final leap. Simultaneously, all three threw themselves, with one long jump, at the goosey-gander.

But still at the last moment he must have noticed something, for he ran out of the way, so the foxes missed him. This, at any rate, didn't mean very much, for the goosey-gander only had a couple of yards headway, and, in the bargain, he limped. Anyway, the poor thing ran ahead as fast as he could.

The boy sat upon the goose-back—backward—and shrieked and called to the foxes: "You have eaten yourselves too fat on mutton. You can't catch up with a goose' even." He teased them so that they became crazed with rage and thought only of rushing forward.

The white one ran straight to the big cleft. When he was there, he made one stroke with his wings, and got over. Just then the foxes were almost upon him.

The goosey-gander hurried on with the same haste as before, even after he had gotten over Hell's Hole. But he had hardly been running two yards before the boy patted him on the neck, and said: "Now you can stop, goosey-gander."

At that instant they heard a number of wild howl behind them, and a scraping of claws, and heavy falls. But of the foxes they saw nothing more.

The next morning the lighthouse keeper on Great Karl's Island found a bit of bark poked under the entrance-door, and on it had been cut, in slanting, angular letters: "The foxes on the little island have fallen down into Hell's Hole. Take care of them."

And this the lighthouse keeper did, too.—From the Coming Nation.

THE FIRE FLIES AND THE STARS.

The sun was just going down in the West. The little birds and insects were looking for beds in the trees and bushes and also in the grass. But another army of animals began to wake up from the sleep which they had enjoyed in the caves, and on the underside of large and small leaves.

Some fireflies also awoke and blinked at each other. Soon more and more awoke, and before long they were busy calling upon one another in a friendly visit. They crawled around lively and they conversed with each other in such a manner that one would think something very important was going on.

At last, when it had grown quite dark, they flew up, sometimes to the top of the trees, and spoke to the stars which had now appeared in the sky: "You dear little stars! You must surely be tired from your long watch every night. Go to sleep a little while and we will let our lights shine while you sleep!"

The stars smiled to each other, and, in a joke, hid behind some clouds. The fireflies flitted about all night, opening and shutting their little lamps, and when the sun appeared in the morning they went to bed again, having believed that they had lit up the darkness of night.—From The Little Socialist Magazine.

NURSERY RHYMES REVISED.

(By James W. Babcock.)

Mary had a little lamb,
'To eat it, made her sigh;
They charged her ninety cents for it,
Which seemed a trifle high.

Did you ever, ever, ever,
Any time, time, time,
Buy something worth a penny
And pay a dime, dime, dime.

Three blind mice.
Hear how they squeal!
They all ran after the packer's wife;
She cut them to pieces with cleaver and knife,
You never sausage a thing in your life.
They sold as veal.

Johnny Armstrong bought a calf,
Smith—retailer—got one-half.
The packer made a lot, 'tis said,
And Johnny ate it—now he's dead.

MAX EASTMAN'S VIEW.

"The industrial era—for all the ill we may say of it, we must say this great good, that it has made possible and inevitable the physical and social and moral and intellectual liberation of women. The simplification of home life through invention and manufacture, the growth of large cities with the popular education, and above all the division of labor, have given her a free place in the active world. This fact is the distinctive feature of this age. To a distant and universal historian—a historian who writes the lives of peoples—that change in the position will appear not only the most striking but the most excellent achievement of our age. For we will never evolve a heroic race of people on the earth until we give them a two-fold inheritance and tradition of native, intelligent virtue.

That we have begun to do. And no step at the present time can more urge and certify this great step in the history of life than to give it a political expression and guarantee. Citizenship will rouse and educate woman. It will develop our ideal of them; therefore, it is a dominant necessity of advancing civilization that they have it. It is a heroic step that we take with nature in the evolution of a symmetrical race."

The women graduates of Trinity College, Dublin, have sent a largely signed petition for woman suffrage to the two representatives of Dublin University in Parliament.

Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay has resigned the presidency of the Equal Franchise Society, which started less than three years ago with only 16 members and has grown to 672.

John Burroughs, the naturalist, has made himself popular with the Southern California suffragists by declaring himself in favor of votes for women. He says: "Women are the equals of men, and suffrage consistent with democracy is a step in progress. The coming of suffrage is as inevitable as the shining of the stars, and it can only have the effect of enlarging the influence and sphere of the home."

OLIVE SCHREINER HAS WRITTEN A NEW AND REMARKABLE BOOK ON "WOMAN AND LABOR"

Dr. Anna Blount utters the following: "It is impossible to separate the home and politics. Every place you turn it is politics. It is politics that makes the water of the village in which I live impure. It is politics that keeps the milk which the children of the city drink from being clean and safe.

As I go about my practice as a physician I find that it is politics that is at the root of ills of all varieties. If the place of the woman is in the home, it is her duty to protect that home. And she cannot protect it unless she aids in selecting the people who are to administer the laws whose chief effect is on the home."

PLAY BY JULIA WARD HOWE.

"Hippolytus," a drama by Julia Ward Howe, never before produced, will be performed soon by Miss Margaret Anglin and her associates. The play has an interesting history. It was written by Mrs. Howe in 1858, at the request of Edwin Booth and Charlotte Cushman, to be played by them. Mr. Booth actually began to rehearse the drama, of which he expressed a very high opinion, both as to its literary and artistic qualities; but its production was for some reason abandoned. Mrs. Howe often expressed her deep regret that the play had never been produced, and now Miss Anglin has great pleasure in performing her labor of love.—Wowan's Journal.

Miss Adelaide Steele Baylor has been appointed manuscript clerk in the Department of Public Instruction of Indiana. In addition to the examination of manuscripts from applicants for teachers' licenses, she will inspect high schools and visit County Teachers' Institutes. She will receive an annual salary of $2,000.

If anything seems clear to the average fair-minded person, it is that when a married woman is obliged to live apart from her husband for justifiable cause he should not be allowed to collect and spend her earnings. Indeed, most states now allow a married woman the control of her own earnings, whether she is living with her husband or not. It is, therefore, edifying to read the following in the Detroit Journal: "Shrieks of wrath from the suffragette camp made the house judiciary committee this morning report out the bill allowing married women a right to their earnings when they are living apart from their husbands."

The executive committee of the Morristown (N. J.) Civic Association has passed resolutions favoring making women eligible to vote on local issues. The committee advocated that, if necessary, the association should retain counsel in its efforts to bring the matter to a favorable conclusion.

THE CHRISTIAN SOCIALIST.

The other day a young girl was asked what political party her father belonged to. She answered that her father was a Socialist, but hastened to add that he was a Christian Socialist. Right here it might be well to state that there is no other kind of Socialists. Socialism is applied Christianity. It is not something to be preached about and read of on Sunday, but a standard to live by every day in the week. Christ preached, taught and lived Socialism, but in his day, as now, there were only the few who would accept the beauties of his doctrine, the golden law of the golden rule.

Even the exceeding great virtue of the rich young ruler was not sufficient unto salvation, unless, as Christ commanded, he sell all his goods and give to the poor.

Then again, Christ taught that, above all else, one must have charity, or they were as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. They might even given their bodies to be burned, but unless they had charity, it would avail them nothing. What is this charity more than the principles of universal brotherhood, as taught by Socialism? If we are Socialists at all, we are believers in the Socialistic precepts of Christ, therefore, Christian Socialists.

AN OHIO WOMAN BANK CASHIER.

Ohio can boast of a woman bank cashier. She is Ella N. Myer, cashier of the Hardin County Bank, of Forest. Cashier Brennan, of the state treasury, is authority for the statement that she is the only woman cashier in the state. —Exchange.

AN OBJECT LESSON.

Miss M. Love of Missouri writes in the Woman's Daily: "One of the First influences which led me to ponder over the justice of woman's suffrage was an article I read about a block of buildings which happened to have mostly women owners. When the question came up as to what kind of pavement should be used on this street, the two or three men who owned property in the same block wanted a brick pavement; but the women all wanted asphalt, and argued that vehicles running over a brick pavement made too much racket, and would be especially annoying if any one of them or their children should be sick. But the few men decided to have brick, and the many women had to pay for it."

WOMAN SUFFRAGE WINS IN ILLINOIS SENATE.

Without discussion or explanation of votes, the woman suffrage bill, with the local option amendment, was passed in the Senate by a vote of 31 to 10.

Miss Harriet Grim, a University of Chicago girl, was the only suffragette present when the bill was passed. She immediately rushed to a telephone room to send the news to other leaders in the state.—Exchange.

Edith Wynee Matthison will play the principal role in the new suffrage comedy by Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Gilman, "Two Women," which will be one of the features of the big "benefit" for the Woman's Suffrage party at the Broadway Theater, in New York. Olive Oliver will also have an important role in the play, which will be staged by Beatrice Forbes-Robertson. Lillian Nordica will sing selections from grand opera.—Exchange.

SOCIALISTS WIN VICTORIES AND INCREASE VOTE.

Old Parties Combine in Several Plans TO DEFEAT WORKERS.

MATTOON, ILL.—The count Tuesday's ballots shows that Robert Doepel, Socialist, was elected alderman of the Seventh ward of this city. He received 182 votes, his opponent getting 124.

Franks Cause Defeat.

MONMOUTH, ILL.—The Socialists who lost the school board election Saturday by a narrow margin have made charges that fraudulent voting was practiced by the voting of minors.

The officials elected ran on a ticket known as the caucus ticket and represented a fusion of parties. Only by the most desperate efforts to get out the vote were they successful. The successful candidates are: John C. Allen, president, 725; trustees, O. B. French, 704; Mrs. Mary Patterson, 705.

The Socialist vote polled was as follows: For president, F. H. Williams, 303; trustees, McProud, 288; Mrs. Peterson, 289.

Elect Village Board Member.

BECKEMEYER, ILL.—The results of Tuesday's elections show that the Socialists elected a member of the village board.

Alderman in La Salle.

LA SALLE, ILL.—Harry Halpin, Socialist, was elected alderman from the Second ward of this city at Tuesday's election. Another candidate for alderman on the Socialist ticket, Valentine, only failed of election by 9 votes. Halpin is a clerk in a furniture store.

Keon Not Elected.

GRAFTON, ILL.—Early returns which indicated the election of John J. Keon, Socialist, as mayor of this city, later proved untrustworthy. The final count gave Keon 106 votes and Mayor William Journey, candidate for re-election, 139.

Run Strong in Herrin.

HERRIN, ILL.—The Labor party carried Tuesday's election, putting into office C. E. Anderson for mayor, who polled 450 votes; the Republican candidate, W. B. Walker, 112; and the Good Government candidate, H. T. McKinney, got 3352. E. E. Burkett, Socialist candidate for city clerk, polled 200 votes. Joseph M. Bond, labor party candidate for that office, won with 398 votes. E. E. Batty, Socialist candidate for city attorney, got 284 voted. Joseph H. Crighton, candidate for that office on the labor ticket, won, getting 457 votes.

Des Plaines Vote Strong.

DES PLAINES, ILL.—The Socialist candidate for president of the village board, W. M. Lawson, polled 102 votes on the Socialist ticket here at Tuesday's election. A year ago there were no Socialist votes here.

Miner Elected.

MARYSVILLE, ILL.—The Socialists elected a village clerk and one village trustee here, Eugene R. Armstrong, a miner, received 32 votes, and his nearest opponent 45. Leonard Argus, Socialist, was elected as a trustee. Four parties were on the field. J. M. Varner, miner, and Socialist candidate for the president of the village board, received 37 votes. He was defeated.

Cary School Ticket.

DAVIS, ILL.—The Socialists elected to office here on Tuesday are:

President of the village board, Dr. A. L. Cleveland; trustees, John R. Hinkle, butcher; Bernard Schmidt, lumber yard worker; J. W. York, poultry dealer. At the second school board election the previous Saturday, J. M. Caldwell, Socialist, was elected for three years.

Capture Thayer, Ill.

THAYER, ILL.—The Socialists carried this town at the election Tuesday. The party elected the following:

President of the board of trustees, J. C. Manwaring; trustees, Tony Bollette, Burnell Williamson, Evan Watkins.

What Socialism Stands For.

Human life depends upon food, clothing and shelter. Only when these are assured are freedom, culture and higher human development possible. To produce good, clothing and shelter, land and machinery are needed. Land by itself does not satisfy human needs. Human labor gets raw materials and food out of the soil by creating machinery and using it upon the land. Whoever has control of land and machinery has control of human labor, and with it of human life and liberty.

Today the machinery and the land used for industrial purposes are owned by a rapidly decreasing minority. So long as machinery is simple and easily handled by one man it does not make its owners so powerful that they can dominate the sources of life of others. But when machinery becomes more and more complex and expensive, and requires for its effective operation the organized effort of many workers, its influence reaches over wider circles of life. The owners of such machinery become the dominant class.

The Masses in Subjection.

In proportion as the number of such machine owners compared to all other classes decreases, their power in the nation and in the world increases. They bring ever larger masses of working people under their control, reducing them to the point where muscle and brain are their only productive property. Millions of formerly self-employing workers thus become the helpless wage slaves of the industrial masters.

The more the economic power of the ruling class grows, the less useful does it become in the life of the nation. The overwhelming bulk of the useful work of the nation falls upon the shoulders of the classes that either have no other productive property but their manual and mental labor power the wage workers — or that have but little land and little machinery outside of their labor power—the small traders and small farmers. The ruling minority is steadily becoming useless and parasitic.

A bitter struggle over the division of the products of labor is waged between the exploiting propertied class, on the one hand and the exploited, propertyless class on the other. In this struggle the wage working class cannot expect adequate relief from any reform of the present order from the dominant class of society.

The wage workers are therefore the most determined and irreconcilable antagonists of the ruling class. They are also the class which suffers most from the curse of class rule. The fact that a small number of capitalists is permitted to use all the country's resources and social tools for their individual profit, and to make the production of the necessaries of our lives the object of their competitive private enterprises and speculations, is at the bottom of all the social evils of our time.

Modern Industry Planless.

In spite of the organization, of trusts, pools and combinations, the capitalists are powerless to regulate production for social ends. Industries are largely conducted in a planless manner. Through periods of feverish activity the strength and health of the workers are mercilessly undermined, and during periods of enforced idleness the workers are frequently reduced to starvation.

The climaxes of this chaotic system of production are the regularly recurring industrial depressions and crises which paralyze the nation every fifteen or twenty years.

In this mad and reckless race for profits the capitalist class is bound to exploit the workers to the very limit of their endurance and to sacrifice their physical, moral and mental welfare to its own insatiable greed. Capitalism keeps the masses of working men in poverty, destitution, physical exhaustion and ignorance. It drags their wives from their homes to the mill and factory. It snatches their children from the playgrounds and schools and grinds their slender bodies and unformed minds into cold dollars. It wantonly disfigures, maims and kills hundreds of thousands of workingmen annually in mines, on railroads and in factories. It drives millions of workers into the ranks of the unemployed and forces large numbers of them nto beggary, vagrancy and all forms of crime and vice.

Public Intelligence Corrupted.

To maintain their rule over their fellow men, the capitalists must keep in their pay all organs of the public powers, public mind and public conscience. They control the dominating parties and, through them, the elected public officials. They select our executive, bribe our legislatures and corrupt our courts of justice. They sway our educational institutions. They own the nation politically and intellectually just as they own it industrially.

The struggle between wage workers and capitalists grows ever fiercer, and has become the only vital issue before the American people. The wage working class, therefore, has the most vital and direct interest in abolishing the capitalist system. But in abolishing the present system, the workingmen will free not only their own class, but also all other classes of modern society: The small farmer, who is today exploited by large capital more indirectly but not less effectively than is the wage laborer; the small manufacturer and trader, who is engaged in a desperate and losing struggle for economic independence in the face of the all-conquering power of concentrated capital; and even the capitalist himself, who is the slave of his wealth rather than its master. The struggle of the working class against the capitalist class, while it is a class struggle, is thus at the same time a struggle for the abolition of all classes and class privileges.

Must Conquer the Political Power.

The private ownership of the land and means of production used for exploitation, is the rock upon which class rule is built; political government is its indispensable istrument. The wage workers cannot be freed from exploitation without conquering the political power and substituting collective and democratic administration for private ownership of the land and the means of production used for exploitation.

The basis for such transformation is rapidly developing within the very bosom of present capitalist society. The factory system, with its immense labor, is rapidly destroying all vestiges of individual production in manufacture. Modern production is already very largely a collective and social process, while the great trusts and monopolies which have sprung up in recent years have had the effect of organizing the work and management of some of our main industries on a national scale, and fitting them for national use and operation.

An End to Class Rule.

In the struggle for freedom the interests of the workers of all nations are identical. The struggle is not only national, but international. It embraces the world and will be carried to ultimate victory by the united workers of the world.

To unite the workers of the nation and their allies and sympathizers of other classes to this end, is the mission of the Socialist. In this battle for freedom the Socialist movement does not strive to substitute working class rule for capitalist rule, but by working class victory to free all humanity from class rule and to realise the international brotherhood of man.

NOW GET BUSY!

The Socialist Wants 10,000 More Subscribers in Columbus Right Away.

The Workers in "The Storm Center Of Socialism" Have A Chance To Make Good.

All That Is Needed Is "A Long Pull, A Strong Pull, and A Pull Altogether."

The Socialist Makes Fair Proposition To Secure The Co-Operation Of All For The Next Campaign.

READ EVERY WORD OF OUR OFFER.

The Socialist wishes to co-operate with the City Central Committee, the Ward Branches and the precinct workers of the Socialist party of Columbus in educating the voters and organizing our forces so that we may reap the full benefit of our educational work.

We believe that one of the most effective means of educating the workers and of propagating Socialism is through the columns of a good Socialist paper. The paper goes each week into the home and carries some message, some truth, to each of its readers. While we make no apology for our paper, we are determined that each issue shall be an improvement over the previous one.

The subscription list is the life of any paper. Without it, it dies. We want at least 10,000 subscribers on our books before the campaign opens. We must have them if The Socialist is to be the power for good that it should be in the fight of 1911 in Columbus, "the Storm Center of Socialism."

OUR PLAN.

Here is our plan to put money into the treasuries of the City Central Committee and of the Ward Branches for use in organization and propaganda work, as they may determine:

1. We will pay to each Ward Branch 12½ per cent. of all money for subscriptions collected and turned in by its members to The Socialist.

2. We will pay over to the treasury of the City Central Committee of Local Columbus 12½ per cent. of all money collected and paid in by the Ward Branches for subscriptions to The Socialist.

LIST OF PRIZES.

As Prizes or special rewards for the workers we offer the following:

1. To the Branch turning in the largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist, in proportion to membership of the Branch in good standing, we will give $75 in books, to be selected by the Branch, or in money.

2. To the Branch turning in the second largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist, under the foregoing conditions, we will gice $50 in books or money.

3. To the Branch turning in the third largest amount of money on subscriptions as stated we will give $25 in books or money.

INDIVIDUAL REWARDS.

1. To the individual turning in the largest amount of money on subscriptions to The Socialist we will pay $25 in gold.

2. To the individual turning in the second largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist we will pay $15 in gold.

3. To the individual who turns in the third largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist we will pay $10 in gold.

CONDITIONS.

The only conditions we impose in this contest are that the members of Branches will get all their sub. cards from the literature or special agent of their respective Branches and that this agent will at all times have on hand a supply of sub. cards and make returns to The Socialist of all subscriptions received not later than Wednesday of each week. Sub. cards will be supplied by this office at any time. This contest will be limited to Branches and Locals in Franklin County.

This Contest Began On Saturday, Feb. 11, and Will Close Tuesday, November 7, 1911

Information as to details of this contest will be cheerfully furnished by this office.

NOTICE TO BRANCHES.

The Columbus Socialist has space for all notices of propaganda meetings and regular sessions of the Branches. Send all copy in, if possible, by Wednesday of each week.

OUR BOOSTERS.

Crowded space the past two weeks in The Socialist has prevented any recognition of our tried and true Boosters. They have not been idle however, for the new subscribers are coming along in a steady stream, in spite of everything.

Right here in Columbus, Comrades W. E. Hues, Dr. Albrecht, A. C. Eby and that West Side Indian, Joe Schawe, have been taking scalps. W. E. Carlisle, the well-known type, just dropped in Saturday evening and cheered up the Old Man and the entire force with a list of 15 six-months' subs—all of 'em printers. That shows that the I. T. U. boys are class conscious. We dassnt tell where they work, but we can say that the print shops of this town are full of Socialists. Go to it!

Comrade A. E. Shinn, who is on the war-path, sent in a good list last weekk.

Comrade Frederick Guy Strickland, he of the silver tongue and bland smile, is out talking all over Ohio, under the auspices of The Columbus Socialist. That's the "cause why" we add to our list this week clubs from Massillon, Lancaster, London, Coshocton, Pleasant City, Uhrichsville, Wadsworth, Eyesville, Canton, Dayton, Miamisburg Mineral City, Salem, Wellington and New Philadelphia. The Strickland cards are coming in with every mail.

THE OHIO LEGISLATIVE GRAFT PRIZE.

The Stench of the Century in the State of Ohio.

Organized Labor Awaits the Result of the Grand Jury Verdict.

The present existing Legislature is uneasy, and many of the legislators are wishing that they had allowed the Ohio Penitentiary to be moved out to Buckeye Lake. Of course when the prison bill was under discussion, the legislators were not under suspicion. But look at the signs of the times. Even the Neil House has surrendered and is flying the white flag from its roof.

What tales would be related if the booths at the Neil House bar and the furniture in the bedrooms facing High street could only talk. "Be of good cheer," was the telegram that Boss Hanley sent his principal steerer and henchman, Senator Cetone. "We are with you." Who ever was dumb enough to doubt this statement. Harvey Garber has gone to Europe to see a king crowned. The English papers report extra police protection and that all suspicious characters will be arrested at the docks. Strange how news flies these days.

Several well known characters of unenviable reputation who occupy offices on East Broad street, are liable to have an attack of nervous prostration at any moment. Representative Nye wishes he could dye his conscience. So far no member of the Columbus Federation of Labor has been connected with legislative graft.

MEETING TO BE HELD AT GRANDVIEW.

Local Franklin Township will hold a propaganda meeting next Tuesday evening, May 9, at Red Men's Hall, corner of Grandview and Third avenues. The speaker of the evening will be Comrade James Henderson.

The Grandview Glee Club, which has just been organized, is busy rehearsing on Socialist songs and will make their first public appearance at this meeting.

Take Arlington car, which leaves Town street on the hour and half-hour, and get off at Third avenue, Grandview, and go one block east and one north.

JEWISH SOCIALISTS CELEBRATE.

The Workmen's Circle A. R., a Jewish Socialist organization, had its May Day Festival last Sunday evening, at Federation of Labor Hall, East Town street. The Socialist Glee Club Forward furnished some of its stirring songs and there were a number of other musical and literary features. Comrades Weichold and Jacobs spoke in German and Yiddish, and Comrade A. E. Shinn spoke in English. The attendance was large and those in charge were well pleased with the results.

REV. PROSSER'S LECTURE.

The lecture of Rev. William A. Prosser, at the Fourth Avenue Church of Christ on Tuesday evening of last week, under the auspices of the North Side Branches of the Socialist party, drew a large audience. Mention of the meeting was crowded out of this paper last week. Comrade Prosser opened the eyes of his hearers to some new light on the subject of Socialism.

MILWAUKEE ALDERMAN

Will Speak in Columbus This Evening.

Comrade Carl Minkly, Socialist alderman-at-large in Milwaukee, will speak at Kull's Hall, Third and Mound streets, next Saturday evening, May 6, at 7:30. Admission free. The comrade will speak in Both German and English.

The teamsters employed by the St Louis, Mo., Transfer Company have secured an advance in wages.

The San Francisco labor council decided to invest $1,000 in the municipal railroad bonds, and advised unions to purchase such bonds.

Painters of Indianapolis, Ind., have just secured an agreement for two years, carrying an increase for the present year and an added increase next year.

Omaha painters have just secured another increase in wages, bringing their scale up to 50 cents per hour.

Two hundred Pacific coast employers have organized to fight for the "open shop."

Solons Indicted.

George B. Nye, representative from Pike county. Four indictments for soliciting bribes, Democrat.

Isaac E. Huffman, senator from Butler county. Indicted jointly with Rodney Diegel for aiding and abetting in securing a bribe, Democrat.

L. R. Andrews, senator from Lawrence county. Indicted jointly with Rodney Diegel for aiding and abetting in securing a bribe, Republican.

George K. Cetone, senator from Montgomery county. Indicted jointly with Rodney Diegel for aiding and abetting in securing a bribe, Democrat.

Rodney J. Diegel, sergeant-at-arms of the Senate. Indicted jointly with Senators Huffman, Andrews and Cetone, Democrat.

A. C. Lowry, representative from Lawrence county. One indictment for soliciting a bribe, Republican.

The above list represents the net results of the Franklin county grand jury up to Friday noon. It is stated that two more legislators may be indicted. There is no intimation that any of the "men higher up" are to be called to task. It is rumored that some previous sessions of the General Assembly will be probed. This might uncover some more rascally deeds, but it would only confirm what every body has known. Some members of the legislature have been hanging around the court house during the sessions of the grand jury with very anxious faces, and expressed their willingness to "tell all." The worried ones have not been called.

The grand jury has refused to indict the Burns detectives who are charged with paying Representative George B. Nye $200. In the meantime the Standard Oil Company, the telephone merger gang and other corporations are trying to jam the public utilities bill through the general assembly because the measure is fixed to suit their interests.

The Supreme Court has decided that a railroad can not own a coal mine. This decision is the result of a fight made by the so-called independent coal operators, who had a grievance because the railroads naturally handled their own coal with more expedition than that of their competitors. Now everybody is happy. The court did not say that a coal company could not own a railroad, so it will only be necessary to shift the ownership of the stock a little and there you are, where you were before. Meanwhile the dear public pays all the traffic will bear no matter who owns the mines or the railroads, so long as the public itself does not.

LIMA MAKING GOOD.

The Lima Socialist, after being published for nearly a year, has at last secured admission to the mails as second-class matter. The paper is making it warm for the labor crushers in Allen county. Local Lima has also secured Comrade F. G. Strickland, of The Columbus Socialist Lecture Bureau, for a meeting on the 15th inst.

SOCIALIST GLEE CLUB FORWARD CELEBRATES.

Festivities at Red Lion Hall Monday Afternoon and Evening.

The Socialist Glee Club Forward held its International Labor Day Festival at Red Lion Hall last Monday afternoon and evening. The program as published in The Socialist was followed and the affair was a success in every way. There was not a dull moment from start to finish. One feature which appealed to the emotions of all was the one-act play entitled "The Old and New Time." The characters were as follows:

CHARACTERS.

Old Time.....Mrs. Marie Loops
New Time.....Mrs. Ch. Scherl
First of May.....Munt Nowacki
May Goddess.....Mrs. J. Firsts

Children and Laborers.

The playlet showed the passing of the old traditions and systems before the rising might of the modern proletariat, and the climax evoked unlimited applause.

Milwaukee carpenters will demand 50 cents an hour.

Lynn, Mass., shoe cutters won an increase of 7 cent a pair.

OUR POLITICAL PRIMER.

Is the election over?

Yes, the election is over.

Did the workingmen win?

They did not.

Did the workingmen's vote elect the successful candidate?

Sure, Mike.

Well, why did they not win?

Because they did not elect a workingman.

Was there a workingman running?

Yes, a number.

Did they get any votes?

Yes, a few.

Did the workingmen who voted for workingmen lose their votes?

No; they voted for what they wanted. But there were more who did not want the same thing.

Why should not all workingmen want the same thing?

They should. In fact they do, but most of them do not know how to get it.

Will they ever learn how?

We hope so.

What do the workingmen want?

Some of them want the earth, but most of them are willing to let the other fellow have it.

Can the workingmen get the earth?

Sure, Mike.

Why, on earth can they get the earth?

Simply by asking for it altogether.

Why, that sounds easy.

It is easy, but they don't know it.

Why don't they know it?

Why? Oh, why was the bird?

VICTORY AT CHARLESTON.

D. R. Tickle, Socialist candidate for councilman from the Third ward, was elected over the Democratic nominee, by a majority of eleven votes. In all the precincts on the West Side the Socialists polled a large vote; in fact, the returns show a nice increase in every precinct in the city. In the First ward, Precinct No. 1, the two old parties had to resort to every rascality known to the crooked politicians to defeat the Socialist candidates and then Bailey, on the Socialist ticket, only lost by 25 votes. In the Second Ward, the Socialists ran a close third, and in the Tenth ward Fred Stunts, Jr., on the Socialist ticket, was only 17 votes behind the successful Republican. P. N. Wiggins, Socialist candidate for Board of Affairs, received about 400 votes, at least got that many counted for him. This was an increase of over 100 per cent. since last November. By electing a Socialist to the council the Holley Democratic machine was thrown out of gear, as the Socialist councilman will be able to block any move along a strictly party line. The indications are that the next president of the council will be a Republican. Considering the fact that there were three independent tickets in the field the Socialists made a wonderful showing.—Charleston (W. Va.) Argus.

SOCIALISM

The SOCIALIST

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF, BY AND FOR THE WORKERS

Vol. 1. No. 21. COLUMBUS, OHIO, SATURDAY, MAY 13, 1911. PRICE, $1.00 PER YEAR. SINGLE COPIES, 3 CENTS.

Office State Librarian Columbus O.

WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE?

Many people believe that the cause of poverty among the workers is due to the monopoly of wealth. They assume that if the owners of wealth competed with each other, labor would get better pay.

This is a vicious half-truth, more dangerous than full-fledged falsehood, because it is more difficult to refute.

If the wealth of the world, or to be more exact, the means of production, were collectively owned by all the people then wholesome, healthful emulation would become universal. But as long as a part of the people own all the means of production it makes little difference to the workers how the owning class divide what the working class produces.

Suppose the government should dissolve the Standard Oil, U. S. Steel, the lumber, coal and railroad trusts, the International Harvester Company, the shoe trust, the banking and packing trusts, and all the other combinations of capitalists.

Would not the same people who now own these properties continue to own them? Would they pay higher wages or employ more men? Would rent, interest and profit cease to suck up the products of labor?

Competition is dead because it is foolish and wasteful. Politicians who promise to restore it among capitalists are either fools or knaves.

It will not be done, not only because it would not improve the condition of labor, but chiefly because the capitalists own, or rather ARE the government. State regulation is absurd. It is like a man trying to lift himself by his boot-straps.

The government, both national and state, has been prosecuting and dissolving Standard Oil for years, without the slightest effect upon the price of its products or the wages it pays. Old Missouri debars it from doing business within the state, but it sells its wares through other firms at a slightly higher price than in other states where it does business directly with the consumer.

The next step will be government ownership of the great industries. Astute politicians are already beginning to advocate it. They see the trend of events.

Charles Edward Russell holds up Australia as a place where the people rule and have freed themselves from the incubus of organized wealth. But Russell saw only the surface of things in Australia. The power that owns the private railroads here owns the government roads there. It has hidden itself behind popular government, but it still draws interest on bonds which the government issued. Labor still pays tribute to capital. The form has changed while the essence remains.

In the course of time the people will learn that WEALTH IS GOVERNMENT and that they can only possess themselves of government by possessing wealth.

This final step of the revolution will be accompanied by socialising wealth—the means of production—and transforming the present state into a genuine industrial democracy.

SAME OLD ROOSEVELT.

Roosevelt is still Roosevelt. He butted into the Moyer-Haywood kidnaping case and became infamous by referring to the kidnaped Western miners' officials as "undesirable citizens." Now he has butted into the McNamara kidnaping case, and is trying to "shoo' the workers away from their bounden duty to come to the rescue of their imprisoned fellow-toilers.

He gives voice to his sentiments in the capacity of "contributing editor" of the Outlook, having an article in that publication entitled, "Murder Is Murder."

He urges the workers not to come to the support of their imprisoned fellow-workmen because he says no one knows whether they are guilty or innocent.

He advises the workers to wait until the courts, the Southern Pacific railroad controlled courts, the Merchants' and Manufacturers' controlled courts, the General Harrison Gray Otis controlled courts, have had their say in the matter. With Roosevelt, every workingman charged with crime is guilty, whether any evidence has been submitted in the case or not. He seemingly is incapable of recognizing that working men or women have any rights.

Senators La Follette, Bristow and Cummins, it is reported, are dissatisfied because the demands of the progressives were flatly refused by the regular Republicans. And still some people assert that we Socialists are the only ones who make people dissatisfied. After all, this question of getting dissatisfied is merely a matter of becoming better acquainted with the "regular Republicans."

The Ohio Constitutional Convention, which will assemble in this city next January, will be composed of members elected by the respective counties of the state. Franklin county will be entitled to three members, who will be elected at the November election. The working class will have a fine chance, through the Socialist party, of electing men who remodel the organic law of the state in accord with the principles of Socialism.

PAYING THE CAPITALIST.

(Written for The Columbus Socialist.)

The first bugbear that meets the man who considers the Socialist philosophy is: "How shall we pay the capitalist?"

This is a very natural question. He has been paying the capitalist during his entire lifetime, and can not be expected to stop at once!

But, seriously, we will settle with the capitalist class as may be most expedient at the time. We would be mere Utopian dreamers to be planning now a settlement with capitalist owners.

As a class the workers are notoriously generous. Even the capitalist ought not to tremble.

Some capitalist properties are illegally held, and should be taken at once. Some may be most easily bought and paid for by the new state. Some may be seized under "eminent domain," and damages paid to the capitalist owners. If any capitalists resist the state, their properties may be legally confiscated.

But there are many factories and mines now in use which the workers will certainly abandon when they come into power. The owners may then do with their old properties as they wish. The workers will provide themselves with more safe and comfortable places.

There is always a way when the time comes. No need now to borrow trouble about how we will treat the former rulers when we have the power. How foolish to mistrust ourselves!

What will the capitalist do when we collectively conduct industry? He will have a suitable and pleasant job along side ourselves, and be paid his entire social share! His needless "anxiety" will be over!

Frederick Guy Strickland.

EVERY SOCIALIST AND LABOR LOCAL IN THE NATION SHOULD ADOPT THIS RESOLUTION.

Whereas, The constitution of the United States ordains that no state shall deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws; and

Whereas, It is reported in the public press that one John J. McNamara, heretofore residing in the city of Indianapolis, Ind., has been deprived of liberty and put in jeopardy of his life without said due process of law; and

Whereas, Victor L. Berger, member of Congress from the State of Wisconsin, has introduced in the House of Representatives a resolution providing that a committee of each House of Congress be appointed to investigate the arrest and extradition of the said McNamara, and to report its findings to each house at the earliest possible moment; and

Whereas, Said resolution has been referred to the Committee on Rules of the House of Representatives; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we demand of the House Committee on Rules an early report of the said resolution to the end that the house may vote on same and the committee provided for may be speedily appointed; and, be it further

Resolved, That we call upon the members of the working class everywhere to use their efforts to secure favorable action on the said resolution, thereby serving notice upon the ruling class that the aroused workers demand the full protection of the constitution and the laws to the members of their class when accused of breach of the laws; and, be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Representative Robert L. Henry, chairman of the Rules Committee of the House of Representatives at Washington, D. C.

We clip from a contemporary:

"In Akron, O., secret methods are being employed to organize the wage-slaves in the rubber trust plants. Each applicant is given a number, and no person in or outside the organization will know who are members. And this is necessary in "free" America! It sounds more like Russia.

We add: "Why slander Russia?"

The Morning Gossip, published on East Broad street, last Sunday announced another ticket for the Socialists of Columbus. This persistency is amusing to Socialists, who have become used to the idle tattle of the local capitalistic sheets.

HARRISON GRAY OTIS.

At this time it may be well to reprint from the November number of the International Socialist Review a character sketch of the man at whose door (if it can be laid at any one's door) may be laid the cause of the labor troubles in Los Angeles. Incidentally it may be noted that the "Johnson" referred to is the man who asked Governor Marshall of Indiana to have the three men accused of the crime taken back to Los Angeles. Truly, Capitalism makes strange bed-fellows.

The writer of that article says:

"One of the well-known methods of the modern detective is to manufacture evidence in order to discover it.

"It is very true that working men and women have said many impolite and unkind things about General Otis—perhaps almost as harsh as the conduct of General Otis toward the toilers of Los Angeles would merit, but it is doubtful if anything equal in style and vitriolic denunciation to the speech made by Hiram Johnson, Republican candidate for governor, in the Los Angeles Auditorium has ever been published.

"'In the city from which I have come we have drunk to the very dregs the cup of infamy; we have had vile officials; we have had rotten newspapers; we have had men who have sold their birthright; we have dipped into every infamy; every form of wickedness has been ours in the past; every debased passion and every sin has flourished, but we have nothing so vile, nothing so low, nothing so debased, nothing so infamous in San Francisco, nor did we ever have, as Harrison Gray Otis. This man has attacked me on the only side to which I will respond, concerning which rather than respond, I would lose the governorship of the State of California. He sits there in senile dementia, with gangrened heart and rotting brain, grimacing at every reform, chattering impotently at all things that are decent, frothing, fuming, violently gibbering, going down to his grave in snarling infamy. This man Otis is the one blot on the banner of Southern California; he is the bar sinister upon your escutcheon. My friends, he is one thing that all California looks at, when in looking at Southern California, they see anything that is ungrateful, depraved, corrupt, crooked and putrescent—that is, Harrison Gray Otis.'"

THE SMUG COLONEL.

"I am not an aspirant for anything, because I have had everything," said Colonel Roosevelt. "No other man alive has had such a good run for his money."—Press Dispatch.

Some self-complacency that. Here is a down-and-out monkey shooter, who relegated to the rear some months back—completely frazzled as it were, now comes forth with the statement that he is perfectly satiated with glory. He has reached, so he modestly declares, the pinnacle of achievement, to which no other man living or dead, ever longed for, much less attained.

Our hat goes off to the colonel. He is truly in a class by himself. Here are some of his unequaled achievements:

Exhibit "A." Reformed Spelling. (Lasted two months.)
Exhibit "B." Shooting Spaniard in Back.
Exhibit "C." Elected Vice-President by Predatory Interests.
Exhibit "D." Elected President by Czolgosz.
Exhibit "E." Helped Harriman Mulct Alton Stockholders.
Exhibit "F." Persecuted Labor and Socialist Leaders for Seven Years.
Exhibit "G." Stormed Unavailingly at Interests for Same Length of Time.
Exhibit "H." Relinquished Throne to Injunction Bill.
Exhibit "I." Makes Personal Pronoun Famous.
Exhibit "J." Goes to Africa and Commits Unjustifiable Fratricide Among the Monkeys.
Exhibit "K." Tells Europeans How to Run Their Establishment (in spite of fact he couldn't run his own.)
Exhibit "L." Triumphantly Returns to America. Received loyally by Senator Lodge, J. P. Morgan and other patriots.
Exhibit "M." November 8, 1910. Frazzled!

Truly, an enviable and beautiful list of accomplishments, and entirely satisfactory to such a great personage as Theodore.

If the submerged people make any united effort to keep to themselves that which they produce the cry goes up from the self-constituted guardians of the public virtue that all is wrong, that their class consciousness will rock the boat and that we shall all fall out; but the class consciousness of the banker who would discount the boat full of holes and sink the craft, don't criticise him, he is all right, don't you see he has got the flag over his auger and therefore he is patriotic—but, oh, these dreadful workingmen, they might tip us over and do it without the sanction of patriotism, which would be unspeakable.

The very evening that McNamara arrived, under guard, at Los Angeles, one union in that city took in 72 new members.

COMMENT ON THE GROWTH OF SOCIALISM.

The non-Socialist press all over the country is commenting upon the growth of Socialism, particularly in reference to those cities which have elected Socialist officials. In their comment, these papers follow one of two methods, either lauding Socialism as a sign of awakening intelligence on the part of American voters, or deprecating everything that bears the name of Socialism, stooping so low in many cases as to invent lies concerning both Socialism and the Socialist officials who are elected. Especially is this true in the comment on Socialism in Milwaukee.

The following editorial, taken from the Los Angeles Record, is a very fair example of the first form of comment, and shows a very liberal spirit on the part of that paper. The editorial reads as follows:

"'What does it mean?' is the query of a reader, who, judging from his letter, has become greatly excited because Berkeley, Cal., and Butte, Mont., have elected Socialist mayors, and has written us a long letter to say that he can not understand how men can vote for Socialists when there are other good candidates.

Possibly, if Berkeley and Butte there were not 'other good candidates,' or at least candidates who measured up as well for the people as the Socialist candidates, and if such were the case it would simply mean that the voters wanted the men they considered the most capable and trustworthy in office."

Possibly, if Berkeley and Butee were isolated cases, this explanation would do, but if our inquirer read the papers closely, last week, he knows that in addition to a Socialist mayor Butte elected a Socialist police judge, a Socialist treasurer and five Socialist aldermen; that Superior, Wis., elected two Socialist aldermen and two Socialist supervisors; that Racine, Wis., elected one Socialist alderman and a Socialist justice of the peace; that Victor, Col., elected an entire Socialist ticket; that Walkerville, Mont., elected two Socialist aldermen; that Flint, Mich., elected a Socialist mayor, three Socialist aldermen, three Socialist supervisors and two Socialist school trustees; that Girard, Kan., elected a Socialist mayor; that Beatrice, Neb., Red Cloud, Neb., and Wymore, Neb., all elected Socialist mayors; that in Chicago the Socialist vote was 34,000, an increase of 13,000, and that in many places the Socialists made wonderful gains.

Now, in some of these places there were undoubtedly "other good candidates," but the voters wanted the Socialists and elected 'em, so an explanation that might apply to a few isolated cases will not do. Therefore, we are going to tell our inquirer what we think it means.

We believe that the people have simply got tired of being humbugged and have decided to play the game themselves.

For years—yes, for generations—the old parties have been putting municipal candidates in the field, and these candidates, before election, have talked themselves hoarse about what they were going to do for the people; how they would, if elected, protect all the interests of the people, and all that sort of palaver. And then, after election, the people always got theirs, and always got it in the same place—the neck.

There have been so many broken promises and so many betrayals of the people by their municipal officers that the voters have become suspicious of all candidates who wore the brand of the old parties. While they may not believe that all Socialist doctrines and theories are good, they know that the Socialists stand for muncipal ownership and for other things that mean much to the common people; that mean that Bill Smith, the hodcarrier, will have just as even a break in municipal affairs as the Hon. William Smythe, president of the First National Bank, and that is what the people want.

It means that the voters want a new order of things. That they want a government of the people, by the people and for the people to be a reality, and not a mere catch phrase of the stump speaker.

It means that the people have determined to try and come into their own. And the end is not yet.

THE ETERNAL URGE.

The cosmos evolves. The principles which express themselves in its development are, no doubt, in essence identical with those that impel human action. The pull of gravitation that draws the planet to its mother, the sun, manifests itself in the love that draws mother to child. Filial affection is conscious gravity.

Biologic development is not aware of itself. The organic world is passive. The animal achieves nothing. It is acted upon by the environment and adapted to it. Man, on the contrary, is psychically developed, is active and assumes the initiative, moiding nature to his own use, in proportion to his mental development.

There has been no important organic change in man during the historic period. Physically he seems finished. Psychically and in the conquest of nature an illimitable field lies before him. His power of vision has been enormously increased by the application of the lens, his power of locomotion has been multiplied, and his strength has become almost unlimited by his command of nature's forces. Tools are vastly more effective than teeth and claws. Electrical transmission of thought endows him with a faculty deemed miraculous in a more ignorant age. By a long series of inventions he has enormously increased production. It is all the result of man's power to transform environment and declares him master of the globe he inhabits.

Material civilization consists in the utilization of the materials and forces of nature. This is what distinguishes man from the lower animals and forms the basis of his spiritual development. It does not derogate from the worth of man's spiritual faculties to admit that without a material basis they can not exist.

These powers and faculties that have given us all that is glorious in art, inspiring in literature, ennobling in character, charming and ineffably tender in human relations are flowers so delicate that they can only bloom in the rich soil of material prosperity fanned by the air of freedom and warmed by the glow of human companionship.

Heretofore, from causes largely material, poverty has been the inevitable lot of the masses. An enormous amount of human energy was wasted in the conflicts of opposing interests. This made the progress of civilization difficult and confined its blessings to a small class. In the future poverty is unnecessary since the power to produce is practically unlimited.

It only remains to reorganize society upon the basis of man's achievement; of his power to utilize the materials and forces of nature, in order to secure to every member of society an ample, material income. Then each will be free to follow the spiritual impulses of his nature and develop the highest faculties of the cosmos.

STRAINING AT GNATS.

"A saloonkeeper of good character is just as respectable as a banker or a grocer of good character. A bad banker or a bad grocer can do more harm than a bad saloonkeeper. We are looking out for the bad saloonkeeper, but we are not looking out for the bad banker or the bad grocer."

This argument was made yesterday by Miss Grace Reed, principal of the Frances E. Willard school, in an executive session, to show cause why she should not be dismissed. She had said: "A saloonkeeper of good character is just as respectable as a banker." This "shocked" the leaders of the W. C. T. U. and they demanded her dismissal.

Miss Reed is right.

The saloonkeeper, banker, [illegible] and manufacturer are in business for profit. That is the main and, speaking generally, the only purpose of business. The effect of the business upon the public is not considered. This is evident in every day life. The argument is necessary.

The vital defect in the capitalistic system is the separation between private good and public welfare.

It is because men can gain wealth privately, at the expense of the public and to the harm of their fellow men that capitalism stands condemned. It is profit that draws men into trade and causes them to take advantage of each other.

Men fight like demons on the boards of trade for private gain. No mercy is shown. The bankrupt loser is cast out and frequently ends by suicide. Bankers, railroad and trust magnates struggle for supremacy with each other and use every method from buying votes and corrupting legislatures to perjury and murder to gain their [illegible].

Their battles are spectacular and attract public attention, while comparatively little is said of the exploitation of the working class, which proceeds by means of profit, rent and interest, day after day and year after year.

The saloon and brothel are the necessary and inevitable accompaniment of the private bank, store and factory. It is foolish to complain of the effect and endorse the cause.

Frances E. Willard recognised this truth and some time before her death unequivocally declared that the redemption of society would come through Socialism.—Chicago Daily [illegible].

Get your think-tanks to work in your spare moments and study cause and effect and you will soon surprise yourself to find how it will help you to become a quick reasoner.

"He held his audience while he 'boiled' the system," says a comrade in a letter.

WERE THE GRAPES SOUR?

The Socialist party of Chicago has been exceedingly friendly with the unions and made especial efforts to get organized labor in line with the party.

All this friendliness toward the unions is commendable, but that friendliness became distinctive and therein lies the danger.

No effort has been spared to show organized labor the position of the party. The comrades have largely catered to the unions and been scrupulously careful not to give offense in any way.

In fact, there has been a tendency to be partial in the treatment of the unions in order to win them.

Leaders of the unions have been given prominence in the papers and their decisions sometimes indorsed silently or otherwise when they were rather open to question.

Up to the time of the campaign nothing in the world could have been done to add to the friendly and courteous treatment of the unions by the Socialist party and press.

There was, therefore, no excuse for the leaders who went over into the capitalist rank and indorsed Merriman and Harrison.

We have learned that catering to the unions is all foolishness. It is a waste of time.

Treat the unions as other workers, but not differently.

The Socialist party must never make any distinction between union man and other workers in the treatment of them.

Encourage organization among the workers and treat all organized workers with all due courtesy, but never cater to the unions as organizations in any way different from the treatment accorded the unorganized portion of the working class.

A union card does not weigh a half ounce to a union man in his political choice. Look at Fitzpatrick. Rodrigues had a card and Merriman had [illegible].

But the card did not count with Fitzpatrick. He went over to a non-union candidate, an enemy of labor.

Just when the unions could have taken a stand to their own advantage and supported their own party they went, with few exceptions, over to the cardless candidates.

All this shows that the Socialist party must never mistake itself and think that organized labor is different from other labor in political action, unless it be a little more backward.

The Socialist party is the party of the workers—all workers—and will refuse to cater to the unions more than to other workers.

The Socialist party does not discourage leadership, provided that leadership is guided by the rank and file. But whenever a leader goes off and by his action sells out his fellow-workers he will be mercilessly exposed and his action sharply criticised.

We have learned that it does not pay in any sense to smooth over any rascality or treason committed by labor leaders. They only become more bold.

Let every worker unite for the overthrow of the capitalist system and for the securing of the rights that belong to every human being.—Daily Socialist.

FEAR BORN OF FEAR.

"Need and oppression starveth in thy eye,
Content and beggary hang upon thy back,
The world is not thy friend nor the world's law."

—Shakespeare.

So said Romeo to the poverty stricken apothecary of Mantua. The poor apothecary was in the depths of poverty, and yet was scared to sell poison because it was against the law.

The working class of today is composed of individuals that are as poor as the apothecary and yet are scared to embrace Socialism for fear of losing something.

The sooner the workers wake up to the fact that they have nothing to lose and everything to gain by the change the sooner will they be ready for it. They should bear in mind the words of Karl Marx: "Workers of the world unite, you have nothing but your chains to lose, and you have a world to gain."

ITALY'S LABOR PENSION.

The premier of the new Italian cabinet, Signor Giolitti, in outlining the policy of the cabinet in parliament last week, announced that a bill would be introduced by the government providing for compulsory pensions for workmen. Italy is a kingdom and supposed to be under somewhat autocratic control. But see how much more considerate of workers it is than the United States, where every citizen is supposed to be a sovereign. In this country such a proposal would be met with ridicule at first and later intense opposition. Here we can not even get laws which the courts will allow to stand that make provision for the protection of human life in the industries.—Union Advocate, St. Paul, Minn.

New York State contains [illegible] unionists.

A GREAT YEAR FOR WOMEN.

This has been a great year for the women of the State of Washington. By a vote of the people they were given the right to vote, and now the Legislature has passed the eight-hour law for women. For eight years the members of organized labor have had a bill before the biennial sessions of the Legislature asking that they pass a measure which would guarantee by law to the women of the State the same hours most of the men have secured through their organizations.—Seattle Union Record.

Mrs. Clara Laddey, president of the New Jersey W. S. A., lately addressed the Brotherhood of the Claremont Presbyterian church in Jersey City and a large delegation of the Men's Club of the Holy Cross church, headed by Rev. Augustine Elmendorf. At the close of the meeting, which was held in the church parlors, a resolution favoring woman suffrage was passed.

The Illinois Senate has passed the woman suffrage bill, with a referendum, by a vote of 31 to 10.

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION.

News From The World Wide Movement Of The Workers.

WISCONSIN NOTES.

It was killing time this week in the Wisconsin legislature. Some splendid Social-Democratic bills were slaughtered in the assembly or the senate.

Among these was the bill prohibiting Sunday work for bakers. This bill was demanded by the Bakers' Union and introduced by a Social-Democratic assemblyman.

It was killed under particularly disgraceful circumstances. The big bakers appeared before the committee of the legislature to which was referred another Social-Democratic bill, demanding a ten-hour day for the bakery workers. The big bakers fought this bill, and promised that, if it were killed, they would support the bill forbidding Sunday work. Then, after the ten-hour bill had been killed, these same honorable gentlemen broke their word and murdered the Sunday bill in the same fashion.

Another excellent measure done to death by the "progressive" Wisconsin legislature was the Socialist bill to legalise picketing, to restrain the use of injunctions in labor disputes and to provide that no union can be held responsible for the action of its individuals.

This bill is just what the labor unions have been demanding for years. It would have put a stop to such suits as those which have crippled the Hatters' Union and which are now being brought against hundreds of unions all over the country with the same purpose of crippling them by draining away their funds.

Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison are themselves under jail sentenses even now for violating an injunction which, under the provision of this bill, could not have been issued.

Yet this measure to relieve the unions from persecution and give them simple justice was defeated by a legislature which calls itself "progressive!"

All of which proves to the workingmen that the friends on whom they can depend in any legislative body are the Socialists—and the Socialists only.

The Wisconsin legislature also killed another fine Socialist bill, providing that when an employer advertises for help, in case of a strike at his plant, he should mention in his advertisements the existence of the strike. Surely, if it is a crime to obtain money under false pretenses, it should also be a crime to obtain labor under false pretenses. Yet this just bill was also voted down by the capitalistic legislatures.

After this it is not surprising that they also killed the Social-Democratic bills to make the blacklisting of employes illegal, to forbid employes of the public utility corporations from holding seats in the legislature, to forbid a former district attorney to defend cases which were instituted while he was in office (thus preventing him from putting at the disposal of the accused all the case against them), to allow counties to bid on a par with other contractors for county work (thus cutting off the contractors' graft), to make it illegal to take testimony from a person within thirty-seven hours after an accident (thus doing away with the testimony of semi-conscious persons, often used by corporation lawyers to dodge damage suits), the bill to provide one day off in every seven for firemen, and other equally good bills.

On the other hand, the "progressive" legislature thought it was safe to show their "progressive" principles by recommending to Congress radical measures, which Congress will surely kill.

Accordingly, the committees reported favorably some of the Social-Democratic joint resolutions asking Congress for certain radical action. Among these are the Social-Democratic resolutions urging Congress to acquire government ownership of coal mines, to acquire all railroads, telephone, telegraph and express lines which may hereafter pass into the hands of receivers, to call a national constitutional convention, and to apply incomes from natural resources on old age pensions.

Perhaps the old party politicians have the notion that these memorials to Congress will soothe the workingmen and make them forget the blows dealt them at closer quarters in the slaughter of the labor bills.

But the Milwaukee workingmen do not forget so easily. They are becoming very class-conscious. Steadily, persistently they are pushing their own political organization, and working hard for a Milwaukee Socialist daily.

Already three of the labor unions of Milwaukee have each subscribed $1,000 for the daily bonds—these being the Machinists, the Brewery Teamsters, and the Beer Bottlers. Many other unions have invested $500. And many others will follow suit.

The unions realize that only in the Socialist press can they find a voice for their demands.

The amount now subscribed for the Milwaukee Socialist daily is now over $22,000. Most of this has been subscribed by Milwaukee workingmen, but they have also had some co-operation from the unions and the Socialists outside of Wisconsin.

After all, the growing class-consciousness of the workingmen is worth all the setbacks and disappointments which they have met on the road to freedom!

OHIO STATE BULLETIN.

(By G. A. Storck, State Secretary.)

Amsterdam, a mining town in Jefferson county, has joined in the fight and we placed another tack on the office map to indicate this fact.

There is nothing more pleasing than the reviewing of Local Cincinnati. The reports are improving with each number of the Bulletin. Watch them grow.

Comrade George J. Prechtel, the hustling financial secretary of Local Cleveland, writes that he wants a handful of report blanks, intimating also that Local Cleveland will have no less than 2,000 members by the first of the year. Comrade Prechtel has made promises before and has never failed.

Comrade Wade Harris, secretary of Local Marietta, is always on the firing line. This is what makes us grow.

Summit Hill keeps adding to its membership, and if we could reckon by percentage the increase is good.

Troy, Ohio, coming into the party organization has added another "tack" to the group on the office map.

Fremont has revived, and promises to be one of the best locals in that territory.

New Boston is growing fast, and this fact pleases its energetic secretary, Comrade Walter R. Smittle.

East Palestine held a debate March 26 between local comrades, and Comrade Firth reports an interesting time.

Canal Dover is going to place a full ticket in the field for the next election. That local will surely make it interesting for the old politicians if they do.

Sandusky has decided to hold meetings and secure able speakers. They are making an effort to redeem Erie county for its "back-sliding" the last campaign.

Local Empire is progressing nicely. They have some good material and the kind that can be relied upon.

By a typographical error the word Kokomo was given to Kenton. The writer is not much of an Indian, but he has a suspicion that Kokomo means prosperity. The article should have read, "Twelve applications coming in bulk to the state office looks as if Kenton is soaring upward at a merry clip." The printer promises to never rely on the proof reader again.

Local Hamilton had proposed a "seal" to use in its official duties and elected a committee of local comrades to attend to procuring of one. It was decided to have the state office produce the article. The committee has been reporting progress for the last six months and this report grew so interesting that many attended the meetings and the local grew. The seal was finally shipped and the committee had to be "fired." We hope there will be no slump in attendance.

Local Canaburg is a new one and we also placed a "tack" to its credit.

Comrade Chas. W. Folts of Galion is much interested in the coming municipal campaign. They evidently want to get it before the people in ample time for due consideration.

Newburg has organized a ward branch. This will no doubt assist greatly as a number have joined who are known to be worthy comrades.

Marysville is adding to its membership continually. They are making a gallant fight in that locality.

Comrade Mrs. Mary McQuistion has taken the place of Comrade Mrs. E. Bachelder, former secretary of local E. Mansfield.

Many Fall River mills were idle last week.

SOCIALISTS ACTIVE AT WHEELING, W. VA.

The Socialists of Wheeling, W. Va., are making a great effort to win the city. The Wheeling majority is publishing a new Socialist paper called "Forward." Thousands of copies are being distributed free.

Comrade A. B. Shinn of this state will speak in Wheeling each night from the 9th to the 25th of May.

Walter R. Helm, editor of the Wheeling Majority, is the nominee on the Socialist ticket for board of control.

DAYTON NOTES.

Efforts are being made by the city committee to secure the following speakers for this summer's work: Victor L. Berger, Edmund T. Melms (a week's work is already assured) and Comrade Gaylord, all of Milwaukee; also Comrades Debs and Irvine, of the Appeal staff. Comrades Strickland and Millard will be engaged for a number of dates, as well as Comrade Shinn, state organizer.

Our headquarters, at 25 and 27 North Main street, is receiving a new coat of paint and the outside appearance is being greatly improved. Our headquarters again becoming too small, we are having an additional room built in the rear in which to store our 500 chairs while not in use, as well as tables, desks, etc.

Seventy-one of the 115 precincts in the city are now thoroughly manned by workers, who every Sunday morning distribute Socialist papers or magazines in their respective territories. We hope within a month or so to have every precinct in the city manned.

LIVE QUESTIONS.

The new alderman, Frank Fitzpatrick, is a tailor. He makes clothes and cleans clothes for a living.

None of the newspapers, however, have spoken of Mr. Fitzpatrick as the tailor-alderman.

When Mayor Seidel's secretary, Walter Stroesser, is mentioned in the papers he is called the tailor-secretary.

It is entirely proper to speak of Mr. Stroesser as the tailor-secretary. He has for many years made his living with the needle, the shears and the

And the tailor-secretary is working for a patternmaker-mayor.

And along with the patternmaker-mayor should be named ditchdigger-president of the common council.

Nor should all this solicitous attention fail to neglect Machinist-Alderman Grass, Cigarmaker-Alderman Ries, Printer-Alderman Welch, Painter-Alderman Minkley, and so on.

Names of this kind give real pleasure to a real workingman.

A real workingman is proud that he is a workingman, a wealth producer, doing the necessary work of the world.

Mr. Fitzpatrick might be insulted if he were called a tailor-alderman.

If he is a real tailor he will feel honored on being called the tailor-alderman.

Clothes are very necessary in the climatic zone in which Milwaukee is located.

Not only is it against the law to go naked. It would also be very uncomfortable. "Clothes make the man" more comfortable and better looking. Tailors are very necessary. We must have clothes.—Social-Democrat Herald.

JAMES ONEAL ELECTED STATE SECRETARY OF INDIANA.

The second ballot in the referendum for the election of state officers of the Socialist party of Indiana has resulted in the election of James Oneal, of this city, as State Secretary-Treasurer. The office effects will be removed from Linton to Terre Haute in a few days, and a room in the rear of the Social Advance office will be rented for state headquarters. The vote on the second ballot is as follows: For secretary-treasurer: James Oneal, 518; William Shefflgr, 327.

THE SAME OLD PLOT.

(By A. M. Simons, in Coming Nation.)

Not even in the details of its devilment is there any originality in the plot to hang the officials of the International Bridge Builders and Structural Iron Workers. The whole scheme is so manifestly copied after the one which failed to hang the officials of the Western Federation of Miners that a large portion of the capitalist press are refusing to be a party to the conspiracy and are pointing out the weakness in the story.

In both cases the unions struck at are those which are closest to the great United States Steel Trust. The Western Federation of Miners was encroaching upon the production of the raw material of that trust. The iron workers were the first to use the finished product.

All organization of labor between these two extremes had already been crushed.

These unions were logically the next to be attacked.

In each case the murderous conspiracy was the climax of a long war. The Mine Owners' Association in the mountain states, and the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association on the Pacific Coast, had fought by every means in its power, including all forms of legal and illegal violence, to crush organization among its workers.

In each case the climax came with a great explosion. In the miners' case this was the Independence depot; with the iron workers, it was the Los Angeles Times.

In the first case the work was done so clumsily that evidence was at once in hand that the mine owners had done the work. Consequently there was no investigation, no prosecution, and the workers who were blown to atoms remain unavenged.

With the Los Angeles Times all evidence points to the explosion being due to gas, and it was, therefore, impossible to fix criminal blame upon the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association.

It made a starting point, however, from which a widely advertised detective could start in his efforts to fix the crime upon union labor.

Here the parallel goes even closer.

McPartland had gained much notoriety from his work against the Mollie McGuires. William J. Burns had been touted for his prosecution of the grafters in San Francisco. McClure's Magazine, the same periodical that published the disgusting mess of lies poured forth by Orchard, has been touting Burns for months.

So the stage was set.

But the parallel would never have been complete without the same illegal kidnaping. So, on a Saturday night, in Indianapolis, just as six years ago on a Saturday night in Denver, a union office was broken into, its head official seized, given no opportunity to appeal to the law, and hurried in secret across the continent.

Such action is a confession of guilt on the part of those responsible for the kidnaping. Burns and those behind him knew that every advantage lay with them in an appeal to the courts. These courts are controlled by the class that Burns represents.

Yet they did not dare to appeal to their own courts. They feared to grant the benefit of even this class-made law to the workers, lest thereby the conspiracy be exposed.

Then came the same weird tales of wholesale dynamiting such as would disgust the reader of a nickel novel.

We are asked to believe that two men, whom Burns himself states knew they were shadowed and had been shadowed for months, were, in spite of that shadowing, carrying suit cases filled with infernal machines about with them waiting for the moment when Burns should wish to arrest them.

We are asked to believe that the president of a great international union engaged in wholesale murder, and kept the instruments of destruction in his office, where they could be seized at any time.

In short, we are asked to believe that these men were at once the most cunning, shrewd and farseeing criminals of the age and, at the same time, the most hopeless fools.

Every force at the command of the capitalist class and at the command of the most powerful forces in modern society, have been marshalled to accomplish the murder of these men.

There is but one force powerful enough to prevent that murder. That force is an aroused working class.

With the memory of what was done in the cases of Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone, the working class is entering upon that fight with a solidarity and a determination that promises victory.

It is natural for the cat to eat the canary and just as natural for the canary to watch itself and prevent the cat from eating it. There is no blame attached to the cat eating the bird or the bird getting eaten. We cannot blame the capitalists for enslaving us, nor blame ourselves for being the victims of our circumstances, but it is up to us to educate ourselves out of our slavery. Socialism is the only way.

QUESTION BOX.

Why, in the case of such men as Roosevelt and Bryan, who are inaugurating poular reforms, does not the Socialist commend such action as tending toward the desired end?

E. L. D., Springfield, O.

"Popular reforms" do not tend toward the end desired by Socialists. On the contrary, their tendency is to delay and temporarily defeat the end for which Socialists are working. The end sought by the Socialist is the co-operative commonwealth; and the establishment of this new system will abolish and displace the present capitalist system of industry. The object of popular reformers is to patch the weak spots in the capitalist system and thereby prolong it.

Reform methods are like those of the physician who would cure scrofula by healing, one at a time, the many sores that appear on the surface, when the proper method would be to cleanse the blood and thereby remove the cause.

The Socialist seeks the origin of social ills and would apply a remedy to the cause rather than waste energy on useless treatment of the effects.

Reformers are generally one-idea people. One reformer fights the liquor traffic, another fights monopolies, and another would purify the slums. While the reformer is busy applying his ointment to the one pimple visible to his shortsightedness, a thousand others are breaking out on the body politic.

Miss Frances E. Willard labored many years to reform the liquor traffic under the conviction that poverty was caused by drink; but, after the heroic struggle of a lifetime, she acknowledged her mistake and said that poverty is not caused by intemperance, but that intemperance is caused by poverty, and that poverty is caused by the prevailing industrial system.

Weary years have been largely wasted by the Grange, the Farmers' Alliance and similar movements to check the growth of monopolies; but monopolies, trusts and mergers have developed with increasing rapidity despite the long and determined opposition. Some have labored under the hallucination that the tariff has been the breeder of monopolies, and have insisted on tariff reform; but the careful observer knows that monopolies have risen and flourished in free trade as well as in protective tariff countries.

Slum cleaning and social settlement work have been systematically organized and carried on for years, with little impression on the miserable thousands ground out in increasing numbers by the mills of Capitalism.

We have learned by experience that patchwork of reform is an endless and hopeless task. The remedy must go deeper than the surface and remove the one cause that produces all these evil conditions. Socialists have the remedy, which is not in a series of popular reforms, but in the revolutionary act by which the working class will secure the use of the land and machinery needed to produce the means of life.

The actions of Roosevelt or Bryan do not tend toward that end. Both are in favor of prolonging the present system that permits the capitalist class to exploit and rob the workers. You should read "Patching the Old Garment," by A. M. Stirton, a pamphlet that shows more fully the difference between the patchwork of reform and the revolutionary principles of Socialism.

HOW TO OBTAIN A WORKING CLASS CONGREGATION —ADIVCE TO PREACHERS.

In the city of Findlay resided an unknown minister, whose name was the Rev. Brother Washington Scott. This character began to preach to his colored brethren in a small store-room. But his eloquence was misunderstood, and the congregation remained very small.

One night one of the inquisitive Socialists dropped into the meeting and, with the twenty other pair of ears, sat and listened to the sermon preached by this now eminent preacher. After the service this unholy Socialist walked up to the colored preacher and said, "You are preaching the real truth. Keep it up, and watch your congregation grow."

The next Sunday the hall was packed to overflowing, and the Findlay Socialists say, "It's the finest they have ever heard." And the good preacher has turned out to be one of those disreputable Socialists also.

What about the other churches They are now building a tabernacle to hold a revival in. They are advertising the man who is to return the sinners to the fold. But the colored comrade just grins.

What about the Socialists of Findlay? Well, they are laying plans to purchase the tabernacle when the white folks get through with it, so that their colored comrade can accommodate his fast growing congregation. Mr. Minister, "Go thou and do likewise." Preach the truth!

Jim Henderson.

A WAIL FROM THE UPPER DOG.

At this age we millionaires and masters seem to be in great disfavor. We do not hesitate to tell you that it is not right that you should have such a bad feeling toward us, for millionaires and masters own the things you need to live upon—that is, the land, the machines, the mines and factories—and we tell you that if we did not own these things, so that you could work for us and use them, you would starve; therefore, you should treat us kindly and be our servants, for, remember, the great book, the Holy Bible, says: "You should obey your masters always and be satisfied, even though your lot be small down here below; remember that your reward in heaven, beyond the pearly gates of that great celestial city, on whose pavements will patter your tiny angel's feet on its cobblestones of solid gold, and from its silvery fauceted fountains your ruby lips will sip sweet nectar and drink unadulterated wines. Here in this land of silent repose after death you will have the pleasures we enjoy alive."

We know our wives and families have the best of the world's goods, while you have not a sufficiency. We live in ease and leisure while you must work. We have all the good things in life, while you and yours are in poverty, but now you should not be angry over these things, for, as we have told you, if we did not own all things so that you could work for us, you would starve; therefore, you see, you are better off even though you must suffer than you would be if we did not own the world, so that you could work for us in order that we might pay you wages.—Murray Youts, Cleveland, O.

Strange, isn't it, Mr. Workman, that the business man will exhaust himself after a few moments with a spade or a hoe? Strange, isn't it, that you will pride yourself upon the fact that you are hardened to such labor, that you are healthy? Your active life does not often pass beyond the fiftieth year. Then you are as much without an income as without a job. If you work you must pass from one cheap grade of labor to a still cheaper one. All this time the business man who was making garden as a diversion is living an active life, growing in influence and importance as time passes. You are a broken machine, often pauperizing a good son or daughter to assist you over the gray years of rheumatism and infirmity. Comrade, prepare now to live for your children and mine, not upon them. Prejudices are the life blood of all organized institutions, but they are very, very poor for men. Let us be men.

In a recent speech in New York, ex-Senator Chauncey Depew said that the renomination of President Taft in 1912 is inevitable. We Socialists are sorry to learn of this. We had about intended to put forth some effort to put the Republican party out of business, and we are indeed sorry to learn that Mr. Taft is going to tend to that job himself.

THE GOOD MAN FALLACY.

(By John M. Work.)

Many voters who have broken away from old party ties have fallen into the error of picking out the good men from all tickets and voting for them. This seems to them to be reasonable.

But it will not hold water.

It will not bear the test of logical examination.

A voter who selects the good men from all tickets and votes for them cancels his own vote, because he votes for the different sets of principles for which the different candidates stand.

When he votes for Republican or Democratic candidates he votes for the continued private ownership of the exploiting industries, which is the thing that enables the capitalists to rob the workers of most of the value of their labor.

When he votes for Socialist candidates he votes for the collective ownership of the exploiting industries—which alone can give the workers the full value of their labor.

And yet he votes for candidates on all these tickets and then boasts about being an independent voter.

The truth is that he is no voter at all, for when he votes for antagonistic sets of principles he cancels his own vote.

Some day, after Socialism has been introduced, and there are no longer any principles involved in the elections, when it is simply a matter of securing the persons best fitted to fill the particular positions, the good man theory will become logical.

But, so long as there are principles involved in the elections, it is utterly illogical.

Every ticket stands for something.

The Republican and Democratic tickets stand for the dominance of the capitalist class. Every candidate on those tickets is pledged to principles which result in the dominance of the capitalist class.

No matter how "good" a candidate may be, he is bound by the principles of his party. He is bound, if elected, to do all in his power to carry out those principles.

It therefore becomes of supreme importance to discover, not whether a candidate is a good man or not, but whether he stands for correct principles or not.

No matter how "good" he may be, if he stands for wrong principles, it is foolish to vote for him.

In any case, in any party, you can rest assured that the candidates as a general rule will be true to the principles of their party if elected. Their political life depends upon it.

Of course we want good men, but principles are the main thing.

With but slight and accidental exceptions the Socialist party always nominates good men.

But we do not ask anybody to vote for them because they are good men.

We do ask everybody to vote for them because they stand for correct principles.

REVIEW OF LEGISLATIVE DOINGS.

The indictment of several members of the legislature and the probable indictment of many more, even though they should be convicted and sent to prison, will not redeem it from the stigma which has been placed upon it; not by reason of the expose, but by the failure to pass legislation in the interest of the people. The insult offered the citizens of the city when they defeated the bill permitting the people to decide for themselves whether they wanted to own the street railways, after their avowed intention and many declarations in favor of home rule should not be forgotten by the people. The party in power also advocated the initiative and referendum, which if adopted would give the people an opportunity to not only undo the crooked work of that body, but pass such legislation as this or any future legislation should fail in. From a comparison of the party platforms with the acts of the legislature one readily understands that their platforms, both Democratic and Republican, were made to get into office on and not to stand on after they got in. This is the real reason why these legislators, who were elected by the people, ostensibly to represent them, when in reality they represent "corporate interests," dare not let the people vote directly on the line.

What relief can the people get by turning out the present reactionary members of the legislature and electing others of the same parties on the same platforms?

In order to cover their ignominy and deceive the people still further, they will probably pass the "non-partisan constitutional delegate" bill, so they can put up "good men" for delegates. There is only one opportunity for the present legislature to redeem itself, and that is to pass a reasonable "initiative and referendum and recall" bill, allowing the people to pass their own laws and thereby indicating that they are willing to let the people govern themselves. But why blame the legislators? They are only trying to keep the rotten old system of capitalism above the surf. We don't know whether we should sympathize with them in their ignorance or condemn them for their cowardice. If they don't know the system is rotten and should be buried, they are entitled to our sympathy, but if they know it, and are too cowardly to aid in its overthrow, they deserve the condemnation of all intelligent people.

Wake up, Mr. Legislator, and either prove you are representing your constituents or remain under the stigma of "corporate control," where you have fallen by your own acts. Don't forget that the present legislature has done its part to convince the people that a change is absolutely necessary, and, while they have played a useful part in the present struggle, they must expect to be cast aside, the same as the old mule which has outlived its usefulness, and give way to the new constructive party which the people are about ready to intrust with the reins of government.

Yours for the co-operative commonwealth,

MARSH C. GREEN.

STATE CONVENTION ADDENDA.

In the report of the Ohio State Socialist Convention, published in The Socialist last week, two important permanent committees were omitted unintentionally.

In order to perfect the organic law of the party and to make its provisions clear and effective, a constitutional committee, consisting of C. E. Ruthenberg, chairman; E. S. Smith, of Warren, secretary; Thomas Williams, of Youngstown; E. B. Eubanks, of Columbus, and William Kensinger, of Barberton, were elected to serve until the next convention and during that time thoroughly revise the state constitution.

The work of outlining a plan of organization and propaganda was turned over to Tom Clifford, Daisy Millard, of Cincinnati, and Josephine Bates, of Toledo, who will report to the State Executive Committee as soon as their work is finished.

WE PROTEST!

We, the mothers of the race, protest against the mobilization of our sons in the Mexican frontier for the purpose either of mimic or of actual warfare.

OUR REASONS FOR THIS PROTEST

We recognize the imperative need of human association, or society, for the development of our individual needs sons and daughters beyond the stage development of our individual sons and daughters beyond the stage structive methods. Mutual kindness and readiness to assist must be the motive and teaching of institutions that build societies of a high order. The education of warriors, and the practices of war, unfold, in the main, the cruel and destructive tendencies. The protection of mere private property interests can not adequately compensate the injury of arrested development which results from a bloody carnival of war.

We, the mothers, abhor the thought of our boys growing into a brutal, murderous, destructive element of society. We protest against a system that makes such a malformation of a civilized society necessary.

We, the mothers, abhor the thought that our children must be divided into warring classes of society. We protest against a system that forces the great mass of our children into ignorant slavery, subject to the domination of mastery by the few.

PROCLAMATION.

We, the mothers of the race, proclaim the dawn of a new day. We bespeak for our children the enlightment that comes from knowledge, the justice that comes from truth. Dark, slavish ignorance is disappearing before the penetrating rays of undeniable fact.

We, the mothers of the race, call upon you, our sons and our daughters, to arouse from your slumbers, and greet the new day. The sun of Human Brotherhood is high in the heavens. We, the mothers, proclaim it.

PROGRESSIVE WOMAN.

WOMEN AND FIRE ESCAPES.

Just before the frightful fire in New York City cost the lives of 145 women and girls, the women's votes at elections in two New York towns were reported to have turned the scale in favor of better fire-protection. Jane Addams says that a very conservative Sicilian woman in her neighborhood was converted to woman suffrage years ago by the need of more fire-escapes in that crowded district of Chicago.—Ex.

Mrs. Ellen Spencer Mussey, a prominent woman lawyer of Washington, D. C., who has just been selected a delegate to the international council of women, which meets in Stockholm, Sweden, next September, is now preparing a synopsis of the laws in the different states pertaining to women. She is the founder of the Washington College of Law.

Mrs. Vandalia Varnum Thomas, widow of Rev. Dr. Hiram W. Thomas, who was pastor of the People's Church from 1880 to 1901, has established a world's peace oratorical prize contest in Alfred University, Alfred, N. Y., in memory of her husband. Dr. Thomas was the president of the first Chicago peace society and took a deep interest in the movement for international peace.

The North Carolina Legislature has passed its first woman suffrage measure. It is an act to authorize a bond issue by Wrightsville Beach, the Wilmington seaside resort, for installing a more extensive sewerage system. The act provides that in the election every woman owning property on the beach shall have a vote. Perhaps the members of the Legislature had heard how the women of New Orleans and Baton Rouge carried the elections for improved sewerage in those cities. North Carolina has no suffrage association, although the movement has become so active in the adjoining State of Virginia. But in these days woman suffrage is in the air.—Ex.

Mrs. John A. C. Menton was elected to the school board of Flint, Michigan, April 3rd, on the Socialist ticket. Her husband was elected mayor on the same ticket.

Comrade A. B. Shian has returned from a successful trip through West Virginia and Pennsylvania, and organized locals at Bailey's Mills, Barnesville and Washington C. H.

GENERAL LABOR NEWS.

Springfield, Ohio, retail grocery clerks have secured a promise of half holidays during the months of June, July and August.

Ninety per cent. of the railway mail clerks are in favor of joining the American Federation of Labor. The 10 per cent. objecting, it is averred, are but tools of officials and petty officials.

The New Encyclopedia Britannica, touted in advertisements of the big magazines and newspapers as the biggest educational thing yet, will be printed at the R. R. Donnelly Sons' company's plant in Chicago. This plant is the "rattiest" printing joint ever.

The new Werner Company, successors to the defunct Werner Company, it is announced, will follow the plans of the old concern of antagonizing organized labor.

The tobacco trust makes it a practice to hire girls and women wherever possible. They have a school in which girls pay $5 for tuition and get no wages for months. Each week she gets a certificate entitling her to $1 six months later. This is a warning to smokers of non-union cigars.

A strike of 10,000 freight handlers is threatened as the result of the action of the Railroad Managers' Association in refusing to meet the wage scale committee of the freight handlers. The strike will effect all the roads in the East having terminals in Chicago.

The old agreement expired on April 30, and the men have presented their demands for a new agreement. The men are demanding 20 per cent. increase in wages, a ten-hour day for freight handlers, a nine-hour day for clerks and yard clerks, double time for overtime and half holiday on Saturdays with full pay for all men.

In addition to this, all fruit handlers who are called to work before 7 o'clock are to receive 50 per cent. increase in wages.

The men sent their demands to the Railroad General Managers' Association and demanded a conference. The managers refused to meet the men, and a strike ballot was decided upon.

Cleveland carpenters get 45 cents an hour.

Milwaukee painters will get $5 a day May 1.

PRINTERS' UNION SUPPORTS M'NAMARAS.

Protest has been made by Columbus Typographical Union, No. 5, against the alleged abduction of the McNamara brothers by Burns detectives who charged them with complicity in the Los Angeles Times dynamite outrage, at their meeting Sunday. Resolutions were adopted calling upon Ohio congressmen to support a measure calling for a thorough investigation of the arrests in Indianapolis.

Acting upon a recommendation from President Lynch of the International Typographical Union, the Columbus local contributed $5 to a fund for the defense of the McNamaras. With 1,100 locals it is expected that the international will be a large contributor to the defense fund.

Nominations were made for the offices in the local union as follows: For president, John Hayden; for vice president, Cord and Dix; for secretary-treasurer, William E. Bird and Thos. Brophy; for sergeant-at-arms, A. N. Rice; for conductor, Fred Irwin; delegates to the international convention in San Francisco in August, Bert Brown and Charles Drumm.

M'NAMARA WAS KIDNAPED.

Despite efforts of the public press to hush up the McNamara kidnaping by assuring us that the Iron Workers will be given justice, Indianapolis unionists have unearthed a plot that is pure and simple kidnaping, and which justifies all friends of liberty to raise the warning cry.

It is now known that Detective Burns secured a warrant from Governor Marshall April 22, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon.

Burns did not serve the warrant until nearly 6 in the evening, when McNamara was smuggled away from his office, his private papers confiscated, and his safe blown open, despite his protests and his demand for an attorney.

The warrant, made out in regular form, called for the delivery of McNamara to either a circuit or superior court judge for identification as a fugitive from justice, but, instead, Burns hurried McNamara to a convenient police judge, one Collins, WHO HAD NO LEGAL RIGHT TO HEAR THE CASE.

Prosecutor Baker, of Indianapolis, announces that when McNamara was taken before Collins for a hearing on the question of identification, it was the duty of the police judge to notify the prosecuting attorney.

The prosecuting officer cites Indiana revised statutes, section No. 1895, which declares that a sheriff or constable making the arrest shall take the fugitive before the circuit or superior court. No reference is made to a city court, and Indianapolis lawyers agree with Baker that Police Judge Collins acted without jurisdiction, and, as the proceedings were illegal, McNamara was kidnaped.

Every day brings fresh evidence that a conspiracy existed, and that law was set aside by the hirelings of the manufacturers. It is pointed out that the Indiana law provides that, after a warrant has been issued by the governor, AND AFTER THE PROPER COURT HAS ACTED ON THE CASE, THE WARRANT SHALL BE RETURNED TO THE STATE HOUSE, and there filed for record purposes. Instead, it is found that the warrant is not in the possession of any Indianapolis official. This was brought out by the Indiana secretary of state making formal demand on several officials who denied all knowledge of the document and who agree that Burns carried the warrant to California.

The investigation fully convicts Police Judge Collins of having a share in the conspiracy. This discovery was made by a written statement of the clerk of the Indianapolis city court, who noticed that when the police judge made a record of the case, three days after the kidnaping, or on April 25, at 11:45 a. m., the document bore the date of April 22. The clerk made a notation to this effect, and the dispenser of "justice" is known that he never intended to file the document, but the storm of protest over the outrage forced him to change.

Reports from Indianapolis show that every lawyer in that city, regardless of their views on the labor question, agree McNamara was railroaded out of the state by high-handed methods, and that a police judge has no jurisdiction in the case. These lawyers also agree that the time has passed for any effort to secure McNamara's return to Indiana, although this would have been possible if Burns and his victim were stopped by habeas corpus proceedings anywhere this side of California. But once they stepped foot in California this plan must be abandoned. It is now evident that Burns feared this move, as he depended on an automobile to clear the state boundary.

It is agreed that the fight must now be transferred to California, and outside the moral effect of showing how McNamara was kidnaped, the question of how he got into the state will not enter the case.

One Indianapolis lawyer put it thus: "McNamara is legally within the California jurisdiction NOW; how he got there is no longer a question in the case."

All this the kidnapers knew.

They were well aware that if McNamara were accorded his rights—if he was taken before a proper court and the law complied with—his public outcry for an attorney would have to be heeded. This would block the detectives' plans, who were determined to get him into California, and did not allow any law or right to stand in their way.

STATE BRANCH OF BARBERS TO MEET AT COLUMBUS.

The Ohio State Branch of Barbers are to meet in Columbus, Ohio, May 15, to take up matters relative to legislation and other things pertaining to the craft.

The Ohio state branch was organized for the purpose of securing legislation, enactment of a license law for barbers, and providing for a state board of examiners to co-operate with the boards of health of cities, seeking to prevent incompetent barbers from working at the trade and maintaining of unclean and unsanitary barbers shops.

LABOR LEGISLATION.

The assembly has at last set a date for adjournment, May 15, and, notwithstanding the graft scandal, the subsequent resignation of the calendar committee and the appointment of the following new one—Russell, Gotshall, Combs, Gibbs, Langdon; Crist and Friebolin—labor bills still remain unpassed. We have some very good men on that committee, but the majority have persisted in holding up the woman's nine-hour bill and other important labor measures.

I want to say here and now that the working people of Ohio have the right to expect the passage of the bills we are asking for, not only on the grounds of platform and campaign pledges, but on the grounds of common humanity and justice, and I want to say further we shall know who to hold responsible if these measures are not put on their passage and favorable action taken before adjournment. We shall have every man's name who votes against these just and humane bills and we shall act accordingly. We have been not only courteous and fair, but exceedingly patient, and now we want our just reward.

We are asking for the passage of S. B. No. 11, Mr. Green, i. e., the Nine Hour Bill; S. B. No. 15, by the same author, which provides for a non-partisan constitutional convention; and also the following senate bills, which have for their object the safe guarding and protecting of our people who toil in the workshops and factories, in the mines, and in the various industries of our state, and to the name of all that is fair are we not entitled to and does not the people of the state need such laws in the interest of common justice and humanity; we think so; S. B. No. 116, Mr. Frazer; S. B. No. 109, Mr. Cetone; S. B. 110, 103 and 124, by Mr. Hudson; S. B. 104 and 111, Mr. Reynolds, and all other bills of like character.

The Compensation Bill is in the hands of the followinge conferenc committee: Senators Green, Reynolds and Bader, and Representatives Kimble, Cathon and Lowry of Henry. Now, brothers, only a few more days remain, and for the sake of the workers, their wives and children, write to both the committee and your representatives, urging that they give their earnest support to these measures. Do not forget the short time in which we have to work.

Fraternally,
IKE S. BYRUM,
Legislative Agent, Ohio State Federation of Labor.

SOCIALIST WILL AID M'NAMARA.

At the session of the National Executive Committee Socialist party, in Boston the early part of last week, it was unanimously voted to extend moral and financial support to the structural iron workers. A telegram was sent to President F. Ryan, of the Iron Workers, reading as follows:

"The National Executive Committee of the Socialist party offers the entire power of its 4,000 organizations and its press, consisting of ten dailies, over 100 weeklies and ten monthlies in all languages to be used in the defense of the McNamaras and any other help within our power."

A communication was also addressed to the locals of the Socialist party, condemning the arrest of the men as "suggesting a deliberate plot," claiming the prosecution of the men was "inspired by the National Manufacturers' Association," and that the whole affair was "a dastardly conspiracy on the part of organized capital in this country." Telegrams were also sent to J. J. McNamara, in the Los Angeles jail, and to the latter's mother in Cincinnati urging to remain cheerful and hopeful, as the American people would be aroused and see that justice was done.

ON THE ROAD.

Findlay is a live town for Socialism. Comrade Kelley, the tailor, appears to [illegible] the position of information agent. Judging by the discussion that takes place in Kelley's tailor shop we are led to believe that, as a public forum, it will mean much toward placing a few Socialists in the Findlay city government.

Claude Ferguson, the blind organizer, was just starting out for Illinois to do work for the Findlay Publishing Company. Comrade Nichley is one of the coolest thinkers, and a comrade who will be on the firing line until the last gun has been fired.

The night meeting was held in the hall furnished and leased by the comrades, and every seat held an eager listener. Local Findlay will some day be doing things, and they deserve to. Their principal aim is organization. Findlay has one of the best educated colored ministers, a party member. On Sunday nights, white and colored go to this eloquent comrade's church to hear him expound the real gospel of Christ, and that's Socialism. The comrade can be secured for Columbus speaking dates.

Fostoria opened with a street meeting. Comrade Hollenbaugh introduced the speaker, and it would have pleased the writer better if his introducer had continued the speech for the evening. Comrade Hollenbaugh ought to be on the road. He has the "Farm Problem and Socialism", down to a science. We need him and his lecture right now. "Hollenbaugh, of Fostoria," will be remembered by the delegates to our recent state convention.

The writer spoke Sunday, and the attention given to the speakers makes even non-Socialists realize that the public is thinking. The legislature graft fiasco is causing widespread astonishment, and we seemingly hear the people sigh, "How long, Oh Lord! art thy people to be oppressed?"

The Flint Glass Workers' Union is strong here, and they are hard workers in both the labor and Socialist movement. The comrades express sympathy for Comrade Strickland, and wish him speedy recovery.

The Signs of the Times.

Empty homes, empty store-rooms and empty cupboards cause even the non-Socialists to think. The factories are blowing the starting and stopping whistles on time—but it's a bluff, for the great majority are working two days per week. Every commercial drummer is a walking delegate for the Socialist party. Why? Because of the signs of the times.

HENDERSON.

NEGRO RESOLUTION OF NATIONAL SOCIALIST PARTY.

Resolved, That we, the Socialists of America, in national convention assembled, do hereby assure our negro fellow-workers of our sympathy with him in his subjection to lawlessness and oppression, and also assure him of the fellowship of the worker who suffers from the lawlessness and exploitation of capital in every nation or tribe of the world; be it further

Resolved, That we declare to the negro worker the identity of his interests and struggles with the interests and struggles of the workers of all lands, without regard to race or color or sectional lines; that the causes which have made him the victim of social and political inequalities are the effects of the long exploitation of his labor power; that all racial and race prejudices spring from the ancient economic causes which still endure to the misery of the whole human family; that the only line of division which exists in fact is that between the producer and the owners of the world—between capitalism and labor; and, be it further

Resolved, That we, the American Socialist party, invite the negro to membership and fellowship with us in the world's movement for economic emancipation, by which equal liberty and opportunity shall be secured to every man, and fraternity become the order of the world.

THE CROWNING INFAMY OF OHIO'S LEGISLATURE.

The Columbus Chamber of Commerce will get the $6,181.80 which it is alleged was advanced to the sheriff of Franklin county to pay deputies during the street car strike last summer. This is the rottenest bill that has been jammed through the rottenest legislature that ever met in Ohio. The street car strike of last year was a reign of terror and the terrorists were the hired sluggers of the Rail-Light, the soldiers under Captain Bush, and the deputies hired by the Chamber of Commerce. Inoffensive people, in their own homes, were assaulted by these thugs, women and girls insulted; people killed and maimed for life, and the Chamber of Commerce, the city authorities and the courts protect the fiends who did their dirty work. Then comes the Ohio legislature to crown the infamy.

LEGISLATIVE TEETH PULLING.

The "teeth" have been pulled from the public utilities bill now before the Ohio legislature, and another setback given to so-called "progressive" legislation. The members of the general assembly seem disposed to be true to their capitalistic masters rather than to the people. One solon, Mr. Doster, sounded the keynote when he said, "To h—l with public opinion." Gentlemen of the assembly, you are going down the chute to the place to which you would like to see public sentiment go.

STILL PROBING GRAFT.

The grand jury is still probing legislative graft, and the state senate has selected a committee to investigate itself. One senator charges that one of Burns' detectives is an ex-convict. The general opinion is that there will be a general whitewash of all concerned in the infamous business. The reputation of the detectives is even worse than that of some of the legislators, and that is bad enough.

The dogs of the rich have much better care than the children of the poor. And the poor people have the most votes and vote to have it this way.

Lest you forget! There was an insurgent Republican governor at one end and a progressive Democratic governor at the other end of the latest kidnaping conspiracy? Let that burn your think tank for a little while.

A DISTRESSING EVIL.

Oh, could there in this world be found,
Some little spot of happy ground
Without the village tattling.
—Holmes.

Women need the ballot. They should in justice be given the ballot to free them from the many evils of the present industrial system; slave-labor, poverty, ignorance, misery, sorrow, starvation and crime, but above all these evils I would say, give women the ballot mainly to free them from the much indulged in evil of gossip. An interest in civic affairs would give to women a clearer vision, their hearts would beat to the music of bigger and grander themes and there would be no time, no room in their lives, and no desire to indulge in this most distressing evil known to womankind—idle gossiping.

Professor Edward Howard Griggs says: "Three-fourths of the gossip in the world is peddled by women." Unfortunately this is true of the sex largely the world over. His remedy is to educate women so that they have other and wider interests. Exactly so! Educate women along the lines that men have been educated and gossip will become a lost art along with the burning of human beings for witches and other cruel tortures. Men as a rule do not gossip, and it is because they have always enjoyed the wider interests which have given them a larger perspective and a better understanding of life, which in turn has taught them to be less critical and far more charitable in judgment against their fellow men.

Many women are gossips, not because they wish to harm or injure, not because in their hearts they are malicious; but because they have allowed the pernicious practice to become a fixed habit, and the gossip habit grows marvelously fast and soon becomes a formidable master.

Why should women be so ready to form a habit that brings misery to their sisters and works harm upon themselves?

Recently a women in an Ohio town died, and her death the physician declared was hastened by worry caused by the cruel gossip among her neighbors. Thus one poor woman's life paid the penalty for the empty clatter of half a dozen neighbors who could have been more wisely employed in studying how best to improve conditions under which they are living—for conditions are far from ideal. Even the much lamented bridge would in comparison to this crime, have been a shining virtue. The bridge player developes a "bridge frown" that mars only their own faces, and the bridge player may lose money—that can be won back or earned again. The gossip often takes from another that which is beyond price and which in many instanc a can never be redeemed.

No doubt many a sensitive, innocent soul has died unable to bear the torture of gossip. But what of the countless thousands who live and are victims of this evil? A little word dropped, however slight, and friendship afterward becomes stilted and strained. The victim senses the little rift within the lute and knows, but does not know where it has started or where if will end.

And if one is guilty of the charges, you ask? Then in the midst of the turmoil about you, all the more eloquent should your silence in the matter "like a benediction come to heal the blows of sound," for the gossip sound is a blow against frail humanity which wounds to the quick. Longfellow very beautifully in his tender way gives a little sermon on the subject that should be read by every woman in the land—especially if she be inclined to pass harsh judgment or gossip about the frailties of her sisters. "The little I have seen of the world," he says, "and know of the history of mankind, teaches me to look upon the errors of others in sorrow, not in anger. When I take the history of one poor heart that has sinned and suffered, and represent to myself the struggles and temptations it has passed, the feverish inquietude of hope and fear, the tears of regret, the feebleness of purpose, the pressure of want, the desertion of friends; the scorn of a world that has little charity, the desolation of the soul's sanctuary and the threatening voices within, health gone, happiness gone, even hope that stays longest with us, gone,—I have little heart for aught else than thankfulness that it is not so with me, and would fain leave the erring soul of my fellow man with Him from whom it came."

An "Anti-Gossip Club" has been organized in theatrical circles. Miss Close, a vaudeville singer who is the organizer of this unique feature of club, believes that gossip has done more to harm the reputation of the actor today than have all other forces combined. She is of the opinion that if stage people themselves would stop gossiping, the general public would follow suit, and many reputations might be saved, where now the dear public finds such keen delight in besmirching them. "Gossip," she says, "is common in our profession. It has separated oldtime friends and has even caused lovers to walk the path of life alone. Why should it not be cured?"

Such a club in every community would be a blessing to humanity and tend to hasten the coming of the millennium.

The story is told of a Roman Catholic girl who confessed to the sin of slanderous gossip. Her confessor bade her go and bring him a ripe thistle bloom which he afterwards pulled from the stem and cast upon the winds. He then commanded the girl to go and gather all the fleeting down for him. This she could not do, and her confessor showed her that neither could she go and gather the words of her gossip back unto herself, for, like the thistle on the winds, they had been spread from mouth to mouth and the evil of their deed could never be righted.

Women themselves must wipe out the gossip curse. If gossip-loving women were shunned by the broader minded ones, they might discover the cause and reform. A woman deteriorates when she permits daily a number of idle tales to filter through her brain. She listens to them and then dwells upon their empty substance, when, after all, she is responsible for the actions of just one individual in the whole universe, herself. By and by she stops growing intellectually, there is no progress, and life for her becomes, instead of a great boundless realm of opportunity, a pigmy, miniature worldkin, filled with little thoughts and narrow deeds.

Carthage fell because Roman mothers taught their children to say it must, and so women today must unite in saying gossip must cease, and cease it will. With so many broad and vital subjects before us for study and discourse, the gossip is an inexcusable relic of a by-gone day and has no place in our new era, the woman era, which demands only the highest and best type of womanhood.

ANNIE MINTURN.

A young lady having asked a surgeon why woman was made from the rib of a man in preference to any other bone, he gave the following gannant answer: "She was not taken from the head, lest she would rule over him; nor from his feet, lest he would trample upon her; but she was taken from his side, that she might be his equal; from under his arm, that he might protect her; from near his heart, that he might cherish and love her.—Ex.

FLEURETTE.

(By Carolyn Wells.)

I cannot wear the old gown
I wore a year ago,
The styles are so eccentric,
And fashion changes so;
These bygone gowns are out of date
(There must be nine or ten.)
I cannot wear the old gowns.
Nor don those frocks again.

I cannot wear the old gowns,
The skirts are far too tight;
They do not flare correctly, and
The trimming isn't right.
The Spanish flounce is fagotted,
The plaits are box, not knife;
I cannot wear the old gowns,
I'd look like Noah's wife.

I cannot wear the old gowns,
The sleeves are too absurd;
They're tightly fitted at the top,
And at the wrist they're shirred.
The shoulder seams are far too long,
The collars too high-necked;
I cannot wear my old gowns
And keep my self-respect.

VICTOR HUGO ON WOMAN.

You gaze at a star for two motives because it is luminous and because it is impenetrable. You have by your side a sweeter radiance and greater mystery—woman.

The world was sad, the garden was a wild,
And man, the hermit, sighed, till woman smiled. —Milton.

Mrs. J. Jung, a graduate of the Canton Normal school, and Miss D. Loo, graduate of the University of California, addressed a revolutionary meeting under the auspices of the young China party of San Francisco recently, urging their male hearers to take up arms for a republic in China. The young women were cheered during their appeals, after which the audience joined in singing the Chinese Marseillaise, "Chuong Gwan."

THE RAINBOW.

(By Sophie Reinheimer, from "Die Gleichheit.")

Mother Sun was having a hard time of it. Heavy gray raineloude hung in the heavens, since early morning. She could not find the tiniest crack through which she could have looked down upon the earth.

But behind this wall of clouds stood more than a thousand little sunbeams, in their golden shirts, and were very cross because they could not get down. "Will you leave those clouds in peace," scolded old Mother Sun, as a few mischievous rays tickled the clouds to make them go away. "You should be glad that the poor thirsty earth is getting something to drink; you heard yourselves how everything was drying up, and soon the poor people will have nothing to eat. Would you like that?"

"No," said the rays, a little shamefacedly.

"But why must we stay at home whenever it rains. Why can't there be rain and sunshine at the same time."

"You foolish children. Why, you would dry up everything that the rain had wet, and then it would have been entirely useless."

The rays had to admit that of course, but they were far from satisfied. They thought it would be charming to go down to earth with the rain-drops.

They hardly knew them, the little rain-drops. They were not allowed to play together on the earth, and up in the sky the little rain-drops were always locked up in the great thick clouds. In fact, some of the little rays didn't even know how rain-drops looked.

"Do they wear pretty dresses like ours?" they asked.

"Dear me, no, they have no dresses at all. They are just rain-drops."

The rays who said this had once been down on the earth shortly after a rain shower. They had seen a few drops falling from the trees.

"No colors? How uninteresting," said the others. "I suppose, then, they look like dew-drops?"

"That's right, just like dew-drops."

"Oh! Oh!" cried a beautiful golden sunray. "Dew-drops, I know them."

"Early yesterday morning when I was shining on the meadow there was a dew-drop on every blade of grass. And when I went near them and my golden sun-dress touched the little drops they suddenly glittered in all colors, red, orange, yellow, green, blue, violet. It was beautiful."

"I'll tell you what we'll do!" cried one who was particularly clever. "If the dew-drops, who after all are only water-drops, shine in such beautiful colors when we touch them, then the rain-drops will also. Let us go down and bring them beautiful dresses, out that they almost forgot to rain."

"How do you do? We want to play with you," said the little rays.

"What do you want to play?" asked the drops.

"Let us build a bridge."

"We do not know how. You will have to show us."

"Yes, yes!—just hang on to our skirts, we will show you. But quick, before Mother Sun sees us!" said the naughty rays.

The drops did as they were told, and behold what was that? Suddenly everything shone in the most beautiful colors. Red, orange, yellow, green, blue, violet. It was a beautiful sight. They had built a bridge, so beautiful, so glorious, as no builder on earth had ever made one.

And when the people on earth, who had been forced to look at a gray sky all day, suddenly saw the beautiful colors they were greatly delighted.

"A rainbow, a rainbow! Look children, come to the window! But quick, quick, before it disappears."

HONESTY.

(Written for The Socialist by Thomas A. Pugh.)

I met a lad with features sad,
Asked him his name and age;
"Twelve years I'll be next June," said he.
"My name is Howard Page."

I said, "Quite well! Proceed and tell
Me something of your home:
A moment spare, dismiss dull care—
Explain why thus you roam."

His satchel placed he on the ground,
And from it withdrew flowers—
Two wreaths of sweetest marigolds—
Plucked from the dewy bowers.

"My father died when I was six,
As did my brother Ray,
Once happy home is grief and gloom,"
The lad went on to say.

"Mother and I are all that's left
Of home once bright and dear;
This day—the anniversary—
Is saddest of the year.

"I'm going now with these two wreaths,
To place them on their graves;
Then I will sing my favorite hymn,
'Jesus saves, Jesus saves!'"

Then, purposely, I dropped a coin
Close to him on the ground;
And bade the lad a kind adieu,
Then turned myself around.

I was descending the next hill,
On my way to Carlisle;
The lad drew near with words sincere,
And spoke in boyish style:

"Sir, here's a coin which I picked up
From ground where we had stopped;
I had but one; I'm sure it is
The one which you had dropped."

"You are an honest lad," I said
"I'll give you that, and more;
Keep always honesty in mind,
And have pure thoughts in store."

He tucked both coins into his purse,
And made me understand
That honesty, unfeigned and pure,
Makes us all noble, grand.

So, when we took our leave again,
He seemed a different boy;
We both were in great ecstasy—
Our hearts were filled with joy.

Now Howard Page is of full age,
Was honest when quite young;
He took advice and heeded the
Counsel of a wise tongue.

The moral is: More honesty,
Here, now and ev'rywhere;
The harvest reap from what was sown,
All clean, pure—not a tare.

WOMAN'S RIGHTS.

(From Depew's Birthday Speech.)

The most beneficent of the changes which have occurred during my time have been the laws granting rights to women. In my earlier days a woman's property was her husband's, his debts were hers, and it was not until 1848 that she could have her independent possessions, or safety in any business she might undertake. It was still later that she was accorded the privilege of a higher education and her intellectual necessities as well as ability considered to be fully equal to men's. As I used to travel through the country on railway-inspection trains, I noticed at every station a crowd of idlers. They knew the names of the trains, of the conductors, and of the engineers, and were eager to tell the waiting traveler whether umber Two was late or The Empire State Express on time. I noticed that they disappeared at noon and about six. Upon inquiry, I found that they were supported by their wives. These capable, hard-working, energetic women were dressmakers or milliners or kept little stores, and their worthless husbands hung around the depot because they had no other means of passing away their time unless the circus was in town or elections in progress, and turned up invariably for meals which had been earned by the wife. This experience has done more than all things else to bring me toward woman suffrage, for in all these cases she is assuredly the better half.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE IN THE FAMILY LIFE.

Of the effect of woman suffrage in home life Alice Stone Blackwell writes to the New York Sun:

"Ex-Governor Adams of Colorado contributes to the Pueblo Star Journal an article in reply to a recent criticism of equal suffrage. Mr. Adams says: "Equal suffrage has not disrupted the Colorado family; rather it has unified the family. Political equality gives another bond of mutual interest. Tolerance comes where rights are held in common.

"The discussion of civic and political questions is beneficial to parents and children. It is a new theme. My criticism would be that many families do not discuss these matters enough. The home that does talk about political affairs is a bettter home, a more sympathetic home, than where conversation is devoted to gossip and the frailties of neighbors.

"Suffrage adds no new arrow to the quiver of family discord. Eight times out of ten the wife votes as her husband, but the fact that she can be independent and vote differently if she so pleases, adds to her importance as a factor in the family. She is held in higher respect. Her new power is a salve and not an irritant."

"I hear that you are married, Chloe?" "Yes'm; I's married." "And are you happily married?" "Oh, yes'm; I's happily married; Sam gets me lots of washin'."—Yonkers Statesman.

THE ADVANCE OF THE MACHINE.

A recent issue of "The Bakers' Journal contained the following account of the inroads which machinery is making into the bakery trade:

During the last session of the General Executive Board all the members of that body had an occasion to visit one of the most modern plants in the baking industry of Chicago, a plant, equipped from top to bottom with the latest machinery invented.

The thoughts, which struck us, during the inspection of that plant, were of a varied nature and the pictures, we painted in our mind, were both of a pleasant and of an unpleasant character.

Pleasant were the pictures showing the worker as the master of the machine and very unpleasant indeed was the scene depicting the workers as the slaves of their "iron colleague."

The modern equipment of the plant singled out for our inspection, certainly proved our often repeated assertion that the introduction of machinery in the bakeshops has made never-expected rapid strides during the last few years.

The operation of machinery in our industry, especially in cities, where more ample forms have been adopted for the baked goods, has now taken on the most threatening propostions, forcing us to consider in the most serious and earnest manner all questions in connection with the further development of the machine as the irresistible competition of the skilled baker.

skiled baker.

The questions: "What will the future bring?" is one of great importance to the bakery workers and should be considered by them now more thoroughly than ever before. Our actions should be based upon this consideration.

In the large cities such as New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Cleveland and others the machine production in bakeries has not alone thrown hundreds of bakery workers out of employment, but has at the same time reduced the value of a skilled worker to a small minimum.

The defects, which are today found on machines used in the production of baked goods are being eliminated and without interruption their perfection is looked after.

Every further improvement of the machine in the baking industry makes a large number of men useless, decreases the value of skilled labor and restricts the same to employment in the small bakeshops, which are the remnants of a system of production of bygone years.

The bones of the workers become cheaper by the introduction of machine production, but the danger of mutilation becomes evermore greater. Hundreds of bakery workers, who have been crippled while engaged in a bread factory can be seen in the large cities, thereby showing the presence of the "iron colleague."

Furthermore, the numerous unemployed who may be seen about the boarding houses and employment bureaus give also proof of the same "iron colleague's" presence.

Flesh and blood of the worker has decreased in value and in most instances the bread factory owner is more interested in the caretaking of his new machine than in the welfare of his employes.

The machine must be kept in first-class order, the keeping of the workers does not enter his mind. This undeniable fact alone gives proof that the existing condition can not give the worker any guarantee for the future, even when he doggedly carries out the orders of the boss and keeps away from the union and does everything in order to please his employer.

There is but one safeguard for the bakery worker, only one way which will pave for him the road into a better future and guarantee him an existence and that is the organization of all wage workers who are suffering under the oppression of the capitalist system of today.

What shall be done against these appearances in the present system of society? This great question involves in truth the solution of the social problem and will result in the taking possession of all means of production.

In view of the conditions pictured in the foregoing, the bakery workers must, as already stated, give their future earnest consideration and attend to everything that is required for their

It would be false beginning were we to declare the machines as such to be at fault for the conditions. That they have become a curse instead of a blessing to the workers is not the fault of the machines or their inventors, but the fault of those in possession of these machines, for they exploit them for private profit and not for the benefit of the workers.

A great deal more could be said regarding this question, the solution of which must be accomplished by those who create all values and useful articles, by taking possession of the tools of production.

All that can be done under existing conditions until the goal is reached is to prevent the damaging influence of the monopolized system of production from taking too much from the workers by a strong organization.

THE ARIZONA CONSTITUTION.

(William E. Bohn.)

President Taft may not be a great man nor a very wise one, but in one respect he is serving his masters well. All the dogged inertia of his conservative nature is set against the admission of Arizona into the union.

The people of Arizona chose representatives to a constitutional convention. After long debate a constitution was formulated. It was submitted to vote. The people of Arizona approved of it. The people of Arizona, it is to be supposed, know what they want.

But before Arizona can become a member of our sisterhood of states it must be admitted by Congress and the President. The latter has given the world to understand that he will never consent to the admission of Arizona so long as she insists on bringing with her the constitution which her people have adopted.

The people of Arizona have said: We wish to govern ourselves in accordance with such and such regulations. Mr. William Howard Taft answers: In virtue of my office as president of the United States I decide that you shall not govern yourselves in accordance with these regulations but in accordance with certain others which I prefer.

A free country? certainly. Ask the next Fourth of July orator who happens along.

Now just what is it in the proposed constitution of Arizona that President Taft objects to? What is the particular form of wickedness on which the people of this promising territory have set their hearts? Do they wish to legalize burglary? Do they want to break up the home? No, no; something much worse. The constitution adopted by the inhabitants of Arizona provides that judges may be removed from office by a new election held in pursuance of a recall petition signed by not less than 25 per cent. of the voters. This is wickedness indeed!

There is nothing in the recall of judges contrary to the constitution of the United States. The President merely disapproves of it. And his disapproval is hailed with joy by conservatives of every brand. "A Daniel! A Daniel come to judgment!" they cry with one voice.

Any form of recall, the recall of anybody or anything, is held to be contrary to the "American" principle of representative government. The argument runs something like this: All power resides in the people; but a long time ago, when there were only 4,000,000 inhabitants in the United States and only 120,000 of these had the franchise, it was decided that for all time the American people shall exercise their sovereign power only in certain ways. For one thing, we are told, it was decided that "down to the last syllable of recorded time" the United States and every part thereof shall have a representative form of government. To be sure nothing like this was put into the constitution. But the constitution does not contain provisions for a representative national government, and so we are to take for granted that any form of government not representative is "un-American," hence wicked.

Now what is representative government? Representative government substitutes for a king whom you have for life a miscellaneous lot of kings whom you have for a year, or two years, or four. You are supposed to have sufficient wisdom to choose them in the first place; but after they are once chosen they might as well be the Pope of the great Chasm. Who are you that you should meddle with them? Through the operation of some black art your wisdom goes out of you as the sun sets on election day.

Representative government, then, means that the people rule on election days and somebody else rules in between. That is what President Taft stands for. It is because he wishes to keep this system in vogue that he opposes the admission of Arizona to the union.

Just why is it that President Taft fears to allow the people to rule? What does he think they will do? Who is it that will suffer from their control of affairs? This is a matter worth looking into.

Incidentally it may be remarked that there is just one political party in the United States in favor of making it possible to recall any and all public officials. There is one party, and only one in favor of government by the people. You can discover the name and principles of this party by attending the next Socialist meeting held in your neighborhood.

"As a man soweth, so shall he reap." Very true, and he will have to do both jobs for 17½ cents of the dollar. While his masters will get the 82½ cents on the dollar without soiling their soft hands by doing either the sowing or the reaping.

"Belief" implies doubt. Socialists want nothing to do with it. "Science," which implies positive knowledge, is the stronghold of the Socialists. Science accomplishes where "belief" and "faith" are still "waiting" and "hoping" and "trusting" and "praying" for results.

St. Louis is to have a new steel rolling mill.

What Socialism Stands For.

Human life depends upon food, clothing and shelter. Only when these are assured are freedom, culture and higher human development possible. To produce food, clothing and shelter, land and machinery are needed. Land by itself does not satisfy human needs. Human labor gets raw materials and food out of the soil by creating machinery and using it upon the land. Whoever has control of land and machinery has control of human labor, and with it of human life and liberty.

Today the machinery and the land used for industrial purposes are owned by a rapidly decreasing minority. So long as machinery is simple and easily handled by one man it does not make its owners so powerful that they can dominate the sources of life of others. But when machinery becomes more and more complex and expensive, and requires for its effective operation the organized effort of many workers, its influence reaches over wider circles of life. The owners of such machinery become the dominant class.

The Masses in Subjection.

In proportion as the number of such machine owners compared to all other classes decreases, their power in the nation and in the world increases. They bring ever larger masses of working people under their control, reducing them to the point where muscle and brain are their only productive property. Millions of formerly self-employing workers thus become the helpless wage slaves of the industrial masters.

The more the economic power of the ruling class grows, the less useful does it become in the life of the nation. The overwhelming bulk of the useful work of the nation falls upon the shoulders of the classes that either have no other productive property but their manual and mental labor power the wage workers — or that have but little land and little machinery outside of their labor power—the small traders and small farmers. The ruling minority is steadily becoming useless and parasitic.

A bitter struggle over the division of the products of labor is waged between the exploiting propertied class, on the one hand and the exploited, propertyless class on the other. In this struggle the wage working class cannot expect adequate relief from any reform of the present order from the dominant class of society.

The wage workers are therefore the most determined and irreconcilable antagonists of the ruling class. They are also the class which suffers most from the curse of class rule. The fact that a small number of capitalists is permitted to use all the country's resources and social tools for their individual profit, and to make the production of the necessaries of our lives the object of their competitive private enterprises and speculations, is at the bottom of all the social evils of our time.

Modern Industry Planless.

In spite of the organization of trusts, pools and combinations, the capitalists are powerless to regulate production for social ends. Industries are largely conducted in a planless manner. Through periods of feverish activity the strength and health of the workers are mercilessly undermined, and during periods of enforced idleness the workers are frequently reduced to starvation.

The climaxes of this chaotic system of production are the regularly recurring industrial depressions and crises which paralyze the nation every fifteen or twenty years.

In this mad and reckless race for profits, the capitalist class is bound to exploit the workers to the very limit of their endurance and to sacrifice their physical, moral and mental welfare to its own insatiable greed. Capitalism keeps the masses of workingmen in poverty, destitution, physical exhaustion and ignorance. It drags their wives from their homes to the mill and factory. It snatches their children from the playgrounds and schools and grinds their slender bodies and unformed minds into cold dollars. It wantonly disfigures, maims and kills hundreds of thousands of workingmen annually in mines, on railroads and in factories. It drives millions of workers into the ranks of the unemployed and forces large numbers of them into beggary, vagrancy and all forms of crime and vice.

Public Intelligence Corrupted.

To maintain their rule over their fellow men, the capitalists must keep in their pay all organs of the public powers, public mind and public conscience. They control the dominating parties and, through them, the elected public officials. They select our executive, bribe our legislatures and corrupt our courts of justice. They sway our educational institutions. They own the nation politically and intellectually just as they own it industrially.

The struggle between wage workers and capitalists grows ever fiercer, and has become the only vital issue before the American people. The wage working class, therefore, has the most vital and direct interest in abolishing the capitalist system. But in abolishing the present system, the workingmen will free not only their own class, but also all other classes of modern society: The small farmer, who is today exploited by large capital more indirectly but not less effectively than is the wage laborer; the small manufacturer and trader, who is engaged in a desperate and losing struggle for economic independence in the face of the all-conquering power of concentrated capital; and even the capitalist himself, who is the slave of his wealth rather than its master. The struggle of the working class against the capitalist class, while it is a class struggle, is thus at the same time a struggle for the abolition of all classes and class privileges.

Must Conquer the Political Power.

The private ownership of the land and means of production used for exploitation, is the rock upon which class rule is built; political government is its indispensable instrument. The wage workers cannot be freed from exploitation without conquering the political power and substituting collective and democratic administration for private ownership of the land and the means of production used for exploitation.

The basis for such transformation is rapidly developing within the very bosom of present capitalist society. The factory system, with its immense labor, is rapidly destroying all vestiges of individual production in manufacture. Modern production is already very largely a collective and social process, while the great trusts and monopolies which have sprung up in recent years have had the effect of organizing the work and management in some of our main industries on a national scale, and fitting them for national use and operation.

An End to Class Rule.

In the struggle for freedom the interests of the workers of all nations are identical. The struggle is not only national, but international. It embraces the world and will be carried to ultimate victory by the united workers of the world.

To unite the workers of the nation and their allies and sympathisers of other classes to this end, is the mission of the Socialist. In this battle for freedom the Socialist movement does not strive to substitute working class rule for capitalist rule, but by working class victory to free all humanity from class rule and to realize the international brotherhood of man.

PERTINENT POINTS.

Labor conquers all; it will conquer capitalism.

Liberty is only possible when all may enjoy it.

Soft-handed sons of toil are those that work the worker.

Labor united politically and industrially will win the world.

Get in line. In the tremendous days only cowards and sluggards stand aloof.

Stand up, brother, and fight your own battle. Fight for yourself and your class.

We ask you, Mr. Workingman, to study Socialism, because we are, like you, a wage-slave who would be free.

The politician who would serve labor and capital at the same time is like the Christian who would serve God and Mammon.

Beware of the Greeks bearing gifts so remember when the politicians offer you the job of dog-catcher it is done only so you may lead your fellow-workerers to the shambles.

Child labor is a necessary part of the profit system. Despite the most stringent laws, child labor flourishes everywhere. The only effective way to banish child labor is to abolish the profit system.

The Good Book says, "No man can serve two masters." The capitalistic candidate who wants your vote so as to serve you is a self-seeker only. He wants office so as to get into the public trough. No man can serve labor and capital at one and at the same time.

Profit alone is responsible for evil saloons, dives and brothels. Any man would rather be honest than dishonest. But some men would rather be dishonest than to work hard for barely enough to eat. The dive-keeper may be at heart as good as the Christian banker. Both are taking advantage of the ignorance and weakness of their fellow-men. It's only a matter of environment. — Memphis Social-Democrat.

IN MEMORIAM—COMRADE BROWN.

Comrade Charles F. Brown died at his home in Linden Heights on Thursday of last week. For some months Comrade Brown has been afflicted physically and suffered greatly. His nearest friends were aware that he had been in the habit of taking a drug to induce sleep. It is their opinion that he unintentionally took an overdose.

The funeral took place last Saturday and was largely attended. Comrade Brown is survived by a widow and young daughter. The deceased had been for years an intelligent and persistent Socialist. The highest tribute that could be paid a dead comrade was given by Comrade Vola, when he said: "Comrade Brown always put the best construction on what others said and did. He regarded mankind as largely the creatures of circumstances.

COMRADE LISTON A. SKINNER.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon over the remains of our late comrade, Liston A. Skinner, at his home, 93 Reeb avenue.

In the death of Comrade Skinner the Socialist movement in Columbus has lost one of its most loyal and efficient workers. Although a loyal worker in the Chain Makers' Union, Bucqeye Lodge No. 6, he felt that more than this was necessary to bring about the purpose and aim of unionism—"the emancipation of the working class from wage slavery," and that necessity was the political expression of the workers at the polls, through the Socialist party.

He not only preached this doctrine, but practised it, by accepting the secretaryship of the First Ward Socialist Party Branch, in which capacity, he acted until a few months before his death, and from which he had to resign on account of ill-health.

For the last three months Comrade Skinner was suffering from a nervous breakdown. All was done for him that possibly could be to again restore him to health, but with unsatisfactory results. At last a family council was held, and it was decided by his physicians that a complete change was necessary to assist in his recovery.

He was placed in a cottage at the state institution, under the care of his physicians. Here the deceased commenced to feel better and in a few days was able to get from seven to eight hours sleep. His recovery became so rapid that he stated, last Friday, that his intentions were to come home this week.

That his death was accidental goes without saying. This was one of the thousands of manifestations of nature over which we have no control. Man proposes but God disposes. Comrade Skinner, still in the prime of life, with returning health, had no motive for suicide, as was stated by our capitalistic press. Every indication on his part was the intense desire for returning health, so he again could take up the battles of the worker, and those most dear to him—his family.

Having the freedom of the grounds, the deceased took a stroll Saturday afternoon between three and four o'clock. The next that was heard of Comrade Skinner was, that his remains were lying along the Pennsylvania R. R. tracks.

The esteem and worth that Comrade Skinner was held in was thoroughly emphasized by the hundreds of fellow-workers that paid their last respects to his memory. Beautiful floral offerings enveloped the entire casket and room of mourning. One, presented by the comrades of the First Ward Branch, Socialist Party, was a beautiful "arch" on a heavy base of flowers, with the word "Comrade" inscribed. Another was a beautiful "triangle," by the Home Guards, with the insignia of their order inscribed in the three corners. The Chain Workers also presented a beautiful piece.

The Rev. Strickler, of the Seventh Street Church of Christ, officiated at the services, while the choir rendered the deceased's most favored selections, "Looking This Way," "Face to Face" and "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

Comrade Skinner was in the prime of his life, age 33, and leaves besides his wife, Mrs. Phoebe Skinner, and a son, Carl, aged 7, to mourn his loss, a widowed mother, Mrs. Louisa Skinner, sister Augusta, and three brothers, Otis, Hervey and Charles Skinner.

Comrade Skinner was laid to rest at Obetz Junction. The pall bearers were from the Chain Workers: Chas. O'Neal, J. Burger and W. J. Flory; and the Home Guards: Geo. Linn, J. H. Spence and A. P. Kuhn.

WOMEN'S SOCIALIST CLUB.

The women of the Socialist party held their regular weekly meeting at 184½ South High street, last Monday evening. H. Anna Quinby was elected chairman. A number of names were suggested for the organization but no action was taken as the committee on names was unable to make a report.

It was decided to do something definite toward interesting the women of Columbus outside the Socialist party in the women's part of the Socialist movement. A committee of four was elected to distribute printed invitations to the women of two Columbus laundries for the next meeting. Arrangement was made for a special program for that meeting.

One new member was added to the club and the Socialist party.

Mrs. Georgia Crooks was elected treasurer. Collection amounted to over one dollar.

As all women of Local Columbus are eligible for membership in the Woman's Club, it was voted to make a special effort to secure new members in the different Ward Branches. All women of the Socialist party are invited to come and help further the interests of the Socialist movement by affiliating themselves with the Woman's Club.

COMRADE STRICKLAND IS BETTER.

Comrade F. G. Strickland had an attack of tonsilitis last week and was obliged to abandon his lecture tour last Friday and return to his home at Anderson, Ind. He is much better, and there is no need for alarm in regard to his condition. Comrade Jas. H. Henderson filled Comrade Strickland's dates at Findlay, Fostoria, Sidney, Bellefontaine and Troy, while Comrade J. L. Bachman substituted at Marion on Sunday.

Socialism Summarized.

By H. M. Hyndman.

Socialism is a conscious endeavor to substitute organised co-operation for existence in place of the present anarchical competition for existence, or the system of social organization calculated to bring this about. This definition, though it gives, perhaps, adequate expression to the active and practical side of Socialism, leaves out of account altogether its theoretical basis... From this point of view, Socialism is an attempt to lay the foundation of a real science of sociology, which shall enable mankind, by thoroughly understanding their past and present, to comprehend, and thus, within limits, to control the movement and development of their own society in the near future. Consequently Socialism in its wide sense is not, as is still commonly thought, a mere aspiration for a better state of society, still less only a series of proposals to mitigate the evils from the present social arrangements.

Modern scientific Socialism essays to give an intelligible explanation of the growth of human society, and to show that as each step in the long course of development from the institution of private property, through chattel slavery, serfdom, and wagedom, was inevitable, so the next step from capitalism to Socialism is also inevitable.

The object which Socialists have in view is that this, the final transformation, should be made consciously by an organized, educated and intelligent people, instead of unconsciously, and therefore tempestously, by groups of discontented, embittered and ignorant workers. Agitation against the injustice of the present system of production, therefore, is only valuable so far as it educates men and women to appreciate the tendency of the time, and leads them to organize for the attainment of the definite end which the evolution of economic forms has made ready. Whether the great change will be brought about peaceably or forcibly has no bearing upon Socialism in itself, but depends upon the stage of development which has been reached in each civilized country, and the attitude which the dominant class may adopt in relation to the demands which the economic situation impels the producing class to make.

With the establishment of national and eventually of international Socialism, mankind resumes the definite control over the means and instruments of production, and masters them henceforward for all time instead of being mastered by them. By such cooperative industry, whose power over nature is increased by each fresh invention and discovery, a carapace of repression is lifted from the faculties of each individual, and wealth being made plentiful as water by light, wholesome labor, all freely contribute to increase their own happiness as well as that of their fellows. Human nature assumes a new and higher character in a society in which surroundings are such that life is not, as today, a constant struggle against the pressure of want and the temptations of misery. Instead of the personal, limited, introspective, individual ethic is the social, altruistic, broad ethic, in which the duty toward society necessarily involves the highest duty toward a man's self. Woman, relieved of economic and social subjugation, will assume her place as the social equal of man.

So far, therefore, from individual initiative and personal freedom in the highest [illegible] limited and stunted, human beings will have the opportunity for attaining to a level of physical, moral, and mental development such as the world has never seen. The golden age of society is, indeed, not in the past, but in the future.

WORKINGMAN AND BANKER.

Capitalists consciously and unconsciously combine to favor their class interests. This is evident in all cases where courts are called upon to decide between the conflicting interests of capital and labor.

J. J. McNamara is a workingman. He is suspected by a private detective agency that is legging for a big reward, of complicity in a crime committed in Los Angeles at a time when he was in Indianapolis. The law provides that the question of extradition shall be carefully tried by the highest courts, and that the accused shall have the benefit of counsel.

McNamara was seized, hurried before a police court, manacled, and rushed, under heavy guard, across the continent to a Los Angeles prison, where he now awaits formal indictment.

Edward Tilden, a wealthy banker of Chicago, is wanted by the legislature of Illinois to testify in the Lorimer bribery case. He refuses to testify, probably because it would incriminate him and expose the robber game that is looting the people.

The legislature issued a warrant for Tilden's arrest and notified (!) Tilden. After some delay and a lot of publicity the officer got to Chicago with his warrant. In the meantime Tilden and his lawyer got Judge Adelor J. Petit to issue a releasing writ, a habeas corpus, to protect the banker against arrest.

The workingman is put in irons before definite charges are preferred against him while the banker is given the protection of the judge's order, in a case that involves the stealing of millions and which has become a stench in the nostrils of the people.

The contrast in the treatment of these two men by the class in power is so glaring, so outrageous, that it will arouse the people to a consciousness of the class struggle.

USE YOUR COMMON SENSE.

(By Tom Clifford.)

The problem that overshadows all others—the fundamental question of how to provide ourselves with food, shelter and clothing—now confronts us and claims the attention of every thoughtful person. The present era of high prices, together with the ever increasing curtailment of opportunity for employment, is forcing the most listless, conservative and indifferent, who have hitherto been hoping against hope for a betterment of industrial conditions, to at least consider the necessity for a remedy.

Society today is in a ferment. The murmurings of discontent are becoming universal. The toiler, the business and professional man alike are forced to bow to the inexorable demand of Capitalism: "Reduce your standard of living!"

You are not beat. Whether you are a coward or a hero, you must now fight. It is no longer a matter of choice; it is a question of necessity.

But murmurings, protests and complaints, unaccompanied by drastic action, never have brought and never will bring relief. The few who control the means of life will not cease the oppression and exploitation of the many until forced to do so.

The most effective expression of force is the ballot. The ballot is a civilized substitute for the club or the gun in the evolution of society.

The manner in which you cast your ballot means either weal or woe to you and yours. It is equally potent in securing for you your industrial liberty or perpetuating your wage slavery.

And right here is where I ask you to use your common sense. Are you now ready to lay aside your prejudice and hearken to the message of Socialism, or are you still amenable to the hypnotic treatments of the Democratic and Republican politicians—the henchmen of the class that holds you in bondage?

The testing time, the hour for action, has arrived!

You have been lulled to sleep by a false cry of prosperity. You have allowed your mentality to lie dormant and permitted others to do your thinking, and they have gladly assumed the burden, because they know that those who think are those who rule.

And while you have been occupied in producing wealth these gentlemen (our "best citizens") have been working overtime in evolving schemes to take it away from you.

That their efforts have not been altogether fruitless is evidenced by the fact that they have appropriated all of the product of your industry except what is necessary to keep you in fair working condition.

It is not because they love you that you have been permitted to retain this small portion. Without it you would be unable to work, and, in that event, your masters would be compelled to go to work themselves. Perish the thought!

Brains were placed in your head for use and not merely to fill a vacuum. If you refuse to use them to further your own interests you must suffer the consequences. Your present condition is the penalty for mental laziness.

"The time is ripe and rotten ripe for change." To bring about the change the powers of government must be wrested from the Master Class and vested in the Working Class, and the initiatory work must be done in our municipalities.

At the coming municipal election you will have an opportunity to show whether your gray matter is used to conserve your own welfare or you have again allowed the other fellow's gray matter to secure the usual result for himself.

What course do you propose pursuing? Are you ready to break away from the domination of the Democratic and Republican politicians and follow the promptings of your common sense?

In every instance you have been shamelessly betrayed by those you have placed in executive and legislative positions. You have endeavored at each succeeding election to atone for your previous blunders by transferring your support to other capitalists politicians bearing a different label.

Has the turning out of one set of politicians and voting in another brought you the expected relief?

Haven't you had sufficient experience to convince you of the utter futility of such methods?

Hadn't you better quit monkeying with the buzz-saw of old party politics and do something sane and rational?

The Socialist party is the inveterate foe of special privilege and dishonesty in public office, and will use all acquired political power in abolishing incidental evils existing under the Capitalist order of society.

Our candidates are pledged to administer public affairs in the interests of the people, and the Socialist party will compel them to keep their pledges through the initiative, referendum and recall.

Under no circumstances will they be permitted to act as individuals. Their only function is to carry into execution the mandates of the party.

This is real democracy.

Are you with us for working-class government?

Or will you again ignore the promptings of Common Sense?

Child Labor.

Frederick Guy Strickland.

Any sort of animal that feeds upon its young is doomed to extinction. Child labor is a modern curse. It is here because when the social machinery of production appeared the workers did not know how to deal with the new situation. And so it happens that the great labor-saving device which came out of the brains and skill of the worker to free the race from drudgery, is at present only a modern Moloch to which we feed our children.

But while we are getting the monster machine into our hands to make it serve us instead of enslave us, the Socialists are using whatever power is theirs in order to lessen the awful blight of child slavery.

First of all we want a national law fixing a standard of age, hours and conditions in the employment of children beyond which no State shall be allowed to go. They may have the "State right" to protect the child more, but they dare not protect it less than this national law demands.

At present the State that has the most favorable laws for the child must suffer commercially at the hands of such neighboring States as are willing to sacrifice childhood on the altar of commercial greed.

Such a national law should absolutely forbid the employment of children in certain dangerous occupations, because they are naturally much more susceptible to accidents than adults. And the injured child is not only a sorrow unto itself, but a burden on society itself for many long years.

Besides there should be a stringent compulsory educational law with State assistance to the child where needed. The burden of education must not be placed upon our poorest homes.

Eventually we must take over the machinery of production and abolish child-labor forever. That would be Socialism.

WOMAN'S EIGHT HOUR BILL CREMATED—ASSASSINS REJOICE IN THEIR CRIMES AGAINST WOMANHOOD—WOMAN: YOUR ONLY HOPE LIES AT THE BALLOT.

The Woman's Eight Hour Bill has gone the way of all measures drawn up in the interest of the working class.

The morning papers try to beguile the people into believing that a nine-hour work day had been secured. The bill as amended by Representative Fellinger of Cuyahoga county demands that women workers be imprisoned in workshops five days at ten hours and one day at four. This will constitute a fifty-four-hour week schedule.

Organized labor should not forget the tactics of the Atlas Underwear Company, of Piqua, Ohio. This firm brought a group of its forewomen to legislate against the bill. It's strange how the Master Class use the bread and butter club to whip their victims into line. Some day these poor feminine victims of circumstances will be turned adrift by the kind-hearted, weeping crocodiles, who compelled them to betray their own class interests. The bill is a living disgrace to a Christian age, and stands as a monument of shame to the commercial Herods who seek to live in luxury and splendor at the cost of the flesh and blood of women and little children.

NO SOCIALIST TICKET NAMED.

The Socialist party of Columbus has not nominated a city ticket. The organization which, last Sunday, named a few candidates for municipal offices, is not the Socialist party. The Socialist party will probably hold a caucus on July 30, to select candidates, which will be certified to the board of elections, to be placed upon the ballot at the primary, as required by law.

At this time of the year the railroads are weighing the mails, and upon the average pounds of mail matter carried will be based a contract which will be entered with the government for the next four years. And our dear Congressmen are so particularly interested in swelling the coffers of the Railroad Trust that they are actually using this period to send thousands of pounds of government seeds through the mails under the franking privilege. If there was ever a bare-faced robbery this is one. For years the postoffice department has been carrying a heavy deficit, and only recently Postmaster General Hitchcock found it "necessary" to effect certain economies in his department. He started right in at the mail clerks and put an additional burden upon them without an additional amount of pay. But the working class is not considered when it comes to get any advantages; they are but human atoms that are to be voted on election day, exercising their franchise for the benefit of men who use their powers invested in them to keep the working class in a state of serfdom while doling out subsidies to the trusts, which are illegal combinations.

It will no doubt cause the hearts of millions of American working men and women to swell with pride to know that when Mrs. John Hays Hammond sails, the latter part of this month, for England with Mr. Hammond, special ambassador from the United States to the coronation of King George V., she will carry the most heavily insured wardrobe ever taken out of this country. Mrs. Hammond has obtained insurance on her gowns and jewels, and, it is said, the aggregate amount of the policies will run into six figures. The gowns have been chosen with infinite care, and in keeping with the rigid court rules set down by Queen Mary. To see that no disaster occurs, a small corps of Mrs. Hammond's personal servants, whom she is taking with her to London for the coronation, will zealously guard the wardrobe until the very hour when Mrs. Hammond dons the various articles for the different gala affairs scheduled for the royal exhibition of fashion.

If Socialism is so bitterly fought by the capitalist class it means a good thing for the working class, for does not the capitalist fight the union on the industrial field? Read up, you workers, and you will find you have a world to gain.

The law of England requires the employer of every workman injured in his service to pay immediately the injured man one-half of his rate of wages until he is able to work again, and in the case of death to pay the heirs three years' salary.

Practically all of the first and second year classes of the Ohio State University, nearly 1,100 in number, are being trained in the useless, fiendish, bloody art of war, according to announcement in the local papers.

"Socialism is a good thing, but it will not work." How often do you hear this statement. That is what the skeptical said when Fulton invented the steamboat.

Socialist Party Constitutional Program of Ohio.

AN EMANCIPATION DECLARATION.

The Socialist party of the State of Ohio enters upon the campaign for election of delegates to the constitutional convention with a solemn warning to the workers of the state that this election is of the most momentous importance for the life and destiny of their class.

The constitution to be adopted will be the fundamental and supreme law of Ohio for many years to come, and it will very largely determine the political conditions of the state, and the industrial relations, civic rights and general welfare of its citizens.

The constitution of Ohio should, under no circumstances, be modeled after the constitution of the United States, or any of the constitutions of the other states of the Union. For since the adoption of the old constitutions more than a century has elapsed, and this century has witnessed tremendous changes in the life of the country. New economic conditions have developed, new social relations have been created, new needs have originated, and new problems have sprung up.

The introduction of modern machinery propelled by mechanical motive power, and the general improvement in our methods of production and the developments of railroads, steamships and other means of transportation and communication have increased the productivity of labor and the wealth of the nation a hundredfold. From a country of poor and struggling pioneers the United States has become one of the richest countries on the face of the globe.

But although this wonderful transformation was largely the result of the collective ingenuity and labor of the multitudes of workers of present and past generations, its fruits have been appropriated by a small portion of the population—the capitalist class. The capitalists own, as their private property, or control, all the land or its products, together with the natural treasures hidden in it; they own our railroads and telegraphs; they own our factories, machinery and the tools indispensable for the production of the necessaries of life; they own the food, clothing and shelter of their fellow-men. They own or control the country with all its wealth and resources, while the great mass of the population, the workers in the factory, farm and other fields of useful activity, whose labor has created our so-called "national" wealth and still maintains our national life, are destitute of property, and depend for their right to work and live upon the pleasure of the capitalist.

The anomalous fact that a group of capitalists are permitted to use the country's resources and social tools for their individual profit, and to make the production of the necessaries of our lives the object of their competitive private enterprises and speculations, is at the bottom of all the social evils of our time; the anarchy in production, the exploitation of the workers, the widespread poverty and misery of the people and all forms of political and civic corruption.

The Socialist party maintains that the evils of the present system will be removed only when the American people wholly abolish private ownership in the social means of production, collectively assume the management of the industries, and operate them for use and not for profit, for the benefit of all and not for the enrichment of one privileged class. In this the Socialist party stands alone in the political field of America.

But the Socialist party also believes that the evils of the modern system may be materially relieved and their final disappearance be hastened, by the introduction of social, political and economic reforms which will have the effect of bettering the lives, strengthening the position of the workers and curbing the power and domination of the capitalists. The Socialist party, therefore, always supports the progressive struggles of organized labor and of the laboring farmers against the exploitation and oppression of the capitalist class, and is vitally concerned in the efficiency of the instruments of such struggle.

Heretofore the people have almost invariably been defeated in their struggles against capitalism, principally because the capitalists have always owned the dominant political parties, and through them they have dictated the laws and prescribed the manner of their interpretation and execution. But the principal instruments in the hands of the dominant classes for the subjugation of the workers have always been the written constitutions. In the hands of the dominant classes and their agents on the bench and the executive offices of the country and the states these documents have been made the unfailing means of nullifying or preventing all measures for the relief of the workers and warding off all attacks upon the privileges and immunities of wealth. The written constitutions are largely responsible for the fact that the United States is today the most backward country of the civilized world in the domain of factory reform and social legislation. In theory our unchangeable constitutions are the weapons by which the dead rule the living, in practice they are the instruments by which the classes rule the [illegible].

The citizens of Ohio should take warning at the fate of the people under older constitutions. They should see to it that the new constitution of their state shall leave the government in the hands of the people at all times, that it be flexible and easily amendable, and, above all, that it be adapted to the conditions of our times and the needs of the workers.

With this object in view, the Socialist party demands that the following provisions be included in the constitution of the State of Ohio:

I. BILL OF RIGHTS.

1. The political power of the state at all times be vested in the people and shall be exercised for their protection, security and welfare. The majority of the people shall always have the right and the means to freely amend, alter or abrogate all laws.

2. The constitution of the state shall be considered as a mandate to the legislature and as a guide for the people, but no court, judge or other official shall have the right to set aside any law or legal provision enacted by the people or their chosen representatives, as offending against the constitution or public policy or on any other ground.

3. The military shall at all times be held in strict subordination to the civil authorities. Civil government in this state shall never be replaced or suspended by martial law. The state militia and the police power shall never interfere in industrial disputes.

4. The writ of injunction shall not be issued by any court or judge in any action or proceeding arising out of an industrial dispute, and no person shall be punished for contempt of court unless on conviction after trial by jury.

5. Every person shall have the absolute right to freely speak, write or publish his sentiments on all subjects, and no law or ordinance shall be passed to restrain or abridge the freedom of speech or of the press, or to make such right dependent upon any permit or other condition.

6. The people shall have the right to assemble for the purpose of discussion, deliberation or petition in a peaceful and orderly manner at all times in private and public places.

7. The right of the people to keep and bear arms shall never be abrogated.

8. All property and property rights of any kind and nature are held by the consent of the state, and their use should always be subject to the regulation and control of the state and to its right of eminent domain. The state shall at all times have the right to seize the property of any person or corporation refusing to comply with the law.

9. The right of the state and of all counties, municipalities or other divisions of the state to engage in any enterprise, business or occupation shall not be denied nor prohibited.

10. The state shall never alienate any part of the school lands or other public lands now held by it.

11. All charters, grants, franchises and licenses issued by the state or any division of it shall be revocable by the people at all times.

12. All counties, cities and towns of the state shall have the absolute right of local self-government.

13. The workers shall at all times have the right to organize for the advancement of their interests, to abstain from work or for any employer individually or colectively, for any reason deemed sufficient to them; to attend peacefully in any numbers in and about any place of work for the purpose of giving information about pending labor disputes to any persons, or peaceably persuading any person to abstain from work for any employer. The people shall have the right individually or collectively to abstain from dealing with or patronizing any individual, firm, partnership, association or corporation, and to persuade others to do so by speech or print or in any other manner.

14. No private police or constabulary shall be allowed to operate in this state or to give testimony in any court.

II. SUFFRAGE AND ELECTIONS.

1. All citizens of the United States, over the age of twenty-one years, without distinction of sex; race, color or creed, who have resided in the state six months, shall be qualified electors at all national, state and local elections, and eligible for all public offices. No citizens shall be deprived of the active or passive franchise on account of payment or non-payment of taxes, or on account of any property or educational qualifications.

2. The right of the citizen to vote and to be voted for in all elections shall never be limited or qualified by the requirement of fees upon registering, nominating or voting or in any other manner. All elections for public office shall be on the secret Australian system and either by blanket ballot or voting machine.

3. In all elections for members of the legislature and in all other state and local elections in which two or more persons are to be elected for the same office, such officers shall be elected at large by the entire state, district or locality, as the case may be, and all political parties shall be given representation among the officers so to be chosen in proportion to the number of votes respectively cast by them in such election.

III. LEGISLATION.

1. The legislature of the state shall consist of one house of representatives.

2. Upon the demand of any three counties in the state or upon the demand of a number of individual citizens equal to at least five per cent. of the number of all voters at the last preceding general state election, the legislature shall forthwith refer to the people any proposed new law or measure or any law or measure passed by such legislature, to be adopted, ratified or rejected by the people upon a general vote.

IV. ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE.

1. All judges and magistrates of all courts shall be elected by the direct vote of the people and shall hold office for short terms.

2. Justice shall be administered speedily and freely and no fees or charges of any kind shall be exacted from litigants.

3. In criminal cases the state shall conduct the defense as well as the prosecution, free of charge.

4. Neither capital punishment nor money fines shall be imposed for any crime.

5. No person shall be convicted of a crime within the state, nor shall any person be extradited upon the demand of any other state, without a trial by jury.

6. No person shall be imprisoned for debt, and all household furniture, implements of work and homesteads shall be exempt from levy under execution.

V. PUBLIC OFFICERS.

1. All elective officers of the state, counties and municipalities shall be elected for short terms.

2. The representatives of this state in the Senate of the United States shall be elected by direct vote of the people.

3. Upon the presentation to the proper authorities of a petition for the recall of an elected officer, verified by ten per cent. of the voters of the district represented by such officer, a new election to fill the said office shall forthwith be called. Upon such new election the name of the incumbent in office shall be placed on the ballot, together with any new candidates who may be nominated for the said office, and the candidate receiving the largest number of votes in such election shall fill the office during the unexpired term thereof.

VI. TAXATION.

1. Neither the state nor any political division of the state shall levy indirect taxes.

2. The burdens of taxation shall be distributed among those most able to carry them and deriving the largest pecuniary benefits from the protection of the state—the possessing classes. 4. All workers injured in the course of their employment and the dependents of all workers killed in the course of their employment shall receive compensation, regardless of the cause and manner of the accident, from a state compensation fund to which all employers shall be required to contribute pro rata. Such compensation shall be equal to the full economic loss caused by the injury, and shall be recoverable without delay or litigation.

5. The legislature shall by proper enactment provide for suitable safeguards and sanitary regulations in all occupations, with ample provision for frequent and effective inspection of the places of employment, machinery and appliances.

6. The state shall insure all workers against sickness, invalidism and old age, and shall provide public industries for the unemployed.

News From The World Wide Movement Of The Workers.

SOCIALISTS CLINCH VICTORY AT BERKELY.

Still they come! In nearly every election that is held nowadays the Socialists either break into positions of power or roll up steady and sometimes startling gains in vote. Here is the latest from Berkely, Cal.:

"When Stitt Wilson was elected mayor of Berkely, several weeks ago the organs of the 'interests' announced that it was an 'accident.' But a couple of days ago another election was held in Berkely, which had adopted the commission form of government, for two commissioners and two members of the school board. Not a line appeared in the Eastern papers giving the result of the second election, probably for the reason that the Socialists swept the city and secured all four offices by 300 to 1,000 majority over the fusion Rep.-Dem. ticket. Now the Socialists have complete control of Berkely.

GENERAL SOCIALIST NEWS.

At Herrin, Ill., the two old parties seem to have disappeared almost entirely. At the municipal election in that place a few days ago a Labor party and the Socialists had everything their own way, the Labor ticket winning, with the Socialists a close second, and scattering votes for other parties.

Over $20,000 had been subscribed for the daily Socialist paper in Milwaukee up to the middle of last week. If the pledges continue to come in as rapidly during the next couple of months as they have during the past month the Milwaukee Socialist daily will probably make its bow to the public by Labor Day.

The Rev. Father Gesson, S. J., in an address in Boston, used these words: "The only true Socialists, anyway, are members of religious orders of the Catholic church." That's good. We won't argue who are the "best" Socialists so long as all hands advocate the principles of Socialism and act consistently on election day.

Cripple Creek, Col., another city made famous by the labor wars between the miners and operators, came close to following its neighboring city, Victor, into the Socialist camp. It was only through the old parties combining in a "non-partisan" party that the Socialists were prevented from winning. But they say they will get there next time.

It looks like the National Executive Committee is going to flood this country knee deep with literature. At the Boston session of the committee last week money was voted away like water to keep the printers busy. Tons upon tons of leaflets and pamphlets were ordered, and there will be something doing right along for months to come.

Socialists of Italy have taken the field for universal suffrage in a manner so determined that the government is becoming exceedingly nervous. Only about nine per cent. of the people in Italy are eligible to vote. If the working people had the right of suffrage they would come pretty close to running the country. That is why the politicians are attempting to stave off manhood suffrage. A series of general strikes may be inaugurated to paralyse the industries of the country and force the government to grant the Socialist demands.

The Intercollegiate Socialist Society is reporting wonderful progress in the principal educational institutions from Maine to California. The students are joining the study chapters and circulating literature in an enthusiastic manner. Last week Congressman Victor L. Berger addressed a big mass meeting of college men from Harvard, Yale, Cornell, Columbia and other Eastern institutions in New York City that caused the plutes who thought they had control of the educational institutions to wonder what was coming next. Socialism is making itself felt in every human agency.

STATE.

Dr. L. S. Keyser, a prominent Lutheran minister at Canal Dover, has declared his conversion to the principles of Socialism.

Rev. A. G. Gekeler, a Lima Minister who was driven from a fashionable pulpit some time ago because he defended organized labor and favored Socialism, is being mentioned as the Socialist candidate for mayor. He is going to give the corrupt old machines of that burg a run that will jar them. Brother Gekeler is still in the active ministry and is building up a strong congregation of working people. More power to him.

Allen Cook, of Canton, and J. M. Richardson, an attorney of New Philadelphia, debated the question of Socialism before an audience that packed the Opera House at Canal Dover. The people seemed about evenly divided at the outset, judging from the applause given the speaker, but toward the close Cook had all the best of his opponent.

WISCONSIN NOTES.

The slaughter of Socialist bills and resolutions in the Wisconsin legislature still goes on. However, a very few of the less radical measures proposed by the Social-Democratic members have been adopted.

One really important resolution introduced by one of our Social-Democratic legislators went through the assembly this week. This was the resolution requesting Congress to exempt labor unions and farmers' organizations from the Sherman Anti-trust law.

This law, which was supposed to be a bulwark against the interests, has really been used as a club against the workingman. Any number of suits have been brought against labor unions under this law. Moreover, when the Kentucky tobacco growers organized in the Farmers' Equity Union to fight the tobacco trust, this same law was used by the trust to break them down. The law, which was ostensibly designed to curb the trusts, turned out to be the trusts' best friend. Such are the uncertainties of capitalist legislation.

Another Socialist resolution which went through the assembly this week provided for a commission to investigate the evils and abuses of the liquor traffic, the causes of intemperance, and the means which have been used by other states and countries to regulate the liquor traffic. This opens a wide field of inquiry. Its object is to deal with the matter by a scientific method and with a view to correcting the root of the evil.

But most of the labor and other bills proposed by the Social-Democrats at Madison were mercilessly killed—although by a close vote. The memorial to Congress in behalf of old age pensions was slaughtered. So was the resolution condemning the disgraceful treatment of postal employes. Naturally, the capitalist class does not wish Uncle Sam to compete against them as an employer or to put up a better standard for the wage-workers.

This also was the fate of the Social-Democratic resolution asking for national aid for the unemployed by developing natural resources instead of giving them away to the interests. Of course, the reserve army of the employed is a valuable asset of capitalism!

Other good measures introduced by the Socialists and killed by our "progressive" legislature were the resolution for government ownership of railroads, telegraph, telephone and express companies which have gone into the hands of receivers; the resolution for the direct election of federal judges by the people; the resolution protesting against the increased postal rates on magazines for the benefit of the interests; a bill for the abolition of the contract system; a bill to collect back taxes from tax dodgers, and a bill to abolish costs in legal proceedings, thus giving the poor man some chance of getting justice without being ruined in the process.

Now here is an interesting point. All these good bills, most of which would have had the hearty endorsement of the people if they had been properly explained, went to their death very quietly. They received the briefest mention, if any mention at all, in the capitalist dailies. And even that report was so worded that nobody could know just what the bills stood for.

This fact further emphasizes the need of a Socialist daily paper in Milwaukee, to give the truth about Wisconsin affairs.

The Socialists outside of Wisconsin also realize this need and are beginning to rally to the defense of Milwaukee. By investing in the bonds for the Milwaukee Socialist daily they have helped to swell the sum already subscribed for the establishment, which sum now amounts to over $35,000. If this pace keeps up, we can get our daily by September.

E. H. THOMAS,
State Secretary.

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS.

In the election held in Oakland, Cal. (second ballot), the Socialist candidate received 9,552, being beat by only 2,200 in a poll of 21,218.

In the recent election in Asheville, N. C., the Socialist vote increased from 23 in the previous election to 61.

National Committee Motion to Be Submitted When Supported by the Requisite Number of Members.

"Girard, Kansas, May 9, 1912.

"Dear Comrade Barnes:

"As National Committeeman I wish to make the following motion:

"That the Woman's National Committee shall meet once each year at the National Headquarters of the party at such time as such committee shall decide on, the traveling and hotel expenses of the members of the committee to be met from the national treasury.

"Comment: The Woman's National Committee has become an organic part of the party organization. To do its work effectively it should meet at least once each year to plan its work and examine progress made. It is but a short time before women in many more of the Western States will have the ballot, and the importance of the work of this committee is manifest.

"Fraternally,

"(Signed) May Wood-Simons,
"Member National Committee for Illinois."

Comrade Louis Kopelin, in charge of the "National Socialist Press" news bureau, at Washington, D. C., is supplying articles to 103 papers; 11 daily papers with a daily letter, and 192 weeklies with a weekly news letter. Comrade Frank E. Wolfe has been assigned for similar service in Los Angeles, Cal., on the McNamara case.

The National Secretary's Financial report for the month of April contained a clerical error in that the State of Iowa was not credited with a payment of $70 for dues stamps. The report accredits Idaho with a paymen of $117.50 on that account. This amount is the combined payment of the two states mentioned. Properly it should have read: Iowa, $70; Idaho, $47.50. However, the totals are correct.

By a recent referendum in North Dakota, Comrade Arthur Bassett, of Fargo, was re-elected State Secretary-Treasurer. The same referendum decided upon Minot as the location for the State Headquarters.

HAVE YOU A JOB THAT WILL LAST?

(By William Restelle Shier.)

Have you a job?

If so, how long is it likely to last?

Have you ever stopped to figure how many weeks' working time you lose each year or to consider why there are always more men seeking jobs than there are jobs to be had?

According to government blue books "about one-third of the total persons engaged in remunerative labor are unemployed one-third of their working time."

In other words, one workman in every three is unemployed about four months each year.

Happily, such unfortunate circumstances do not afflict the entire population, but if all the workers are taken into account, it is found that the average person loses 35 working days each year or 11 per cent of the possible working time.

The Cause of Unemployment.

Unemployment is due to the fact that the supply of labor greatly exceeds the demand for labor, while irregular employment is due to a variety of causes—to bad weather, trade depressions, seasonal fluctuations, "shut downs," bankruptcies, changes of fashion, the introduction of new machinery, strikes, accidents, sickness and those ever recurring periods called "hard times."

Enforced idleness brings misfortune after misfortune upon the workingman. It makes it necessary for him to run into debt, to use up his savings bank deposits, to let his insurance policies lapse, to forfeit his home, to sponge on his relatives, to allow his wife and family to become shabby, to forego medical attendance, to deny his children things they really need, to accept charity, to suffer mental anguish and to undergo physical deprivations of all sorts.

All these miseries, mind you, are brought upon him by the breakdowns of industry and the mal-adjustments of the commercial world, not through faults of his own. The number of people who suffer unemployment through personal inefficiency and bad habits is really very small. The mass of working people are sober, honest, loyal and industrious.

What Do You Think of This.

Since society instead of the individual is responsible for the evils of unemployment, should not society as a whole bear the cost?

The Socialist answers that question most emphatically in the affirmative.

In addition to having the State increase the demand for labor by prosecuting great public works, the Socialist would institute what is known as "government insurance against unemployment."

Insurance against unemployment is much the same as other kinds of insurance, the only difference being that instead of being indemnified for the loss of property owing to fire, or the loss of an arm owing to an accident, or the loss of time owing to sickness, you are indemnified for the loss of earnings due to being out of work.

Under the best systems of unemployed insurance the government, federal, state or municipal, establishes special bureaus to put into practice whatever scheme has been adopted.

These bureaus found Labor Exchanges secure the co-operation of the employers and the trade unions, and seek to organize the labor market thoroughly.

Through these Labor Exchanges unemployed persons are helped to find work.

Those who are out of work more than a certain number of days are paid "unemployed benefits"—50 cents, 75 cents or $1 per day.

A man who throws up his old job without sufficient cause is not entitled to these benefits, neither is a man who refuses a fairly good job when one is found for him.

A minimum wage is established, and no one is required to accept a job for less than that wage, and trade unionists are not required to work in their particular trades for less than the prevailing union rates.

An Important Consideration.

Insurance of this kind, would affect the workers very favorably, would it not?

Yes, but it would also affect the employers very unfavorably.

In the first place, the rich would have to provide the money through taxes, and, in the second place, the workers, not being so hard up, could bargain more successfully for higher wages.

The employers have not as big an advantage over the man who is assured a subsistence as over one who has not a cent in his pocket.

For these reasons no government controlled by business men will inaugurate a satisfactory system of unemployed insurance. We must have a working class government before this great measure will be carried out.

The European cities, such as Ghent, Strassburg and Cologne, where the unemployed are insured in the way we have described, are either controlled by Socialists or have a large number of Socialists upon their legislative and administrative bodies.

JUDGE-MADE LAW.

(By Louis H. Wetmore.)

It is of interest to us American Socialists to see the way in which the Australian Labor party is attempting to deal with judge-made law, from which they seem to be suffering much in the same way as we suffer from decisions of that continuous constitutional convention of ours, the Supreme Court. That third house of government of ours that is, in reality, our only governing house, seeing that it can alter radically every law passed by our other two houses of government through its decisions, and which is the practically impregnable fortress of Capitalism, seeing that it is isolated as much as possible from public opinion, has its counterpart in Australia in a High Court of Justice. And it is noteworthy that the experiment with a third house of government in Australia has proved as reactionary an experiment and as harmful to the working class movement as our continuous constitutional convention has proved in our country. So harmful to the working class movement has proved this High Court of Justice in Australia that the head of the Labor government there, Mr. Fisher, who is by means a radical, judged from the militant Socialist standpoint, in opening the electoral campaign, declared that the veto that this court possessed over the legislative enactments of parliament made necessary sweeping and radical changes in the constitution of the country, if the laws that the Labor government had passed or were about to pass were ever to become really effective in freeing labor from its chains. It would seem from his statements that "government by injunction" had as much hold in Australia as it has in this country of ours.

It is interesting to see how the attitude of the people of Australia has changed toward their High Court of Justice. When they first framed the constitution for the entire country, they thought that it was necessary to have a court to settle whatever disputes might arise between the two houses of the government as to how a certain law was to be interpreted, and also to keep the constitution rigid and intact. From contemporary writings it is impossible to think that the people intended their High Court of Justice to have the power of vetoing the laws passed by the regular legislature. It would seem that, like our Supreme Court, this court of the Australians has usurped powers that were never relegated to it. And we find that an appointment to this court for one of its followers is judged more important by a political party than even a majority in the first and second houses of government. At present the Australian papers discuss the political leanings of the judges of this court quite openly, and divide them almost unanimously into three reactionaries and two liberals.

We summarize below some of the decisions of this court, that the reader may compare them with the decisions of our Supreme Court, to which they bear a remarkable likeness:

(1) The Clancy Case: New South Wales, before the Federation was instituted, had a law known as the Industrial Arbitration Act, providing for the peaceful settlement of labor troubles. Under this act the New South Wales Arbitration Court, settling a butcher's strike, decided that the butchers' shops must be closed at a certain time. Then the case came up before the High Court of Justice on appeal. That subservient tool of capitalism decided that the question of when shops were to be closed could not be termed an "industrial matter," and so rendered the decision of the N. S. W. Arbitration Court invalid. Thus was the arbitration law rendered valueless to labor.

(2) The Federal Arbitration Act. The Federal Parliament passed a law that was called the Industrial Arbitration Act that applied not only to the employes of private employers, but also to the workers on the state railways. The High Court of Justice handed down a decision that the law was unconstitutional in spite of the fact that the Federal Parliament had passed it twice and that the people had declared in favor of it at a general election. Thus, we have the direct mandate of the people thwarted by five men.

(3) The Labor government of Australia passed an act that a trade union could register a special mark as a label and give this label to such employers as did not have the "open shop." In this way the public would be able to tell whether they were buying goods that were made under decent conditions or whether they were buying goods that had probably been produced through sweated labor. This was an admirable law and would have done much good had it been put into effect. But the High Court of Justice promptly declared it unconstitutional.

It is worthy of note, especially as it shows how political views govern the decision of judges in spite of the fact that they are supposed to be impartial and not to allow their private opinions to interfere with their decisions, that, when two more judges were appointed to the High Court in 1908, both these being firm supporters of the Labor party, that whenever the court declared that a certan act that helped labor was unconstitutional, that the vote was always 3 to 2, the former three judges, who were reactionaries, voting to declare it unconstitutional and the two newly appointed labor judges declaring it to be constitutional. This merely shows that if a judge has radical opinions, his decisions will be along radical lines, while if a udge is reactionary his decisions will be reactionary. Thus the opinions of the judges decides the whole question, while the great Constitution itself is a mere piece of rubber, to be squeased into any shape that a judge desires.

THE CURTAINS FALLS ON THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR CONTEMPT CASE—UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT UNEASY—THE LAW OF CONSPIRACY IN A NEW CLOAK.

In 1824, chiefly owing to the efforts of Joseph Hume, the Anti-Infamous Combination Laws were repealed in England. In spite of this victory for the people in 1824, four men, one of them a Wesleyan minister, were sentenced to penal servitude for the crime of urging the workers to to assemble together to devise ways and means to secure higher wages. William Metcalf, an English writer, describes how the victims were placed upon a convict ship, herded with the most vicious of criminals, and sent to Botany Bay, an English penal settlement. In 1904, the British courts adopted the same measures to help retard the progress of the British Parliamentary Labor Party. The case was known as the "Osborne Case." This man Osborne refused to pay money into his union to keep up the Labor representatives in the British parliament. Members of the parliament receive no salary. The court decided that Osborne was in the right and that it was unconstitutional for the union to contribute money for the purpose of helping men to conspire against the government program. The court ruled that the further collection of funds for the support of the British Labor Party would be judged as an act of conspiracy against the Crown. Today the British Labor Party can not meet in caucus on any particular bill, but must enter the House of Parliament as individuals, and there await developments.

The recent action of the United State Supreme Court in the American Federation of Labor contempt case is but another miscarriage of the law of conspiracy. The decision declares for the right to sell the home of the union members to collect damages, and this has already been done in several states. It used to be said that the constitution followed the flag, but the recent action of this august body leads us to believe that the constitution is beginning to follow public opinion.

Organized labor has nothing to be elated about. The sop that has been thrown was meant to beguile the workers into believing that the courts were at least honorable. But just as long as Mr. Big Interest pulls the legal strings justice can never prevail. There is only one hope for the working class, namely, the ballot box. This much advertised decision is a farce to all concerned. What is the use of Flags and Courts that do not protect the Home?

Jim Henderson.

THE COLUMBUS CHAMBER OF COMMERCE GETS ITS SILVER—HIGH-GRADE CITIZENS AND THEIR BUSINESS METHODS.

Senator Todd and Representatives Hanby Jones, and Bertsch of Franklin county engineered the shady deal whereby the Chamber of Commerce secures the sum of $6,131.60 from the people's pockets. This sum was claimed to be used in supplying the street car company's sheriff with guns and ammunition, supposed to have been necessary by the event of a street car strike.

The people of Columbus demand to know where these guns and ammunition went to. Who ordered the Columbus Chamber of Commerce to loan this money to the sheriff?

Where were these weapons and ammunition purchased?

What became of the $10,000 fund supposed to have been created by the Bankers' Association?

All of the recognized representatives of capitalism in the Ohio Legislature, demanded the passage of the bill, and the class interests reigned supreme. The gate is now open for any dark lantern schemes that may come before the legislature from now on. If these are the business methods of HIGH-GRADE CITIZENS, what is crime?

Capitalism has declared war on the labor unions and they are carrying it right into your own ground. And they, by the power of controlling the machinery of production and distribution, will be able to starve the workers into submission. Forearmed is forewarned. Get into the Socialist party and spread the victories that are now making the capitalists sit up in alarm. As you are winning they will grant concessions, but while you are meek they will drive you.

The Majority, published at Newark, Ohio, is one of the best local labor papers that comes to our exchange desk. Comrade J. H. Sharritt is certainly making good as editor.

JUST A JOKE ON THE PEOPLE.

After threshing through the legal lore in which the decision is enveloped, one finds that the United States Supreme Court holds:

That the Standard Oil Company is a monopoly in restraint of trade.

That this giant corporation must be dissolved within six months.

Corporations whose contracts are "not unreasonably restrictive of competition" are not affected.

Other great corporations whose acts may be called into question will be dealt with according to the merits of their particular cases.

Here are some opinions from prominent men on the decision:

Congressman Victor Berger, Socialist, Wisconsin.—"Dissolve the Standard Oil Company! You might as well try to dissolve the Atlantic Ocean. The decision amounts to nothing; it simply can't be done. You can't change the ownership of the oil trust. You can simply change the form of the ownership and the result will be exactly the same."

Senator La Follette, Republican, Wisconsin.—"I look at it as a most dangerous decision, for if it be true, as Justice Harlan indicates, that combinations to be unlawful must be in 'unreasonable' restraint of trade, the court has written into the statute a word Congress refused to insert, and for which the trusts fought and were defeated."

Alfred D. Eddy, general counsel for the Standard Oil Company in Chicago.—"The business of the Standard Oil Company will go on as usual, although, of course, there will be changes to meet the interpretation of the law."

A dispatch, via United Press, from New York, says:

"One effect of the government's decision in the Standard Oil case, and the one in which the public will be most vitally concerned, will be, according to business men here who have read the decision, a probable advance in the price of all oil products to the ultimate consumers.

"The turning back to the original companies of their properties will not make any real change in the ownership of these concerns, it is pointed out. They will still be Standard Oil properties, although their stock will be distributed among numerous shareholders instead of being in the strong boxes of the parent corporation, the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

"To meet the expenses of individual administration the prices of the products of the various companies will necessarily have to be generally advanced, it is believed."

As might be expected, the decision means that the common people will profit nothing. It makes no difference to us whether we are robbed by a group of exploiters, organized as one bunch, or by the same highwaymen divided into several groups. The producers and the consumers will simply have to give up more of their earnings. The perpetuation of the private ownership of the means of production insures the continuance of the same old system of robbery.

Mr. George W. Lattimer, speaking at the Columbus Chamber of Commerce election, commented briefly on the recent defeat of the Park and Boulevard Commission, and the honorable citizen is quoted as saying that organized labor had no right to be suspicious of the project. Organized labor wants the gentlemen who came before the Federation of Labor to understand that the membership will at all times have confidence in Mr. Lattimer and his friends. But when he or any other citizens allow honest schemes to be turned into ventures, with ulterior motives behind them, it becomes a question of respect of Caesar, yet greater love for Rome.

WHAT IS THE PRESENT CODE OF MORALS?

The moral code of every age has been that which best served the interest of the ruling class, and it has changed every time their interest changed. There has been no difference whether it was czar, empress, kings, churches or big interests that were in power, this rule has been maintained. We have seen where in 1901 the Senate refused admission to M. A. Clark of Montana, because he had purchased his election by a lavish use of money, but in 1910 they seated Senator Lorimer of Illinois whose seat had been purchased by the "Big Interests."

We saw where Roberts was refused a seat in the House because he maintained more than one wife, while Smoot, who never denied he had plural wives maintained his seat in the Senate. So the code of morals are not the same at all times.

In Adams county the code of the ruling class did not forbid the purchase of votes, until the expense became too burdensome. They suddenly discovered that it was wrong, but not until the bribers were assured of the Immunity Bath. Each voter disfranchised was a saving of from five to fifteen dollars at each subsequent election. This was the real cause of the "probe" in Adams county.

The ruling class through their Supreme Court decreed that Thatcher, of Toledo, be disbarred from practice because he failed to show the proper reverence for one or two Common Pleas judges who were asking for the votes of the citizens of Toledo. The subserving of our Supreme Court to their interests was plainly shown in the Boss Cox case, where the majority (Big Interests) supported Cox's contentions, while the minority (Small Interests) were against them.

For many years it has been the practice of the ruling class to buy legislation and while it was generally known, those buying it tried to keep the voters from knowing the extent of it. In an editorial published in a Columbus daily of May 3rd, we find the following:

"Many people have wondered how this attack on legislative boodling began. It was in this way: Several prominent men who had business with the legislature found that money was required for its transaction. If they were interested in some measure, either for its defeat or approval, they must pay money to certain members before anything could be done. These men became disgusted. They felt it an outrage that such a state should exist at the State capital. So they united in an effort to stop it. They raised a fund and hired a detective agency and you know the rest."

Who is so ignorant as to think these "Prominent Business Men" only recently discovered that legislation was bought like other commodities?

It is an acknowledged fact that there has not been a legislature in Ohio for the past score years that has not been represented by "Interests," both big and little? Each year the legislators became more exacting and made greater demands on these "Prominent Business Men," until they concluded, last year, that they could be better and cheaper served by the election of Democratic legislature. But when they got it, they found that it not only demanded pay for legislation, but were greedier and more exacting than the Republicans had been. So in order to aid in maintaining the present system of capitalism (not to stop bribery) they employed a kidnaping detective agency to purify the legislature. Everybody knows that the code of the "Interests" is "Get legislation, cheaply if possible, but get it." Our "code of morals" needs revision, but the only method by which it may be revised is to change the ruling power from the present "Prominent Business Men" (Democrats and Republicans) to the party of the workingmen (Socialist), which is the only party with a remedy for the existing chaotic condition, and for the suppression of the present monetary rule.

A BOUQUET FOR JIM HENDERSON

One of the most difficult things to do is to fill an appointment to speak in the place of some one else who has been extensively advertised and who is prominently known as an orator. Comrade J. H. Henderson, our labor editor, was called upon to do this lately for Comrade F. G. Strickland, when the latter was taken ill. How well "Jim" made good is shown in the following voluntary endorsement from Sidney, Ohio:

On May 8, we had Comrade Jas. H. Henderson with us, filling this date for Comrade Strickland. Comrade Henderson lectured to a large and appreciative audience and his earnest plea for a social education, a higher civilization, to lead us from our present economic oppression, just caught the audience and impressed his hearers with the fact Socialism stands with outstretched hands to the oppressed of all creeds, of all colors, of all nations.

You made no mistake in sending us Comrade Henderson.

GENERAL SOCIALIST NEWS.

"J. Mahlon Barnes, Chicago, Ill.:

"Dear Comrade—Enclosed find receipt for the contribution of $100 from the National Executive Committee. The Seditious libel case will come up about the 12th of June. Next Monday the judge will decide whether or not what we had to say about the coming case in the columns of our paper were in contempt of his court.

"One of the articles which they think puts us in contempt was written and signed by Fred D. Warren. This case will cost us more than $1,000 if we are to employ the same high-priced lawyers we had the last time. In order to do all we can to prevent a precedent of this nature, we should have some assistance from Socialists in other parts. At the other trial we had good help, but as yet in this one we have not received more than $150 from comrades elsewhere. Socialists in this county are carrying subscription papers and several hundred dollars will be contributed locally before the trial.

"If you think this case justifies the best kind of a fight we can make, and it would not be asking too much of comrades in other parts, a call for help in the Bulletin would be appreciated at this end.

"Fraternally,

"The Free Press Defense Committee,
"S. L. FLANAGAN, Secretary."

The first national convention of the Slovak Socialists of America will be held in Cleveland, Ohio, May 28, 29 and 30. The program is: 1. The organization of the Slovak Socialist Party; 2. The Press; 3. Organization and Tactics. A letter has been received addressed to the National Executive Committee, requesting the presence of a national party representative.

On Wednesday, May 10, the Circuit Court at Tampa, Fla., sustained the decision of the lower court by which Comrade Jose de La Campa, Britt Russell and Joseph Bartlum, members of the Joint Advisory Board of the Cigar Makers' Union during the great lockout, were sentenced to one year imprisonment upon the charge of conspiracy. A general strike resulted immediately after the decision was rendered. Six thousand cigar makers are involved. The Trades Assembly and the Building Trades Council, each in special meeting, issued a call for all unions and friendly labor to join the general strike. The object of this strike is stated as follows: To protest against high-handed outrages and injustice, to bring the murderers of Figaretta and Albana to justice, and to bring about impeachment and removal of irresponsible and lawless officials.

TO ORGANIZED LABOR, COMRADES AND FRIENDS.

THE SOCIALIST will be on the firing line when our enemies are forgotten. For the last two months the mansions of capitalism have been dens of conspiracy, and their object of attack was the subjection of the radical press. One of the main sources of revenue to a newspaper is the advertising columns, and we regret to say that the enemy has been successful in curtailing this source of revenue for The Socialist.

In view of this fact we are now appealing to our friends to rally to our assistance by helping to increase our subscription list. We are issuing a special twenty-five cent rate, good for three months' subscription. These cards can be obtained at our office, 26 North High street, or from the Custodian of the Columbus Federation of Labor. Comrades, give us your help for our fight is your fight. Help us now.

BREWERY WORKERS.

President Kummer, of the Cincinnati Labor Council, also a prominent member of the Cincinnati Bottler's Union, was acquitted before the Hamilton county grand jury on a charge of contempt in an injunction proceedings. We congratulate Brother Kuhmer and his fellow victims on their victory.

STOP, LOOK AND LISTEN.

Judge Wright, the judge who sentenced Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison, has appointed a committee composed of corporation lawyers to pass on the United States Supreme Court decision. The daily press reports that the plaintiffs will be reindicted.

President Hoffstot, of the Pittsburg Pressed Steel Car Works, has been cleared of a bribery charge in that city. Hoffstot is one of the worst labor crushers in the country and one of Pittsburg's leading bankers. 'Nuf sed.

Representative Lowry, of Stark, has been indicted for soliciting a bribe. The amount asked for was $1500, according to the statement of Mr. Opha Moore. The sum mentioned was to be used in opposing the eight hour bill for women.

John Kirby, Jr., of Dayton, president of the Manufacturers' Association, has spoken. He demands laws to knock out labor unions. He is quoted as saying, "Unions are in open warfare on Jesus Christ." If birds are known by the notes they sing, we have reason to believe that Mr. Kirby is speaking for the wrong side of the house.

HAVE PATIENCE, BROTHER.

(For the Public.)

An editor of a Western Socialist paper notes that there is nearly a billion dollars worth of gold coin locked up in the United States Treasury, and wants to know what good it does.

We can partly enlighten him. While admitting as absurd the possibility that some day all the people will take a sudden notion to demand gold for their greenbacks, yet we must not overlook the recent vast concentration of wealth.

In but a very few years, Morgan will have all the greenbacks. What better psychological moment than that for him to decide to have the finest mansion that was ever built. What could be fined than a mansion of solid gold with solid gold fences and other things to match. He could take his greenbacks and get the gold, because he would have use for it.

There may be some radicals who would oppose such a conclusion as cataclysmic. For them we offer a few alternative suggestions. Why not put our navy on a gold basis? What a field for new experiments would thus be opened up. We could build gold battleships and try the effect on them of gold bullets fired by sailors in solid gold braid. We could fortify the Panama Canal with gold bricks. We could pass a law providing that hereafter all red tape should be yellow. We could cease the outworn practice of whitewashing our Senators and other political disgraces, and gild them instead. In times of financial stress, we would establish a free gold line for needy millionaires. In times of famine, we could call on the resourceful Burbank to convert this gold into food.

Let not thy heart be troubled. While there is gold, there is hope.

GAS, NOT DYNAMITE, DESTROYED TIMES.

Important Testimony from Various Sources Indicate the Whole Thing to Be a Frame-Up Against Organized Labor and Its Friends.

For several months prior to and on the morning of October 1, 1910, I was employed as a linotype operator on the Los Angeles Times, in its office in the building at First street and Broadway, Los Angeles, California. That I was at work in said Times office until 1 o'clock on the morning of October 1, 1910. At that time I went to the copy desk for a take and returned to my machine. I laid down the copy and was adjusting the stick in my machine when I heard a sizzling noise like a skyrocket when it leaves the ground. I looked up and saw a flash of red flame streaked in different shades directly in front of the copy desk. The red column had the shape of a huge sheaf of wheat. Instantly it struck the ceiling, and the huge column of flame went up through the ceiling. The sides seemed to spread in a mass of red flame, accompanied by little smoke. I ran over to the elevator shaft, at the northwest end of the building, to see if the street door was open, and finding it closed ran to the window between No. 5 and 6 machine and jumped to the street. Another man jumping from the same window fell on me, which caused injuries in addition to burns and shock.

E. B. ASPINALL.

Representative Wilson, of Pennsylvania, whose knowledge of mines and explosives caused him to be placed in charge of the congressional committee hearings which resulted in the establishment of mines, makes this statement:

In my twenty-seven years' experience as a miner, handling high explosives and noting their action, I have never known of a case where a great body of flame followed an explosion, such as is asserted to be the case in the Los Angeles Times catastrophe.

Representative Nichols, of the same state, who has also made a study of high explosives for twenty years, makes the following statement about this matter:

I do not believe it possible that dynamite or giant powder could have caused the explosion, for it is the rule in coal mines or parts of a coal mine evolving inflammable gases to prohibit the use of all explosives except dynamite or giant powder or other explosives, the basis of which is nitroglycerine, for the reason that the explosives named will not ignite gases, the action of these explosives being instantaneous and practically without flame. I have known of dynamite or giant powder being exploded in a section of a mine where gas was on fire, for the purpose of extinguishing the same, other efforts having previously failed.

GREAT STATE INSURANCE SCHEME.

To Benefit Over 14,000,000 Men and Women Workers of Britain—$2.50 a Week Sick Pay.

A great and far-reaching scheme for State insurance of over 14,000,000 workers of Britain was presented by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in the House of Commons.

Mr. Lloyd George's speech, which lasted two hours and twenty minutes, was eagerly followed by a crowded House, and cheered by Liberals and Tories alike.

Its chief points were as follows:

At present 42,000,000 workers insure against death, 6,000,000 against sickness, and only 1,400,000 against unemployment.

Despite heroic efforts, often by the women of the family, there are 250,000 lapsed policies every year, state the great friendly societies.

This means that the vast majority of the workmen at some time have been members of friendly societies, but have dropped out owing to circumstances over which they have no control.

The Government plan is divided into two portions—(1) sickness and (2) unemployment.

The sickness branch has also two parts, one compulsory, one voluntary.

There is a compulsory deduction from the wages of employees whose wages are below the limit of taxation (160 pounds).

A uniform deduction is proposed of 4d. a week from the wages of men and 3 d. from women; while the employer shall pay 5d. and the State 2d.

In the case of wages under 18s. a week the workers' contribution will be reduced proportionately, and the employer will pay the difference.

Everyone up to 65 will be admitted to insurance within 12 months of the Act passing.

In the case of a sick worker no deduction will be made if he cannot pay his contribution, and the fact will not be counted against him.

A margin up to 13 weeks will also be allowed for unemployment, and there will be a distress fund to help to pay arrears (through unemployment) of workmen's contributions.

The compulsory class will not include teachers, or the Army and Navy, which will be the subject of special provisions.

The voluntary scheme applies to persons not working for an employer—as a village blacksmith or a small trader.

All under 45 may join—themselves paying the "employers' contribution"—at 7d. per man and 6d. per woman. Persons over 45 may join at appropriate rates.

We anticipate 13,900,000 contributors, compulsory and voluntary, and also 300,000 under 15 years of age.

As to benefits, there will be free medical attendance and maternity benefits, the latter conditional in the case of women workers on not returning to work for four weeks.

1,500,00 pounds would be set aside for aiding local schemes for sanatoria for that scourge of the workers, consumption.

Insured workers could contribute voluntarily 1s. per year, and to each shilling the State Would add 4d. for the maintenance of those sanatoria.

Sick allowances will be (men) 10s. a week for three months, and then 5s. a week up to the end of six months, and (women) 7s. 6d. and 5s.

There will be a permanent disablement allowance of 5s. a week.

Young people under 15 will have no sick pay, but will get medical attendance and the benefit of the sanatoria.

Distribution of benefits would be chiefly through the great friendly societies.

County health committees will also be established with considerable powers.

The unemployment insurance scheme applies only to the two trades of building and engineering.

Workmen pay 1½d. a week and employers 2½d., and the State makes up one-fourth of the total cost.

Seven shillings a week unemployment pay would be given in the engineering trade, and 6s. in others. It would apply to 2,400,000 workmen.

For sick insurance employers in first year will contribute nine millions and employees 11 millions. In the first full working year the State would pay 4,563,000.

Including both schemes, the total sum to be raised in the first year is 27,000,000 pounds, of which the State will pay 2,500,000 pounds.—London Chronicle.

We present this startling British legislation more to prove the desperate condition prevailing among the unemployed in the British Isle today. Philip Snowden, the Socialist member of Parliament, calls the measure the biggest thing so far issued during the parliamentary term, but adds that he believes the amount required from the workers is too high.

To a Socialist this query presents itself: Will this scheme insure the workers against disemployment? This is pure paternalism, but the enactment of such legislation will cause the suicide of capitalism and the full development of the new social order and this will mean Socialism.

THREE MORE INDICTMENTS AGAINST LEGISLATORS.

The Franklin county grand jury on Tuesday rendered the following indictments:

No. 9652—Against Representative Owen J. Evans, solicitation of a bribe of $650, Feb. 14, from John F. Weiss of Canton, secretary of the Stark-Tuscarawas Brewing Company, to further the passage of Senate Bill No. 19, the original Dean bill amending the Rose county option law.

No. 9653—Against Representative A. Clark Lowry, solicitation of a bribe of $1500, March 13, from Opha T. Moore, secretary of the Ohio Manufacturers' Association, to further the defeat of amended Senate Bill No. 11, known as the Green nine-hour day bill for women.

No. 9654—Against Senator Edgar T. Crawford, solicitation of a bribe of $300, March 20, from William H. Cook of Springfield, secretary of the Ohio Butchers and Grocers' Association, for his vote and influence in connection with substitute Senate Bill No. 160, introduced by him, providing for the redemption of trading stamps in money.

PRINTERS' UNION ELECTS.

John Hayden was unanimously elected president and E. J. Dry vice-president, at the meeting of Columbus Typographical Union No. 6, last Wednesday night.

William E. Bird enters on his ninth consecutive term as secretary, and Charles Drumm will be delegate to the international convention, which will meet in San Francisco in August.

Other officers are: Recording secretary, Gilbert C. Berlew; sergeant-at-arms, A. N. Rice; conductor, Fred Irwin; trustee, Wade Hampton.

BIRDS OF A FEATHER FLY TOGETHER.

The Ohio Legislative Mysteries of the Mysterious—Who Are the Real Criminals?

The so-called graft exposure in the Ohio Legislature is worthy of public consideration. To do the case justice, it will be necessary to note past events, then we prefer to allow our readers to reach their own verdict.

In the first place, the rumor has gone out that the Woman's Eight Hour bill was placed before the legislature to allow unscrupulous individuals to hold up the manufacturers for money. From an organized labor standpoint this statement is a deliberate falsehood, and organized labor demands that the reason for suspicion be given to the public. We also present for public thought one of the many circulars sent out by some of the men who are posing as martyrs and are demanding that the legislature be purified and the guilty sent to prison. Please read the names of the officers carefully in the circular printed below. Note the specific terms used to extort money. Also notice who receives this money:

Messrs. _____
Columbus, Ohio.

Gentlemen:

Herewith please find circular showing the status of S. B. No. 11 (Eight Hour Day for Women Bill). Every effort will be made to have the House strike out the amendments we secured in the Senate and pass an eight hour day bill. Unless there is powerful opposition by employers, this is likely to happen. If we are actively supported by employers, we believe we can defeat this bill.

Sign the enclosed application NOW. THE DUES ARE $10.00 A YEAR; THIS ISN'T MUCH, BUT IT WILL HELP TO DEFRAY THE HEAVY EXPENSE IN MAKING THIS FIGHT TO PROTECT YOUR INTERESTS. IT COSTS A LOT OF MONEY TO KEEP ATTORNEYS AT COLUMBUS CONSTANTLY and to carry on an expensive publicity campaign and this is the only successful method. WE ARE LEAVING NOTHING UNDONE TO DEFEAT THIS MOST UNJUST bill and we urge you to let us have your application at once. Don't hesitate when your interests are jeopardized by such legislation. MANY LARGE EMPLOYERS OF WOMEN ARE CONTRIBUTING IN EXCESS OF THE REGULAR DUES, FOR THIS YEAR ONLY, FROM $15 TO $100. If you do likewise, we will not object.

Please see your Representative if possible at once, and let us know what they agree to do about the bill. Thanking you for your co-operation, we are

Faithfully yours,

ALLIED EMPLOYERS' ASSOCIATION OF OHIO;

By CHAS. F. WALTZ,
Secretary.

During one of the public hearings on the Woman's Eight Hour bill, Ex-Secretary of State Daniel J. Ryan appeared against the measure. At the next meeting Ex-Governor James Campbell occupied the same position. In his closing remarks Mr. Campbell said, "I wish it to be understood that I am here this evening in the interests of the Ohio Manufacturers' Association and they are not against ORGANIZED LABOR." We present a clipping taken from one of the Columbus daily papers and we leave our readers to judge the veracity of Mr. Campbell's statement. We also desire to point to the fact that the name of Chas. F. Walz appears also among the visitors' names at the "Otis Reception." Mr. Opha Moore is a Republican, so is his henchmen, Chas. Geerish. Is it not strange that Republican politicians should be sent to petition a Democratic legislature? Again, did the manufacturers think that they were not only purchasing the legal service of Ex-Governor James Campbell, but greater still, his political prestige as a Democratic leader? Have these gentlemen ever heard of the power of PUBLIC OPINION? Read the following clipping. Note the connection with those on the official roster of the Allied Employers' Association of Ohio:

"OPHA MOORE MEETS GEN. OTIS.

"Opha Moore, secretary of the Ohio Manufacturers' Association, met General Harrison Gray Otis of Los Angeles at Dayton Thursday at a luncheon following a visit to the National Cash Register Company. Many manufacturers were present, including David M. Parry, former president of the National Manufacturers' Association; Walter Drew, special counsel for the National Erectors' Association, who was arrested for kidnaping in connection with the Los Angeles dynamiting case; Booth Tarkington, author; Phillip J. Bird, manager of the National Manufacturers' Association, and Chas. F. Waltz, secretary of the Cincinnati Employers' Association; J. M. Manley, secretary of the Cincinnati branch of the Retail Trades Association."

Let it be understood that we are in accord with the right of the manufacturers to protect their interests by organized effort, but when they allow themselves to be hoodwinked by purveyors of "important inside information," also the "service of the easy boss," and these slimy creatures have been used for years to supply their clientele with "safe men" for all legislative bodies, we have a right to condemn their methods. If the Ohio Manufacturers' Association and the Allied Employers' Association of Ohio have been "milked," the crime has been committed by the puppets they have hired to do their dirty work in the past. In closing, we charge that the circular presented in this article must prove to our readers that the Manufacturers' Association is to blame for the graft prevailing in our legislative bodies all over the country. Let the manufacturers inform the citizenship in what capacity Mr. Opha Moore, Mr. Chas. F. Waltz and Mr. Chas. Geerish are retained for during the sessions of the Ohio Legislature. Your silence will mean contempt for the voice of the people.

ARE WOMEN PERSONS?

Religious freedom is still denied in Russia, although it was proclaimed by imperial decree six years ago. Any fifty or more persons who had left the State Church were to be allowed to form a congregation and hold religious services, after signing a certain declaration and presenting it to the Provincial Administration Board. Permissions are, however, refused on all sorts of pretexts. Fifty-nine Baptists of Vladikavkas applied for leave but nineteen of the signatures were those of women, and the Provincial Administrative Board decided that women were not persons. A number of other congregations have been refused permits on the same ground. Where this excuse will not serve, some other is found. The applicants are kept waiting for years, and are generally refused at last.—Exchange.

Women should vote because they are unlike men, because they have different needs, a different point of view, a different way of reaching conclusions. Feminine talents, which are invaluable everywhere else in life, should be equally useful in politics.—Dorothy Dix.

LETTER FROM HELEN KELLER.

Extracts from a letter recently written by Helen Keller to Mrs. Leo Grindon, president of the Leo Grindon Life Study Association, of Manchester, England:

"I have thought much lately about the question of woman suffrage, and I have followed in my Braille magazines the recent elections in Great Britain. I do not believe that the present government has any intention of giving woman a part in national politics, or of doing justice to Ireland, or the workingmen in England. So long as the franchise is denied to a large number of those who serve and benefit the public, so long as those who vote are at the beck and call of party machines, the people are not free, and the day of woman's freedom seems still to be in the far future. It makes no difference whether the Tories or the Liberals in Great Britain, the Democrats or the Republicans in the United States, or any party of the old model in any other country, get the upper hand. To ask any such party for woman's rights is like asking a czar for democracy. Are not the dominant parties managed by the ruling classes; that is, the propertied classes, solely for the profit and privilege of the few? They use millions to help them into power. They tell us, like children, that our safety lies in voting for them. They toss us crumbs of concession to make us believe that they are working in our interest. Then they exploit the resources of the nation, not for us, but for the interests which they represent and uphold. We, the people, are not free. Our democracy is but a name. We vote? What does that mean? It means that we choose between two bodies of real, though not avowed, autocrats. We choose between Tweedledum and Tweedledee. We elect expensive masters to do our work for us, and then blame them because they work for themselves and for their class.

"The enfranchisement of women is a part of the vast movement to enfranchise all mankind. You ask for votes for women. What good can votes do you when ten-elevenths of the land of Great Britain belongs to two hundred thousand, and only one-eleventh to the rest of the forty millions? Have your men, with their millions of votes, freed themselves from this injustice? When one shows the masters that half the wealth of Great Britain belongs to twenty-five thousand persons, when one says that this is wrong, that this wrong lies at the bottom of all social injustice, including the wrongs of women, the highly respectable newspapers cry, 'Socialist! Agitator! Stirrer of Class Strife!' Well, let us agitate, let us confess that we are thorough-going Social Democrats, or anything else that they please to label us. But let us keep our eyes on the central fact that a few, a few British men own the majority of British men and all British women. The few own the many because they possess the means of livelihood of all. In our splendid republic, where at election time all are 'free and equal,' a few Americans own the rest. Eighty per cent. of our people live in rented houses, and one-half the rest are mortgaged. The country is governed for the richest, for the corporations, the bankers, the land speculators, and for the exploiters of labor. Surely we must free men and women together before we can free women.

"The majority of mankind are working people. So long as their fair demands—the ownership and control of their lives and livelihood—are set at naught, we can have neither men's rights nor woman's rights. The majority of mankind are ground down by industrial oppression in order that the small remnant may live in ease. How can women hope to help themselves while we and our brothers are slaves against the powerful organizations which modern parties represent, and which contrive to rule the people? They rule the people because they own the means of physical life—land and tools—and the nourishers of intellectual life—the press, the church and the school.

"You say that the conduct of the women suffragists is being disgracefully misrepresented by the British press. Here in America the leading newspapers misrepresent in every possible way the struggles of toiling men and women who seek relief. News that reflects ill upon the employers is skillfully concealed—news of dreadful conditions under which laborers are forced to produce, news of thousands of men maimed in mills and mines and left without compensation, news of famines and strikes, news of thousands of women driven to a life of shame, news of little children compelled to labor before their hands are ready to drop their toys. Only here and there in a small and as yet uninfluential paper is the truth told about the workman and the fearful burdens under which he staggers.

"I am indignant at the treatment of the brave, patient women of England. I am indignant when the women cloakmakers of Chicago are abused by the police. I am filled with anguish when I think of the degradation, the enslavement and the industrial tyranny which crush millions and drag down women and helpless children.

"I know the deep interest which you and your husband always took in God's poor, and your sympathy invites me to open my heart to you and express these opinions about grave problems."

CALIFORNIA FOR SOCIALISM.

(By A. M. Simons.)

The fight that is centering around the coming trial in Los Angeles is but one battle in the great class war. The working class must wage that battle with the aim of the whole war in view. That is what the capitalists are doing. Only the foolishly blind believe that the conviction of criminals is the object of that prosecution. Not to avenge the killing of human beings, or even the destruction of property, are hundreds of thousands of dollars raised, armies of spies employed and the whole machinery of the press set in motion by the exploiters of labor.

Every month in the year sees holocausts of death for which these exploiters are responsible, beside which the blowing up of the Los Angeles Times was a mere incident. But no effort is made to capture or convict the guilty.

The very methods pursued testify to the innocence of the accused. Fear that court proceedings in Indiana would expose the weakness of the case against the men is the only excuse for adopting illegal methods to gain possession of their bodies.

This case is but the latest step in carrying out the declaration of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association quoted by Charles Edward Russell in the Coming Nation three months ago: "We will crush the labor unions in Los Angeles first then we will wipe them out in San Francisco."

Since the war has been declared by the exploiters is for the extermination of organized resistance by Labor, the fight of Labor must be to strengthen that organized resistance.

There is one way to prevent kidnaping of Labor leaders. There is one method by which Labor may be guaranteed the right to organize.

That is for Labor to capture the political powers.

We do not hear the employers' associations in Milwaukee, Butte, Berkeley, Flint, or in any of the more than twenty other cities controlled by Socialists talking about crushing the unions, any more than we hear of kidnaping of labor leaders.

In this fight there is a natural division of labor. There is field in which the economic organizations can be most effective. They can and will conduct the fight in the courts. If there is to be any talk of striking it should come from them. They would be the ones to suffer by such a strike, and for those who would lose no positions and suffer no injury from such a strike to urge it is worse than impudent interference.

But Labor has two powerful arms with which to strike. One of these is the political arm—the Socialist party.

Just at this moment it is with this arm that the heaviest blow can be struck.

The Socialist vote in California has been almost doubling annually.

Judging by the recent municipal elections it is easily possible to carry Los Angeles this fall and capture the state at the presidential election in 1912. A united effort by the Socialists of the United States during the next few months will do this.

A Socialist majority in the California legislature, a solid Socialist vote in the presidential electoral college from California, a half dozen Socialist congressmen from that state and the Socialists in control of the leading industrial cities would not alone free the men who have just been kidnaped.

It would forever end the kidnaping of union officials.

It would give absolute security to every union in California. It would unionize every industry from San Diego to the northern boundary. It would stop the war upon union labor throughout the country. It would carry the war into the camp of the exploiters and turn their present insolent attack into a hopeless defeat."

BEASTS.

Before a lion's cage in a Zoo stood a number of onlookers watching the keeper with great interest as he fed the beautiful animal. The lion pounced hungrily upon the great piece of meat which the keeper threw in with a long iron fork, then lay down and, holding the meat between his claws, tore off great chunks from time to time.

Presently there came from some hidden corner a pretty little gray mouse. She ran to the lion without fear, climbing over a stone that lay at the big creature's feet, and began to gnaw at the same piece of meat.

The people outside became intensely interested. Everyone expected that the great, strong lion would crush the little weak mouse with one blow of his terrible paw. But nothing of the sort happened.

The lion calmly ate his meat, grunted with satisfaction, and lay down in his corner. The mouse, too, was satisfied and now jumped down over the low fence to go to her nest, somewhere in the garden.

But the same people who had just admired the good nature of the lion, who, in spite of his strength had not touched the little thief, hastened to kill the little mouse with umbrellas and canes. A large man stepped on her so that she was killed. Who was the beast?—(From the German Arbeiter Jugend.)

KARL MARX.

When people complain of low wages, of high prices, of unjust laws, we always tell them that Socialism will remove all these evils. But has it ever occurred to you that there was a time when no-one knew this word. Socialism, when no-one seemed to know how the lot of the poor workman could be improved? People already began to realize that the capitalists or bosses were growing rich on their earnings, but did not know how to change this condition. Some people tried living together in colonies where they worked together and divided equally the money they earned. But this did not help matters very much.

It was during this time that Karl Marx lived. He was born on the 5th day of May, 1818, at a place in Germany called Treves (Trier). His father was a lawyer, a learned man, from whom Karl Marx learned much that helped him later in life. When he was old enough Marx went to college. He, too, was to study law, but could not become interested in it. Instead of studying he would read everything he could find about the workers of his country and their attempts to improve their condition. At the same time he did all he could to help them, indeed, did it so thoroughly that the Prussian government stopped the publication of the Rhenish Gazette, a newspaper Marx was editing. Marx, however, persisted in his agitation for the workmen and was at last forced to flee from Germany to Paris to escape punishment. But here, too, he was pursued, until at last, after living a short time in Brussels, in Belgium, he found a safe home in London. Here he spent many years in study, working out, bit by bit, the idea which we today call Socialism.

Perhaps he would never have succeeded had it not been for the help of a man of whom you all have heard, one of our greatest Socialists, Friedrich Engels. The friendship of Marx and Engels is one of the most beautiful things that the history of Socialism has to show us. These two men, both with wonderful minds, worked together for many years for the welfare of the working class. While Engels lived in London they were together almost daily, so that Marx's children called Engels their second father. But even during ten years in which the two men were forced to live apart, hardly a day passed on which they did not write to each other. Marx did nothing before he had consulted his friend. Engels was always ready and willing to do everything for Marx and his family. Together they wrote a short book called the "Communist Manifesto," in which the idea, called Socialism, is clearly described. This book, with another, larger and more detailed, Karl Marx's "Capital," is the foundation for the work of the Socialists all over the world.

You children are too young to understand all that Marx's books did for the working-class, but you can learn lessons just as valuable from his life. You can see that an idea which makes possible a friendship so steadfast and firm as that of Marx and Engels must in itself be worthy of our support. And as beautiful as this friendship was Marx's love for his wife. Jenny Marx was the daughter of a wealthy German nobleman named von Westphalen. She had never known what it was to be poor, but she gave up everything to marry the wonderful man whom she loved, and went with him from country to country, living through days and weeks of fear and danger, until at last they found a home in the most miserable part of London. They were very poor. Marx wrote articles for newspapers, among them for the New York Tribune, which at that time, under Horace Greeley was very favorable to the Socialist doctrine. His ideas, however, were not of the kind that the great wealthy newspapers wanted. Just as today they wished to please the men in power, the capitalists, against whose interests Marx was fighting. So his work was poorly paid and his family had to struggle hard to keep alive. But they gladly bore everything to help their beloved father. For despite his great work which took almost all of his attention, Marx found time to be a close friend to his children. Often visitors found him crawling on the floor with one of them riding on his back or romping around like a child with a happy group of youngsters about him. He never ordered his children, never found it necessary to use the word "forbid." For they loved him so sincerely that they did everything in their power to please him and never tried to do anything which might cause him displeasure. He had five beautiful children, but two of them, a splendid boy and girl, died as a result of the hard times they had to live through. The death of his children affected Marx very deeply. Each time one of them was taken from him it seemed as if all joy had left his life, and only his intense love for all humanity, his desire to help the great working class kept him ever hopeful at his work. But when, after forty years of faithful service at her husband's side his wife, Jenny, was torn away from him, Marx seemed to lose all interest in life. his health failed rapidly, and he died soon afterward.

The family life of Karl Marx is a beautiful example of what Socialism will do. It will bring helpful consideration, and loving understanding where today there is constant strife and misunderstanding.

Karl Marx's daughters have been faithful to his memory. Only three of them reached the age when they could continue the work their father began; and they did it splendidly. All three married prominent Socialists. The one daughter, Eleanor, became the wife of Dr. Aveling and rendered valuable service to the party movement in England. She died several years ago. Jennie married Comrade Longuet, but died a few years afterwards. The only living daughter, Laura, is the wife of one of our leading French comrades, Paul Lafargue, and is giving all her energy and power toward carrying on the work her father so nobly began.—The Little Socialist Magazine.

THE LIE AND TRUTH ABOUT MILWAUKEE.

(Special News Article.)

By Carl D. Thompson.

What is evidently a nation-wide campaign of misrepresentation, distortion and misinterpretation, is being carried on in the plutocratic press against the Milwaukee administration. While this is to be expected, nevertheless the interests of truth and the welfare of the people demand that the facts be known.

1. It is charged that the Socialists have raised the taxes. The truth is: (a) The Socialists so far have had nothing to do with fixing the taxes; (b) Even as it is the tax rate in Milwaukee is lower than that of any other city of its size in America; (c) Insofar as the tax rates are high or burdensome, it is the fault of the rich tax dodgers. There are many millions of dollars of property that escape taxation, a practice that the present administration proposes to stop; (d) The policies of the present administration if carried out, will establish revenue producing enterprises which will relieve the burden of taxation rather than increase it.

2. It is charged that wild and fantastic schemes proposed by the Socialists will surely raise taxes next year. The truth is: (a) The program of the Socialists is not wild and fantastic; (b) The tax limit and the bond limit are rigidly fixed by state law and charter convention; so that no excessive increase in expenditures would be possible even if the Socialists contemplated it. It was the "wild and fantastic" schemes of the big plutocratic interests, grafters and boodlers of the past administrations in city, state and nation that made it necessary to safeguard public expenditures, and not the programme of honest and efficient administration Milwaukee now has.

City's Credit Better Than Ever.

3. It is charged that the Socialist administration has destroyed the credit of the city. The truth is, it never was better, and probably never quite so good as at the present time. More bond companies are bidding for Milwaukee bonds during the present administration than ever before. The "Economist," one of the leading financial papers of this country, said recently: "The Milwaukee bonds have sold at two points better than those of Philadelphia. Milwaukee bonds are as greatly sought after as they ever were". The last bonds disposed of by the city recently brought a premium of $14,365, which was even better than had been expected.

Industrial Conditions Improved

4. It is charged that the Socialist administration has caused an industrial depression in Milwaukee, that capital is frightened, confidence destroyed, factories closed and commercial havoc wrought. The facts are: (a) The commercial and industrial conditions in Milwaukee show a normal improvement. The total receipts at the Milwaukee postoffice for 1910 showed an increase of $149,539.90, which is rather larger than a normal increase. The postoffice receipts were $75,365 greater, and the bank clearings $26,911,400 greater during the six months following Seidel's election than during the corresponding months of the preceding year; (b) The value of the year's production of the Milwaukee industries was $6,683,649 more this year than last. From which it can be clearly seen that there was not very much capital frightened away. There was $3,795,218 more paid in wages this year than last; there were 3602 more working people employed this year than last; and there were 127 more industrial plants at work this year than last. These figures I have taken from the January 1st, 1911, issue of the Milwaukee Sentinel's annual Trade Review, pages 1 and 3.

Otto H. Falk is the president of the Merchant and Manufacturers' Association of Milwaukee. This organization is probably the strongest and most aggressive opponent of Socialism in the city. Yet Mr. Falk says in a letter to the Sentinel, published in the above Review of January 1st, 1911, speaking on trade conditions in Milwaukee: "Some of our industries outside of iron and steel ran not only full capacity during the entire year, but at times strained their capacity in order to supply the demand for their goods. Many local manufacturers were fairly active while their competitors in the East were depressed. Large additions have been made to a number of manufacturing plants, and new industries have located in our midst. The jobbing and wholesale interests have done as well as have the same interests in other cities. On the whole they have done more than held their own, and have extended their territory and made a handsome increase to their sales.

The causes which lead to the peculiarities of the year were not local. The great bulk of our products goes to the four ends of the country, and the industrial symptoms here are indicative of a condition prevailing throughout the nation."

Mr. Frank Putney Haight writing at the same time says: "The comparison of the figures of industrial conditions in 1909 with those of 1910, makes it clearly evident that Milwaukee is supporting the phenomenal gain made in 1909 in nearly all lines, and proving the solidity of growth." Farther on he says: "The volume of [illegible] business for the year amounted to $446,514,011. This shows a gain of .118 per cent over 1909, and from every quarter there is reported the greatest confidence in a marked increase for 1911."

5. It is charged that the Socialist administration in Milwaukee injures business. The facts in the matter, according to the report of the treasurer of the Chamber of Commerce, published in the Evening Wisconsin (Republican), is: The increase in receipts of 1911 over the corresponding period of 1910 was $16,381.46. The record with regard to the new investments in Milwaukee during 1911 was most amazing. During the first four months of this year the new investments reached $14,216,000, which was vestments of the preceding year. Capital doesn't seem to be very badly frightened according to that.

Sickness Decreasing.

6. It is charged that an epidemic of scarlet fever is raging in the city of Milwaukee, due to the incompetency and neglect of the Socialist health department. Th facts are there is no epidemic of scarlet fever in Milwaukee. There were 349 more cases under Dr. Bading's previous administration during the four months ending December 31, 1909, than there were under the corresponding four months of Dr. Kraft's administration. In 1909 there were 855 cases during the four months ending December 31, and in 1910, under Dr. Kraft's administration, there were only 506 cases during the corresponding period. In every single month there were from fifty to a hundred less cases under Dr. Kraft than under Dr. Bading. And 855 cases of scarlet fever in four months in a population of 375,000 does not constitute an epidemic. No one thought of charging Mr. Bading's administration with having an epidemic of scarlet fever. If so, much much less then may the Socialists be charged with having an epidemic, since there were 349 cases ess than under Dr. Bading.

7. It is charged that Dr. Kraft does not believe in milk inspection. The truth is that the milk inspection as conducted at present is the most efficient in the history of the Milwaukee health department.

8. It is charged that the health department has made a rule against requiring quarantine of contagious diseases. The truth is that the rules governing quarantine are made by the State Board of Health, and not by the city at all. Quarantine was never more rigidly nor more carefully observed in Milwaukee than at the present time.

Another Lie Nailed.

9. It is charged that Dr. Kraft claims to have diplomas from various medical colleges and that as a matter of fact he has not. The facts are that Dr. Kraft has diplomas from the American Medical College of St. Louis, the Barnes Medical College of the same city, and in addition a Wisconsin State License No. 1176, Register B, and also medical state licenses from Illinois, Missouri and California. All of these are on file, properly signed and attested, in the office of the Commissioner of Public Health in the City Hall, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Enormous Saving to City.

10. It is charged that the Socialists have been extravagant in city expenditures. The truth is: (a) The Socialist administration saved $30,000 in street construction work within the first month of their administration. (b) The purchasing department saved $18,000 within the first three-months with a total of $48,000 in sight as possible saving for the year. (c) The City Attorney's department has won so far $465,000 worth of cases that were brought against the city. (d) The City Clerk's department has saved $3,500. (e) The Comptroller's department $1,200 on salaries alone. (f) The Mayor's department $1,000. (g) The Health department $1,200. The total savings due to the efficiency of the Socialist administration already in sight amounts to over $570,000 per year.

Model Franchise.

11. It is charged that the effort to draw a model franchise was the most ludicrous thing ever attempted in this country and a complete failure. The truth is that the franchise is drawn upon the basis of franchises in actual operation in other cities in America and Europe and simply embodies the features of an up to date franchise. Wall Street didn't like the franchise, and rejected it. The water, wind and graft are all knocked out.

Not Wild and Visionary.

12. It is charged that the Socialist administration is trying to force onto the people of Milwaukee schemes that are wild and visionary. The truth in the matter is that the measures said to be wild and visionary, and against which most objection is raised, are measures which former administrations had proposed and advocated, as follows: (a) The river park project, for example, so bitterly assailed by all the old party politicians, was recommended by the Metropolitan Park Commission, the president of which is a prominent Republican politician, who, before the Socialists came into power, not only recommended the measure, but strongly advocated it. Practically every newspaper in the city enthusiastically endorsed the project until the old party politicians made it a political issue. Now because the Socialists advance it, it has suddenly become "wild and visionary." (b) The railway terminal station project, which involved the issuing of a million dollars worth of mortgage certificates in order to make it possible, was also a project advocated by former administrations, and strongly supported by various commercial clubs and progressive citizens. It becomes wild and visionary when the Socialists take it up. (c) The electric lighting plant has been endorsed by both Republican and Democratic parties since 1898. The matter has been four times submitted to referendum of the people of this city, and every time by overwhelming majorities approved. The Socialists are actually forcing the issue to completion. And this is what makes it "wild and visionary." (d) Home rule for the city of Milwaukee is another one of the measures of which the Socialists have made a very strong and persistent fight, until at last every political party in the state is committed to the idea and has promised it in their platform. Also wild and visionary. So as a matter of fact, the very measure that the capitalistic press and politicians and grafter and boodlers are so furiously attacking now as being wild and visionary, are measures which their own parties had heretofore advocated and pretended to favor. Now

16. It is charged that the Socialist that the Socialists are actually putting these measures through, the whole bunch of capitalistic politicians are compelled to show their hands.

The Unemployed.

13. It is charged that there are 20,000 to 30,000 men out of work in Milwaukee, a condition due directly to the Socialist administration. The facts are, there are no more men out of work in the city of Milwaukee than usual under similar conditions, nor more than usual in cities of this size in America. And it is certain that the responsible for the condition. As a matter of fact, they are relieving it.

Mrs. Van Wick, general secretary of the Associated Charities of Milwaukee, declares: "There are not 25,000 men out of work in Milwaukee. I doubt whether there are half that many. And certainly the Socialist administration absolutely has nothing to do with the condition."

Burt Hall, secretary of the Children's Aid Society, says: "I am not a Socialist, but I desire to be just, and I wish to say emphatically that I do not believe the Socialist administration should be held responsible in the slightest degree for the rather unusually large number of unemployed in the city."

Wm. J. Fairbairn, secretary of the Metal Trades and Foundry Bureau, says: "Any suggestion that the Socialist administration is to any degree responsible for the number of unemployed in Milwaukee is nonsense and preposterous to my mind."

The above quotations are given by J. M. Maxwell in his splendid series of articles, published in the Indianapolis Star, beginning Sunday, April 9 to 16.

Workers Well Organized.

14. It is charged that the Socialist administration has created a great fear in the minds of many people that labor troubles will arise, strikes and disturbances which will interfere with the industrial life of the city. As a matter of fact, however, there have been fewer strikes and less labor troubles in the city of Milwaukee than in any similar industrial center in the country. The working class are better organized, but depend more upon peaceful, political action than upon trades union methods alone. The Garment Workers strike of last winter, for example, was settled without violence and almost without disturbance. There have been no serious strikes or labor troubles in the city of Milwaukee for years.

15. It is charged that the Socialist administration was responsible for the use of cheap fire hose which resulted in the killing of five Milwaukee firemen. As a matter of fact, it was the falling of the roof that killed the firemen and not the hose.

Platform Pledges Kept.

16. It is charged that the Socialists have not kept their platform pledges. The fact in the matter is, that even, according to the critics themselves, six out of fourteen platform pledges are carried out in one year, and the Socialists are in office two years, how many would be left at that rate in the end? However, of the fourteen mentioned in their list at least five have either been actually achieved or advanced to the utmost limit possible by the Socialists, while the critics fail entirely to make mention of more than a dozen achievements of the administration which were not promised in the platform, but which have been carried out.

THERE IS A REASON

Why the Associated Press Prints What It Does About Milwaukee.

(By Carl D. Thompson.)

The Socialists of America, especially in the cities, ought not to criticise or blame the Associated Press of this country for printing what it [illegible] about Milwaukee. They have reasons—many reasons and quite sufficient, too.

And they should not be blamed for printing lies about Milwaukee, either. What else can they do? If they told the truth, all the cities would go Socialist. So they are doing the best they can. And there are several reasons. We ask our readers to glance over the following list:

1. In the first place there is an absolutely honest administration in power. Why should not the capitalistic press protect?

2. The grafter has been put out of business in Milwaukee. That is quite sufficient to set every capitalistic newspaper in America to shrieking.

3. The working class in Milwaukee has equal protection under the law. They are granted the right of free speech, of assemblage and of peaceful persuasion. Very naturally this does not suit the capitalistic forces that have been accustomed to having their own ways against the working class without respect to their constitutional rights.

4. If things go on as they have been in Milwaukee, the tax dodgers will have to pay their taxes. And if that should happen in Milwaukee, other cities will follow the example. Now that is pretty serious for the tax dodger not only in Milwaukee, but throughout the country.

5. The private contractor can no longer skimp his job and steal from the city of Milwaukee. Now that is fearful, outrageous. Such things as that, if they are allowed to go on, will break up the whole grafting business. The capitalistic press must help to stop it.

6. The Socialists in Milwaukee have criticised the courts. If that is permitted to go on everybody may be expected ultimately to really question whether or not the laws of this land are what they ought to be, and whether the courts are infallible. This, too, ought to be stopped. The capitalistic press is expected to help to stop it.

7. Because of the new methods of accounting introduced by the Socialists, every financial transaction of the city is an open book that any citizen can read and understand. Now how are the thieves and grafters going to do business under such a system?

8. The Socialist administration of Milwaukee has been such a demonstration of honest and efficient government, that at least a score of American cities have caught the inspiration, followed suit and gone socialistic. When Socialists carried Milwaukee, such a thing as this was hardly expected. Since the effects have been so decided and widespread, something must be done to beat back the rising tide.

9. No more franchises can be stolen in Milwaukee. While the capitalists thought they had secured every franchise that was of any importance from former administrations, it now develops that after all there are others that may be of vital importance to the capitalists of Wall Street and elsewhere. But if the present state of affairs continues in Milwaukee, nobody has a ghost of a chance to steal these things. Now that will never do. It must be stopped.

10. The unemployed are actually being relieved in Milwaukee. The whole city administration is concerned about the problem, is doing everything it can to relieve immediate need and has a comprehensive program that it is steadily urging upon the state and the nation, which if once put into operation, would solve the unemployed problem completely. But if that should happen, where would the capitalist get his cheap labor? How would he be able to keep wages down and the working class in subjection? This sort of thing, if allowed to come to its logical conclusion, would break up the capitalistic system.

11. As a result of the success of the Socialist administration in Milwaukee the Socialist movement of America has a representative in the halls of the United States Congress. This is really serious, because while one vote in Congress does not amount to much, it is nevertheless an entering wedge, and in this case a pretty good wedge at that.

12. At the first real opportunity, Socialism has demonstrated in Milwaukee, not only the absolute honesty and integrity of its impeachment of capitalism, but its practical constructive value as well. If this is allowed to stand the last argument against it is gone. Can you blame the capitalistic press for being nervous?

In short, the success of Socialism in Milwaukee has been such a revelation of the power and possibility for good, that it is the beginning of the end of the darkness and distress of capitalism, and the beginning of a new and higher civilization.

No wonder, therefore, that the capitalistic press is denouncing, lying, shrieking and screaming.

They have reasons, comrades. Please do not forget the reasons. And do not let the people forget them.

The Workers in "The Storm Center Of Socialism" Have A Chance To Make Good.

All That Is Needed Is "A Long Pull, A Strong Pull, and A Pull Altogether."

The Socialist Makes Fair Proposition To Secure The Co-Operation Of All For The Next Campaign.

READ EVERY WORD OF OUR OFFER.

The Socialist wishes to co-operate with the City Central Committee, the Ward Branches and the precinct workers of the Socialist party of Columbus in educating the voters and organizing our forces so that we may reap the full benefit of our educational work.

We believe that one of the most effective means of educating the workers and of propagating Socialism is through the columns of a good Socialist paper. The paper goes each week into the home and carries some message, some truth, to each of its readers. While we make no apology for our paper, we are determined that each issue shall be an improvement over the previous one.

The subscription list is the life of any paper. Without it, it dies. We want at least 10,000 subscribers on our books before the campaign opens. We must have them if The Socialist is to be the power for good that it should be in the fight of 1911 in Columbus, "the Storm Center of Socialism."

OUR PLAN.

Here is our plan to put money into the treasuries of the City Central Committee and of the Ward Branches for use in organization and propaganda work, as they may determine:

1. We will pay to each Ward Branch 12½ per cent. of all money for subscriptions collected and turned in by its members to The Socialist.

2. We will pay over to the treasury of the City Central Committee of Local Columbus 12½ per cent. of all money collected and paid in by the Ward Branches for subscriptions to The Socialist.

LIST OF PRIZES.

As Prizes or special rewards for the workers we offer the following:

1. To the Branch turning in the largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist, in proportion to membership of the Branch in good standing, we will give $75 in books, to be selected by the Branch, or in money.

2. To the Branch turning in the second largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist, under the foregoing conditions, we will give $50 in books or money.

3. To the Branch turning in the third largest amount of money on subscriptions as stated we will give $25 in books or money.

INDIVIDUAL REWARDS.

1. To the individual turning in the largest amount of money on subscriptions to The Socialist we will pay $25 in gold.

2. To the individual turning in the second largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist we will pay $15 in gold.

3. To the individual who turns in the third largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist we will pay $10 in gold.

CONDITIONS.

The only conditions we impose in this contest are that the members of Branches will get all their sub. cards from the literature or special agent of their respective Branches and that this agent will at all times have on hand a supply of sub. cards and make returns to The Socialist of all subscriptions received not later than Wednesday of each week. Sub. cards will be supplied by this office at any time. This contest will be limited to Branches and Locals in Franklin County.

This Contest Began On Saturday, Feb. 11, and Will Close Tuesday, November 7, 1911

Information as to details of this contest will be cheerfully furnished by this office.

OUR BOOSTERS.

J. H. Quillen, of Syracuse, Ohio, has enlisted in our army.

Comrade O. G. Van Schoyck, of the Eighth Ward, gets in under the wire with some new ones.

Comrade George Knox, of the Ninth, got after a few, and got them, too.

Comrade F. W. Seaman, of the Fourth, is not idle by any means. His name shows up among the Boosters.

Comrade W. E. Bues—but what's the use, Bues shows up regularly, any how. He would rather get a new subscriber than eat.

Comrade Georgia Crook, of Tenth, is one of the gang who never tires.

Comrade Curtis Ross, of the Third, is in line this week, as is also J. P. Fuller, of the Sixth.

Comrade J. O. Van Tassell, the Union Barber, had us send out a few sample copies, and in a few days came in with several new subs. The folks liked The Socialist.

Comrade J. P. Ross, from the Hilltop, is a consistent "booster" and Comrade E. B. Eubanks, of the Twelfth, demonstrated his loyalty.

George Brown, of Minersville, Ohio, had "lined" the hustlers for The Socialist.

MOORE TELLS THE REASON.

Orpha Moore, secretary of the Manufacturers' Association, has testified before the grand jury. He denied that the association is officially responsible for the legislative investigation. But, it is stated, that he said "certain business interests" did start the ball rolling. Just what "interests" he was not at liberty to state. But he made no secret of their motives.

"The investigation was absolutely necessary," said he, "on account of conditions that had become simply intolerable. . . . Legitimate business interests without organization have been held up and legislated against without consideration and without mercy.

"The investigation was made to bring about a situation under which honest men could appear before legislative committees and members and be assured fair and reasonable treatment."

"Could you tell approximately what the investigation will cost?" he was asked.

"Well, I can tell you it will cost a damned sight less than it would have to get some bills through if the investigation hadn't happened," was the reply.

It looks as though the object has been attained and that the whole thing was a "frame-up" to scare some legislators into line.

The Socialist $1.00 per year.

CITY REORGANIZATION.

The Organization Committee has progressed to the point where the reorganization of the city into 16 wards will be a fact in a week or ten days. This has been a big job, and to accomplish it, means hard work.

Now some have criticised us for our slowness, but we have done our best and we are still on the job. Every member will be notified in what ward he lives and where his branch will meet. Just as a reminder, comrades: Pay your dues.

The Organization Committee,
D. J. FARRELL, Chairman.

LOCAL MIFFLIN TOWNSHIP.

Local Mifflin Townsip has been organized with twenty members at East Linden. Comrade L. J. Volz is organizer, J. J. Roenker, secretary and Joe Gardner, treasurer. The new local will include East Columbus and will meet next Tuesday evening.

NINTH WARD.

The Ninth Ward has secured a meeting place at 2046 West Broad street and is ready to reorganize the new Eleventh Ward Branch.

NEW SIXTEENTH WARD.

The Socialists of the new Sixteenth Ward met Thursday evening at Hadway Hall, near Olentangy park entrance and formed a temporary organization. The old timers were there and a lot of new ones.

MOONEY GETS JOB.

Hon. Granville W. Mooney, a former speaker of the Ohio Legislature, was this week appointed assistant superintendent of laundry of the U. S. Senate at Washington, with a salary of $1100 per year. Mooney ran for secretary of state on the republican ticket in Ohio last year.

WOMAN'S POLITICAL SOCIETY.

Comrade H. Anna Quinby gave an address on "Woman's Suffrage," last Monday evening, before the Woman's Political Society, the organization of the Socialist women of Columbus. The society will meet again a week from next Monday evening, at 184½ South High street.

FAIRFIELD COUNTY NOTES.

We predicted some time ago a wonderful change in this region and we believe it has started—at least that is the sign of the times here. The comrades here have rented a room in the heart of the city and are making strenuous efforts to cause an avalanche. That this will eventually prove out is certain, from the fact that our meetings are growing larger and interest is at times intense. Applications continue to come in and we will soon have as busy a local as any, bar none. The workers here are awakening to the facts in the case and realize they are being milked and milked. For the benefit of the members and readers of The Socialist in this city of Lancaster and to comrades in general, we wish to announce the opening of our new hall in the Columbian Building, Main street. Don't be afraid to come out to the meetings. Every comrade owes it to himself and the cause to meet with us in an effort to make this old exploited world of ours a place to live and enjoy life. Those not identified with the organization are as welcome as any and you can always find plenty of good literature to help pass away the time. You are welcome.

The kidnaping of the McNamaras has helped our cause in a wonderful manner. Although I am ignorant of whether these men are Socialists or not, the principle they are being railroaded to the gallows for is the one we Socialists will fight for, regardless of their affiliations politically or otherwise. You lukewarm members are partly responsible if labor is crucified on the cross of greed and capitalistic hatred. The reason we are not much stronger lies in the fact that many of us are not aggressive enough. Put some enthusiasm into your make-up. Go after ignorance and prejudice with facts. They are irrefutable and will wake the plutes up. We are thinging of abandoning our business meetings on Sunday afternoons and devoting the time to a series of propaganda meetings, securing speakers when possible and supplying them from our own ranks when not possible to secure speakers. All members and others are requested to be present Sunday P. M. to 1:30 to discuss the matter and arrange for future meetings. We can see that there will be need of these things soon, so lets all jump in and push on to final victory.

NEWS AND NOTES FROM TRUMBULL COUNTY.

A year ago today there was only one Socialist local in Trumbull county, Ohio, with a total of 20 members. Today there are five live locals, with a combined membership of over 300. Locals Niles and Warren have permanent headquarters, which are open all day, furnished with tobacco stands and literature stalls, where members may regale themselves with their fragrant weed and reinforce their arsenal of facts with pamphlets, booklets and larger works on Socialism.

Local Girard is busy raising funds to buy chairs and other furnishings for their new quarters, which they will formally open in the near future with a Socialist social. Local Mineral Ridge, recently organized by Comrade George Hunkie, Niles, promises to grow into a robust organization. The comrades have caught the missionary spirit and are spreading the good news of Socialism among the folks who live on the countryside.

Local Hubbard, the youngest in the county, has 13 members, who will do their utmost to bring about the overthrow of capitalism and the substitution of the co-operative commonwealth.

A county central committee has been organized and plans are under way for an active campaign during the summer months.

SOCIALIST'S NAME IN CONGRESSIONAL LIST.

For the first time in the history of the United States a Socialist's name appears in the Congressional Directory. Berger's career is given as follows:

"Victor L. Berger, the first Socialist ever elected to Congress, was born at Nieder Rebbuch, Austria-Hungary, February 28, 1860. He attended the gymnasia and universities of Budapest and Vienna, but before his graduation financial reverses caused his family to emigrate to the United States. He was married to Meta Schlichting, December 7, 1887, and has two children. He worked at various trades, and was later a teacher in the public schools. He was editor of the Milwaukee Daily Forwaertz from 1892 until its suspension in 1898, and was for many years editor of the Wahrheit (German) and the Social Democratic Herald (English). He has written many pamphlets and essays on social questions. He has been prominent as a pioneer organizer in the Socialist movement. He was a delegate to the People's party convention at St. Louis in 1894, where he supported an unsuccessful movement to nominate Eugene V. Debs. He was one of the organizers of the Social Democracy (1897), and of the Social Democratic party (1898), known since 1900 as the Socialist party, and, except for a short interval, has been a member of the national executive committee of that party since its origin. He is one of the three secretaries for the United States of the International Socialist Bureau, at Brussels. He was the Social Democratic candidate for Mayor of Milwaukee and for Congress from the Fifth Wisconsin District in 1904. In 1905 he received the votes of the five Socialist legislators for United States Senator. He was elected alderman at large for the city April 3, 1910; was elected to the Sixty-second Congress, receiving 13,495 votes to 13,147 for H. F. Cochems, Republican, and 5,433 for J. P. Carney, Democrat.

NEWS FROM STATE OFFICE.

G. A. Storck, State Secretary.

Leetonia, Ohio with a list of (9) names has been organized by Comrade Orin E. Gray.

A question put to the Secretary of State regarding the meaning of the term Sub-division brought out the fact that the wards and precincts are not included.

This means that in those cities in which the Socialist Party has cast 10 per cent or more in certain wards and precincts but did not cast the necessary 10 per cent in the Municipality or Township that they are not required to participate in the Primaries.

Having acquired the status of a Political Party by virtue of the fact that we have cast more than the necessary one per cent to be recognized as an official party it makes it mandatory for all Election Boards to recognise certificates of nominations in any part of Ohio—Except in such Sub-division where the party has cast 10 per cent. or more of the entire vote for all parties.

It therefore becomes necessary for all Townships and Municipalities to be on the alert to be sure to enter the primaries where the party has cast 10 per cent of the entire vote in their particular sub-division. It might be well for the Socialist Press in Ohio to make special effort to make the above clear to our comrades.

In an opinion rendered by the former Attorney Gen. U. G. Denman in answer to a question coming from this office, he placed particular stress upon the words "compulsory primary election law" which would indicate that it is to be enforced.

I would also suggest that our Press in Ohio open up a department (question box) inviting any or all questions that seem to puzzle the minds of the comrades in the state and in this way we may be able to assist many places in getting tickets in the field.

THE KIDNAPPING CASE.

By Attorney Allen Cook, Canton, Ohio.

It is about time the working class of America are waking up. The courts from the Justice of the Peace up to the Supreme Court have legalized the kidnapping of working men and made illegal the kidnapping of capitalists. The ruthless kidnapping of Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone, tearing them away from their families, refusing their constitutional right of habeas corpus and delivering them into the hands of their enemies in Idaho, is fresh in the minds of all intelligent people.

Now comes the kidnapping of Secretary McNamara, of the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, and other union officials by a detective agency and delivering them in Los Angeles, two thousand miles away, into the hands of their enemies, to be hung upon the gibbet in defiance of law and by worse than anarchistic methods. If these men are guilty of the many crimes with which they are charged, hanging would be too good for them. But the guilt or innocence of these men is not the question in controversy. The question is, whether detective agencies, or the officials of any state, at the behest of great capitalists, can override all law and the constitutional rights of the people and kidnap workingmen and carry them out of the state without giving them an opportunity to defend themselves. If such be the case, then no workingman can feel safe and secure in his own home. Governor Marshall of Indiana secretly aided and abetted the Burns detective agency in trampling the law and constitutional rights under foot. This is anarchy pure and unalloyed.

There's a Difference.

About the time McNamara was kidnapped, the Governor of Illinois issued a requisition for a wealthy bridge builder in Terre Haute, Ind., to be taken to Illinois, where he was indicted for bribing county commissioners all over the state. The Governor of Indiana informed the rich bridge builder and gave the news to the public press so that he might be prepared with a writ of habeas corpus when his arrest took place. The courts refused to permit him to be taken to Illinois.

On the next day the Governor of Illinois issued a requisition on the Governor of Indiana for a workingman, who was a glass blower, for some trivial offense he had committed in Illinois. The glass blower was kidnapped and delivered into the hands of the Illinois authorities without an opportunity to defend himself. And yet the capitalist press and many so-called labor papers say we have no class rule in America, and deny that the courts are frequently used as instruments of capitalism. If the working people of America do not resent the kidnapping of their officers and comrades, then they have become subservient characters, unworthy of the name of men and deserve not the little liberty that is left to them. The governors of all the states are against the working class, and not the voice of a single governor in the United States has been raised in their behalf. The tendency of the courts is against the working class. The police, the militia, the army and the navy are instruments of a capitalist government used for the subjugation of the working class. Not another civilized government in the world would dare kidnap and carry away in so barbarous a manner any of its citizens or subjects. Barbarous, uncivilized Russia is the only government in the world where such acts are legally sanctioned. Our President does not raise his voice against this great crime and anarchy. Even Ex-President Roosevelt is endeavoring to justify the anarchistic actions of the detective agencies and the Governor of Indiana, and is denouncing the working class for their expressions of sympathy and denunciations of the kidnapping. This method of dealing with the working class will some day suddenly come to an end with a jar so great as to jolt the rulers from their thrones. Those who favor such methods are enemies of good government and breeders of anarchy. The working class can expect just such treatment as long as capitalism remains.

Officials in Conspiracy.

The capitalistic mayors, the capitalistic governors, the capitalistic president, the capitalistic courts, the capitalistic police force, military, army and navy are used as instruments for the subjugation of the working class. The working men who can not see it are either densely ignorant or politically blind as a bat. The working class must tear themselves away from the fake leaders who are betraying them into the hands of their enemies. Gompers and Mitchell and other fake leaders advise them to vote for capitalism, and then raise a great "hue and cry" when capitalism starts to carry out its program. These fake leaders coax and drive the working people into the shambles and then pretend to pity them while they are being slaughtered. The worst enemies that the working class have in America are the fake labor leaders and the fake labor papers, who shout unionism from the housetops and then advise the workingmen to vote a scab capitalistic ticket. Many of these fake leaders receive pay from capitalistic sources. Some of them have been members and are now members of the Civic Federation, organized by J. Pierpont Morgan, Belmont and Mark Hanna, for the purpose of destroying labor unions. Some of these fake labor papers are supported by money received from capitalistic sources. These fake labor leaders and papers advise the working people to lick the hand that smites them and to fondle at the feet that stamps them into the earth. How long will the working class continue to vote themselves into renewed slavery and fasten the chains of capitalism upon themselves? How long will they continue to follow the lead of those who are betraying them into the hands of their oppressors? How long will they continue to fight over religious and political and craft differences, while their oppressors unite as one man for their destruction? Socialism points the way out of the Inferno in which they are now living into the promised land, where the working class would receive the full product of their toil, labor would be a badge of honor and this grand old world of ours would be a veritable kingdom of God in which to live and have our being.

SLAVERY TODAY.

How did the slave masters of old get their incomes?

Was it not by taking part of what their slaves produced and calling it their own?

And how do the capitalists of today get their incomes?

Is it not by taking part of what their wage-slaves produce and calling it their own?

Is there any difference, except in form, and the name applied?

Was there ever a slave owner, in ancient or modern times, that had as many slaves as the steel trust, the railroad trust, the oil trust, or any of the hundreds of other trusts?

Is not the present method of owning the jobs better for the masters than the old method of having to buy slaves and care for them?

Are not the profits out of the wage-slavery of today infinitely greater than any chattel slavery at any time?

Are you a man endowed with any sense at all, that you can not see that those who work under the present system of wage-slavery are merely the servants, the conveniences, the puppets of a modern aristocracy, just as were our ancestors in Europe during white slavery?

When men make a profit from you of half you produce you are half slave, and when they get three-fourths you are three-fourths slave.

The working class receive today less than one-fourth of what they produce on an average.

And others say where they may work, when they may work, how long they shall work, how much they may have, and dictate the conditions of their lives as certainly as ever did a slave master of black men.

If this nation were composed of real men they would not toil and moil and slave and struggle for the profit of others.

Long training by capitalist masters has reduced them to mental ciphers.

Socialism will make you free, will give you the ownership of your job, will give you a life worth living.

THE OHIO STATE HOUSE STILL STANDING IN COLUMBUS.

An old resident recently remarked that he was surprised to find the State House standing after the legislature had adjourned. One of the graduates of the Opha Moore College of Political Wisdom replied "That this was impossible, for the Standard Oil Company had the first mortgage on the building, the same being given to Rockyfellow under the guise of a 'curative measure.'" (Refer to past history of famous criminals.) The Ohio State House was built by convicts.

Query: Do the spirits of the dead return to the habitations they built on earth?

SOCIALISM AND INSPIRATION.

There is an ever-increasing number of devout men and women who are studying our movement in the light of the ancient prophecies, seeking to determine whether the Socialist party is a fulfillment of Scripture. We do not scoff at their efforts. Neither do we await their verdict before we proceed. Being sure we are right, we are going ahead.

This much, however, we can say to all religious peoples: The uprising of the down-trodden has been the common source of inspiration in all past ages.

All the Hebrew prophets have been called "divine politicians" by orthodox scholars. Professor Nitti, of the University of Naples (Catholic), declares that for the first three hundred years after His death the world did not look upon Jesus as a great religious Teacher, but as a "political and social disturber."

In his own time the man who advocates a new social order is not accepted as religious or even moral. But after his death, in due time his cause slowly triumphs and then his monument is built by the children of those that slew him or neglected him to death. Then, long after his death, he becomes a Holy man. Around his head the artist paints a halo, where in life he wore a crown of thorns.

But the more profound students of spiritual truth are even now studying the modern uprising of the working class. They know that every great spiritual awakening and every sacred book has come out of the common life.

The best things have come to the race at the hands of the "common people" who "builded better than they knew." Not with a blare of trumpets comes the changing of the social order. It comes from the plodding toilers, who have never been conscious of their own importance.

It would be fatal to the Socialist movement to wear a religious garb. We must come in the simple comradeship of the disinherited. But let the wise people of the earth take notice now that the founding of economic freedom means also the establishment of intellectual and spiritual freedom. We are preparing the soil of justice, out of which the flowers of faith and love may blossom.

Frederick Guy Strickland.

WEAR THE RED BUTTON.

Numbers make an impression, and Socialists are justified in using every honorable influence to make the public realize the strength of our movement. The Socialist vote in Franklin county last November was a stunner to the plutes and a surprise even to ourselves. The Masters of Business, however, seemed to forget that vote or, perhaps, thought it was only a spasmodic demonstration. When, this spring, the Chamber of Commerce tried to put through the park commission bunco, and the Socialists again butted in with such disastrous results to the gangsters, the C. of C. labor-crushers got another black eye. Wouldn't it be a good idea for every Socialist to wear the red button on the lapel of his coat. The moral effect of 12,000 men wearing the party emblem would be great. Then our wives, sweethearts and the children could also swell the host. Such an effort would give the Masters the jim-jams for sure. LET'S TRY IT!

SPECIAL REQUEST.

Subscribers when renewing by sub card or otherwise will please state that the subscription is a renewal. This will save considerable work in this office.

The Henry County Searchlight, the Socialist paper published at Napoleon, Ohio, is making life miserable for the old parties in that neck of the woods. It is giving special attention to Judge M. Donnelly, who has been under indictment for a year or more for embezzlement and yet has retained his place on the circuit court bench. Donnelly was involved in the wrecking of a fire insurance company and a Napoleon bank. An attempt was made in the Ohio Legislature to impeach Donnelly, but Mike is a shrewd old guy and still hangs on to his job.

HEART TO HEART TALK.

There reached The Socialist office this week a copy of The Citizen, a Socialist paper published at Schenectady, N. Y., and edited by Dr. George R. Lunn. The issue is a special edition and the paper is just one year old. The editor has the following to say in "A Heart to Heart Talk":

"One year ago today the first edition of The Citizen was published. The $400 of capital was borrowed money, for I had none of my own. Through the courtesy of The Evening Star, the paper was published by them until July 22, when The Citizen moved into its present quarters, where we have a fully-equipped newspaper plant, with one of the best linotypes made. The decision to establish a complete newspaper plant was made on a basis of faith. The paper was struggling for existence, with a weekly deficit of $100. How this deficit was met, the hard and exhausting struggle on the part of the tditor and his faithful staff to bring the balance sheet up on the right side, it is not necessary to relate. It is enough to say that no paper has had a more bitter struggle for life, faced more cruelly unjust charges, been more threatened than The Citizen. Every threat known to criminal politicians has been hurled at the editor. Every sinuous scheme known to cunning grafters has been employed to influence advertisers against this paper. At the very moment that we were struggling to lift the burden of a $100 weekly deficit a letter was sent to me offering to buy The Citizen. Every means was employed to silence the paper, and, failing in that, our enemies tried to bribe us into selling out, which would be the equivalent of exchanging honor for filthy gold.

"In spite of all opposition The Citizen begins its second year with every prospect of greater and greater success. Hundreds of our loyal comrades have worked unceasingly during the past year to increase the circulation. It is owing to their unmitigated toil that we have increased the subscription list of 500, with which we started the paper, to the present subscription list of 3,500, which, added to our newsroom sales, bundle orders and street sales, gives us a bona fide circulation of 5,000 copies per week."

What has been done in Schenectady can be done on even a larger scale in Columbus. The Socialist has been published now for nearly six months and has made its influence felt to no small degree. Bigger and better work is expected of us, and the goods can be delivered if the Socialists of Columbus get behind the paper to push. The movement in this direction has commenced and it must not cease until The Socialist is firmly established and then it must not stop. The plans of the comrades who are looking forward to a printing plant and a daily paper can be put into effect if we will just get down to business. It is up to Local Columbus to get busy, busier than ever before. The Socialist has weathered the storms of six months, now all together for a steady boost!

OHIO GENERAL ASSEMBLY NEEDS WATCHING.

The Ohio General Assembly will meet next week to jam through some important bills and make a final getaway. Some mighty dirty work is likely to be done in this last whirl at the bidding of the Big Business Interests. The utilities bill is one measure yet up in the air, and the people will probably get the worst of the deal, as usual. The measure is in the hands of a conference committee, since the house refused to concur in the bill as it passed the senate. A Columbus daily paper says:

"The bill as it stands at present permits the telephone companies of the state to merge on practically their own terms and virtually takes out of the hands of municipalities the right to control their own utilities.

"It is an open secret that the most arrogant and sinister public service lobby that has ever infested the Capital City dictated the terms of the bill as it passed the senate.

"It is important that the legislature pass a utilities bill in conformity with its pledges to the people, but it would be the rankest betrayal of the people of the state to pass a utilities bill permitting a merger of telephone companies without every possible safeguard to telephone users and to give to a state commission any control whatever over municipal utilities."

It is rank nonsense to expect any general assembly composed of members elected by the Republican and Democratic parties to pass laws that will materially benefit the people. The two old parties are owned body, soul and breeches by the Master Class. The only chance is with the Socialist party, which is owned by the voters who compose it. COME IN!

George B. Cox, the Republican boss of Ohio in general and Hamilton county in particular, has escaped the indictment recently found against him. He goes free through the decision of the judge whose nomination he dictated. This "vindication" was followed by a statement from the Boss that he had "retired" from politics. This is about the 'steenth time that Cox has "retired." He is always found doing business at the same old stand when election day comes around.

TO THE OHIO FRIENDS OF DIRECT LEGISLATION.

A few persons met in the Senate chamber at Columbus on the evening of April 3rd, last, to compare ideas concerning measures for the incorporation of the principles of Direct Legislation in the constitutional and statute law of the state. At that meeting, the Rev. Herbert S. Bigelow, of Cincinnati, and the Hon. Elroy M. Avery, of Cleveland, were constituted a committee to issue a call for a conference of persons interested in such measures (said conference to be held at Columbus at a time to be determined by said committee) and to attach thereto other authorized signatures.

In accordance with this action, the undersigned respectfully invite you, each and all, to meet us for the purpose above indicated, at the Assembly Hall of the Neil House, at Columbus, at one o'clock, p. m. of June 4th, 1911, on which day railway excursion rates from all parts of the state to the capital will be operative.

No matter how you hear of the meeting, COME. Do not expect a personal communication. Pass the word along to others of the faithful and bring them with you. This is the time for us to get together and to prepare for the wise action that will be necessary if we are to secure anything from the coming constitutional convention. Depend upon it, they who have axes to grind are not asleep, and they who believe that political power should lie in the hands of The People need to be awake and active.

This contemplated movement is neither partisan nor sectarian. If you have the proper ideals of good citizenship and aspirations for a purer and more effective form of popular government, and believe that they can be brought nearer by the legalized use of the INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM, we hope to meet you at Columbus, June 4th, 1911.

WILL DETECTIVES DO DIRTY WORK?

That even the apparently respectable people will resort to black-hand tactics was disclosed in Indianapolis by the sensational arrest last week of Gilbert E. Perkins of Pittsburg and his son, Walter, who are the executive officers of the famous Perkins detective agency. They were taken into custody by United States Marshals Wilson and Rankin on the charge of sending a black-hand letter to a wealthy manufacturer by the name of Strong in Erie, Pa., and threatening to blow up his family mausoleum or his house if he did not deposit $50,000 in a designated place. It is said that the motives of these ingenious sleuths were "commendable." They did not intend to collect the $50,000 even though Mr. Strong had deposited it in the place designated. All they wanted was an assignment from Mr. Strong to "ferret" out the "black-handers." They wanted to be paid for running down the wicked creatures that their distorted imagination created. Evidently business got somewhat dull, so they were going to "stimulate" it by artificial means.

All detective work is and has been done on the theory that in line with the "sleuth's" duty questionable means justifies a laudable end; and what can be more laudable in the profession of detectives than securing "boodle"?

This exposure of detective villainy serves to prove the contention of organized labor that much of the crime committed during labor disturbances in the past has been fomented or committed by such detestable creatures as Perkins. Of course, labor had to shoulder all the responsibility, and also bear the brunt of hostile public sentiment, but that was the purpose of these dastardly plots.

There has not been a strike in the history of the American labor movement but what the detective played the part of a villain in it. It has not been an uncommon occurrence that buildings were dynamited, shots fired at random during the night and even murder committed, all of which was laid at the feet of the union that was waging the strike.

These malefactors are employed to either commit depredations or they do it upon their own initiative in order to be retained in the service, and then the yellow journalism that is always for sale to the highest bidder comes out with glaring headlines and cruelly places all the blame upon the "agitators" and the "howling" mob.

The conscienceless creatures of the Perkins' type have been the cause of undescribable hardship and misery among the masses. Many an innocent man has languished behind prison bars for the crimes of the detectives. It is to be hoped that the discovery of Perkins' villainy will remove much of the prejudice that now exists against organized labor and that in the future when a strike or a lockout is on and crime is committed that the public press will refrain from railing against labor leaders and the strikers until an investigation has been made. For scarcely without an exception such nefarious work is done by villainous detectives.

The foregoing is a fair expose of the detective business in general. We can not help but wonder if the Burns detective agency is so hard pressed for business that they are compelled to resort to kidnapping officials of labor unions.—Mine Workers Journal.

JOHN DIETZ, VICTIM OF LUMBER TRUST.

(By Iconoclast.)

John Dietz, the defender of Cameron Dam, has been sentenced to prison for life. The story of Dietz's struggle with the lumber trust and the capitalist controlled state of Wisconsin will some day be told, and the gentlemen responsible for sending this sturdy backwoodsman to the penitentiary will be hooted by every man, woman and child that believe in fair play.

Dietz first came into the limelight some months ago, when he crossed the path of the lumber trust, whose record of plunder and bribery is still fresh in the memory of men.

In a pitched battle between Dietz and deputy sheriffs a deputy was killed. Dietz surrendered, and was indicted for the murder, with the result above noted.

The most shameful act in the entire tragedy is Judge Reid included in the sentence the additional penalty that on October 8th of each year, the anniversary of the crime of which Dietz was convicted, the prisoner shall suffer solitary confinement 24 hours to meditate upon the crime for which he was sentenced.

This provision of the law is rarely enforced, showing the judge to be a paid tool of a law-defying corporation. It also shows that the judge, in sentencing Dietz, was prompted by a spirit of revenge. Who knows but what Judge Reid is a stockholder in the lumber trust.

Dietz, when asked by the judge if he had anything to say before sentence was passed, replied:

"Do you suppose," he asked, "I haven't known that sooner or later, the trust, because it's big and I am little, would kill me or put me out of the way? I have fought my fight and defended my home and family.

"The trust has one creed, one law, one purpose. That is rule or ruin. It could not rule John Dietz. So they tried for six years to ruin him. This morning it looks as if they have got what they were after.

"I have done nothing wrong and the state has. And yet it is the state that sends me to jail.

"It is the state that waylaid my children, took one away to jail, and put a bullet through the other—a young girl."

"I cannot see, Mr. Dietz, that that has anything to do with the killing of Oscar Harp," said Judge Reid.

It is evident that Dietz understood fully the brace game he was up against.

So far as we have been able to learn, John Dietz is the victim of a brace of black-hearted scoundrels, aided and abetted by officers of the law.

There is but one hope for this rugged Proletarian. The Socialist movement is growing by leaps and bounds in Wisconsin, and is destined in the near future to sweep the trust brigands into oblivion. When the Socialists control the state John Deitz will be released from the penitentiary, and in all probability be given a pension. The lumber trust and its political hirelings will no longer ride rough shod over those who dare to dispute its claims.

SEE THE UNEMPLOYED.

"See the unemployed?"

"I do. What a bedraggled, spiritless, sodden-looking crowd they are, to be sure. Cannot something be done for their relief, O Sage?"

"Most assuredly something can be done for their relief; but, as you well know, to do the sensible thing would not be desirable."

"I know nothing of the sort. The sensible thing to do is to put them to work at reasonable wages; and I can think of nothing more desirable than that men who wish to work should be allowed to work."

"I am surprised at your ignorance. The unemployed are absolutely necessary to civilization."

"I am sure you are wrong for once, O Sage."

Let us see. If all men were employed, then there would be no unemployed. Am I right?"

"Obviously."

"And if there were no unemployed, there would be no strike-breakers when men went out on strike. Is it not so?"

"It is."

"And, accordingly, when men struck the employers would either have to concede the demands of the workmen or close their plants."

"Yes."

"And as a small profit is better than no profit at all, employers would not close their plants except as a very last resort."

"Surely."

"And so employes would become as arrogant as employers are now, and employers would become as meek as employes are now. Do you follow me?"

"I think I do. That would be a terrible state of affairs, wouldn't it?"

"Yes, for the employers."—Ella O. Jones, in Life.

SOCIALISM IN EIGHT WORDS.

Collective Ownership of Capital; Private Ownership of Wealth.

All mines, waterpower, railroads, etc., that are collectively used, collectively owned.

All the results of individual labor, furniture, horses, vehicles and things individually used to be privately or individually used.

All violations of collective ownership are a violation of the rights of society, and if used to profit of individuals is a robbery.

All violations of private ownership are a threat against the private rights of all citizens and is a plain thievery and anarchy.

QUESTION BOX.

If the business of production and distribution were a government monopoly, the government would not only have to find all its subjects employment, but would necessarily have to prescribe what that employment should be. The individual would not be free to work where and at what he pleased, but his work would be under control and direction of the government. The liberties of the people, in this regard at least, would be abridged?

J. C. S.,
Springfield, Ohio.

Do you mean to say that working men are now free to work where and at what they please? It is scarcely conceivable that any one would make such an assertion at the present time, when more than a million men are out of employment because no factory owner can give them work, but that must be what you intend to say, since no other meaning can be extracted from the language you use.

Mankind has always been under the necessity of working where there has been work to do, and they have always been under the necessity of working at what would satisfy their needs. This is a condition imposed by nature and does not depend upon the artificial regulations of man. It will be true in the future, as it has been in the past and is at present, but that is not to the point.

Your fear that the government would be under the necessity of finding its subjects employment and that the government in doing this might abridge the liberties of the people is evidently because of a fear that the proposed government would be the same kind that is now in operation. You should remember that a pure democracy is the very foundation of the proposed system, and by that I mean the government would be such that the will of the majority would be the supreme law. If a real democratic government, dominated by the will of the majority, is an impossibility, then Socialism is an impossibility, for that is the first requirement for the institution of a Socialist republic.

The present government is something apart from the people, but in the Socialist commonwealth the government would be in fact, as well as in theory, the people themselves. Instead of a government, apart from the people, providing employment, the people themselves, being the government, would provide themselves with work. To be sure, the individual would necessarily conform to the will of the whole in the matter of what he would do, and how he would do it, but there would be nothing new or strange about that. He has to do as much now and also under conditions that rob him of part of his product, and at times deny him so much as an opportunity to work.

It is true under the operation of applied Socialism the minority would be, to a certain extent, controlled by the majority; but are you opposed to the majority rule? Do you prefer the present minority rule of the few who own property and thereby acquire the power to control both government and industry? If you think majority rule is bad because it would abridge the freedom of the minority, and if you think that each individual should be a law to himself, you should join the anarchists, who are seriously contending for such an arrangement.

PATRIOTISM WANING, SAYS ARMY MAN.

BOSTON, Mass.—Old army officers are alarmed because of the lack of respect for the flag and the decreasing spirit of patriotism in America.

This was the sentiment expressed at a reunion of Civil War veterans, held here last week.

Major A. Parker Browne, of Malden, adjutant of the 40th Regiment during the war, made a speech in which he said that even the regular soldiers are losing their honor of the flag. He pointed out an incident which occurred last year where United States soldiers and sailors did not "uncover" during a parade while the colors went by.

As a remedy for this lack of patriotism Browne would make the history of the Civil War a special study in the public schools. He believes that the best method of instilling the minds of the youth with patriotic ideas is to picture to them the glowing battles of the "heroes" of the past.

SOME DEFINITIONS.

A legislator is the only man who can tell whether or not a law ought to be passed.

An executive is the only man who can tell whether or not it ought to be enforced.

A laymen is one who cannot possible know anything about a law without seeing a lawyer.

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION.

News From The World Wide Movement Of The Workers.

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS.

Comrade L. Gutierres de Lara, because he held great propaganda meetings among the Spanish speaking citizens of El Paso, Texas, was arrested by the frightened old party politicians on a variety of charges and was fined on the charge of disturbing the peace and also of blockading the sidewalk. He has appealed one case and secured a new trial in the other. The persecution is having just the opposite effect to what the old party politicians had hoped.

A New York film company is getting out special slides, as stated in their circular, "Showing the arrest of J. J. McNamara and the evidence from which Detective Burns proposes to convict the dynamiters." If these slides are as described they can not but help create public prejudice against the accused, and in that case objections should be raised by Socialists and trade unionists to their use in the respective communities.

Money has been received at the National Office for the McNamara defense fund, and has been forwarded to the office of the International Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, as follows: Local West Plains, Mo., $1; Local Asheville, N. C., $5; United Mine Workers' Local Union No. 171, Lexington, Mo., $25.

Wm. T. Lane, a negro comrade, who has had considerable experience as a lecturer and organizer, is available for engagements, particularly for work among those of his race, and locals where such service would be beneficial are requested to file applications with the National Office.

Comrade Robert Rives La Monte, for whom a lecture tour is being arranged in the States of Massachusetts, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania, covering the period of September 22 to Christmas, will be available for similar engagements between January 1 and April 1, 1912, in the State of Indiana, Kentucky, Missouri, Oklahoma and Kansas.

By a recent referendum the following comrades were elected members of the National Committee for the State of Ohio: W. F. Ries, Box No. 66, Station F, Toledo; Allen Cook, Canton; and Tom Clifford, 3617 Fulton Road, S. W. Cleveland, was re-elected to the same position.

John M. O'Neill, editor of the Miners' Magazine, published a statement that the daughter of Comrade Charles Dress is employed in the National Office, and after being informed that it was untrue, Mr. O'Neill republished the statement. As a matter of fact, the daughter of Comrade Dress is not now and never has been employed in the National Office of the Socialist Party.

WISCONSIN NOTES.

"Men Cry for Work in Socialist City!" "Socialist Rule Not good in Milwaukee!" "Between 20,000 and 30,000 Men Are Idle and Charity Applicants Are Doubled—Prospects of Strike Hinder Manufacturers!"

These are only a few of the scareheads in the capitalist papers which all over the country have been spreading grewsome news about high taxes and general disaster in the Socialist city of Milwaukee.

Now here is the testimony of the Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce about the Milwaukee situation. We may remark in passing that the Chamber of Commerce is not a Socialist organization. None of its members have ever been seen wearing the red button.

But the Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce has just issued its fifty-third annual report. And this report knocks the capitalist scareheads into kindling wood.

The manufacturing industries of Milwaukee, says the Chamber of Commerce report, produced in the past year goods valued at $339,536,607. New industries are constantly being attracted to this city by the conditions which prevail here. (Capitalist papers of the United States please copy:)

One hundred and thirty-seven additional enterprises embarked in business in the Milwaukee district in 1910.

Not badly scared by the red flag, it seems!

The report also states that the largest amount of coal ever received in the port of Milwaukee was received during the year 1910—the year marked by two big Socialist victories in Milwaukee.

In fact, Milwaukee ranks as the second city in the United States as a manufacturing center. $65,852,153 were paid in wages in Milwaukee during the year 1910. So states the Chamber of Commerce report.

All of which simply proves what the Socialists already know—that the capitalist press "is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked." And all these shameless attacks of the capitalist dailies only intensify the eager desire of the Milwaukee Socialists for a daily newspaper of their own.

WARNING!

Shameful Capitalist Trick in Milwaukee—Pass the Warning to the Trades Unions—Don't Give Your Money to the Enemy.

The Milwaukee capitalist newspapers now have a new scheme to beat the Socialists. They have seen that the fund to start the Milwaukee Socialist Daily was growing fast. They resolved to block the way against our daily by a mean trick, and at the same time cheat the trades unions out of some of their hard-earned dollars.

The scheme is to start an anti-Socialist, so-called "trades union" paper before the Milwaukee Socialists can collect enough funds to start a Socialist daily. This would compete against the paper to be issued by the Milwaukee comrades, and at the same time tend to foster an anti-Socialist spirit among the working class of Milwaukee. Two of the big capitalist dailies of Milwaukee are behind this trickery plan. Their representative has already approached the acting business agent of the Milwaukee Federated Trades Council, and asked him if the trades unions would subscribe anything to this new "trades union" paper. The business agent briefly replied that they would not get one "blank" cent from the Milwaukee trades unions for such a purpose.

Now these Anti-Socialist papers will very likely appeal to the trades unions outside of Milwaukee for financial help. They will not state, of course, that this is to be an Anti-Socialist paper. The trades unionists of other towns, knowing that the Milwaukee Socialists are planning to start a daily newspaper of their own, will naturally conclude that this is the one the Socialists are planning. They may therefore contribute their funds to the enemy, just when they mean to help the cause of Socialism in Milwaukee.

This is the meanest dodge the Milwaukee capitalists have yet devised. Please assist us in unmasking it.

All contributions for the Milwaukee Socialist Daily should be sent to H. W. Bistorius, Brisbane Hall, Milwaukee, Wis. Cut out this address and keep it.

Warn the members of your union. Watch for any communication on this subject from Milwaukee. Pay no attention to any communication which does not come from the Social-Democratic (Socialist) Party, and which does not contain the address given above.

GENERAL SOCIALIST NEWS.

Even the aristocratic Southern winter resort, Ashville, N. C., is feeling the Socialist touch. The vote last week increased from 25 to 61.

"War—What For?" George Kirkpatrick's great book, is selling like hot cakes. Up to last Saturday 17,500 copies had been sold. It is creating a furore all over the country.

Oregon Socialists are racing toward the front, too. They have elected the Mayor of Coquelle and Aldermen at St. Johns and Medford. On June 5, the city election will be held in Portland and the Socialists have high hopes of making distinct progress.

'Gene Debs has been having great meetings in his Pennsylvania trip. All the halls in which he speaks are usually packed to the limit, according to reports of the meetings in the daily papers. Debs was bluntly asked by a reporter whether he would stand for the Presidency again and replied in the negative.

Congressman Victor Berger receives an average of 300 letters a day. He says: "Everybody who sees a wrong writes to me about it." Very few of the letters are from Socialists. The most of the communications come from people who imagine that Berger can single-handed change conditions that they have been voting for for many years.

The darkest corner in Austria has been invaded by Socialism. There is more illiteracy, religious bigotry and superstition and racial hatred in Bukowina than in any other section of Europe. Yet the Socialists have just elected a member of the Legislature and polled 10,000 votes. They are uniting the Polish, German, Ruthenian and Roumanian nationalities.

Now that the printers have started a daily paper in London and J. Keir Hardie is planning to turn his Labor Leader into a daily, the Social Democratic Federation is also getting into the game, having decided to raise $50,000 to start another Socialist daily. The new thought in politics and economics is going forward in leaps and bounds on the other side of the pond.

China reports progress for socialism. Upward of 40 papers publish contributed articles on Socialism, but the government will permit no exclusive Socialist paper to be printed. A magazine issued in Japan for the Chinese people was suppressed by the Mikado upon representations from the Chinese government. But despite all handicaps the new movement is said to be gaining thousands of adherents in the Flowery Kingdom.

A cable from London says the Tories "fear the spread of Socialism in the navy." The reason is that a lot of Socialist literature is being distributed among the Jackies. Now the conservative members state their intention of introducing the matter in the Commons, and that, unless the First Lord of the Admiralty, McKenna, is able to declare that the reports are grossly exaggerated, efforts will be urged to suppress the spread of the doctrine. Isn't it awful what those pesky Socialists won't stoop to!

Socialism is making great progress in Spain. New party papers have been started in Valencia and Valladolid and a daily is about to be established in Madrid, where a Socialist has been elected to the City Council. The Socialists are also organizing the workers into trade unions. They organized the miners and railway workers, numbering nearly 50,000, and doubled the membership of the Federation of Trades, which has 80,000 members. With the increased power of the workers there is a corresponding decrease in power of the monarchy and clergy.

CITY TRADE IN MILWAUKEE GROWS—LARGEST IN THE HISTORY OF THE CITY.

(By Carl D. Thompson.)

According to the Milwaukee Journal of May 11th, the most complete report ever issued by the Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce, has just left the press. It shows greatly increased activities and improvements in Milwaukee's business and commerce.

During 1910 the shipments of coal were 700,000 tons more than the preceding year.

The actual tonnage of vessels entering and leaving Milwaukee by lake in 1910 was 8,064,084 tons, the largest in the history of the city.

Milwaukee has six malting plants in operation, and within the next year there will be two additional plants completed, which will mean a marketing of some two million bushels of grain more than ever before.

The bank deposits show up splendidly, according to this report, and the barley marketed shows an increase of 15.5 per cent over 1909.

Meanwhile, the business in the ports in Chicago are falling off. According to testimony given before the special examiner, E. C. Mueller, to dissolve the tug trust, it developed that fifteen years ago it required from thirty-five to forty tugs to handle the Chicago marine traffic. Today twelve tugs are able to handle the business.

So, while in Chicago, under a capitalist administration there seems to be a falling off in the business that is done, on the other hand in Milwaukee, under a Socialist administration, the capitalist authorities are reporting trade in a flourishing and growing condition.

CHINA.

The sleeping giant is awakening. The old feudal system which has existed for centuries in China is breaking down. During the last few years capitalism has been developing even more rapidly than did Japan. Until recently western commerce with China was confined to the coast towns. Now it extends to every town of importance throughout the empire. Railways are being built, and transportation facilities organized and extended.

Factories, mills and workshops are being built with remarkable rapidity. A New York Wall street paper stated recently that several important American contracts had been given to Chinese firms. Recently a group of world financiers advanced China a loan of $50,000,000.

Six hundred and fifty Chinese students are in American colleges studying Western Civilization and methods of production.

With the change in the methods of production, comes the demand for political changes. Just as in Europe a hundred years ago, the rising Capitalist class found the government based on feudalism, inadequate to its needs; so, today, Chinese capitalists are demanding radical changes in government similar to those demanded by their European brothers. The principal one is for a national parliament such as has always been established in every country where Capitalism rules.

But just as in Europe it was found impossible to secure the necessary governmental changes peaceable, so it is today in China.

The prince regent has granted the right to a parliament but is seeking to defer the time of convening. The government is also trying to obstruct other reforms.

As a result a widespread movement of revolt has developed in the southern part of China around Canton. Serious outbreaks occurred this month which were for the present put down by the army, although it is reported that sedition is rife among certain of the troops and it is feared that the disaffected soldiers will desert their officers if the revolters appear to have the upper hand. For the present Canton is quiet and the revolutionists have retreated into the outlying districts.

Whatever may be the present fate of the revolutionists, they are sure to triumph ultimately, since they march in accord with the necessary evolution of society. As capitalistic production supplants feudal production, their political power will grow until they capture the government and refashion it to serve their needs.

Along with the development of capitalism in China, we may expect to see arise its necessary attendant, a strong Socialist movement. Thus one by one are the nations joining hands in the great international movement for human emancipation by the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth.

MEXICO.

Driven to bay by the fall of Jaurez and other important victories by the insurrectos in the southern part of Mexico, the government has at last came across with an agreement which is admitted in high quarters to be a complete surrender to the revolutionists.

The terms of peace are practically agreed upon and only await the signatures of the participating parties. Preliminary terms are as follows:

1. President Diaz and Vice President Corral will resign before June 1.

2. Minister of Foreign Relations De la Barra will become president ad interim with Madero as his chief adviser.

3. The cabinet will be reorganized. All members with the exceptions of ministers of war and foreign department will be appointed by De la Barra and Madero jointly.

4. A new election will be declared within six months.

DENMARK.

Copenhagen, Denmark, May 16.—Forty thousand workers in the building and other trades were thrown on the streets today without work as a result of a lockout declared by the Masters' Federation. In Norway and Sweden it is estimated that the present time another 40,000 or 50,000 are in the same condition as the result of similar lockouts by the employers in their bitter and intense fight on trade unionism.

BREEZY LETTER FROM NATIONAL CAPITAL.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 20, 1911.

Some days since Congressman Berger introduced resolutions into the House, to abolish a pair of moss-grown and barnacle-covered bulwarks of the free and untrammeled liberties of Big Business, viz., the Constitution and the United States Senate. Coincidently with this circumstances a howl went up from certain organs closely affiliated with the "interests" that would have melted the heart of a stone image. Hands were held up in holy horror at the audacity of this upstart from Milwaukee, who dared lay his finger on the sacred edifice reared by our forefathers to safeguard the liberties of future generations (of special interests) etc.

Along about this time the New York Court of Appeals handed down a decision annulling a legislative act governing compensation to workmen for accidental injuries. The constitution provides that a man's property shall not be taken away without due process of law, whatever that is. This only applies to corporations, however. The poor devil who has his arm jerked off either has no property interest in his arm or else, when he lost it, it was taken "by due process of law."

It should be obvious to any thinking person that something is rotten in Denmark. Either the constitution has outgrown its usefulness or the courts have used it for a purpose for which it was never intended. Certainly, here is sufficient excuse for Berger's resolution putting off the constitution at a venerable old age. For one generation to draw up a code of laws for the government of generations to come, living under circumstances and conditions which the previous generation could neither foresee nor appreciate is about the last word in asininity. Let the constitution be abolished. We will shed a few tears, perhaps, not for the departed code of laws, but for the misery and death which have resulted in order that it should live to a patriarchal old age in its decrepitude and decay.

As for the United States Senate, the least said the better. It would be a shame to separate some ninety eminent citizens from the payroll merely in order that a stumbling block in the way of the liberty of a few million cattle should be removed. Still, perhaps a few more special commissions could be fixed up, in order to care for the increased membership of the Lame Duck Club.

In the present state of the world's civilization, when all employers are so careful to safeguard their workingmen, when human life is valued so high that they even talk about building fire-escapes in New York sweatshops in the year 1987; even if it does cut down profits a little, when even blood-begrimed Carnegie is giving away the half of his kingdom to build public libraries and peace monuments in order to bribe his way through the Pearly Gates, it may seem strange to some that the major part of the expenditures of this government are for the up-keep of an army and navy. What is the need of war when they can kill off the surplus by hundreds in mine disasters or in factory fires, and maim and injure the rest in the various other industries "by due process of law"? The answer is, that if we lopped off an arm of the army or navy some congressman's son-in-law or nephew-in-law would be out of a job. Don't ask foolish questions again. Moreover, how could Rockefeller and Morgan's interest in Mexico be safeguarded without an army and navy to bluff the revolutionists? Revolutions are unconstitutional.

However, let us take cheer. They are not going to abolish the Senate, or the constitution, or the army, or the navy, or due process of law, or any of the other inalienable rights of the citizenship. Not this year, anyhow. However, if business looks up next year, so that some of our millionaires are not pinched by the iron hand of poverty, they may consent to lower the tariff on hot air and drinking water, in order to reduce the high cost of living.

GIVE THE PEOPLE MORE STEAM AND LESS WIND.

Everybody wants to know what is the matter with business. When you see a drummer writing in the hotel correspondence room don't hypnotise yourself into believing that he is sending in several rush orders to his house, for in most cases the writer is making excuses for high expenses and low returns.

"What is the matter with the times?" says the storekeeper, with his shelves loaded down with stock.

"Why ain't there no work?" asks the jobless man, with the key to the street in his pocket.

"Why so much unrest inside the ranks of the working class?" inquires the social reformer, who is about to write a book on the subject of contentment.

"Why not increase the police force and remove the unemployed, the idle workers from our streets? We may restore confidence, and then the working class will withdraw their rainy-day savings and purchase our cut-rate bargains," says Mr. Little Businessman.

"I can not secure renters for my empty houses," moans the property owner. "Don't worry," replies the Housing Commission, "the LAW forbids overcrowding."

Why talk of panics? What about the credit clothing and moving picture shows that have opened up recently. Go to the Justice Courts and see how busy the constables are serving DUNS and GARNISHEES. What is the use of all these day dreams? You know that the working class are the purchasing class. When they are not working they are doing as little buying as possible.

Why don't you quit this agitation and restore confidence, Mr. Capitalist. Name just one law that has been enacted in the interest of the working class? Did the slave owners ever enact a law that benefited their slaves? For the last decade the magazines have been telling the people that we are ruled by a privileged class. Why not abolish this class by changing the form of government that creates these special privileges. But we must respect the RIGHTS OF PRIVATE PROPERTY you reply. Private property creates private privileges, that are used as a means of exploitation.

In 1908 the railroads of the United States owned 58,310 locomotives and 2,084,214 freight cars. Some time back the Wall Street Journal claimed that there were 413,000 idle freight cars. In the last few years this number has been increased, and the same with the then quoted 12,000 idle locomotives. There can be no return of so-called days of prosperity until these idle cars and engines are put to work. Who is to blame for the MORE WIND epidemic? Blame the Capitalist System and all those who vote for its perpetuation. Vote for Socialism and establish public confidence. Capitalism stands for wind and delusions.

JIM HENDERSON.

BIRDS OF A FEATHER FLOCK TOGETHER—CLASS LEGISLATION SUPREME.

Mr. Chas. Pretzman is no longer President of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce. With the entrance of the new administration a good many choice bouquets were given away and a marble monument erected to the real servants of class interest—Senator Todd and Hanby Jones of Franklin County.

The Chamber of Commerce declares itself satisfied with their efforts in behalf of CLASS LEGISLATION. Yet a few days back this body declared it was necessary to hire detectives to prevent their members being held up. (Refer to the remarks of Chief Lookout Opha Moore.)

We append a clipping taken from a daily paper:

"The board of directors took occasion to compliment Senator John E. Todd and Representative Hanby R. Jones for their legislative work by spreading on the minutes a letter of Assistant Secretary F. H. Hysell. Practically every piece of legislation the chamber desired was enacted and measures opposed were beaten.

"Among the bills whose enactment they secured were: Senator Todd's centennial measure, giving $25,000 for next year's celebration; authorization for the erection of a public comfort station in the State House yard; the Todd act to reimburse the Chamber of Commerce for funds advanced to hire deputy sheriffs during the car strike; the Jones bill giving Columbus slack water rights in the Scioto; the $50,000 appropriation for a traction line to the Girls' Industrial Home, near Delaware, and the Hudson and McGuire good roads measure.

"A piece of legislation which the chamber helped defeat was the Cetone bill, requiring cities to establish a double platoon system for firemen."

This proves that the majority of the Franklin county representatives were controlled by the Chamber of Commerce. Considering that this is an age of class privileges by class legislation, it will be up to the laboring classes to send some real working class representatives to voice the demands of LABOR.

Jim Henderson.

RAIL-LIGHT SHOWS SPITE.

The word has gone out that there are to be no open street cars on the West Broad street lines except on Sullivant. This is the way the Rail-Light gets back at the West Siders for resenting the slugging, shooting and insulting of defenseless people during the strike last summer. There may be a little consolation to the folks, who are crushed into the stifling cars, in the persistent rumor that E. K. Stewart is having troubles of his own. There is no danger, however, that E. K. will have to get down to the diet of beans he commended to his employes last summer. When Masters of Finance become involved, they always have enough property hidden away to provide for many a rainy day.

One of the leading stores in Columbus has issued orders that its women clerks shall dress in plain black and shall not use powder upon their faces. Some of the codfish aristocrats who sit in front of the counters have grown jealous of the clerks who stand behind the counters. Yet, there are people who say there are no classes in this country.

American Federation of Labor.

Washington, D. C., May 6, 1911.

To the Officers and Members of Organised Labor and Friends—Greeting:

Every one has been made aware by the published accounts in the newspapers of the terrible accusations made against a number of labor men in connection with the explosions in Los Angeles, in which twenty-one lives were lost. All have learned, too, of the secret spiriting away or kidnaping of the accused men from their home states, without opportunity of a word in court in their own defense, handcuffed and in irons taken across the continent to answer in Los Angeles the charges made against them.

No member of organised labor can have sympathy with crime. Indeed, organised labor is opposed to, and is a standing protest against, violence and crime committed by any one or by any force or authority. No one could but have felt and still feel the horror of the destruction of human life and of property, but we can none the less feel the great outrage which has been committed against the accused men.

The detective agency employed in presenting these charges against the men of labor is well known to have no hesitancy or scruples in manufacturing evidence and charges against others. That agency has long been known to have spies in factories and organisations to misdirect the grievances of workmen into prematurely provoked conflicts with employers, and thereby defeat the ends to secure redress; to report to corporations the names of men who are the most intelligent and active among discontented workers and thereby prevent a well-defined purpose to secure the redress of grievances; to bring about the discharge, the victimisation and blacklisting of men. A detective agency such as this is itself accused before the bar of public opinion, and any accusations which its representatives may make must be regarded with suspicion by every fair-thinking American citizen.

Behind the prosecution stands this detective agency, with the "National Erectors' Association" of employers, a part of the National Association of Manufacturers, a part of the great corporations of the country, with their millions, aye, billions, of wealth and power. In addition is the vindictive spirit of persecution of the Manufacturers' and Merchants' Association of Los Angeles, with the bitter invective of the editor and proprietor of the Los Angeles Times, General Otis. It is therefore not difficult to appreciate the fact that with all this untold wealth and power and influence, allied with many hostile newspapers, the accused men will have the most formidable power and influences with which to contend. How a fair trial under such circumstances can be accorded to them is difficult to understand. Therefore, it will be readily appreciated how necessary ample means are for the adequate defense of the men before the courts. The men must be properly defended, aye, by the best counsel obtainable, and the kidnapers must be taught a lesson that the lives and the persons of labor men are just as sacred as are the lives and liberty of any other man in our country, regardless of his wealth, his possessions, or his standing. No one could imagine that a number of millionaires would have been extradited from their home state and given up to a detective agency to be taken to another state to answer grave charges of crime without first having an opportunity of appearing by counsel and without their having a hearing in court.

The consensus of opinion among representative men of organised labor has been expressed that the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor should have charge of the receiving and disbursing of funds for the defense of the men incarcerated in Los Angeles, Cal., and for the prosecution of those who were guilty of taking the men of labor out of their home states, across the continent to California, without their having been afforded the opportunities for defense and the protection of the law.

Therefore it has been determined that ample opportunities for defense of the accused men shall be afforded them before the courts of California, and in the prosecution of the charges of kidnaping in Indiana, and, if necessary, that the cases shall be brought to the highest courts of our country. Having been charged with these duties, the Executive Council appeals to all labor, to all friends of labor, to contribute promptly and generously toward a fund by which the means may be provided for the duty imposed upon the Executive Council.

In conformity therewith, the officers of all national and international unions are requested to appeal to their locals and to the members thereof to subscribe or contribute in any way that these respective organisations have the facilities to carry them into effect, and to forward the same to the Secretary of the American Federation of Labor.

All state federations, city central bodies and local unions and members thereof, are urgently requested to endeavor to secure, and to themselves make, contributions or appropriations as their laws or their opportunities may afford. In addition central bodies are requested to appoint committees for the purpose of soliciting contributions.

All moneys contributed will be used in furtherance of the purposes as set forth in this circular and will be duly accounted for and a receipt promptly forwarded to each contributor, whether international, state, central, local or individual.

Send all moneys to Frank Morrison, Secretary, American Federation of Labor, 501-509 G Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

Again urging upon all the necessity of aiding in the effort to defend the men of labor against the heinous crime charged against them, and to prosecute the cases of kidnaping, we have the honor to remain,

Attest:

Yours fraternally,
SAMUEL GOMPERS,
President.

FRANK MORRISON,
Secretary.

USURPATION OF POWER.

It is not my purpose in this article to criticise any act of the United States Supreme Court that comes under its legitimate supervision, but it is my right as a citizen to protest against the usurpation of power—the taking from me and my fellow citizens the definite meaning of a statute which was made by our representatives in Congress, thus amending the law and thereby making a new law which transforms the meaning and jeopardizes the purposes of the legitimate law, and which may become the scapegoat of the court's mandate at their discretion.

The Supreme Court, in its recent decision of the Standard Oil Case, whereby it added a word to the statute law, thus giving to the courts a phrasing that may be used by them for a double interpretation of the law, was apparently a premeditated act, and the court is thereby guilty of malfeasance in office and ought, by right, to be impeached.

The Supreme Court has deliberately usurped the powers of Congress and thereby desecrated the functions of government given it by the Fathers of the Constitution. The charge of malfeasance and misfeasance in office can most assuredly be sustained, and, to maintain the precepts of our constitutional rights and privileges, impeachment proceedings against each and every member of said court who concurred in this decision, whereby this illegitimate transposition of law was made, should be brought, so that the sovereignty of our American citizenship may be upheld.

This court should be taught that its function is simply that of interpretation and not in supplementing terms and phrases that alter any laws that the people's representatives have made.

The court, by this illegal act, has abrogated its constitutional right to exist, as such, and has thereby jeopardized the very superstructure of our government which lies in the sovereignty of the whole people to make and unmake their laws and their constitutions.

This court is simply a creature of our government amenable to constitutional provisions prescribed by certain duties and powers, and when it assumes improper functions, it is just and right that it be commanded to recant its action or suffer impeachment at the hands of its creator—the people's sovereignty.

If this act of the Supreme Court is permitted to stand unimpeached, we will have exchanged our constitutional birthright for a mess of pottage which has been prepared for us by the grace of a moneyed plutocracy, and served to us as serfs of our own besotted citizenship.

WHAT SOCIALISM WILL ACCOMPLISH.

Briefly, Socialism will accomplish this:

It will give every one a home.

It will give every worker the full value of the product of his labor.

It will reduce the hours of labor in proportion to the increased power of production.

It will abolish child labor.

It will provide employment for all.

It will pension the old.

It will establish justice.

It will do away with charity.

It will abolish poverty, want, destitution and the poor house.

It will do away with class legislation.

It will prevent strikes and lockouts.

It will make it possible for the people to make or reject laws for their government, according to the principles of the initiative and referendum.

It will do away with the trusts by making them the property of the whole people, to be operated for the benefit of the whole people, instead of for the benefit of a few rich men.

It will bring about the public ownership of railroads, coal and iron mines, oil and gas wells, telegraph and telephones, forests, lakes, rivers and canals.

It will do away with armies organised for destructive purposes, and organise armies for constructive purposes.

It will do away with the landlord, the land-lord, and other absolutely useless parasites.

It will remove, absolutely, the fear of want and poverty, and make this earth a heaven instead of a hell; as it is now.

It will make labor-saving machines a blessing to man instead of a curse as now.

It will encourage study, invention, exploration, art.

It is what every one wants when they know what it is!

THE INDUSTRIAL WEEKLY IS ENTERING THE A. F. OF L.

The membership of the Western Federation of Miners has decided by a referendum vote of more than six to one to affiliate with the American Federation of Labor. Although it is hardly necessary to say so, we are in full accord with the opinion expressed by Comrade O'Neill in the current issue of the Miners' Magazine:

"Those who opposed affiliation with the American Federation of Labor have contended that the policy of the A. F. of L. has become obsolete and that as long as the American Federation of Labor is constructed on craft and trade lines that the Western Federation of Miners had nothing to gain by the affiliation. It is likewise true that a large percentage of those who cast ballots for affiliation are not in harmony with the policy of the American Federation of Labor, but these men who have voted for affiliation feel and believe that the Western Federation of Miners can be far more effective on the inside than on the outside, in changing the policy of an organization that still clings to craft and trade autonomy.

"If industrial unionism is logical; if the working class organized industrially can be more formidable than the labor movement, scattered into craft and trade regiments, then it seems that it will be an easy matter for the advocates of industrial unionism to crystalize a sentiment on the floor of an A. F. of L. convention that will ultimately relegate the present policy of the American Federation of Labor to the scrap-heap. It is the opinion of the editor that a change of policy can be brought about with but little strife or internal dissension. The rank and file of organized labor are realizing that craft and trade organizations are no longer effective before the combined power of exploiters, and this rank and file will soon speak to 'labor leaders' in such a manner as will convince them that men who bear the brunt of battle on the industrial field demand the 'solidarity of labor' under the flag of industrial unionism:"

R. R. STRIKERS FORM INDUSTRIAL UNION.

ROCHESTER, Pa.—The men at the Conway yards who are not members of the railroad brotherhoods are forming a union of their own to organize for the strike. The union is industrial in form, including every grade of worker—trackmen, laborers, car repairmen, machinists. The continued unfairness of the mayor is arousing a feeling of the greatest bitterness and determination among the men.

Every department is affected, most of the men in the wrecking crew having come out today. Sixteen men who had been taken on by the management came out as soon as they knew a strike was on. They had been told nothing about it by the bosses, who said they were very busy and needed more men.

A brakeman, Houston, was injured through the ignorance of a scab switchtender. The works are in a bad way, being unable to secure scabs enough, and last night General Trainmaster Brady had to work switches himself or no cars would have been moved.

IN MEMORIAM.

What is this world?

What is a friend? but a being without fear,
Who makes the journey to stifle tears.
Such a friend was Asa Evans.
The fragrance of his kindly deeds will live as a monument of our esteem.

THE PRINTERS.

The craft on the Ohio State Journal have adopted a system of using individual drinking cups. Some of us outside the craft have some fond remembrances of the good old common "growler." But such is evolution.

THE CARPENTERS.

Their monthly journal prints this slogan on its cover: "We demand rights, not privileges."

THE MOLDERS.

Since January, 1896, the International Molders' Union has paid out in sick benefits the sum of $1,916,076.45, a larger amount than that disbursed for this purpose by any other trade union during the same period.

BARBERS' UNION.

The Barbers' state convention will be held in Columbus, at the Columbus Federation Hall, Sunday, May 28, 1911. Delegates will be present from all over the state. The Barbers' License Bill will be up for discussion. This important sanitary measure is now pending before the legislature.

LABOR PROTEST

AGAINST KIDNAPING OF J. J. McNAMARA.

Goodale Park, Columbus, Sunday, May 28, 2 P. M.

The protest of the working class of Columbus against the kidnaping of J. J. McNamara, an officer of the International Structural Iron Workers, will be voiced at Goodale Park tomorrow (Sunday) afternoon, at 2 o'clock. The meeting will be held under the joint auspices of the Columbus Federation of Labor and the Socialist party.

In case of rain the meeting will be held at Federation Hall, 121½ East Town street.

Rouse, ye laborers, and protest against this most infamous act of the [illegible] of capitalistic greed and oppression.

Let every working man and woman in this city turn out.

President J. H. Henderson, of the Columbus Federation of Labor, will preside.

The speakers will be Judge M. B. Earnhart, J. L. Bachman, G. W. Bope, vice president of the Musicians' Union, and O. A. Storck, state secretary of the Socialist party.

TOM LEWIS CHARGED WITH ADVOCATING "OPEN SHOP."

Late Miners' President in Bad with Labor, but O. K. with Capital.

The capitalist press appears eager to inform the people that one of their idols has gone to work digging coal. The labor news from Bridgeport, O., does not speak in such glowing terms of the deposed miners' leader, for he is charged with advocating the "open shop" at a municipal league meeting. Tom Lewis and his brother Llewellyn Lewis stood solidly for the manufacturers' program. One of the delegates to Belmont Central Trades Assembly is quoted as follows: "I consider Tom Lewis a Benedict Arnold to the labor movement."

STAGE EMPLOYES TO GIVE BIG OUTING ON SUNDAY, JUNE 18, AT CONROY'S GROVE.

The Stage Employes will give an outing Sunday, June 18, at Conroy's Grove. The tickets will sell at $1.50, including car fare, meals, refreshments, ball game and other sports.

Car will leave Long and High streets at 8 a. m., Johnstown and Gahanna line. The committee consists of the following brethren: Wm. B. Johnson, Paul Weth, Geo. Jackson, Ben Hartman, E. L. Krause.

We are pleased to inform our many friends that our Bro. Ben Hartman is making a success of the summer vaudeville at the Southern Theater. Union men will help along by telling their friends that the Southern Theater would appreciate their patronage. We are also pleased to state that the Grand and Keith's have full union crews and musicians employed, with good summer vaudeville.

OUR STAND IN McNAMARA CASE.

A Plain Statement and a Strong Address by the International Trade Unions of Indianapolis

To the Great American Public Which in Its Final Conclusion Is Always Right.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 10, 1911.

Now that the dramatic and sensational features and the human interest phase of the McNamara case have run its course, public excitement has subsided, and the time for calm and deliberate consideration seems to be here, we, the officers of the international unions, with headquarters in Indianapolis, desire to make our position clear. We have two propositions before us:

1. As business institutions, do our organizations differ from other business institutions? As union officials do we differ in any way from other citizens? Can our persons be ruthlessly violated, our legal rights ignored and our offices officially burglarized?

2. We believe that every individual accused of crime is entitled to a fair and speedy trial before an unprejudiced judge and jury. To this end money is a necessity, and we propose to see that John J. McNamara is supplied with the money to make an adequate defense and to be able to avail himself in every way of the facilities that are open to every man accused of crime to establish his innocence.

In explanation of the foregoing:

On the evening of Saturday, April 22, while attending to his official duties, John J. McNamara, secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, was arrested in his office without service of warrant, hustled to the police court, and without regard to the provisions of the law relative to extradition proceedings, and while his associates were held prisoners in their own headquarters by local and imported detectives, was given summary hearing in a court having no jurisdiction, denied the right to be heard by himself and counsel guaranteed by the constitution, and was then immediately transported from this state to the confines of a jail in another state. His office was then feloniously entered, his safe was drilled, the papers of the organization were abstracted from their receptacles and the organization left without the service of its judiciary officer.

No opportunity was given to Mr. McNamara to arrange his personal affairs or for the orderly transaction of his official duties. If this method of procedure is sanctioned, are we not all in the same peril? May not the officers of the law, or private detective agencies, enter our offices at any time, arrest us, ransack our files and place our organizations in such a condition that they can not transact their official business? Is this the new short-cut that has been made for the overthrow of trade unionism?

Failing in the usual assaults on the trade unions as such, are their international headquarters to be at the mercy of private detective agencies in the employ of manufacturers' associations? There are in Indianapolis eight international headquarters. All of the international unions whose headquarters are located here were invited by official representatives of the city to make this city their home. Some of them have been here for years, the International Typographical Union for twenty-three years, down to the latest addition, the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, with an official residence of a few months. They all employ citizens of Indianapolis as clerks, accountants, bookkeepers, stenographers, etc., and at the highest wages paid for this class of labor. They have on deposit in Indianapolis banks at the present time, and have had for years, hundreds of thousands, yes, millions of dollars, that in turn flow through the avenues of trade, money that has been an important factor in making Indianapolis the great commercial city that it is.

Are we then entitled to no consideration from the officers of the municipality or the representatives of the state? If the procedure in the McNamara case is to be officially indorsed, then we can safely assume that the answer to our question is in the negative.

Under our legal procedure every person arrested is presumed to be innocent until proved guilty. We know John J. McNamara. He is an industrious, reliable, painstaking and courteous gentleman. He is a graduate of an Indianapolis law school, thus making manifest his ambition to tread the paths that lead to higher planes of activity. In every way, so far as we know, he is a model citizen. Understanding the character of the man as we do, we are slow to believe him guilty of the revolting and heinous crime charged against him.

So we propose that he shall have a fair and impartial trial, and to that end we shall devote our energies to the raising of a sufficient fund to guarantee the accomplishment of the object we have in view. Can there be any objection to this by any citizen of this country?

Notwithstanding that Mr. McNamara has been tried in some of the newspapers, and a verdict of guilty rendered; notwithstanding that the Manufacturers' and Merchants' Associations and other associations of employers of labor have met and officially rendered a verdict of guilty, we decline to accept that verdict. We will accept no verdict except the one that is rendered by a legally constituted court and jury. We are thankful to our critics for their good advice, but we believe we know our business, and we propose to conduct ourselves in accordance with the dictates of our best judgment.

The trades unions of this country, not the present critics of the trade union movement, have built up that movement to the tremendous force that it is today. As the representatives of that movement we believe we understand its aims and its aspirations. We believe we understand the desires of its members, and we will endeavor to make these aims, aspirations and desires effective through the channels that we elect.

So that our position may be definitely understood, in contradistinction to the position and attitude that have been assigned to us by certain newspapers and employers' associations, we make this statement.

Sincerely,

THE CONFERENCE OF EXECUTIVE OFFICERS OF THE INTERNATIONAL TRADE UNIONS WITH HEADQUARTERS IN INDIANAPOLIS.

LEGISLATIVE LABOR RECORD.

The Legislature recessed on Thursday, the 18th, and will reconvene May 31st, at which time the final adjournment will take place.

The session has been a long one, not as favorable to labor as we could wish, and yet we feel some good has been accomplished and we hope to succeed in getting the following bills considered on the 31st: S. B. 272, Mr. Reynolds, which is an amendment to the Child Labor Law, including theaters and moving picture shows in the establishments in which minors shall not be employed more than 8 hours per day; S. B. 122, Mr. Frazier, providing penalty for failure to submit building plans to Department of Workshops and Factories; S. B. 271, Mr. Reynolds, providing for fire drills in factories; and S. B. 257, Mr. Hudson, for the regulation of factories and factory buildings so as to make impossible such horrible disasters in case of fire as occurred in New York City recently.

I will now briefly outline the work accomplished. The following bills of interest to labor were passed and are now laws: S B 2, Mr. Reynolds, providing for the non-partisan election of judges; S. B. 11, Mr. Green, known as the Women's Nine Hour Bill, which we explained in our last letter; S. B 18, Mr. Green, providing for the nomination and election of delegates to the Constitutional Convention on a non-partisan ballot; S. B. 33, Mr. Krause, known as the Smoke Bill; this measure is for the purpose of abating the smoke nuisance; S. B. 59, Mr. Haas, known as the Loan Shark Bill, curtailing the power of loan sharks who make a business of loaning money to wage earners; S. B. 61, Mr. Reynolds, requiring report of accidents to State Shop Inspector by Superintendents of factories and providing penalty for failure to do so; S. B. 101, Mr. Cetone, regulating the appointment of Chief Factory Inspector; S. B. 102, Mr. Cetone, providing salary for Assistant Chief Factory Inspector, also increasing salary of Superintendent of Insurance; S. B. 104, Mr. Reynolds, providing further safeguards around elevator shafts; S. B. 111, Mr. Reynolds, providing for the appointment of 1st and 2nd Assistant Chief Factory Inspectors with a view of increasing the efficiency of the department; S. B. 115, Mr. Frazier, providing penalty for violation of the law for safeguarding machinery; S. B. 123, Mr. Hudson, providing penalty for operating dangerous machinery after same has been condemned; S. B. 124, Mr. Hudson, relating to placing counter floors in building in course of erection; S. B. 127, Mr. Green, known as the Workmen's Compensation Act, which we explained in our last letter; S. B. 130, Mr. Keller, making registered mark on personal property prima facie evidence of ownership of property bearing such mark; S. B 186, Ms. Haas, reinstating Mr. Charles Thatcher to the practice of law; this is of interest to labor because Mr. Thatcher has ever been the friend of organized labor and has been severely punished by his attitude to our enemies; H. B. 45, Mr. Crosser, providing for full crew on switch engines; and H. B. 242, Mr. Evans of Stark, providing for a department of boiler inspection.

This Legislature has been the most difficult for labor to get results from of any in years. For this there are several reasons, chief of which perhaps is the rich and powerful lobby of the employers who did all in their power to block any and all labor legislation, and had it not been for our union men and our fairminded and honorable friends in both Houses we could have accomplished nothing.

We wish to thank all our friends for their assistance and to assure them that we will see that their constituents learn of their valuable service to labor.

Thanking all who have in any way assisted the cause of labor at this session, and with best wishes for the future welfare of the workers, I am fraternally.

EKE S. BYRUM,
Legislative Agent Ohio State Federation of Labor.

ABOLISH WOMEN'S CLUBS?

"Women's Clubs should be abolished. Our grandmothers settled all moral, civic and philanthropic questions by thrashing them out at sewing-bees, going home inspired for domestic labor and cooking dinner, not burdened with a knowledge of domestic science."—Mrs. Roberts, of the National California Society.

Likewise our grandmothers, estimable women I grant, read by tallow dips; shall we abolish the electric lights? Our grandmothers wove, they spun, they embroidered samplers. Have we, the women of this generation, any craving for such occupations?

In the first place the need for such employment passed with the ushering in of machinery, but this very cause that has eliminated the necessity for such labor has also brought with it grave problems to be settled; and women, because they are vitally affected along with men by the change, must have a voice in their settlement.

Today machinery produces our clothing with far less labor than at any other time in the past; we do not object to this, as it is only a sign of the steady advance of the race toward progress, but because of this very fact it should be easier to dress and dress better today than at any other time in the past. Quite the reverse is true: The cost of clothing is higher. Why is this? Because under the system that has formed in regard to the ownership of this machinery, some are getting more than their share; in other words, "profits" are going to the few, and if you are not among those who are reaping the profits of this system then you are giving them away by paying the higher price demanded. This may readily be seen, and it is but one of the many industrial questions that stare us in the face today, overripe for adjustment.

Clubs are a means by which women may assemble to study, agitate and act upon these matters. By no means should they be abolished. They are one of the very surest indications which denote progress among women.

William James says that the human mind at times goes along at a level pace, then suddenly wakes up and pushes forward with greatly accelerated speed. This is true of women. Once they were contented with "sewing-bees" and seldom had an inspiration beyond "cooking a dinner." They have awakened, they are pushing forward and with a purpose. "True, a few relics are left of the ancient "sewing-bee," where women "gather, gabble, gobble, giggle and get"; but these societies are laboring to no purpose and the "sewing-bee" of today, spiced with its tea and gossip, could easily be abolished without any serious hindrance to the general welfare of womankind.

Bliss Carmen says:

"He who espouses perfection must follow the threefold plan
Of soul and mind and body
To compass the stature of man."

This threefold principle of life has been realized and acted upon by women in their various clubs. They have discovered that physical fitness best tends to the highest development of mind and spirit, hence, the numerous gymnasiums, with their teachers of physical culture. And going further into the philosophy of life, they see that mere bodily training with no heed to the mental and spiritual side is inadequate, and so they have taken up the different studies to enable them to attain, along with bodily perfection, mental qualification and soul fitness. Women's clubs are not, however, doing all the things they might for woman's general betterment. The personal improvement phase in their organizations while essential and by all means necessary, should, as an object to be attained, be only secondary. Every woman's club when asked the question, "Whom do you benefit?" should be able to state some definite purpose, the carrying out of which would in some way benefit humanity.

When this can not be done, there is little excuse to be offered for its existence.

Columbus today is far behind her sister cities in the furnishing of cheap and wholesome lunches to working girls. What a worthy enterprise for a woman's club! Could a club but bend its efforts in starting such an undertaking, eliminating, of course, all thought of profit in the scheme, the movement would soon become popular and self-supporting, and a lasting and fitting tribute of which any woman's club might be justly proud.

Many a working girl in Columbus goes for her mid-day lunch rather to the high-priced department stores than to the restaurant or dairy lunch, where she pays more for far less, because she craves pretty surroundings as a brief pledge from the dingy office where she must spend her days. For this she can scarcely be blamed, but why not make it possible to give her along with attractive surroundings a good, substantial lunch of the purest foods, properly prepared and daintily served at a minimum cost?

Then there are hundreds of young men and women in poorly paid positions in our city who are really capable of better things and hungering for an opportunity to develop some particular bent of their natures.

By the assessment of a small fee from the members to meet the actual expenses of hall and instruction, what a worthy aim for some woman's club to found a night school wherein could be taught music, dressmaking, stenography, telegraphy, draftsmanship, bookkeeping, and other helpful crafts!

These and similar objects should be of far more importance to the club women than the question of Hamlet's sanity or Browning's interpretation.

But woman's activity in her club work is a most promising sign, and, sooner or later, the club energy now so divided in its purpose will centralize in bringing about the freedom of the sex, for there can be no economic freedom until women are emancipated; and when they, through scientific study in their clubs, have attained a thorough knowledge which will enlighten them as to their present-day slavery then with that knowledge will also come the means by which the evil will be rooted out.

When we are freed from capitalistic rule, which has always kept women dependent on men for the means of life, making her the slave of man, not the equal, then there will no longer be any need of woman's clubs, because women then will enjoy the blessing of universal sisterhood; but until that time all possible encouragement should be given these clubs, for they help, by enlarging woman's mental horizon, to speed the day of her ultimate victory—Socialism; for only under the banner of the Co-operative Commonwealth can woman stand gloriously independent, a free member of society, with a voice in society's government.

ANNIE MINTURN.

JUDGE BEN B. LINDSEY'S VIEWS AS TO COLORADO LAWS.

"We have in Colorado the most advanced laws of any State in the Union for the care and protection of the home and the children, the very foundation of the republic. These laws, in my opinion, would not exist at this time if it were not for the powerful influence of woman suffrage, which, at all time, has been back of them and those who have conscientiously and faithfully administered them. We believe we have the best Juvenile Court law, the best child labor law, the best laws for the prevention of cruelty to children and the enforcement of the obligations of fathers to support wife and child, and the best administration of these laws, when once upon the statute books, of any State in the Union."

THE NEW FAITH.

We are demanding a definite faith, our spiritual center is rapidly shifting from the personal to the social in religion. Not personal salvation, but social; not our own characters, but the character of society is our interest of concern. We feel social injustice as our fathers felt personal sin.

Settlement work and Socialist propaganda, things done fifty years ago only by rare and heroic souls, like Kingsley, Ruskin and Maurice, are now common-places.

The religion that will mean anything to the rising generation will be based on Socialistic ideals.—Randolph S. Bourne.

Never before in civilization have such numbers of young girls been suddenly released from the protection of the home and permitted to walk unattended upon the city streets, and to work under alien roofs; for the first time they are being prized more for their labor power than for their innocence, their tender beauty, their ephemeral gayety. Society cares more for the products they manufacture than for their immemorial ability to reaffirm the charm of existence.—Jane Addams.

WOMAN AND WAR.

"Every autocratic government fears woman and her influence. No government tyranny, no policy of exploitation and conquest is conceivable in a country where woman is free. Our literature bears witness that woman is the real obstacle to the spirit of conquest. The influence of woman today is spreading. Disregarding a few dolls and caricatures—these are inevitable and negligible—this influence of woman is constantly working against war. Anything that tends to emancipate woman helps the movement for international peace. For this reason I believe in the ballot for women."—Baron D'Estournelles de Constant.

HOW FINE IRON TOYS ARE MADE.

The vision of toy manufacture created in the mind of Young America and his mother by the illustrated "feature" article in the Sunday paper is always a mixture of topographical picture painting and character delineation in which patience under the yoke of incessant and poorly-paid toil plays the all-important part. The beauties of Thuringia and the peaceful depths of the Black Forest combine most beautifully with the plodding, full-bodied German worker into a picture of romantic toy-making, where the son and daughter whittle out their sections of the wooden playthings, and where even the household cat and dog would be exercised at productive labor if the means was at hand. Add to this busy picture, personifying patience, a bit of history, showing that the father of the present family of toy workers learned the art from his father, and that his father learned it likewise from his sire, and inject all the touching pathos and spirit of art into the working that can be scraped up, and the average picture of a toy-making industry is complete.

Not so, however, the picture of toy making in the up-to-date American plant for the manufacture of toys by the million. There is nothing of the pathetic in this story—nothing of the slow and ponderous effort. Nor is there a place for the chapter on enslaving the little tots of the family as soon as they are old enough to guide their hands into fashioning some toy part, or sorting and painting and assembling. The American toymaker is a full-fledged man, or a grown woman, an adult artisan in every sense of the word, and where patience is the watchword in the one story the ever present slogan in the New World picture is "Perfection and Hustle."

The temper of the American toy industry is well expressed in the immense plant of William Shimer, Son & Co., in Freemansburg, Pa., where hundreds of thousands of iron toys are made for American nurseries each year. The very nature of the product would take the making out of the realm of the Old World slough. A family might well work together in devising the various sections of a wooden house or horse or a whole village might combine its homeworkers into stuffers of dolls or Teddy bears. But when it comes to the manufacture of cap pistols, strong iron locomotives, fire engines, toy banks and hooks and ladders the stifling heat of the melting pot and the steady, grinding rumble of machinery takes the place of the litter and gossip of the Thuringian workshop.

The manufacture of iron toys begins, of necessity, in the foundry, except for the preliminary work of designing and pattern making. It is in the foundry that the iron is melted and poured into the molds from which it is to emerge in the rough form of redish, sand-covered toys, or sections of toys. The iron is melted in the cupola. It is then carried in immense ladles to the various molding floors, where it is poured into sand molds, made after the patterns designed and constructed by the expert artisans of the Shimer factory. When the castings have been allowed to cool off thoroughly they are carried to the adjoining tumbling room. They are placed in the automatic tumbling machine or mills, which revolve steadily, cleaning off the sand that has burned on the castings from the molds. The sand and dust is carried from the tumbling mills by a modern exhaust system, making the work thorough and at the same time an entirely healthful place in which to work.

From the tumbling room the castings are taken to bins in the assembling room, where each part is kept separate from other types of castings until the assemblers take them and begin their work of evolving the finished form.

The assemblers fit and fasten the various cast parts together, after which they are drilled or ground off, as the case may be, in the machine room, and then they are taken to the japan room. There they are strung on rods and dipped in vats containing japan or various colored paints, according to the color of the coating which it is desired to give any certain type of toy. The toys are then placed in large movable cages, which, when full, can be wheeled directly into the immense ovens and baked for an hour or two.

When sufficiently baked the ovens are opened and the cages or carriers are wheeled into the packing room, where the toys are removed from the cages and placed on long tables. The only remaining process through which the products must go before they are ready for shipment is the final decorating, which is quickly done by skilful workers. The amount of "life" and selling value that is given an ordinary black steam engine by the addition of a little gilt and red paint in spots and lines, and the placing of the proper lettering, is surprising.

When the decorating and finishing has been completed the toys are carefully inspected, in order that no inferior or damaged articles may be permitted to leave the factory. The perfect toys are then packed in individual cardboard boxes, ready to be taken to the store rooms to await shipment, or to the shipping room for immediate packing and removal. The various departments are so arranged that in its journey the toy passes from the foundry to the tumbling room, to the assembling department, to the machine room, to the japan room, to the ovens, the finishing room, the store rooms and the shipping room by a direct route, with no lost energy or time by redoubling upon its tracks. Each step takes it a step further on, and each department leads directly from the one preceding to that following.

A NOVEL SCHOOL.

There are many different sorts of schools nowadays for various sorts of deficient children—for the cripples, the blind, the mentally deficient, the deaf and dumb. One novel kind there is with a little different method of teaching those not only deaf but even those hard of hearing so that they can enjoy conversations as well as other people.

The method used in this school in reading is the lip movements of the persons talking. The pupils become very skillful in this and they have to be very quick at it, too, as you may guess, for the usual movement of the lips and mouth in average speech takes just about one-twelfth of a second.

Sometimes the pupils learn to read lip movements in three months; others take a year. They are taught to get the impression of the sentence as a whole.

At a recent entertainment in this school competitive tests were given of rhymes, dialogues and finally a little scene from "Alice in Wonderland," the scene of the Mad Hatter, was played to the great amusement of both the seers (the pupils) and the visitors. Of course not a word was spoken aloud.

So you see that while lip reading can never take the place of good ears, yet it can almost perform miracles.—From the Coming Nation.

SHE KNEW HIM.

Mark Twain was walking up Fifth avenue when a little girl about ten years old slipped her hand in his and began to match his stride. "I'm awful glad to see you," she said.

"Are you?" said he. "That's very nice of you."

"Yes," she answered, "I knew you right away."

They continued to the next corner chatting, he proud that he could be so well known that a little girl like this could pick him out. Suddenly a horrible thought struck him, and he stopped.

"Who am I?" he asked, turning around.

"Why," answered his companion, "Buffalo Bill, of course."

A WISH.

I wish!
But what's the use of wishing?
Things never will come true.
'Tis just as bad as fishing,
When fish won't bite for you.

And yet I wish as much as ever,
There were a country without schools,
Where people might be just as clever
And not obey so many rules.
—Elton Maurice (From Child Lore).

LET'S HAVE A MOTHERS' DAY EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.

Not in Words, but by Deeds.

Many of the ladies of Columbus are interested in the open-air school system. For many months these earnest workers have been toiling against great odds to accomplish their ends. Recently a visitor to Chicago described the benefits obtained by the open-air school system in that city, and the expense of conducting the same was found to be very small. We hope the public will assist these ladies of mercy to found one of a like nature in this city. Let the community remember that the sickly child is oftimes the result of its environments. Therefore it is the duty of the city to recompense the children so afflicted with the best means at their disposal to obtain an education. For the love of humanity, in these days of ill-confidence, let us never lose our faith in the good intentions of Mother.

You should see our thin, dainty Silk and other Dress Materials, at 25c per yard. Just the thing for the hot weather. A beautiful line of men's Dress Shirts, some with the soft collar. You will be pleased with our selection at $1.00, $1.50. Give us a call.

"Akin to Love"

By SYLVIA VERMILLION.

"If a body meet a widow in a stunning [illegible]
If a body kiss a widow, need a widow frown."

Lawyer Graves was shocked to find his practical mind jumping from its practical groove to such a foolish jingle.

The note of fear in his client's voice, however, reduced him to normal. He commenced seriously:

"I did not mean to cause unnecessary alarm, Mrs. Norton, yet I know the man well. Beware of him. I have been his law partner for years and found that he is as cold, hard and tough-fibered as the steel out of which he has made his money."

A tense moment followed in which both felt the throb of anxiety. It reflected strongly in the gray eyes of the man who had read his partner so accurately. The attorney wondered if she knew she resembled a butter-cup growing in black loam, with her golden head rising from its meshes of black hair.

An innocent girl, with a face like that would be easily marked. He voiced his following thought:

"I wish you were not going alone, Mrs. Norton. It is a long distance from here to South Dakota. Of course it is natural that you should want to live with your parents since the death of your husband. Do they know that you are coming?"

"Yes, I wrote mamma last week. I, too, wish I were able to hire some experienced woman to go with me, but I will have to be content with Nora. She is young and homeless, or I would feel compelled to let her go, too. You remember, Mr. Norton's affairs were very much tangled at his death, and there was not much left after expenses were paid."

Lawyer Graves nodded. He recalled the deficient will power and impulsive nature that could love better than it could financier. The well modulated tones went on:

"Of course I realize I give my enemy—" she could not compel herself to mention his name—"a good chance to carry out his threat of kidnaping by taking my child on such a long trip, but I thought, now that he is in Europe, might give me a chance to escape with her. I can not tell my parents why I have stayed here so long since Mr. Norton died. Mamma is not very strong and we always keep distressing news from her if possible. I have decided to start tomorrow, Mr. Graves."

The attorney started for the door. "Very good," he said. "I know your quick intuition will scent danger if there be any, and remember," taking the hand that showed character in every line, "that I am at your command. Telegraph me if anything happens. Good-bye."

When he went away she felt that he took with him her remnant of strength. She determinedly held on to the doorknob for support and watched the man who had fathered her swing down the street. She was glad Nora came in with tea and luncheon as the gray tweed disappeared around the corner.

While she ate, she planned. It did not occur to her that she was doing nothing unusual. She had been compelled to take it up at the beginning of their married life. For three years she had managed the modest income, making one dollar do the work of two. She had accepted the fact as she had the sun sets.

Baby Jeanette's joyous laughter, coming from the room adjoining, added weight to the millstone hanging about her neck. Would she be able to baffle this man who had never yet been baffled by human skill?

She arose suddenly and walked toward the mirror. "Jerry," shaking her finger at the reflection therein, "you must possess your soul with patience and nerve. You must outwit him."

Geraldine Norton thought the flying objects seen from the car window passed just a little less swiftly than had events in her married life. Wife, mother, widow, within three years. The thought brought the tears and a crushing sense of loneliness and fear. She drew the black veil down over her face, and, behind its protecting folds, scrutinized every face in the coach.

Attorney Graves had mentioned the possibility of her enemy employing an agent to carry out the threat. Could there be any in the coach? If—

A smothered little shriek from Nora! A joyous shout from baby Jeanette as she climbed over the back of the seat and landed triumphantly in a pair of well-muscled masculine arms; the owner highly amused at his part of the program.

For a second Geraldine reeled with fear! Could this man be the agent of her enemy? Then she turned resolutely and faced him.

She looked into clear eyes, in whose dark depths admiration and pity were plainly visible. He saw blue ones filled with unshed tears and fear; thereby the pity deepened in his.

"Jeanette, come to mamma, dear." Geraldine held out coaxing hands, promising "Mother Hubbard" and "The Old Woman with Her Pig"—stories that had never failed to charm before. A tiny hand raised in rebellion, a wee yellow head wagged decidedly from side to side with negativeness. The lure of "Mother Goose" had vanished.

The little mother resumed her seat wearily, murmuring a mixture of apologies and thanks. Perhaps she had misjudged the man. He surely must love children. Her baby had never shown such a preference for a stranger before, and little hearts are instinctively drawn to larger ones that always throb for the tinies. Surely there could be no intrigue behind those clear, dark eyes.

Glancing out of the window, she saw they were nearing Chicago, where she had to change cars. Geraldine made compact her baggage, keeping a sharp eye on Jeanette, who prattled on unconscious of the whirlwind of fear in the mother heart of which her baby ways were the percursor.

Wondering how she would manage baggage and baby with only Nora to help, who was willing in spirit but handicapped by ignorance, the stranger, as if divining her thought and with that rare grace of manner which so distinguished him, laid the sleeping child in her arms—she had prattled herself to sleep—and then in a voice with an effortless purity and strength that thrilled to her heart fibers, said quietly:

"Perhaps I can be of service, if you change in Chicago. May I ask what road you take?"

For an instant she hesitated, and then, by a sub-conscious argument, it seemed to her that a man might not own this voice and stoop to the depth of kidnaping her child. She looked into the clear, dark eyes searchingly while she answered.

"Thank you. You are very kind. I change to the Milwaukee & St. Paul."

"Ah! How fortunate. That happens to be my route, too. I go west to Montana.

"Indeed! You have a long journey ahead of you. My destination is South Dakota.

With the assurance that comes from much traveling, he took the sleeping child on one arm, the heavier grip in the other hand, and bidding Nora to take the lighter one and keep close to her mistress, his tall, broad physique forged a way through the jostlink crowd for his followers to the station.

"I am sorry I could not get a through check for my trunks. I will be obliged to get them rechecked here," Geraldine mumbled, her head nearly buried in a huge traveling-bag, searching for the important bits of [illegible].

"Allow me to pilot you through the crowd. Unfortunately, the baggage-room is across this first alley. If you will trust me with your checks, we will go at once."

The thought that she believed she could trust him always flashed through her mind as she handed him the checks, with a grateful "Thank you!" What would she have done alone, and with only twenty-five minutes?

She voiced her feeling of thankfulness when waiting for a lull in the traffic, on their return to the depot, after attending to the trunks. And then—

"For give my impulsive words, but if you and your baby belonded to me I would ask for nothing more in this world.

Then came a change of manner that fitted like a raiment handed down from heaven-high clouds. This she donned and walked quickly toward the depot.

He strode along by her side, and, when they reached the station, coolly and without ceremony took Jeanette and the heavier grip and swung down to the waiting train, followed closely by a very indignant, slender little mother. Free from physical fear to a point touching recklessness and with a bitter contempt for moral cowardice, Geraldine, whose finely cut features were still flashing fire, found Nora and Jeanette comfortably seated in the coach while the stranger, thank goodness, was absent.

She pondered much over that indescribable something about him that had prevented her from congealing him by a frigid manner, a process which had proved very effective when applied to other objectionables in the past.

Somehow it was difficult to reconcile the charge of cowardice with a manner like his, in which there was the unmistakable refinement of a gentleman.

Yet, what else could it be, she demanded of herself, furiously angry because tempted to be lenient. How thankful she would be when safely inside her father's home, protected from troublesome adventurers.

The train stopped at a suburban station. She quickly alighted, and telegraphed her father to meet her.

Congratulating herself that she had not asked "him" to send the message as she had thought of doing, she looked upand saw the objectionable standing on the platform of the coach, where she would be obliged to pass him.

Despite the resolution to ignore him entirely, she stopped at the sweetly low musical voice:

"Why did not you let me send that telegram. I presume that is punishment for my impulsiveness, which I am positive you think is cowardice. I own that I was rude; but a man only meets his ideal once in a lifetime. I met mine in you and baby. I will never see you again, and those impulsive words just literally blazed their way to utterance. However, I do not regret them. I prefer your scorn to the homage of a world of women."

The brown eyes had held the blue ones steadily in a direct gaze during this bold speech, and she was conscious of disappointment when the harmony of his voice ceased. He lifted his hat with the grace of a Roman noble and passed into the smoker.

The train speeded swiftly and directly, a striking contrast to the chaos of thought, each one clamoring for recognition, that were doing battle in a queenly, golden head.

Was he an adventurer? Yes—no—the chaos became calm, soothed by the voice with the chimes. Somehow his presence behind her seat had a comforting sense of protection. Yet, was the doing right in yielding to this stranger, and Stanley Norton, her husband, in his grave only one year? Again she heard those impulsive words, and despite the protest of conscience her heart sang cheerily, "I am glad—I am glad there is nothing lacking in him—the one thing needful is supplied and—"

"Mamma! Mamma! Wha' for you seep so lon'? Wate up."

Jeanette's hands were patting her face and she turned suddenly, thankful the presence had been only a dream, though she knew the voice and rare grace of manner were pigeonholed in her heart for life.

She must have slept for some time, for already prairie sights were beginning to flash by the window, bringing with them the cheering sensation of nearing home.

In keeping with the little progressive college city of Mt. Vernon, to which it was nearing, the train with much bustle slackened its speed. She read in the old, familiar landmarks a history of her girlhood and college days.

But the home-loving girl of twenty-three was looking for the mother face. She saw it from the open window, with its halo of yearning love. The haven of rest was at hand. She rushed from the coach and seized the waiting hands.

"Jerry, darling! My only child!"

"Oh, Momsie, dear! How tired I am; but just your voice and the old pet name has rested me already. Daddy, dear, how young you look. I believe you've found the spring of eternal youth."

"I've found the spring of perpetual motion, I guess, Jerry," he replied, laughing, holding Jeanette by the hand with difficulty as she danced along by his side.

"Oh, there is the little white house, daddy, dear. It holds out waiting hands, just like Momsie did," and the tired overstrung girl hurried forward through the fast falling darkness of a November night.

"I'm afraid our little rooms and the old, round-bellied stove will be a far cry from a bungalow, electric lights and furnace you have left," said her mother, unlocking the door.

"No, mamma," following her mother inside, "I have learned that happiness depends upon the possession of certain qualities, not upon the possession of certain things."

"Here is your little rocker, Jerry. I have always kept it here in the corner, where you used to like to sit. Now rest, dear, for there are tired lines in your face, which I do not like to see. I will set out luncheon now."

The mother closed the door in her soft, gentle way, and went to the kitchen, followed by Nora, who wanted to help. Jeanette had insisted on going to the barn to help look up, leaving Geraldine alone. She leaned back in her chair with a girlish abandon and gave herself up to the beautiful glow that still lingered like a glorious sunset. She sat like a marble goddess in its halo, questioning not its cause or from whence it came.

The illumination was dispelled when Mrs. Eaton announced lunch. She followed her mother to the kitchen, conscious of the fact that the voice with the charm still held her captive.

Geraldine was glad her black robes excused her from many social functions during the quiet winter that followed. She had the peace that comes after pain, though, try as she would, she could not banish the voice of music that encroached like a sea on the shore of her peaceful spirit.

At last spring came back and woke up the flowers and a throbbing world pulsating with new life was wooed, now kissed and made strong by the soft, velvety winds.

Mr. Archie Roseberry, whose fancy in the spring time always turned to love and the latest feminine face in Mt. Vernon, now whirled his attention to Geraldine, whom he had met at church and who kept him in perspective, coolly watching his arduous efforts at love-making.

This failure on her part to appreciate the honor thus bestowed somewhat surprised the young man, who had always been used to adoring girls, accepting their adoration in much the same spirit he received his generous allowance from a wealthy father—as a matter of course.

The fact that Geraldine never manifested the least concern as to his coming or going, and always maintained a cool indifference toward him, only add zest to the wooing and he thereby double his efforts.

Roseberry spent the spring months in running to cover the merest excuses with which he might seek her presence, until June adorned as a bride for her husband was ushered in, and the vernal season stepped back a pace, awed by the loveliness of her sister.

He early discovered Geraldine's love for music, and had received a somewhat reluctant consent to accompany her to a twilight rehearsal, a musical program given monthly by the College Glee Club.

They strolled slowly toward the campus. Roseberry congratulating himself because of the latest acquisition to his wardrobe—a pair of pearly white trousers of the bloomer variety, which he was wearing. The first in Mt. Vernon, he was sure, and Archie was proud of the fact.

His pride suddenly had a few tucks taken in it when a shock-headed youth called out:

"Whose be they, sonny? Yer maw's or the hired girl's?"

Archie's obliviousness to all the world, and to shock-headed boys in particular was beautiful as he minced along, outwardly stiff-starched, inwardly limp, lest the boys should get next to the remark.

Geraldine was mastering her mirth heroically, had not an unfortunate glance at him revealed his pride fairly dripping from dainty finger ends. The joyous silvery laugh that rang out just then cut like steel the extreme self-esteem, causing a painful letting in of light.

Roseberry groaned: "There comes Maxwell! The worst kidder in town. If he heard me bawled out just then—but, no! It's Bob Coleman"—settling back into his collar, relieved.

(To Be Continued.)

MODERN TRAVEL—A PROBLEM IN "HUMAN NATURE."

Next January a convention is to be held in Baltimore for the purpose of inducing American travelers to see America before visiting Europe. The local business element has issued literature asking the co-operation of all other states, and the gathering will be known as the "See Europe If You Will, but See America First" convention.

The Pan-American Congress, the government and the railroads, it is claimed, will boom the idea to the utmost.

Of course, the hint is mainly for the wealthy leisure class that periodically visit Europe, and drop so many "good American dollars" on that continent. For more than a generation the thought of those lost dollars has been an irritating remembrance for people in the hotel, transportation and other businesses which make their profits from travelers.

The Baltimore circular insists that America has quite as much beautiful natural scenery as Europe, inferring that the wealthy American traveler prefers Europe for its supposed superiority in that respect. However, we don't find hosts of European tourists coming here to enjoy the wonderful scenery said to be neglected by Americans.

The assumption that modern plutocracy travels mainly to enjoy natural scenery is by no means an original one, nor is it likely to have any more effect in this instance than it ever had.

The type of traveler who expends all those much lamented dollars doesn't travel so much to get impressions as to impress others with the fact that he has traveled. And from his standpoint travel in the United States isn't travel at all.

A person who confines his wanderings to the limits of this country gets no reputation as a traveler, even if he travels expensively. No social prestige whatever is to be gained by visiting Niagara Falls or the Yellowstone Park. But it is different with Rome, Vienna or Paris.

In most countries, indeed, as well as here, the idea of travel among the wealthy classes means foreign travel almost exclusively, but more so here than elsewhere. Traveling in foreign lands practically always denotes the possession of wealth and leisure, but travel within the boundaries of the United States does not necessarily carry that significance.

"Society" impostors of the "Hall-room Boys" type don't buy railroad and hotel labels from Oshkosh, Wis., or Tombstone, Ariz., to stick on their baggage in order to impress their friends with the idea that they have traveled. But they do purchase the labels of Atlantic steamship lines, "Grand Hotels Continental" and "Chemins de Fer du Nord" to decorate their gripsacks. "Some class about that—What?"

Thousands of drummers, railroad men, "hoboes," and workers in search of employment have visited every State in the Union, but they get no social recognition, or reputation as travelers in consequence, and in fact are not considered such.

It looks as if the Baltimore business men were up against a "human nature" problem they haven't reckoned with. And until they think up some better argument for "seeing America first" than calling attention to its natural scenery, it is not very probable that they will succeed in keeping on this side the desirable dollars now expended in Europe.

The Socialist Wants 10,000 More Subscribers in Columbus Right Away.

The Workers in "The Storm Center Of Socialism" Have A Chance To Make Good.

All That Is Needed Is "A Long Pull, A Strong Pull, and A Pull Altogether."

The Socialist Makes Fair Proposition To Secure The Co-Operation Of All For The Next Campaign.

READ EVERY WORD OF OUR OFFER.

The Socialist wishes to co-operate with the City Central Committee, the Ward Branches and the precinct workers of the Socialist party of Columbus in educating the voters and organizing our forces so that we may reap the full benefit of our educational work.

We believe that one of the most effective means of educating the workers and of propagating Socialism is through the columns of a good Socialist paper. The paper goes each week into the home and carries some message, some truth, to each of its readers. While we make no apology for our paper, we are determined that each issue shall be an improvement over the previous one.

The subscription list is the life of any paper. Without it, it dies. We want at least 10,000 subscribers on our books before the campaign opens. We must have them if The Socialist is to be the power for good that it should be in the fight of 1911 in Columbus, "the Storm Center of Socialism."

OUR PLAN.

Here is our plan to put money into the treasuries of the City Central Committee and of the Ward Branches for use in organization and propaganda work, as they may determine:

1. We will pay to each Ward Branch 12½ per cent. of all money for subscriptions collected and turned in by its members to The Socialist.

2. We will pay over to the treasury of the City Central Committee of Local Columbus 12½ per cent. of all money collected and paid in by the Ward Branches for subscriptions to The Socialist.

LIST OF PRIZES.

As Prizes or special rewards for the workers we offer the following:

1. To the Branch turning in the largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist, in proportion to membership of the Branch in good standing, we will give $75 in books, to be selected by the Branch, or in money.

2. To the Branch turning in the second largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist, under the foregoing conditions, we will give $50 in books or money.

3. To the Branch turning in the third largest amount of money on subscriptions as stated we will give $25 in books or money.

INDIVIDUAL REWARDS.

1. To the individual turning in the largest amount of money on subscriptions to The Socialist we will pay $25 in gold.

2. To the individual turning in the second largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist we will pay $15 in gold.

3. To the individual who turns in the third largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist we will pay $10 in gold.

CONDITIONS.

The only conditions we impose in this contest are that the members of Branches will get all their sub. cards from the literature or special agent of their respective Branches and that this agent will at all times have on hand a supply of sub. cards and make returns to The Socialist of all subscriptions received not later than Wednesday of each week. Sub. cards will be supplied by this office at any time. This contest will be limited to Branches and Locals in Franklin County.

This Contest Began On Saturday, Feb. 11, and Will Close Tuesday, November 7, 1911

Information as to details of this contest will be cheerfully furnished by this office.

Comrade T. B. Fisher, of the Twelfth Ward, showed up the past week on the firing line. Come again.

Comrade I. C. Brown, of the First Ward, gets in this week with some scalps. Say, Brown, do it some more.

Comrade Clarence Margraf, of the Seventh Ward, has several Indians to his credit this week.

The folks about the union theaters of Columbus come into line with a club of ten new subs this week. We have 'em all with us.

Comrade W. V. Compton, of Loveland, Ohio, writes as follows:

"Dear Comrades—You will find enclosed postoffice money order for one plunk ($1.00) for one year' sub to The Socialist. 'Long may she wave.' I like it. It is newsy and gives us good stuff. Here's hoping that you'll keep up the good fight and that you—we will win out and that not so dimly in the distant future either."

BAND WILL ORGANIZE.

The Columbus Socialist Band will organize and adopt a constitution and by-laws, at 174 East Fifth avenue, Monday, May 29, at 7:30 p. m. All who are interested in this work and who would like to join the band, please be on hand, as we are going to make things hum in a short time. Comrades and friends who desire to boost the band by buying more tickets can get a chance to do so. Comrade A. C. Eby will be glad to supply tickets.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

To the Comrades and Friends:

We want twelve young men and eight bright young women to join the Modern Dramatic Club. Experienced or amateurs or anybody willing to show their ability on the platform before the public apply quick.

Address J. R. Woods, Secretary, 957 Mt. Vernon avenue, or J. E. Block, Organizer, Box 426, Local.

NOTICE TO BRANCHES.

On account of the reorganization of Branches the Organization Committee deems it necessary to call off all propaganda meetings arranged by it on and after June 1, unless halls have already been rented for same. In that case please notify speakers of the fact. The most important work now is reorganization.

D. J. FARRELL,
City Organizer.

COMRADES AND FRIENDS.

Buy your clothing, shoes, hats and furnishings at The Liberty, 198-200 East Main street, between Fourth and Fifth streets.

FOURTH WARD BRANCH.

Comrades J. L. Bachman and G. C. Tarrant spoke at the meeting of the Fourth Ward Branch, at K. of P. Hall, Eighteenth street and Mt. Vernon avenue, last Sunday evening, to a large and appreciative audience. The Fourth Ward is awake all the time.

LOCAL LIMA IN FIGHTING TRIM.

Our committee called on the editors of the capitalist daily papers and requested them to print a refutation of the lies they have published regarding Milwaukee. They refused. If these misrepresentations continue in the local press, we may decide to do as our comrades in Canton are doing—distribute a copy of our Socialist paper to every house in the city each week. The working men of Lima are going to know the truth about Socialism and its methods, and no trio of plutocratic representatives of the rotten capitalist system can prevent it.—Lima Socialist.

ALLEN COOK WILL BE HERE.

Comrade Allen Cook, the well-known Socialist attorney, of Canton, will speak in Columbus at the first great rally of this campaign in Columbus, September 17. Cook is a host with voice or pen.

WHO KILLED THE LOCAL?

"It's meeting night," said Neighbor Brown.
"But don't believe I'll go down;
I'm tired and it's pretty cold tonight
And everything will go all right
If I'm not there." So he sat and read
The paper a while, then went to bed;
Having stayed at home from the meeting.

"It's meeting night," said Neighbor Gray;
"But I guess I had better stay away;
I don't like the way the young folks take Things in their hands and try to make
The 'Good of the Local' all joke and fun.
I think something sensible ought to be done."
And he stayed at home from the meeting.

Thus one and another made excuse,
And said as long as they paid their dues
And assessments promptly, they couldn't see
What the difference was if they should be Away from the room on meeting night,
And argued to prove that they were right
In staying at home from the meeting.

And the earnest officers of the local
And the faithful who didn't dodge
Around their duties and tried to shirk,
But did their own and other's work,
Grew discouraged, and at last in dismay,
Headquarters took the charter away
Because—all stayed at home from the meeting.

Socialist Outing.

Great Demonstration at Olentangy Park, Saturday, July 15.

Proletariat of Ohio Will Rally in Columbus to Strike Terror to Hearts of Plutes.

If anybody had an idea that the City Central Committee of Local Columbus Socialist party could not get down to business the meeting Wednesday evening would have convinced them to the contrary. Comrade D. J. Farrell presided, and the way that "wild Irishman" hustled things through was a caution. The principal work was the approval of the report of Comrade R. E. Radebaugh, chairman of the outing committee. The contract with the management of Olentangy Park for Saturday, July 15, was adopted, and the following officers and chairmen of sub-committees were named:

Annie Minturn, secretary.

Dr. C. W. Albright, treasurer.

P. F. Kinnear, chairman publicity committee.

D. J. Farrell, chairman program committee.

J. W. Freeman, chairman committee on distribution of badges and admission tickets.

C. F. Weichold, chairman reception committee.

L. E. Taylor, chairman committee on sale of literature, souvenirs, buttons, etc.

W. E. Bues, chairman committee on sale of newspapers, subscriptions and

This demonstration will undoubtedly be the biggest Socialist rally ever held in Ohio, if not in the United States. Already locals throughout the state are inquiring as to the date and other details. Advertising matter and free tickets of admission will be sent to every local, and special excursion rates on railways are being arranged.

Arrangements are being made to secure Comrades Eugene V. Debs, Victor L. Berger and our own Fred G. Strickland.

IT WILL BE A HUMMER.

Olentangy Park will have special attractions for the day, such as balloon ascensions, open air vaudeville, athletic sports, wrestling and sparring matches, band concerts, etc.

The City Central Committee adopted the following motion by a unanimous vote:

Moved, That the outing be given for the benefit of the Columbus Socialist, and that all proceeds over and above the necessary expenses of the outing be turned over to the treasurer of The Socialist Publishing Company, and that said company shall issue therefor stock of said company to the full amount turned over. Said stock to be owned by Local Columbus of the Socialist party and held in trust by such persons as the City Central Committee of Local Columbus shall designate. It is understood that the funds so paid into the Socialist Publishing Company shall be used for the purpose of purchasing and establishing a printing plant for the use of said company and Socialist party.

NOW GET BUSY.

COMRADE M'GOVERN WRITES.

Comrade Editor—In a recent issue of the Columbus Citizen I noticed an article on the convention of the American Federation of Catholic Societies calling upon speakers to stump the state and wage war against Socialism—paid speakers, of course.

Now those one hundred or more delegates do not represent the Catholics of Ohio, or the United States, by any means. They simply think they do. However that may be, we, the Socialists, feel very grateful to the A. F. of C. if they in anyway can bring it about to drag the capitalist party into a debate, as we the Catholic Socialists have been unable to do. If they would only take up the study of Socialism they would very readily find out that each and every one of them was born, bred and confirmed Socialists, but they don't know it. How any man can enter a confessional or kneel at a penitent form and then enter a voting booth and vote a capitalist ticket is beyond my comprehension as a Catholic, when he knows, or ought to know, that all the crime, all the poverty, all the misery, vice, corruption, white and black slave traffic and degradation that is seen on every hand is directly traceable to capitalism. Now, my fellow-Catholics, bring on your speakers and we will try and entertain you to the best of our ability, and thresh out the greatest question before the world today, for this is a world movement. But don't do it like Jimmy Boyle—take a Broad street church and station the janitor at the door to keep the public out, and try to tell a select few how he (Jimmy) would stop Socialism.

Yours for the Revolution,
EDWARD M'GOVERN.

HARRIMAN HEADS TICKET IN LOS ANGELES.

LABOR UNIONS AND THE SOCIALIST PARTY PREPARE FOR BATTLE.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—The Socialists of this city took a long step toward a victory at the mayoralty election in the fall when they nominated their full city ticket, headed by Job Harriman, of counsel in the McNamara trial, for mayor.

Wheeler Runs Again.

Candidates were named for every city office to be filled, including nine seats in the council. Fred Wheeler, who polled 14,000 votes for mayor two years ago, is one of the men nominated for the council. Another is G. M. Whitley, a well known negro Socialist, secretary of the Afro-American league.

The session yesterday afternoon, at which the nominations were made, was followed by a meeting tonight, during which the hall was packed with spectators. Resolutions were passed denouncing the present city administration for its attacks on the strikers.

The labor unions here are solid behind the Socialist ticket and victory is practically certain. The convention pledged support to the end that the McNamara brothers may be given a fair trial and the conspiracy of the financial interests against labor be defeated.

City Completely Organized.

The convention was attended by the largest audience which ever assembled at a Socialist convention anywhere on the coast. The Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association is very much disturbed over the political outlook and will do everything to defeat the Socialists.

The city is, however, completely organized, and the Socialists are going after victory the Milwaukee way.

SOCIALIST VICTORY IN THE REICHSTAG.

BERLIN.—The Alsace-Lorraine constitution bill has emerged from the Reichstag committee more democratic an instrument than it was expected it would be. After protracted negotiations between the various parties of the government, Reichsland gets three votes in the federal council, and at the eleventh hour the government conceded to the demand of the Socialists for a one man, one vote principle instead of the loaded plural voting system.

Another progressive amendment refers to the freedom of religious belief and freedom of language. Elections are to be held Sundays and subject to control of the imperial government. French is to be taught in the schools and used in official documents in all districts where French is spoken by a majority of the population.

LOUD AND PROLONGED WAIL FROM THE ANTI-NOISE PLUTES.

One night last week loud and piercing shrieks of a whistle on a lowly peanut vender's cart rent the atmosphere in the vicinity of Bryden Road and Eighteenth street. The peace loving plutes thought at first it was the wail of a siren and at once demanded protection from the limb of the law in the shape of our gigantic policemen, two of whom at this moment hove in sight. When the true source of this most deafening and ear-splitting pandemonium was learned, these quiet and law-abiding plutes cried aloud for the offender's hide, and the brave guards of the capital proceeded to quench the fire of one small gasoline burner, the noise stopped and the owner of same was taken to the city prison to explain next morning to the judge why he had the nerve to have in his possession a small tin whistle that would make a noise like a foghorn on an ocean liner. It seems strange that objections should come from this source when one stops to consider that these are the persons who make the nights hideous with noises arising from their most unpleasant horns and other obnoxious contrivances in their joy-riding until the wee small hours.

But why complain? It was ever thus—and that is one of their prerogatives.

THE LAGGARD INTELLECT.

(By John M. Work.)

As I pointed out in my last article, the industries are now dead ripe for Socialism, but the minds of the people are not.

The minds of the people have not developed as fast as the industries have developed. They have come trailing along behind.

The minds of a majority of the people are all the way from five to twenty-five years behind the times on economic questions. They lack at least that much of keeping pace with industrial development.

It is our province to educate the minds of the people along this particular line until they get up to the times.

I suppose the reason the minds of the people have not developed as fast as the industries have developed is because of the innate conservatism of the human mind.

It is a feature of the average human being's mental make-up that he hangs to the old like grim death and wards off the new.

This attitude of mind is called conservatism.

Conservatism is the great enemy of progress.

All the progress the human race has ever made has been made by the radicals. And it has been made in spite of the constant and bitter opposition of the conservatives.

The conservatives always pull back. They always attempt to prevent the human race from making progress.

The radicals always push forward. They are always advancing to a new stage of progress.

Old adages are frequently lies. But we radicals accept this one: "Test all things, and hold fast that which is good."

We do test all things.

And we do hold fast that which is good.

But we do not hold fast anything except what is good.

The bad and the worn-out we throw away.

And we try to replace them with something better.

It is true that the conservatives sometimes assist the radicals in preserving the good. The difference between them in that respect is in their motives. The radicals preserve the good because it is good. When the conservatives preserve the good, they preserve it because it is old and has passed into habit, or second nature, as some people call it. So, when the conservatives preserve the good they do not deserve any credit, because their motive is a low one, and because the good would be preserved by the radicals anyhow and with the best of motives.

We Socialists have the task of battering down the economic conservatism in the minds of the people. But, I'll discuss that in my next.

SOCIALISM

The SOCIALIST

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF, BY AND FOR THE WORKERS

Office State Librarian
Columbus, O

Vol. 1. No. 24. COLUMBUS, OHIO, SATURDAY, JUNE 3, 1911. PRICE $1.00 per year. SINGLE COPIES, 3 cents.

DON'T GET EXCITED.

(By John M. Work.)

In a previous article I pointed out that it is one of our great tasks to break down and destroy the economic conservatism in the minds of the people, so that their minds will become ripe for Socialism.

We are doing it very fast.

In the past ten years we have been able to see this conservatism, this prejudice against Socialism, gradually disappear before our eyes.

We have destroyed at least half of it in these ten years. I do not mean that half the people have come to the point where they vote the Socialist ticket; but at least half the prejudice has disappeared.

In other words, the people of the United States have swung at least half way over to Socialism in the past ten years.

In a few more years the rest of the prejudice will disappear, and they will swing the rest of the way.

Then their minds will be ripe for Socialism.

And we will then have Socialism.

But, do not think the task of battering down the remainder of this prejudice is going to be easy.

Recent events have been inspiring. We should make the most of them.

But do not allow yourself to be fooled into believing that our troubles are over. Do not imbibe the idea that the path from here to the co-operative commonwealth is a smooth and gentle incline.

If you do, you will find yourself terribly mistaken.

On the contrary, there are mountains to climb, cliffs to scale, jungles to penetrate, rivers to ford, and wild beasts to overcome before the goal can be reached.

We shall see plenty of reverses before our final victory.

And when the reverses come, the faint-hearted will sneak off cover as usual and leave the old guard to fight the battles.

But the old guard constantly increases in numbers.

The battles will be fought. All obstacles will be overcome. The goal will be reached.

The ranks of the old guard are always open for recruits.

Don't be a fair-weather Socialist.

Don't be a faint-heart.

Don't be a craven.

Join the old guard and make up your mind that you will be on the firing line, in the thick of the fight, at the times that try men's souls, as well as when the enemy is in retreat.

HOME NEWS FROM ABROAD.

It is reported that a number of citizens who possess considerable wealth, and who are disgusted with the corrupt and reactionary policies of the old parties, have flung themselves into the Socialist movement in Columbus and are assisting to inaugurate an aggressive literature and organization campaign. If they are sincere and recognize the fact that the Socialist party is a working class movement they can do a great work. If they came into the party from purely sentimental reasons or the expectation of securing public office or business advantages they are likely to meet with disappointments. The Socialist party is run on somewhat different lines than the pie-counter aggregations. The only reward that a Socialist has a right to expect is hard work, and plenty of it, and the respect of his fellow-men—maybe.—Cleveland Citizen.

The above will be news to the Socialists of Columbus. The campaign committee, the city central committee, the organization committee and The Socialist management have not seen or heard of these benevolent capitalists, at least there is a forcible dearth of mazuma around headquarters that would prove us to be the most revolutionary, class-conscious bunch in the world.

Seriously, comrades of Ohio, do not misjudge the movement in Columbus. We are doing the best we know how. We are learning more every day by experience. We are reorganizing a city gerrymandered by a Republican council. We are carrying on persistent propaganda work. We have our internal differences at times, but, believe us, we are united against the common capitalistic enemy. The movement is adjusting itself, and the Socialist party will give a good account of itself next November. The Socialists of Ohio should come to Columbus on Saturday, July 15, and get acquainted with us. You will be able to judge then as to the kind of folks we are. In the meantime, subscribe for The Socialist and read about the movement here every week.

The tendency to put the courts above criticism is a sign of weakness and degeneracy. It is the duty of every citizen to pass judgment upon the action of the courts and to condemn them if he does not approve. Anything less is to abandon popular government.

LOCATED ORGANIZERS.

The time has arrived in the development of the Socialist party when men must be chosen from the ranks to attend to the detail work of the organization. In fact, we are not really organized until the organization is "manned."

The initiative in this matter must be taken largely by the locals themselves. Each local must choose some one especially adapted to their community needs.

Organizers who are sustained right on the ground and live in their own homes are the sort that we should put to work at once.

They should be supported in a way that they may give all of their time to the movement. They should become our specialists.

We will sustain them. They will work for us. That is co-operation. It is in line with the very spirit of our movement.

The Socialist party is a machine built for work. It is not a mutual admiration society, where "honors" are passed out. The man who must be honored should be passed up.

Our organization works to a purpose: the securing of the means of life for the workers. To do this we must agitate, educate and ORGANIZE.

The last is the job on which we must get busy. We have some wandering organizers, and they will always be needed. But the LOCAL, the unit of our party, has not yet seriously taken up the organizing work. There are a few exceptions which only "prove the rule." But it is time that the local organizing fever broke out in our midst.

Frederick Guy Strickland.

SENATOR CUMMINS' FEARS.

Fearing to go forward to Socialism, Senator Cummins of Iowa, in a speech at Washington, D. C., said that unless competition is restored there will be Socialism or perhaps a bloody revolution.

Cummins spoke before the Washington College of Law. His most significant utterances were:

"Without the restoration of competition there are but two alternatives before the American people, unregulated or unrestricted co-operation or combination, and second, to resort to the federal government to fix the price of every product that enters the channels of interstate commerce, just as rates of transportation are now fixed. From that step, the next, Socialism, is inevitable.

"There no longer is any question of production. The American people can produce more wealth within a given time than any other three nations.

"It is the problem of distribution that will wreck the American republic if the republic ever is wrecked. The giant producing concerns of our country are being amalgamated in such a manner that a comparatively few men now virtually control the necessities of life.

"There is but one means of circumventing the havoc this will ultimately work, and that is the restoration of competition in manufacture and trade.

"For two thousand years," he continued, "nations have settled just such crises as this by force. Within a few years we will know whether American men and women have the strength and virtue to resist temptations and attain the heights of good government without the shame of blood-shedding. Absolute justice can be obtained, not over the law, but through the law."

INDUSTRIAL UNIONISM.

On the second page of this paper will be found an article on "Industrial Unionism," by Judson Oneal, which we commend to the careful consideration of every wage-worker. Political organization in the political field and industrial organization in the workshop should be the slogan of every class-conscious Socialist.

The labor union which is "properly conducted," according to capitalist ideas, is the same that sits quiet when its members are kidnaped and "suspends" judgment until they are suspended.—The Call (N. Y.).

DON'T BE AFRAID OF REVOLUTION.

Revolution is becoming a respectable word.

Socialism has become a respectable word.

Very soon, both shall be considered respectable by the most "respectable."

Several days ago, Senator Bacon from Georgia made this statement in the Senate of the United States:

"Revolution is not a legal right but a human right. A people can throw off any government when it pleases. Revolutions have always advanced civilization."

The senator uttered the above sentiment while opposing a resolution instructing the President to send troops into Mexico in the interests of peace. He said that the troops would be sent down for no other purpose than to aid Diaz, who was fighting the revolution of Mexican freedom-seekers.

The word revolution is becoming respectable because revolution is becoming a necessity.

Necessities have always been "respectable."

And when people have to resort to matters of necessity, they always discard fear: the mental disease of slaves.

There was a time when those who taught revolution were hung or shot.

Today we hear the talk of revolution in the plutocracy-ridden Senate!

Revolutions are the prices that humanity has paid for what freedom it enjoys.

Revolutions have always embodied the demands of the masses for more liberty.

And if the workers want industrial liberty, they must fight for it—peacefully as much as possible, but with shrapnel if necessary!

The dream of the centuries was political libery.

We have political liberty.

But we have remain slavery.

Political liberty is useless if we have not industrial liberty.

Political liberty is worthless if we remain industrial slaves.

All American citizens have political equality. But American citizens have not industrial equality.

Some are masters. Most are slaves.

The slaves are under the hallucination that they depend upon the masters for their existence. They do not yet realise that they themselves could run the industries and government without the interference of their bosses.

As soon as workers realize that they are hiring their exploiters, they will decide to make wealth-makers of those who are wealth-takers today. Workers will then know that they can reap the profits of their labor as well as their masters. They will learn that industrial liberty is at the bottom of all liberties. When they reach this mental attitude—then will begin the climax to the social revolution.

The climax may be peaceful or bloody.

Thus far all revolutions have been bloody.

Even where the ballot has expressed the will of the people, the bullet was used by the Master Class.

But the time is at hand when it is no longer a crime to speak about revolution.

It may be a crime to start one!

But "revolutions have advanced civilization." This is what Senator Bacon said!

And the revolution for economic freedom will advance civilization to that stage in the evolution of society wherein the hideousness of capitalism will be the remembrance of a time that was.

Don't be afraid of revolution!—The Detroit Emancipator.

THE PASSING OF THE VETERANS—A TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

Listen, the bands are playing. Hark! What means that booming of guns! See, here they come! Who! "The veterans of the wars!" Note the faltering steps, yet apparently they feel no physical strain. Why! Because the inspirations of the past leads them on. See those two old cronies carrying their guns midst the weight of years. See they smile; maybe they are recalling a joyous victory. Look! He, bent with age, is shedding tears! Yes, the bloody carnage of the battlefield has appeared before him. Perhaps it was a mental picture of some dying soldier, raising himself upon his elbow, surveying the almost deserted battlefield, begging water to quench his dying thirst. "Save me from the trenches," he pleads; "remember me to the folks at home," and then he goes to—eternity—to victory.

The veterans are passing away from this terrestial battlefield. May those gray hairs and tottering limbs ever remind this republic of the moral obligation it owes the veterans of her wars. Long live the republic! Long live her warriors of yesterday in comfort and in peace! Capitalism thou hast cursed the world with misery. Thy greed and avarice causes national strife.

Catholic Defender of Socialism.

Gives Reasons to Show That Socialism Is Not Against Religion.

(Reprinted from the London Times and Catholic Opinion.)

With reference to Mr. Burke's article on Socialism, writes "R. H. B.," will you allow me, as a Catholic and a Socialist, to make a few remarks on what he says?

I feel confident that most of my Catholic brethren are ready and willing to let the Socialists defend their position when assailed, and will give ear to them, for, as a matter of justice, both sides should be heard before judgment is passed. As a Catholic I reverence my faith, and as a Socialist I am of necessity prepared to defend my Socialism. I believe honestly and truly in both catholicity and Socialism, and find nothing incompatible between the two.

Because some prominent men in the Socialist movement are opposed to Christianity, Mr. Burke comes to the conclusion that Socialism is anti-Christian. I emphatically deny that Socialism is opposed to Christianity any more than liberalism or toryism. We have in the Socialist movement

Christians of All Denominations, and to say that these Christians have been led away by sophistry in consequence of their minds being untrained, as Mr. Burke suggests, is a nonsensical statement. Why is Socialism condemned and slandered because of the unbelievers in its ranks? Would liberalism or toryism be condemned on the same principle? Yet there are agnostics and skeptics in both these parties, but the parties are not attacked because of this. The assertion made that to become a Socialist one must first deny God and revelation, and become hostile to Christianity is really too ridiculous to need any comment. Does supporting a liberal or tory government necessitate a person giving up Christianity? Certainly not, for they are and quite apart from private religious opinion. It is the very same with Socialism, which is but another and better form of government.

The Socialist, like the early Christian, must be prepared to stand abuse. To make out a case against Socialism it is first necessary to misconstrue its meaning. But misrepresentation of what Socialism is will not stem the current of the movement. It might be said of Socialism what was said of early Christianity: "If it be good, it will conquer in spite of persecution; if it be bad, it will die of its own badness."

Mr. Burke, however, says that the Socialists hate the church as the one and only enemy. This is indeed news to me, and I should say that even the Socialist party itself will be a little surprised at this information. Mr. Burke is confounding Socialism with militant atheism. The Socialists do not oppose any church. They oppose under which we live. They hold that the present system which keeps some in idleness and luxury, and condemns the majority of the people to a life of toil, misery and want, is a vicious system. If the churches support such inquities and abominations as spring from the present system and stand in the way of justice being done to the people, then, and then only, will the churches be opposed. Further in his article Mr. Burke says "Socialism is a new philosophy based absolutely upon a denial of God and revelation, and not a mere reform association which Catholics may support to secure a due recognition of the laborer's claim to his share of the fruits of the earth." Mr. Burke is evidently very offended with Mr. Belfort Bax, whose book, "Ethics of Socialism," he takes exception to. Mr. Balfort Bax is a Socialist, but he is not in a position to speak for the whole Socialist party. Because Mr. Burke takes exception to the opinions of Mr. Belfort Bax and a few other Socialist writers, this is no reason why he should declare the whole movement to be atheistic. With any Socialist who declares that the churches must be abolished before Socialism can be established, I utterly disagree. I admit some do make this assertion, but to say that the whole are unanimous in rejecting God and revelation is false. If Mr. Burke had troubled to inquire into the matter, he would not have made such a statement as this.

Does Mr. Burke think that the laborer gets his share of the fruits of the earth under our present social system? If he investigates he will find that the worker is taxed, swindled and robbed on all sides. Mr. Burke seems to fear for our church. Would the abolition of legal robbery involve the destruction of the church? Can the church only exist where are rampant? I thought the duty of the church was to "feed" the sheep. Will it destroy the church to protest against the "feeding" of the sheep? Does Mr. Burke not think that a church which could live under such difficulties as ours has done would be able to continue its work under a Socialist state which would be absolutely neutral as regards religion? The church of God, being eternal, can exist and execute its mission under any form of government, and even if Socialism meant the loss of some of our religious liberty—which I deny it would—should we not support it because it would abolish forever the evils of present-day civilization, the sweating system, the slums, unemployment, adulteration of food, and all round oppression and exploitation of the masses?

What right or share has the worker now in God's earth? None whatever. He has the right to find work, if he can get it, but is bound to accept any wage the master cares to give. He must accept it or starve, for there are plenty of unemployed eager to take his place. The master knowing the worker is at his mercy gives only as much wages as will allow the worker to live, and often less than will keep body and soul together. The worker is a slave—a wage slave. He is and when too old for profit to be wrung from him he is insulted by the offer of the workhouse. The master class dominate and rule, aye, and own the working class, and if the workers attempt to investigate a system which would provide peace and plenty for all and free them from their economic servitude they are told it is against God and his church. Against God, forsooth! To feed the hungry, to give drink to the thirsty, to clothe the naked, to harbor the harborless, to demand justice. To do this we must first reject God! To give to the people the things God himself has provided for them. What material thing is there which God has not provided in plenty for all his creatures? None! Then where are the things? Why is there hunger and poverty? Why are God's creatures in want of food and clothes?

It is because the products of labor are now for profit and not for use, and because the things God provided for all are held by a few to the exclusion of the majority. What moral right has a man to own land to the detriment of his fellow-men? Is not the earth the Lord's and the fulness thereof? Did God create the land for the land owners alone or for all his people? Private ownership of land and the keeping of an army of unemployed with which to menace the man in work are two of the main props in a rotten system. The worker is robbed of his share in God's provision for mankind, and the government legalizes the robbery. Why? Because the government is composed of the dominant class. We are told that reforms are necessary and government after government has promised to ameliorate the condition of the people. The promises have been broken because the are diametrically opposed to the interests of the class for whom they make laws. The people are now realizing that it is necessary for them to have legislators from their own class. When they do fully realize this we shall have, not reforms, but a moral and social revolution, and then, and then only, when justice is obtained for all, will God's creatures realize the love and bounty of the Creator. To associate unbelief with Socialism is a slander, and as a Catholic Socialist I repudiate the assertion that Socialism is anti-Christian. It is the very other extreme.

Do not we Catholics believe that our bodies are the temples of the living God? Then can it be wrong to desire to overthrow a system which promotes physical degeneration, compels thousands to live in vile slums, and turns our women, our sisters, on the streets to earn the food society denies them? What a mockery to say that before good can uproot evil God must first be rejected. This thing is absurd. To reach love and brotherhood in the name of Christ and at the same time to support a cannibalistic system which allows the multitude to be plundered and the weak crushed out of existence is the essence of inconsistency. I am confident that the true spirit of Catholicity is not opposed to Socialism. It is absolutely impossible that it can be. For any fair minded person, Christian or otherwise, to investigate Socialism is for him to become a Socialists. The sophistry is not on the part of the Socialists, but on the part of the individualists.

Monday, May 15, 1911, was a great day for the common people in the United States Supreme Court.—Sun.

It may also be noted that Standard Oil stocks on Wall Street showed gain in selling price the next day.

After dragging along for five or six years and spending thousands of the people's money, the Supreme Court tells us that the Standard Oil Company is a monopoly, is unlawful, etc., and shows it how it can strengthen itself and continue in business. The only answer is Socialism.

INDUSTRIAL UNIONISM.

(By Judson O'Neal.)

That the limitations of craft organization is dawning on the minds of labor is becoming more apparent every day. On every hand we hear men exclaiming that what is needed is a closer compact organization to resist the encroachments of the employer.

Men that never give much thought to the needs of the hour instinctively come to this conclusion, and you can rest assured that the instinct of the worker in most cases leads him unerringly in the right direction.

The workers see in every struggle the combined forces of capital arrayed against them, while men employed in the same shop or mill are tied hand and foot by a contract and remain at work, often with non-union men, while his fellow worker is locked out or on strike.

The workers begin to reason and counsel with each other. If it is a good thing for the enemies of labor to unite their forces for a common purpose, why is it not a good thing for labor?

He begins to see that five or six different crafts in the same shop divides the workers instead of uniting them. There is but one logical conclusion from these premises: they should all belong to the same union.

The rank and file that pay the dues and must face all the hardships incident to a strike or lockout see this clearly.

The leaders, in most cases, are doing all in their power to stem the tide. Clinging to the old form of organization leads our leaders into a series of contradiction that would be laughable if it were not harmful.

At the last convention of the A. F. of L. numerous incidents transpired to cause many a delegate to consider the necessity of a change in the form of organization, if he had not considered the question before.

There was James O'Connell, of the Machinists, speaking on the resolution of Delegate T. L. Lewis granting a charter to the Western Federation of Miners, boasting of having led the revolt in the Knights of Labor, and shouting at the top of his voice, "Is the convention going industrially mad?"

The Machinists and other organizations left the Knights of Labor because of its rigid and unyielding form of organization. In those days O'Connell and Gompers were leaders of the secessionists, which later formed the A. F. of L.

Let some one today aid in a secession movement and immediately the cry of treason would go up. The question naturally arises, Was O'Connell's conduct back in the eighties treasonable? If, not would it be treason today to pull away from the A. F. of L. and organize industrially?

Time and again delegates referred to the Reed faction of Electrical Workers as seceders. Yet the A. F. of L. itself is the result of a secession movement, started back in the eighties.

President O'Connell, of the Machinists, in his peroration against granting a charter to the W. F. of M., said we should "get back to the old moorings." Wonder if Powderly didn't say about the same thing when the president of the Machinists' Union was leading the revolt against the Knights of Labor?

"Back to the old moorings." No, we are not going backward. We are going forward. Capitalism will see to that. Besides the old moorings are rotting with age, and any organization that does not loosen its hold will be dashed to pieces in the first industrial storm of any consequence that comes along. It is the failure of organized labor to get away from the old moorings that is the cause of all these jurisdiction disputes.

Trades are overlapping and intertwining in such a way that it is impossible for any one to say where one trade begins and another ends.

Another delegate said that the laws of the A. F. of L. were sacred and should be obeyed. The only thing in the whole wide world that is sacred is human life. If the laws of the A. F. of L. stand in the way of a more perfect organization of labor; if they do not meet present day conditions, then so much the worse for the laws. The A. F. of L. should make its laws to fit the conditions and not attempt to make conditions conform to its laws.

The constitution of the A. F. of L. declares that it "knows no race, no color, no nationality, no political party." It's about time the A. F. of L. were either striking out that section or confessing that it does not mean what it says.

It is on record that Japanese workers have made application for admission into the A. F. of L. and have been refused. A labor organization that refuses to throw the mantle of protection around any workingman is playing into the hands of the enemy.

I am not unmindful of the problem confronting the trade union movement on the Pacific coast, by the importation of Oriental labor. I say that after they are here it is folly to refuse to organize them. We can rest assured that if the trade union movement does not provide for them, the capitalist will make good use of them during strikes.

The Japanese, or any other race that is refused admission into a labor organization is justified in using any method at its disposal to protect its economic well-being.

What becomes of our protest against injustice when we ourselves refuse to deal justly with men who happen to have been born in the Old World? Prevent the importation of Oriental labor if you can, but once they are here let us organize and educate them and not make strike-breakers of them.

I stated in the beginning that craft organization leads us into a series of contradictions. Let us see if this is true. The A. F. of L. affirms that it recognizes no creed, color or nationality, at the same time it refuses to organize laborers that have been imported for the purpose of breaking the backbone of the trade union movement.

It proclaims the solidarity of labor, yet its methods of organization divides the workers into warring factions, as witness the numerous jurisdiction disputes aired on the floor of the convention of the A. F. of L.

The A. F. of L. is the result of a secession movement, yet it regards it as treasonable conduct for any affiliated body to leave the A. F. of L. for an organization more adapted to twentieth century conditions.

It frames a constitution adapted to a competitive industrial system, and attempts to make that constitution fit into an industrial order that is highly centralized.

It attempts to define the jurisdiction of a craft and embroils the entire movement into a quarrel, as witness the revocation of charters of city, central and state bodies.

The A. F. of L. is approaching a crisis such as confronted the Knights of Labor more than thirty years ago. Will it go the same way? Will it rise to the necessities of the hour? We hope so. If not, it will have to confront an insurrection, which will ultimately build a new movement more in harmony with present day conditions.

I am for unqualified woman suffrage as a matter of human justice.—Samuel Gompers.

A truly enlightened and democratic form of government would, of course, recognize the equal rights of women. —Tom L. Johnson.

And now since her royal highness, Queen Mary of England, has publicly snubbed Mrs. John Jacob Astor and the Duchess of Marleborough, they will, in all probability, come back to America and live happily ever afterward. The queen, it is said, will not countenance women living apart from their husbands at royal functions. Surely these transplanted American heiresses have learned a sad little lesson that other daughters of our republic should profit by. But then, it's so smart to be English, "don't you know!"

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS.

Comrade J. Frank Smith, of Wilmington, Del., died suddenly of heart disease, May 19. Comrade Smith was one of the old and active members. He was a delegate to the National Congress of 1910. Local Wilmington has lost a tireless worker and a devoted officer.

Comrade Frank E. Wolfe, 926 Higgins Building, Los Angeles, Cal., is in charge of the Los Angeles office of the "National Socialist Press" bureau. His special line is to cover the McNamara case and general labor conditions in that city and California. A weekly news letter is supplied to the Socialist and labor press. For special wire service editors should communicate direct with Comrade Wolfe.

Money has been received at the National Office for the McNamara defense fund, and forwarded to the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, from the following: Grassdat Branch, Peale, Pa., $3; Local Vincennes, Ind., $3; E. F. Johnson, Fairbury, Neb., $2.05.

Local Philadelphia, Pa., maintains a book store at 1305 Arch street, and keeps on sale all standard books on Socialism. Any one publishing any Socialist books or pamphlets should send announcements to the Literature Agent, George N. Cohen, at above address.

Beginning with the month of March the National Finnish organization, through its translator's office, established a Monthly Bulletin. It contains all important official reports and announcements, a summary of the conditions and membership of locals, the principal business transacted by the translator's office, etc. The Bulletin is distributed free to locals in bundles, according to the membership of the locals.

WISCONSIN NOTES.

Some interesting facts have been brought to light in the Department of Public Works in Milwaukee.

The average cost of asphalt street paving per square yard under the last administration was $2.34. The asphalt used according to the required specifications had to be a particular brand, controlled by one certain asphalt company. Thus were conditions under the old regime.

Now our Socialist head of the Public Works Department has changed all that. He has so framed the specifications that, while better street work is required, it is not necessary to get the asphalt from the favored company.

Now what was the result? The bids offered yesterday for street paving showed a reduction of $1.06 per square yard. That is, the total amount saved on these bids alone will be $55,-000. Pretty good for one day's work. This amount would pay the salary of the Socialist Superintendent of Street Construction for eighteen years.

The interesting query now arises, Where did this big difference go under the former administration?

To contractors' profits? Then no wonder the contractors raised such a great hue and cry against the Socialist administration.

To politicians' graft? Then no wonder the Anti-Socialist politicians think it worth their while to fight the Socialist administration so furiously.

In either case this throws a great deal of light upon the campaign of lies, calumnies and venomous attacks to which the Milwaukee Socialist administration has been subjected. It was simply a case of "economic determinism." The Socialists, it will be remembered, tried to introduce direct city work without the intervention of contractors. The Anti-Socialist minority in the council blocked this, a three-fourths majority being required to pass it. But the contractors and the old party politicians, seeing that their palmy days were past, unless they could down the Socialists, proceeded to use all means, fair and foul, to put them out of power.

Another still more significant fact is this curious one, that the capitalist daily papers of Milwaukee have almost nothing to say about this big saving on the street work of our city. One morning paper omits the subject altogether. Another hides it on the fourth page. And yet even from a capitalistic standpoint this was big news for the people of Milwaukee.

But it has come to a point that the Milwaukee people can get no news about their administration. Whenever the Socialist administration does a good thing the capitalist press twists and misrepresents it. If the papers can not possibly distort the fact, then they keep mum.

An amusing instance of the perverseness of the press was given in the report of a recent discussion at one of our civic centers. City Clerk Carl D. Thompson challenged to debate the leader of the Anti-Socialist minority in the city council. Comrade Thompson simply wiped the floor with the unfortunate alderman. But the capitalist papers in their report of the debate so contrived to make the worse appear the better reason that any one who had not attended the meeting might have supposed that the Anti-Socialist had won easy honors.

No wonder that when one Milwaukee comrade meets another they can not part without exclaiming, "We must have a Milwaukee Socialist daily!"

E. H. THOMAS,
State Secretary Wisconsin.

NEWS OF THE WORLD.

GREAT BATTLE ON IN AUSTRIA.

The great parliamentary elections will be held in the Austrian Empire on June 13. For the first time in the history of the empire all parties, the big manufacturers, the immensely wealthy landowners, the Roman Catholics, even including the so-called liberal parties, which correspond somewhat to what our Democratic party was before Millionaires Belmont and Ryan, etc., got their grip on it—all have combined against the Socialist party. All are determined on a vastly increased army and navy except the Socialists, who are everywhere fighting for an end to the slaughter of the workers in wars, as well as in industry.

In their campaign the Socialists are asking:

1. The curtailing of the power of the crown and the bureaucracy.
2. The eight-hour day.
3. Provision for the care of widows and orphans.
4. Old age and sickness insurance that will be adequate.
5. The extension of the powers of the parliament.
6. Freedom of the school from the "clerical yoke."

It is quite possible that in this election, in spite of the great advance of Socialism in the empire, the Socialists will lose some seats, but in the almost immediate future it will be found that the Socialists will sweep even the combined opposition before them as they have done in Germany, Italy, and elsewhere in the past. For several years we have had no defeats. We have been now and then checked here and there in our march, only to advance with the power of a dammed-up river when we drive through or over an obstruction.

OHIO SOCIALIST NEWS.

Comrade Ralph Korngold, who is now in Pennsylvania, will lecture in Ohio during the month of October.

Comrade Malkiel could not fill all dates that were asked for by the locals in the state, and it is hoped that we will be able to appease the locals that were disappointed by having her return again at a later date.

Comrade Lockwood, the old-time artist, will do some work in Ohio during this summer, and it is hoped that the locals will apply early so that dates can be made for successful meetings.

Local Ludlow Falls is proposing a joint picnic of the locals in the southwestern part of the state, to be held at Ludlow Falls, and would like to have the locals in the proposed section take an active interest in this matter. They want to add a Socialist speaker to the attractions already there, and by this means get acquainted with other comrades and have a general good time.

Strong resolutions were sent to Representative Nicholas Longworth and A. G. Allen by the Central Committee of Hamilton county, demanding recognition of the Victor L. Berger resolution for a congressional investigation of the McNamara kidnaping case. The demand is positive and will put these representatives on record should they refuse to comply with the request.

G. A. STORCK,
State Secretary.

BIG VICTORY IN STOCKHOLM.

In the municipal election just held in Stockholm, Sweden, the Socialists won eleven additional seats in the city council, increasing the number of their members in that body from 20 to 31. The council now stands: Conservatives, 45; Socialists, 31; Liberals, 24. The election covered only one-half of the city, which was swept overwhelmingly by the Socialists. It is freely admitted that at the next election the Socialists will control the city.

Efforts to induce the South Wales coal owners to agree to arbitration in reference to the Ely Pit dispute have not been successful. Further terms for arbitration have again been offered, and it is hoped that these may lead to a settlement of the strike. About 14,000 men have been rendered idle for over six months, and an additional number of 4,500 have gone out. Matters are still further complicated by the fact that the Monmouthshire and South Wales Coal Owners' Association has applied to the conciliation board for a reduction of wages of one and one-half per cent. beginning with June 1.

GENERAL SOCIALIST NEWS.

Rev. Benjamin Franklin, of the First Baptist Church, at Lemmon, S. D., has come out for Socialism and started a paper called The Progressive Christian, in which he will show the religious folk why they should join the Socialist movement.

That droll but effective speaker, Oscar Ameringer, has written a fine little booklet, entitled "Socialism, What It Is and How to Get It," that will make a valuable addition to the propaganda literature of the Socialist party. It sells at 10 cents a copy, and can be had by writing to The Political Action Co., Brisbane Hall, Milwaukee, Wis.

Official returns of the state election in Michigan last month show that the Socialists polled 20,000 votes, just double what they received last November. The Socialist party has also shoved the Prohibition party out of third place, Michigan being one of the few remaining states in which the Prohibs still had some strength.

According to Albert Edwards, who describes these things in the Coming Nation for this week, Socialism is applied further in the Canal Zone than any other place on earth. To be sure it lacks the important element of democracy, but if this were added and the labor was expended in the production of consumable goods, it would be a very fair forecast of what Socialists say is coming in the United States.

Guggenheim, senator and Standard Oil ally, owns the whole town of McGill, Nev. A Socialist organizer drifted into the place and wanted to speak. Guggenheim's little capitalists and officials wouldn't lease him a hall or an open lot. But a county road runs through McGill, and the Red got a permit from a county official and did his soap-box stunt, nearly everybody in town but the petty bosses attending the meeting.

In one day the Socialist women of Copenhagen, Denmark, by a systematic effort, secured 5,000 additional subscribers for Social Demokraten, a party paper. Why don't the Socialist women of this country organize such demonstrations that count for something?

Wm. T. Lane, a negro Socialist, who has had considerable experience as a lecturer and organizer, is available for engagements, particularly for work among those of his race, and locals where such service would be beneficial are requested to file applications with the National Office Socialist party.

Several weeks ago a lying dispatch was sent out of Butte, Mont., to the effect that Mayor Duncan, recently elected on the Socialist ticket, had denounced Abraham Lincoln and insulted the old soldiers in a speech before the latter. On its face the thing was a lie, but some people believed it, of course, and wrote Duncan about it. The mayor has issued a statement showing that he had merely quoted Lincoln's well-known utterances on labor questions, which were heartily applauded by the old soldiers, who met in Butte. But this will not be the last lie that will be manufactured.

IN THE FIELD OF LABOR.

The sixty union carpenters employed by Hege & Co. and Dunlap & Co., of Columbus, Ind., who struck for a 2½-cent per hour raise in their wages ten days ago, returned to work last week. In the terms of the agreement, by which the differences between the contractors and strikers were settled, both sides are said to have made concessions. The contractors will continue their plants as "open shops."

Friends of the eight-hour day, a living wage and sanitary conditions in workshops and factories, may show their friendship to advantage by insisting upon the union label. The latter eloquently pleads the cause of the betterments noted. There are other excellent reasons why care should be taken to ask for the trade-mark of unionism. Among them we might mention the protection it gives to women otherwise without a medium of defense, the toll that the sweatshop and child labor extract from humanity and the lowering tendency induced by disorganization among the wage-earners.

Missouri has a pension law for widows, passed by the last legislature. Its purpose is to enable poor widows to keep their children, under 14 years of age, in school. The law provides that a widow may be paid not to exceed $10 a month for one child; if she has more than one child, not to exceed $5 for each additional one, the exact amount being fixed by the Juvenile Court and depending on circumstances. It is expected that the mother will do what work she can in her own home to eke out expenses, but she is advised not to go outside of her home. The law is just beginning to be put in operation and has yet to prove its merits, but it has much to recommend it, and the results will be watched with interest.

The cigar makers' strike in Porto Rico, which started a short time ago, has spread to an extent which has cut down the supply of Porto Rican weeds some 20 per cent.

In Australia even the bushmen and other men who do odd jobs have a union of sixty thousand members, and a large surplus of money, and own an evening newspaper of their own.

The carpet weavers' union of Toronto, Canada, asserts that its members have been forced to quit work because of a request of employers that before they can continue work each individual must sign an agreement he will not join or contribute to any labor union or organization.

A proposition to hold a general convention of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paper Hangers of America, which was recently submitted to referendum vote, was overwhelmingly defeated by the membership.

In Switzerland the hours of men are restricted to sixty-four weekly, in Austria to sixty-six, in Russia to sixty-seven and a half by day and sixty by night, and in France to seventy-two, though to sixty where they work in the same building with women and young persons. Shorter hours, both for men and women, apply to special industries in some countries.

The annual convention of the Bakers' International will be held in Kansas City, Mo., this year, and the executive board will present to the convention a plan for the establishment of co-operative bakeries in all cities where the union has not been able to gain a foothold. The plan provides for the investment of international funds in these bake shops and they will be turned into trade schools for the benefit of members.

At Pittsburg, Kan., carpenters secured an increase in wages from 37½ to 42½ cents per hour.

Carpenters at Vicksburg, Miss., successfully withstood the effort to reduce wages and are again at work at the union scale.

Electricians of White Plains, N. Y., have just secured a raise in wages of 25 cents per day.

Printers at Grand Forks, N. D., secured an increase of $1.50 per week, and the pressmen obtained the same [illegible].

At Lorain, Ohio, stationary engineers secured an increase in the municipal water plant of 6' per month.

At Reading, Pa., brewery workers got an increase of $1 per week. Engineers and firemen also secured $1 increase and an eight-hour day.

The painters of Troy, N. Y., after a five weeks' strike, secured an increase of 20 cents per day.

The first eight-hour day ever granted by a railway corporation to its mechanical department employes was conceded by the Denver & Rio Grande Railway recently.

The machinists in the contract shops of Memphis, Tenn., have secured an increase of 3 cents per hour.

The Iowa Central Railway has just signed an agreement with the machinists and other federated shop mechanics which carries an increase of 1½ cents per hour.

At Baltimore, Md., the machinists have just executed an agreement with the Crown Cork and Steel Company calling for a 25 cents per day increase.

Carpenters of Bakersfield, Cal., secured an agreement without friction increasing their wages from $4 to $4.50 per day.

Painters and Cement Workers of Sacramento, Cal., have obtained an increase of 50 cents per day without a strike.

Garment workers of Alton, Ill., recently organized and secured an eight-hour day and standard wage scale.

Stonemasons and laborers of Kankakee, Ill., have secured an increase in wages.

At Rock Island, Ill., the painters secured 7 cents per hour increase, carpenters 5 cents per hour, [illegible] 10 cents per hour, plumbers obtained Saturday half holiday, and the hoisting engineers secured an increase of 16 cents per hour and an eight-hour day.

Twelve unions of journeymen tailors have secured an increase of 10 per cent. and a new local organized in Bridgeport, Conn.

New unions of brick, tile and terra cotta workers have been organized at Kingston, N. Y., and Oakland, Cal.

One hundred and twenty-nine postal savings depositories have been established since the inauguration by the postoffice department of this system authorized by Congress. Reports to the department justify the assertion that the new departure is an unqualified success.

At Taylorville, Ill., carpenters increased their scale of wages from 40 to 50 cents per hour and reduced hours from nine to eight.

According to the Labor Gazette, issued by the Department of Labor in Canada, employment is on the increase and scales of wages in many crafts are increasing.

Department store chauffeurs of Providence, R. I., have secured an increase of $3 per week.

The Laborers' Union at Berlin, Ont., secured an increase of 3 cents per hour.

THE SENATORIAL WHITEWASH.

The Ohio senatorial investigation committee was the best circus that has come to Columbus, Ohio, this season. The press agent for the troupe—Senator Todd, Franklin county—was likewise filling the role of star clown. The jokes he cracked are somewhat old, but in the main they are taken from "Blackstone." The dear senator would like to padlock the radical press, so he had some of the people's representatives brought before his august inquisitorial aggregation of washtub quiz artists. But so far, with all his legal skill and political class-interest energy, he has been unable to make the "wise man" from Toledo speak. We wonder if the senator remembers that there have been other stenches in the Ohio senate?

Senator Todd, if you seek to bring criminals to justice, why don't you investigate the nefarious Rogers Bill. The gentleman who introduced it was not a member of a despised LABOR UNION; he was a fellow-members of the BAR ASSOCIATION OF OHIO. The bill he introduced was known as a CURATIVE MEASURE, and it gave the STREETS OF CINCINNATI to GEORGE B. COX and his gang of corporate highwaymen for fifty years. It was reported at the time that the then United States Senator from Ohio, Joseph B. Foraker, received $500,000 in stock for his questionable services.

For many years the privileged interests have demanded that "SAFE" Men be placed in the legislature, and at times the army of lobbyists has out-numbered the membership of both houses, and in the event of this force not being strong enough to stem a tide of public opinion the doorkeepers, cloakroom attendants, and all other servile dupes are used to call in the HIGH GRADE citizens to menace the will of the people by bulldozing the people's representatives.

When we consider it was possible for the Columbus Chamber of Commerce to collect $6,000 and over from the Ohio legislature without showing where this money was expended or what became of the articles supposed to be purchased, and then to have the man who engineered the deal the head of a purifying committee, we ask why bring another circus to town? The tools of capitalism dare not expose their unscrupulous methods because they at all times seek to desecrate the things virtuous and decorate with laurels those who live by vicious practices.

Jim Henderson.

THE INITIATIVE, REFERENDUM AND LABOR, AS SEEN BY THE SECRETARY OF THE CHICAGO CIVIC FEDERATION.

The Ohio Journal of Commerce has been sending out to the labor organizations copies of their paper, dated May 6, 1911, and the article headed above appears to be the paramount issue. We will not at this time take up the whole of the article, but we want to particularly refer to an error and likewise substantiate the fact that the initiative and referendum as used by the American labor movement has become practical in all its co-operative workings. Again we wish to remind the writer that the British and American labor movements exist in different environments and to a certain extent this has a great deal to do with the governmental methods of the groups inside the nation itself. If the referendum system has proven a failure in Great Britain it was at the expense of the working class themselves. To be plain, they have tried to be honest with the employing class, both in manner of agreements and trade disputes, but in the majority of cases this can not be said of the employers. To prove this fact we cite one instance: A few years back the British iron trades decided to strike for an eight-hour day. The strike was not general, but by districts. The vote was taken, and the majority favored the strike. The vote was then given to the district executive board, and they decided in favor of concurring in the action of the membership. After so doing they resigned their offices and submitted themselves for re-election to the vote of the entire membership; the board being re-elected, the strike was declared indorsed. This procedure took time, and the interested parties meditated and voted with a thorough understanding of the question at issue. The strike was a failure because the employing class, while praying in public places for industrial peace, had their agents out gathering up the scum of the earth to take the places of the meditating employes. The largest British labor bodies are purely initiative representative bodies, but remember that the referendum vote of the entire membership indorses or rescinds the action of any convention or executive section, proving that there is "some" sign of real "democracy" in the British labor movement.

The article in itself is ridiculous because at this time the employers are bemoaning the fact that a representative convention of one of the largest labor unions in the world decided to withdraw from the Civic Federation. The right of the membership to remove mistrusted leaders and the enactment of laws that make representatives servants instead of dictators is doing more to preserve and teach the ethics of real democracy than any other factor. If we want a race of self-reliant citizens, let them feel they are part of the movement instead of mere units. The initiative and referendum has come to say in the ranks of organized labor.

JIM HENDERSON.

COLLECTIVISM.

President Eliot of Harvard, in an address last week, spoke of collectivism as "the use of society as a whole of its collective forces for the welfare of all, and follows the motto: 'Each for all and all for each.'" And goes on to remark there is "n great difference between Collectivism and Socialism, and many who call themselves Socialists are in reality Collectivists." Collectivism doesn't challenge the rights of property, but contends that these rights must be so used as not to afflict the people in any way. A man has a right to his chickens, but he has no right to let them out so that they will get into a neighbor's yard and scratch up his garden bed.

A man has a right to a bulldog, but if it is a menace to passersby, society should make way with that dog. A person has a right to keep a cat, but if it whines on the back fence at night it should be abated as a nuisance and very promptly, too, and if it dies and he throws it in the back alley, he should be arrested and heavily fined. The man has a right to own an automobile, but if he uses it to violate the law or endanger the common citizenship, walking along the avenue, the owner should be arrested and fined or put in prison. A man may own a house, but unless it is away out where there is no society he can not set fire to it and burn it down.

These crude examples illustrate what collectivism is. A man has a right to property, but he must not use it to deprive a neighbor of his rights. Collectivism steps in to preserve the neighbor's rights. And these "rights of property," President Eliot goes on to say, "are going to be supported by the growing intelligent agricultural population of the country."—Ohio State Journal.

President Eliot of Harvard, and Colonel E. S. Wilson of the Ohio State Journal, evidently do not know that Collectivism is Socialism. They may split hairs, but that does not alter facts. We, as Socialists, decree that no man shall use capital to make profit off of any person or persons. We propose to abolish private capitalism or the private ownership of the means of production. Whether this is called Collectivism or Socialism we do not care.

WORKERS, PREPARE TO FIGHT FOR YOUR LIBERTIES.

Senator Tood of Franklin has served his masters well. Under the cloak of a reformer he was slipped into the State Senate and in that body has at all times obeyed the wishes of the capitalist class. To prove the viciousness of this would-be legal dictator we refer to his power in ordering the removal of the Scripps-McRae newswriters from the state senate. We of Ohio are now on par with Russia. Remember also that this is the only state in the Union with a muzzled press. Certainly the citizens of Ohio should bow their head and mourn the atmosphere of indifference that clouded their political vision and allowed this tyrant to encroach upon the rights of the common people. Let us hope we have all learned lessons in vigilance. Surely we have suffered enough. We need not again refer to the tactics of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, the institution that is responsible for Dictator John E. Todd being in the Ohio Senate. They have little to say, for he returned favors at the people's expense. The time has come for action. The battle-ground is the ballot box. If you are not a capitalist, vote for the workers and not the shysters and the shirkers. Prepare to fight, for your liberties are at stake. The Democrats and the Republicans are silent. They live and believe in the present system. The Socialist party stands to abolish the capitalist system. Then vote as you think, and Todd and his gang will pass to oblivion

THERE'S A DIFFERENCE.

Charles Warriner, who is serving six years in the penitentiary for the embezzlement of $643,000 from the Big Four Railway at Cincinnati, has been transferred from the office of the construction department and given a position as assistant clerk to Clerk of the Penitentiary I. N. Rex. Warriner will be permitted to discard his gray suit and wear the clothing fitted to everyday life in his new position.

If Warriner had broken into a smokehouse and stolen a ham to feed a starving family, he would be in the bolt shop.

These are glorious days. From East to West the hosts of Socialism are marching on to victory. From the cities and country sides comes the glorious news. For us old heads in the movement the way has at times seemed long, the path arduous, and often in the past despair clutched our hearts as we contemplated the mighty task we had set for ourselves. For we Socialists seek to win the world for the working class; for the working class, the only useful class, is disinherited. We build mansions for others, but we ourselves pay tribute to a landlord for a hovel to live in.

On the ground of the class struggle we are invincible; if we leave it we are lost, because we are no longer Socialists. The strength and power of Socialism rests in the fact that we are leading a class struggle; that the laboring class is exploited and oppressed by the capitalist class, and that within capitalist society effectual reforms, which will put an end to class government and class exploitation, are impossible.—William Liebknecht.

WHO THROWS AWAY HIS VOTE?

(By John M. Work.)

The man who votes against his own interests is the one who throws away his vote.

If you vote the Republican or Democratic ticket, you vote against your own interest.

The Republican and Democratic parties stand for the continuation of the present capitalist system of industry, which robs you of most of your earnings. They are run in the interest of the capitalist class.

If you vote the Republican or Democratic ticket, you help to strengthen and perpetuate the rule of your enemies, so that they can continue to rob you.

Your ballot is a strong and heavy club.

If you vote th Republican or Democratic ticket, you hand that club over to the capitalist class, saying, "Please smash me over the head with that!"

And they smash you all right.

If you vote the Socialist ticket, even if it is not elected, you strengthen and build up the party which is destined to emancipate you.

The only way you can avoid throwing away your vote is by voting the Socialist ticket.

The only way in which you can make your vote hasten the day of your emancipation is by voting the Socialist ticket.

To vote any other ticket is to vote to make your chains heavier.

A DOSE OF HARD TIMES.

When an overgrown, slab-sided 190-pound football player tells a man who is dying from a stroke of paralysis that what he needs is more action and advises him to go out and boot the pig skin for six hours a day, not much importance wil be attached to his advice.

Just so with President Ripley of the Santa Fe Railway. Last week to a reporter in Kansas City he aired his views on the industrial situation. "People spend too much money," he said, "and don't save enough for a rainy day. The remedy they need is a stiff dose of hard times, WHICH I HOPE WILL NOT HAVE TO BE ADMINISTERED TO THEM."

There are hundred and thousands of men, married men too, scattered along the tracks of the railway system over which Mr. Ripley presides who get from $1.25 a day up to $2.50. President Ripley has an income from this one source of more than $100 a day and he has other interests which yield him perhaps as much more.

It isn't a hard thing for a man who makes as much in two or three days as thousands of others make in a whole year at hard labor to give advice about saving money. Anybody can give advice. Newspaper editors have so much of it to dispense that most people think their wives can't by the dozens of quarts like they do catsup and tomatoes in the fall. But it is one thing to pass out advice AND ANOTHER TO PUT YOURSELF IN THE OTHER FELLOW'S PLACE, TO ADOPT HIS POINT OF VIEW, TO SEE SOCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL CONDITIONS FROM HIS ANGLE.

And with all President Ripley's complacent wisdom we doubt if he knows at all what he is talking about when he tells a man who is earning, say, $2.00 a day, that all that ails him is that he don't save his money and that he needs a stiff dose of hard times to straighten him out! Yes, we have a picture of a man drawing from $9.00 to $12.50 a week being a dead game sport and squandering his dividends. Perhaps Ripley and his kind have a dose of hard times stored up for men of this class if they get too gay with their tongues or ballots.—Coshocton Tribune, May 25, 1911.

CAPITALISM DEFINED BY CAPITALISTS.

"The rights and interests of the laboring man will be protected and cared for, not by labor agitators, but by the Christian men to whom God, in His infinite wisdom, has given control of the property interests of the country."—George M. Badr, Mine Owner.

"The right of property rests not upon the philosophical or scientific speculation or upon commendable impulses of charity nor yet upon the dictates of natural justice."—From the decision of the New York Court of Appeals on Workmen's Compensation.

"The people are not the source of power."—Encyclical, Pope Pius IX.

"The public be damned. I am not running this road for the benefit of the public. I am running it for my own benefit."—Cornelius Vanderbilt of New York Central Railroad.

"It amounts to this, whether the operatives of a country shall be bought and sold and themselves become property, as in this state, or whether they shall be hired and their labor only become property as in some other states."—Charleston Baptist Association, defending negro slavery, 1835.

"In some countries the laboring poor men were called freemen; in others they were called slaves; but the difference was imaginary only. What matters it whether a landlord, employing ten laborers on his farm gives them annually as much in wages as will buy the necessaries of life, or gives them those necessaries at short hand as under slavery?"—Speech of John Adams in Congress, 1776.

Quotations of like tenor could be multiplied indefinitely. These suffice to clearly define the principles of capitalism. Pope, protestant clergymen, judges, railroad magnates, coal barons and statesmen alike agree that CAPITALISM RESTS ESSENTIALLY UPON CLASS DISTINCTION. It implies a superior and an inferior class—a ruler, overlord, king, owner or boss.

The king ruled by "divine right" and when that superstition went to the junk pile the center of power was adroitly shifted to the "sacred right of private property." The practical results are the same as John Adams and Alexander Hamilton well saw and, as the Charleston Baptist Association clearly pointed out in 1835.

Capitalists fear the people for good reasons and very properly resist the extension of the law making power to the common, landless, propertyless herd.

Alexander Hamilton in the constitutional debates insisted upon a property qualification for if the franchise was extended to the propertyless "they would some day destroy the sacred institution of private property." Mr. Hamilton was logical.

Capitalism stands for a class against the mass; for the few against the many and it can only live as long as the "few" succeed in keeping possession of the means of production.

It is ignorance and superstition on the part of the many that keeps them from changing the laws fundamentally and making the welfare of ALL HUMAN BEINGS the chief, in fact, the sole, purpose of the state.

MACHINISTS LINGO.

This is the way two of our traveling fraternity expressed their exuberant joy at meeting one another after having been parted for fifteen years. They met in the machine shop the first thing one morning and one of the boys who witnessed the meeting and heard it all, swears by the sacred backsaw that this is what was said:

"You durned old pirate!"

"For half a cent I'd flatten your nose all over your face, you blamed dock walloper!"

"You goggle-eyed, crooked-toothed, knock-kneed, flat-chested——"

"You measly old bum. You moon-faced, barrel-shaped, bow-legged——"

"Close your face, you long-legged, skinned, long-necked giraffe, or I'll ——".

"I'll drive your ugly head down into your thick neck if you say another word, you cheapskate, you vagabond, you disreputable old——"

"You're what's left of a cheapskate named Rick Stodgell!"

"And you're the disfigured remains of a half-baked idiot that used to be called Greasy Mullett!"

Then they shook hands and clapped each other on the back.

OTHERS PLEASE NOTE. SOCIALIST'S EXAMPLE.

Washington, May 18.—Representative Berger, the first Socialist Representative, today set a new fashion for Congressmen by actually paying postage on press matter regarding his work in Congress.

MR. RESPECTABLE UNIONMAN, ARE YOU BUSY?

Sometimes the critics of organized labor specialize on certain individual members and we hear this refrain: "Now, there is my type of union man; he never makes any trouble." Let the workers beware of these painted heroes; they are only veneered with working class principles and like vultures, live on carrion. The man who is afraid to be seen with his striking brethren is a coward. The labor movement is no place for hot house plants; neither can the differences between capital and labor be settled at a pink tea, because it's industrial war. The man who withdraws, in time of peril, is a moral coward, with a big union button on his coat and a heart as big as a flea beneath his vest.

NEWS THAT PASSED SENATORIAL CENSOR, J. E. TODD.

The press informs its readers that Andrew Carnegie is not talking steel. Mr. Carnegie was never guilty of this practice. He does not talk—he just p-o-o-z-i-e-s.

The Miners and the Amalgamated Steel journals are teaching their readers the real class struggle. Its strange to notice the trend of the labor journals towards Socialism and industrialism while at the same time many of the so-called leaders are claiming to represent conservative organizations. Good healthy truths are but the seeds of the coming democracy.

We wish to thank little Major Bush for the powder he used on the State House grounds Memorial Day. The noise brought down the rain, and saved the lives of seven weary parched onion plants.

The mail carriers are all smiles. Hereafter Sunday will be their rest day. Its strange how public opinion works on the mandates of some benighted beings.

It is reported that the business agent for the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, State Senator John E. Todd, has been secured as an attraction for the Ohio State Fair. The act will be under the direction of the Scripps-McRae League and the director, N. D. Cochran, of Toledo, will once again make Senator Todd pass through the eye of a needle.

BARBERS' UNION STATE CONVENTION.

The Fifteenth Annual Convention was held at the Columbus Federation of Labor Hall, last Sunday. The following officers were elected: E. R. Legg, Hamilton, president; C. C. Apple, Columbus, first vice president; A. H. Carman, Cleveland, second vice president; D. B. Walker, Akron, third vice president; Geo. E. McKenna, Springfield, secretary-treasurer.

The Barbers' Model License was discussed and endorsed. But since the legislative adjournment this bill which meant much to the health of the community, has gone to the morgue.

GLASS BOTTLE BLOWERS' ASSOCIATION.

Plans are being laid for the National Convention to be held in Columbus July the 10th. This body will be in the city for several weeks. It will be one of the most important meetings in the history of the movement. Delegates will be present from all over the United States and Canada. The Neil House will be the national headquarters and the Chamber of Commerce will be the meeting place.

PRINTERS' UNION.

The printers have hung out a new slogan. It reads: "Cleanliness is next to Godliness." The membership realize that this will be a great factor in warding off the scourge of consumption. The National President of the Society of Brotherly Love, John Kirby, Jr., has been sued by National President James M. Lynch for $100,000 damages for defamation of character.

WHAT SOCIALISM WILL ACCOMPLISH.

Briefly, Socialism will accomplish this:

It will give every one a home.

It will give every worker the full value of the product of his labor.

It will reduce the hours of labor in proportion to the increased power of production.

It will abolish child labor.

It will provide employment for all.

It will pension the old.

It will establish justice.

It will do away with charity.

It will abolish poverty, want, destitution and the poor house.

It will do away with class legislation.

It will prevent strikes and lockouts.

It will make it possible for the people to make or reject laws for their government, according to the principles of the initiative and referendum.

It will do away with the trusts by making them the property of the whole people, to be operated for the benefit of the whole people, instead of for the benefit of a few rich men.

It will bring about the public ownership of railroads, coal and iron mines, oil and gas wells, telegraph and telephones, forests, lakes, rivers and canals.

It will do away with armies organized for destructive purposes, and organize armies for constructive purposes.

It will do away with the landlord, the land-lord, and other absolutely useless parasites.

It will remove, absolutely, the fear of want and poverty, and make this earth a heaven instead of a hell, as it is now.

It will make labor-saving machines a blessing to man instead of a curse as now.

It will encourage study, invention, exploration, art.

It is what every one wants when they know what it is!

SOME DEFINITIONS.

A legislator is the only man who can tell whether or not a law ought to be passed.

An executive is the only man who can tell whether or not it ought to be enforced.

FRED FAY STILL HUSTLING.

G. E. B. Member Fred Fay, and those associated with him in building up the newly instituted Kansas City Division, seem to be making life strenuous for the under officials of the company, as well as contributing work for the ever present strike breaking "detective" agency. However, before the movement became known to the company, a substantial secret membership had subscribed. The bitter opposition seems to be melting away and it appears to be only a matter of time when the Kansas City car men will make themselves known as too strong in organization for the company to continue its persecution.

PRINTERS' FIGHT.

London Society of Compositors Establish Daily Labor Paper in Contest for Shorter Workday.

WASHINGTON. — In London the printing trades are now fighting a winning battle for a shorter workday. A new daily labor paper has been put in the field by the London Society of Compositors. The paper is intended not alone to voice the printing trades' side of the present dispute, but also to voice the wider sentiments of trade unionism generally and become a general workmen's newspaper. The paper is called the Daily Herald, and its price a halfpenny daily.

SOME OF OUR "SILENT" COUNCILMEN CONDEMN DANCE HALL SUPERVISION.

Councilman O'Rourke introduced an ordinance into the city council calling for police supervision of our Columbus dance halls. We regret to read that some of our city councilmen laughed the ordinance down. But when we consider the source of this gross indignity to womankind, we realise it's nothing more than could be expected from such a source. We extend a message of sympathy to Brother Mike, assuring him that organized labor recognizes his honesty of purpose in everything he has tried to do for the civic betterment of Columbus. "Shun evil companions," Mike, and join a party that represents your own class interests, and that's the Socialist Party. The "low" dance hall is a part of the capitalist system. It's the result of low environments and disreputable circumstances.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.

At the beginning I did not object to the attentions of my neighbor, No. 2466, the man who sat at my left during the times we ate our wretched meals. But as soon as I discovered he was a long-term prisoner, he having filched a five cent loaf of bread, I ignored him completely, and determined to appeal to the warden for a change of location so I should not be subjected to the annoyance of the fellow's advances.

But in spite of my irritation, I could not help appreciating the humor of the situation, and smiling at the man's presumption in aspiring to be en rapport with. And, in justice to my sense of charity, it is only fair that I should confess that I did not condemn the creature for his endeavors to fraternize. I reasoned that it was quite likely he was ignorant of my record, and did not know that, by a unique and wonderfully ingenious system of bookkeeping, I had succeeded in acquiring, and retaining for a considerable length of time, a complete chain of large bakeries, the output of which was more than thirty-five hundred loaves of ten-cent bread per day. G. T. E.

LABOR CRUSHERS AT LIMA

Use Disreputable Non-Union Workers With Usual Results.

While the labor haters and capitalist press are putting forth such mighty efforts to jail and hang the union men, it might be well for the people to know what has happened in one city, in one craft, and in the space of about two years, by disreputable non-union workers brought to Lima by the daily papers to take the places of union men who struck for better conditions.

Frank Bristol, a linotype operator, and a reporter previously imported as a sporting editor, following an early morning spree, held up an express wagon. Bristol was arrested, but through the influence of the publisher for whom he worked he was released. The reporter left town suddenly and the public heard nothing of the event.

A second linotype operator named Swan made the acquaintance of a domestic employed by a prominent West Market street family. He married her, got possession of her life's savings, amounting to several hundred dollars, and "skidooed." Nothing was mentioned about this escapade in the local papers.

But now comes a linotype operator named Foder who "hits up" big business, and the public get the facts. Foder was employed on the Times-Democrat. He claimed to be the agent of a Hungarian society that was going to do big things in Lima. Checks to the amount of about $1,000 were cashed by different merchants, and Mr. Foder disappears.

Those interested in crushing union labor would have the public believe that members of unions are largely of the criminal class and not above doing most any kind of violence. That such crimes as the above would be almost impossible for a union man to enact and not get caught is the real fact of the matter. Every union man in good standing carries a card by which he could be identified, dead or alive. He is on record in the books of his organization, and it would be a very hard matter for him to lose himself by sailing under an alias.

In the many crafts these disreputable non-union crooks are hauled in during strikes, or when decent men refuse to work for the starvation wages paid by the employers.

Booze fighters, con-men, women-chasers, and all classes of degenerates have been employed to fix the standard of wages for the printers in Lima.—Lima Socialist.

The Other Side of Gary.

Ella June Purcell.

You have heard of the "model" town of Gary, Indiana, of course. Perhaps you have seen many pictures of its wide streets and pleasant workingmen's homes in magazine articles. I should not be at all surprised if you have even longed to go there in order to enjoy all its advantages, beauties, and above all its high wages. You have been told that the town of Gary, Indiana, is a wonderful example of what a strong trust can and will do for its employees if given only half a chance. You have doubtless felt that no matter what a bad trust the sugar trust may be, or what a very bad trust the beef trust and all other trusts may be, there must be some good in the American Steel trust,—(the same that sells American steel rails cheaper in Great Britain than in the United States.) Yes, it is a good trust, that great American Steel Trust, which built the beautiful "model" town of Gary. In a few months transforming a worthless sandy waste into a choice garden spot. Oh my, yes, you know a great deal about the glories of this trust and its good works!"

Well, frankly, altho I have visited this "model" town of Gary, I am unable to emphasize your rosy picture and prolong your pleasant dream.

Being in Chicago recently and having often longed to see a model town, I went out to Gary one day,—a distance of about twenty miles. As the train was nearing the imposing and expensive looking depot a woman in the seat behind pointed out rows and rows of charming little houses—"the famous model homes of Gary's workingmen", she said proudly. My heart thrilled with pleasure. Then it was true! There really and truly was an actual existing place where men who toiled lived like PEOPLE! Later the woman behind spoke casually of having owned a considerable amount of land in the sand waste where Gary was built, and I began to question the honesty of her enthusiasm.

The main street was very wide, clean and well paved, very up-to-date street cars rolled along, the buildings were all new and modern looking. Everything was indeed marvelously fine and prosperous for a town scarcely five years old,—and twenty thousand inhabitants, besides thousands who came in each day to work!

But those "model" homes we must see them at once. Passing from the business section to the residential district I got my first close range view of workingmen's "model" homes. Immediately I was struck with the monotonous sameness of the construction of the houses—not a serious handicap in these days, however, when the same styles are followed by all who have the funds. Is it necessary for us to inaugurate a reign of Socialism in order to ruin initiative? But the uniform air of desertion and loneliness was disquieting. I suppose everyone was at work or resting from his work. The common need of painting disturbed me more, but the almost total absence of flowers and gardens was positively alarming. Lawns were either not at all, or nearly so! But it was not difficult to account for these things, for I remember that Gary was built on a sand waste, a choice place for a bathing beach if the steel mills were not all along the lake front,—but hardly a place to inspire even the most patient to gardening or grass sowing. I can well understand how men hot and tired from long hours in the mills (I was told they work nine and ten hours, not the famous eight hours)—would soon give up the task of lawn-making as hopeless.

Still I am glad to say that these homes were a beautiful contrast to thousands seen in every large city. They were so much better than deep down in my heart I had anticipated that I asked, "Where do the poor people of the town live?" Now I hoped to be indignantly told there were no such in this famous "model" town. But the answer was, "Oh, over about 16th and 17th avenues," with that easiness that meant the poor were ever with them.

I at once lost my interest in "model" homes and started across the big spread out place to 16th and 17th avenues. Now please remember all the time that Gary is built on a sand waste and you will then realize how hot the sun beams down there in summer and how cold the winter is in winter and why I began to pity the poor men who walked tired, perhaps hungry, from that far away 16th and 17th district to the Lake where the steel mills are located. I was in Gary to see as much as possible of a "model" town, so I valiantly trudged the distance myself—(the "model" homes you have heard so much about are on the Lake side of the town just back of the hills).

As I got out from the center of the town the buildings became fewer, but the good side walks and paved streets continued. At last to the left of the Main street a few scattered trees appeared, how strange in Gary, the "model" town on the sand waste!

With a Socialist's investigating curiosity I left the Main street and discovered what appeared to be a colored camp meeting ground. There was a cluster of rough little summer cottages almost sunk in the sand and really quite picturesque among the trees. Upon closer inspection, however, the camp meeting ground proved to be merely the BEST side of the 16th and 17th district, which I had come to see.

It seems that the colored people of Gary have their own little corner of the sand pile in which to play. Their tiny huts are half hidden by the sand and set quite far apart at irregular intervals. The only trees worthy the name in the whole town are scattered thru their few acres of homeland. In summer time I can imagine the jolly clinking of the banjo and the melodious voices of the carefree negroes singing of the happy south. And when the moon shines down on the miserable little huts and puts a charitable indistinct cloak over the rags of the shanty dwellers and the disorder of the sand pile I can almost see some poetry in the place. But comfort, prosperity, "model" homes, by Heaven, NO! But well, perhaps the colored folks like poetry better.

Passing from the colored section to the ordinary poor district, I was appalled, my heart almost stopped with rage, with grief, with shame. NO paved streets here, no sidewalks here, no sewers either apparently, unless we count the natural drainage afforded by a small and very dirty stream which flowed in among the huts. But a nice place for the children to play in, anyway!

And the homes,—call these "model" homes? The most dreadful shacks I ever saw! But most of the occupants were foreigners and doubtless ignorant and didn't mind. The "homes" were of wood, of course, unpainted, ugly and barren, both within and without. Thru the uncurtained windows poverty in its most revolting form appeared.

I have seen misery and desolation in the tenement districts of large cities, but never such utter horrible hopelessness as here, in the workingmen's district of the famous "model" town of Gary, Indiana. Never shall I forget what I saw thru one of the uncurtained windows. A man, sitting at a bare table in a room entirely empty except for a table and a chair or two, a man with the most hopeless and indifferent face I could imagine, eating a hunk of dry bread from a larger hunk that lay on the empty table before him. A young man, too, and yet the fire of youth was gone. Is it not impossible to expect ambition and energy from a man who works long hours for less than one-eighth of what he produces, and lives in a home bare of comforts and even necessities?

And what of the children, our future citizens? The noble heart of Teddy would rejoice to see the scores of them. Ragged and dirty, pale and uncared for, but that is immaterial.

Such is Gary, the "model" town built by the great American Steel Trust. A town where the average wage is only $1.65 I am told. A town where hundreds of men, women and children live huddled together in the rudest hovels. A town where a few real "model" homes are indeed found, but whose chief reason for existing would seem to be posing for pictures for trust inspired articles.

We have heard of good trusts and bad trusts. Will some workingman please explain the difference?

REPLY TO "AUGHT TO BE FIAT CARR"

The above, "Aught to be Fiat Carr," is the heading of an editorial appearing in a recent issue of The Yellow Socket, written by its brilliant (?) editor, one H. Don Laws.

True, any sentiments voiced by this writer are beneath the notice of a Socialist; but when his premises, as in this instance, are so illy taken, when he misrepresents Socialists and their views so flagrantly, and resorts in his epithets to the vulgar vernacular of the veriest mud-slinger, it can do no harm, in passing, to point out a few of his errors and gently remind him of the fact that, while he poses as the personification of Republican standpatism on a monument, that in upholding John D. Rockefeller and his Standard Oil trust he is opposing one of his beloved party's laws.

There is a Sherman anti-trust law, long a dead letter, of course, and now perverted in such a manner as to be no longer a menace to the trust; but at one time it was considered unlawful by the Republican party to restrain trade illegally—and no more illegal restraint could be found in the known world than that practiced by the oily octopus known as the Standard Oil Company.

Mr. Laws attacks a letter written by Colonel Fiat Carr, in which he (Carr) asks the following question:

"Why couldn't 10,000 people own co-operatively the Standard Oil Company and each one benefit by the profits, instead of turning over more than $60,000,000 each year to some one that is not essential to the business at all?"

This is certainly a fair question and one worthy an honest, conscientious reply. Editor Laws answers it by the abusive language usually employed by the bulldozer who has no sound logic for his comments, and false accusations against Comrade Carr and Socialism in general. He interprets Carr's question as meaning that "he, Carr, wants to be one of the 10,000 men to draw $6,000 a year for doing nothing," continuing with the sentence: "and that is Socialism. In other words, the Socialists look about and pick out a successful business, one that is paying money, and want to take it away from those who gave their lives to make it a success, and divide the income with a crowd of lazy louts whose lives have always spelled failure. That is what Socialists want."

To my certain knowledge Socialists have never announced themselves in favor of any such doctrine, nor do they want it. The only "dividing up" Socialists want is the equal dividing up of opportunity. Neither are Socialists "lazy louts," far from it. Socialists are workers, they expect to continue to work under Socialism the same as under Capitalism, only in that day they expect to benefit by their labor in the just compensation of all that their labor produces, and they are going to demand that the Rockefellers work along by their side. They are going to give them good, wholesome, useful jobs, for the cutting of coupons usually makes for degeneracy, and a parasite in any form, especially in the industrial world, is not good for the commonwealth.

You say, Mr. Laws, that these men gave their lives to make their business a success. What part of their lives? They gave nothing of any real worth. On the other hand, vampire like, they took the life-blood of countless thousands of their fellow-men, human beings like themselves, but what a gulf between. "Down all the stretch of hell to its last gulf there is no shape more terrible than this, more tongued with censure of the world's blind greed, more filled with signs and portents for the soul, more fraught with menace to the universe." These are the creatures that have made the business a success. These have builded for them their colossal fortunes, and, behold the picture! While the masters dined at their well-filled tables, to the strains of music, these workers,—the real givers of their lives—sweltered and digged and groaned, because of a system that permitted one man to wax fat from the sweat of another man's brow. This is Capitalism! What is Socialism?

It might be well at this point to give a few definitions of Socialism by the leading authorities of our land. The word of these authors can not be questioned, and from the abundance of their knowledge on the subject of Socialism they speak as follows:

First, to quote from the Standard Dictionary: "Socialism is a theory of civil polity that aims to secure the reconstruction of society, increase of wealth, and a more equitable distribution of the products of labor, through the collective ownership of land and capital, and the public collective management of all industries; its motto is every one according to his deeds." How in the name of reason could it take men whose lives had spelled failure to conceive of and uphold so righteous and just a system of government as this? And in all fairness, would Mr. Rockefeller's deeds, even as head of the Standard Oil trust, be worth $60,000,000 a year? And would it not take workers rather than "lazy louts" to manage our industries for the good and welfare of the whole people, giving us thereby a government of the people, by the people, and for the people? This is what Socialism wants to do.

Again let me quote from the Century Dictionary: "Socialism is a theory or system of social organization which would abolish entirely, or in great part, the individual effort and competition on which modern society rests, and substitute for it co-operative action; would introduce a more perfect and equal distribution of the products of labor, and would make land and capital, as the instruments and means of production, the joint possession of the members of the community."

The American Year Book, Cyclopedia and Atlas, far from calling the Socialist a "lazy lout," speaks of him in the following terms: "The typical Socialist is a rather quiet and thoughtful workingman, serene in time of trouble and self-contained in the day of victory. He realises that the world will move on very well after he is dead, but remembers that while he lives it is his business to help the world move. He considers himself an ally of eternal laws of nature, and is proud to do his little part in the great cause."

The same author continuing, says: "No word has been more abused and misunderstood than the word 'Socialist'—the Socialist is not an anarchist; they are opposed in theory and practice. The Socialist does not propose to destroy the family, abolish religion or divide up property, nor does he seek to carry out his ideas by riot and bloodshed. In a single phrase, Socialism means public ownership of the means of production and working class control of the government, a chance to work for all who will, and to all workers the full value of their product."

Under the present system Mr. Rockefeller gets $60,000,000 a year, consequently the men who work for him can not possibly get the full value of their product.

Wherever Socialism is known the world over the above definitions are in perfect accord with its teaching. Ignorance alone is accountable for the misrepresentation of its principles. When Socialism is thoroughly understood, as in the case of the authors cited above, all censure is eliminated, and only the beautiful and good of its beneficent theory is revealed—a beacon pointing to the dawn of a better day.

Mr. Roosevelt once gave utterance to the statement that there were good trusts and bad trusts. This was laughed at as a joke, but it is in substance what the Supreme Court believes and testifies to in its latest decision concerning the Standard Oil trust. It affirms: "There are good trusts and bad trusts. There must be no combinations in 'unreasonable' restraint of trade, and as the Standard Oil Company has some features that are unreasonable we order that it be dissolved within six months from date. But, as in the nature of business and industry (what crimes are committed in thy name, oh Business and Industry!) combinations must be made which may restrain trade to a reasonable degree, we find that such combinations may be made."

The decision, according to the press, delighted Mr. Andrew Carnegie and Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, and we can see Mr. John D. smiling his skeleton, death-like smile, for now he will be allowed, without any interference from the courts at least, "to continue to draw his $60,000,000 blood money yearly. He is safe, and so are all other trusts. We may look in vain for a clause in either the Democratic or Republican platforms denouncing the trust, and as the Supreme Court is composed of staunch Democrats and Republicans, what can we expect? And, as in the case of Comrade Carr, when one dares ask the question why a more equitable system might not obtain, the capitalist press will immediately brand him as "lazy lout," "knocker," "loud-mouthed agitator" for interfering with the system that robs him of all that makes life worth living: a decent living, a pleasant home and plenty to eat.

And now since perfect harmony has been established between Capitalism and the Sherman anti-trust law, and we will no more hear the discord of "sweet bells jangled, out of tune," in their ranks, and, as Editor Laws says, "When the wild waves of the insurgent move has passed by and the wild-cat yell of the initiative and referendum have subsided, to the tomorrow of the after calm all will be well." With it? You can of rejoicing with this force which you, in your blind, prejudiced short sightedness, think to dispose of by a few lines of your caustic abuse. The tide of Socialism has set in, it gathers strength daily, hourly; and that day will come when the Standard Oil Company, and all other gigantic industries that sap the life of our American working men and women, will be taken over by the toiling people, who alone have made them the powers they are.

This will be brought about through Socialism. Socialism must come and Socialism must succeed, because the race can no longer exist without co-operation. Socialism is the just way, the human way, God's way!

THE STORY GOOD BOOKS TELL.

(By Jack Britt Gearity.)

Good books are like windows flung wide open to let in sunshine and fresh air, they open up new views of life for us, and fill our minds with new ideas, new dreams, new hopes. In them we can see all that man has ever feared and hoped. They tell the story of life on the earth. They tell the story of life's growth and of the growth of thought among men.

Nothing in all this wide world, except love alone, is more precious than good literature. What a girl or boy thinks and loves can be instantly learned by looking at the books they treasure and read.

No part of our education needs closer attention than the selection of our books. A few good books are worth more to any one of us than all the trashy books in the world. Great care should be taken in buying, or even in borrowing books.

Next to making sure that we possess only good books, the need of properly reading them is most important. One may read the best books in a hop-skip-and-jump manner, a few lines here, a paragraph there, a chapter beyond, and get no profit from the reading. We must learn to read so as to find the thought of the writer, so as to find the main thought in the book, for this is the only way we can learn what a good book really means.

Since our choice of books, as girls and boys, will have a great influence on our later life, the question arises: What kind of books shall we select for our reading?

All men are brothers regardless of race or the color of their skin. All literature is the result of common hopes and desires, a growth of ages just as our civilization is the fruit of ages and ages of growth. Therefore, we must have such books as will give us a world view of life, and we must carefully read them. Such books will show us that life and thought, what we are and what we think, are fruits of ages of change and growth, the fruit of what scientists call evolution.

In the days of the childhood of the race the world's best literature was composed of myths and fables. Later great songs and poetry sprang into existence. Still later, as in our own days, we have short stories, novels, histories, geographies, books on travel, books on flowers, books on science, on birds and bees. This only goes to show that literature is like a river which starts in a bubbling spring and widens and deepens as it rushes on toward the great ocean.

The great story of life as told in good books may be very roughly divided into seven periods or ages. These periods are named after the biggest work of their time, as: The age of myths, the age of Homer, the age of Pericles, the age of Virgil, the age of Dante, the age of Shakespeare, the age of Goethe, and the present day or age.

Follows a brief list of good books, some from each age or period, and with this I must close, or the editor will not invite me to talk to you, my young comrades, again:

Begin with a collection of the myths of Chaldea and Greece. Then, in the order named: Bryant's translation of Homer's "Iliad" and his "Odyssey." Fiske's "Myths and Myth Makers," Goethe's translation of "Iphigenia," and Lowell's translation of "Prometheus," Howland's "Virgil," and Goethe's "Legend of Christ and the Horseshoe," Wallace's "Ben-Hur." Some of the Nibelungen Lied, "Tales from Shakespeare," by Charles and Mary Lamb; Goldsmith's "Vicar of Wakefield," Schiller's "Veiled Statue of Truth," Seymour's "Stories from Chaucer," "Birds and Bees" by John Burroughs, Hawthorne's "Twice Told Tayes," "Little Daffydowndilly" by Hawthorne.

Short as this list is, it contains something dealing with each of the literary ages already spoken of, and for further books treating any of these periods you may find help by asking your teacher, your school or public librarian. The aim of this little collection of books is, as I have before remarked, to show that literature as well as life is a continuous process of change and growth. Our aims in collecting books and reading should be to get only the best, to add to our little store of books only the best books. A small library well selected will fill our minds with fine, clean thoughts. If we are to help in making the world a better place to live in, we must know what the best men and women think, what the race has thought.—From The Little Socialist.

A BEAUTIFUL MYTH.

All peoples in the childhood of their history have made stories for themselves about the animals, giving them affections, meannesses, generosity, hates, and all the qualities of man, and nearly always showing them in their relations to men as their masters. There is a good example of this in the following story about "Why There Is a Hare in the Moon," from Florence Holbrook's lovely little book of Nature Myths. It can be secured in any public library, and any child will love to read it.

"Many strange things happened long ago, and one of them was that a hare, a monkey and a fox agreed to live together. They talked about their plan a long time. Then the hare said, "I promise to help the monkey and the fox." The monkey declared, "I promise to help the fox and the hare." The fox said, "I promise to help the hare and the monkey."

They shook hands. There was something else to which they agreed, and that was that they would kill no living creature.

The manito (the man) was much pleased when he heard of this, but he said to himself, "I should like to make sure that what I have heard is true, and that they are really gentle and kind to others as well as to themselves. I will go to the forest and see how they behave toward strangers."

The manito appeared before the three animals, but they thought he was a hunter. "May I come into your lodge and rest?" he asked. "I am very weary."

All three came toward him and gave him a welcome. "Come into our lodge," they said. "We have agreed to help one another, so we will help one another to help you."

"I have been hungry all day," said the manito, "but I should rather have such a welcome than food."

"But if you are hungry, you must have food," declared the three animals. "If there were anything in our lodge that you would care to eat, you might have part of it or all of it, but there is nothing here that you would like."

Then said the monkey, "I have a plan. I will go out into the forest and find you some food."

When the monkey came back he said, "I found a tree with some fruit on it. I climbed it and shook it, and here is the fruit. There was only a little of it, for fruit was scarce."

"Will you not eat part of it yourself?" asked the manito.

"No, answered the monkey. "I would rather see you eat it, for I think you are more hungry than I."

The manito wished to know whether the fox and the hare would behave as unselfishly toward him, and he said, "My good friends, the fruit was indeed welcome, but I am still hungry."

Then the fox said, "I will go out into the forest and see what I can find for you."

When the fox came back he said, "I shook the trees, but no more fruit fell. I could not climb the tree, for my paws are not made for climbing, but I searched on the ground, and at last I found some hominy that a traveler had left, and I have brought you that."

The manito had soon eaten the hominy. He wished to know whether the hare would behave as kindly as the others, and before long he said, "My good friends, the hominy was indeed welcome, but I am still hungry."

Then the hare said, "I will gladly go out into the forest and search for food." He was gone a long time, but when he came back he brought no food.

"I am very hungry," said the manito.

"Stranger," said the hare, "if you will build a fire beside the rock, I can give you some food."

The manito built a fire and the hare said, "Now, I will spring from the top of the rock into the fire. I have heard that men eat flesh that is taken from the fire, and I will give you my own."

The hare sprang from the rock, but the manito caught him in his hands before the flame could touch him, and said, "Dear, unselfish little hare, the monkey and the fox have welcomed me and searched the forest through to find me food, but you have done more, for you have given me yourself. I will take the gift, little hare, and I will carry you in my arms up to the moon, so that every one on the earth may see you and hear the tale of your kindness and unselfishness."

The Indians can see a hare in the moon, and this is the story they tell their children about it.—From The Coming Nation.

"Akin to Love"

By SYLVIA VERMILLION.

Strong, large hands received his in a grip and pumphandle shake which made Archie wince. Then he bubbled over:

"When did you return, Bob? Colonel Coleman, meet Mrs. Norton, daughter of your particular friends, Mr. and Mrs. Eaton. Bah Jove, Bob, I'm glad to see you!"

Archie continued to bubble and gush, entirely unconscious of the frigid acknowledgement of his introduction. Colonel Coleman was the objectionable stranger.

They parted, Roseberry holding forth on the merits of his friend.

"Does Colonel Coleman live here in Mt. Vernon?"

"Yes; in a way," eagerly responded the other, glad to find a subject in which she seemed interested. "He owns this big stock ranch just outside the limits."

"Also has large mining interests in Montana with an office in New York, and one here. Bob is human and sheds his cattle in winter. His summers he spends here in Mt. Vernon. Coleman had a regiment in the Philippines. That's where he gets the handle to his name."

"He must be quite wealthy, then?"

"Yes; several times a millionaire and as common as an old shoe. We have always been the best of friends, though we are the exact opposites. He don't care a straw for the girls, while I can't exist without them."

During the entire programme Geraldine heard the matchless charm of his voice echoing and chiming in harmony with the instruments.

She heard it in the wierd, crooning cry of the prairie hen to her young; in the sharp yap, yap of the coyote in the distance as she leaned from her window just before retiring, and outlined her summer.

Crucify she must and would this terrifying joy that could not be uprooted from her heart. Now she would have a chance to show him she was not the weak creature he thought her to be. Hot, red blood boiled up afresh at the memory of his impulsive words on the train. It would be tit for tat, and when she retired, keenly sharp were the sword and spear that would never be beaten into plow share and pruning hook.

It was several weeks after the twilight rehearsal. Coleman was spending the evening at the Eaton home. Geraldine noted the Jonathan and David friendship that had cemented itself between the life of this young man and her father. Roseberry was there, too. A cull among men, she thought. Excusing herself on the woman's plea of headache, she retired.

The guests did not tarry long after she left them, and when they were alone, they soon went home dragging their hearts behind 'em.

Mr. Eaton was on the anxious seat; the top step of the stairway, waiting for Jerry to spy him. She was sitting at her open window listening to the chorus of night sounds.

"Jerry, are you hypnotized? I have been sitting here for half an hour and you have not moved a muscle during that time."

Geraldine seated her blue-kimonoed self beside him and cuddled her hand in his. A preface dating from childhood to a comfy talk.

"Daddy dear, I know thou hast somewhat to say unto me. Say on, my father," finding his ticklish spot just under his arm.

Her father imprisoned the mischievous fingers in his once more and began anxiously:

"Jerry daughter, why do you treat Colonel Coleman with such marked coldness? Has he ever done anything to merit such treatment at your hands?"

She turned suddenly and threw her arms around the other's neck. "I do not care a straw about the men, daddy dear."

She was casting about for anchor and hid her burning face on his shoulder. Daddy dear must not know.

"But you do not treat Roseberry that way; you surely do not care as much for him as you pretend."

Her father did not know of Archie's cold plunge into the ice water, of her disapproval when alone in her presence.

A resourceful thought came to the rescue:

"Well, you know, daddy, that Archie asks me to go places and Mr. Coleman does not. He does not care for society."

"But society cares for him, Jerry. The best homes are opened to him here in exclusive, cultured Mt. Vernon. Almost as much so as Boston, where we used to live before I lost everything. Coleman is at home anywhere. Behind the plow handles breaking prairie or in a drawing room. I presume Roseberry could plow, but he'd want his Packard machine tied to the handles."

"Daddy is right," nodding toward the reflection in her mirror as she slowly disrobed for the night.

"Although your attitude, Jerry Norton, compels him to hand it out at the end of a stick, yet in the very hand out you receive more delicate, chivalrous attention from him than from any man you have ever known, and you have met many men of many minds as the wife of a popular society man."

"In your circle of acquaintances you have placed him on the horizon, and you will find he is the kind that stays put. Never fear! He will never again offend your sense of the fitness of things."

She thought of his love for Jeanette, stopping just short of worship, and which was returned by the child in gospel measure, pressed down and running over. Toys of every description and kind were delivered for her at the house. The little mother kissed the sleeping child, grateful that all fear of kidnaping had been banished from her mind.

"Mrs. Norton," piped Roseberry the next evening, leaning against the veranda post—about the only time Archibald was well posted—where the family, including Coleman, were sitting. "Would you like to drive over to Ft. Randall? I did not bring the machine because Dad said the horses needed exercising. They will go at a merry clip, I expect."

"That will just suit Jerry," butted in her father. When she was at home before she married and went East, we lived on the homestead. She would go out and get one of the colts and ride anywhere. I often used to tell mother the kiddy could ride or drive anything that wore hair. That's why I dubbed her Jerry."

"I shall be delighted, Mr. Roseberry," Geraldine, going down the steps and taking his hand in both her warm ones. "I will be compelled to take Jeanette, as she is not feeling first class and will let no one else care for her."

"By all means take baby," gallantly responded Archie's external, while the internal wished the kid was in Halifax.

"Heavens! I just know he's going to propose," thought Geraldine, as Archibald gazed eloquently at the moon. "Serves me right for going driving with a jellyfish."

On this night of nights, Roseberry was silent. For the life of him he could not think of a word of his carefully prepared offer of marriage. "The rose is red, the violet blue," came to the rescue. Angered at the substitute that presented itself, he jerked the horses violently. Why could not they walk instead of two-stepping and waltzing when a fellow had so much at stake.

"You are cruel!" said Geraldine, taking the reins from his hands. "Let me drive."

Roseberry, thinking the act a ruse on her part to help along the cause, smiled knowingly. Just then his speech, which had been floundering in gray matter, came to the surface. He grabbed it quickly.

"My dear Mrs. Norton, I have long held you in highest esteem, yet can not express my feelings. I——"

"Try shipping them by freight, Mr. Roseberry. It is cheaper."

"Ah! You jest! Name the day that will make us one—that day which is to bring us together for all time. My heart——"

"Hands up there!"

Up went Roseberry's trembling hands, then he jumped and ran. The two masked figures who had stepped into view suddenly did not offer to pursue him. Their interest seemed to be centered in Geraldine. One held the plunging horses while the other quickly pulled aside the laprobe and grabbed the sleeping child. Geraldine, divining their purpose, fought like a tigress for her young, but the strength of the masker prevailed.

At that instant the other lashed the horses unmercifully. Bracing her feet against the dashboard, Geraldine maintained her bouncing balance as gracefully as a Roman charioteer as the horses turned the carriage on two wheels and started on a dead run toward Mr. Vernon.

She pulled them down to a stiff trot, half decided to start in chase of the villains, whom she had seen jump into a rig and drive in the opposite direction.

Mother anguish was pulling at her heart strings. What could she do? If she had only taken Lawyer Grave's advice and kept Jeanette at home. "Why did I feel so secure," she moaned. "I might have known he would carry out his threat."

"Mother must not know. The shock would kill her," she said, half aloud to the horses who now saw the twinkling lights of the city ahead, and were coming in splendidly on the home stretch.

They had reached the driveway to the Roseberry home, in which the intelligent animals turned. The guiding hands had lost their power to act, and could only hold the reins.

Archie was standing at the gate and commenced to coo his sympathy and admiration.

"Hah Jove, Mrs. Norton, you certainly know how to handle horses. Sandy and I were coming to hunt you. Wasn't that hold-up a thriller. I——"

She heard nothing. Sandy, the faithful Irish servant, assisted her to alight. Mechanically she started toward the main part of the city. Her resourceful nature had flown, leaving in its vacancy a dull, automatic machine that pounded and thumped in her head.

She walked on and on, then stopped beside a large touring car in front of an office. The car was unoccupied. Would it be wrong to take it in pursuit of the kidnapers? She clutched frantically at her hair as Jeanette's terrified cry was ground out in her head.

"Mrs. Norton, pardon me—heavens! Something has happened. What is it?"

She turned at the voice that still held its power to thrill, but the whir in her head deafened her. Coleman looked at the mouth that had settled in tired lines and back again to the blue eyes with their yearning, pathetic gaze. The warm redness of her lips had given place to a death white. They tried to frame something and failed.

It was enough! Something had happened. Lifting her in the car, where she sat like a grave image, he went into a nearby drug store and soon returned, bidding her drink the mixture he brought.

She obeyed. The tense nerves began to relax. His strong way of doing things gave hope and courage. He guided the machine with one hand and gently rubbed her cold ones with the other. Then he commenced as one having authority:

"Now tell me what has happened."

"Jeanette has been kidnaped." Coleman fell back in amazement.

"Are you sure?" eyeing her curiously.

"Yes, only too sure. I see you doubt my mental equipment; but I am all right now."

Then she told him what had taken place.

"And Roseberry," questioned the other.

"He jumped and ran."

"The——". Coleman bit back the pet name and then asked:

"Have you any clue?"

"Yes; I am positive it was my dead husband's father. He is wealthy and was very angry when his son married a poor girl. He practically ignored us until after baby came. He seemed to idolize her, and after Mr. Norton's death told me that were I to leave New York he would follow me to the ends of the earth for the child. That That was the reason I remained a year in the East after Mr. Norton's death; but mother must now know."

She listened while he outlined a plan. The thought that she had always the planning to do for Stanley Norton would intrude itself.

"First," he began, "You have friends in Ft. Randall, have you not?"

"Yes; I often visit there."

"Just the thing. We will drive down to the Fort and from there you drop Mrs. Eaton a letter, stating that you have decided to visit a while. I think we can reach Sioux City before the through train East pulls out. Do you think he will take that route?"

"Undoubtedly. That is the most direct way."

The machine, like a monster cat, began to purr louder, then bounded forward; the level prairie road with its green and black falling behind like striped ribbon unwinding from a bolt.

They went directly to the railroad station. Coleman went out and in again, resurrecting the hope that persisted in dying at regular intervals in her breast.

He lifted her to her feet and walked slowly toward the door, explaining: "I am quite sure that one of the high moguls of this road was here in the Fort. He is a warm friend of mine and so I called him up. He offered me the use of his private car and we will have right of way to Sioux City. Can you walk a little faster?"

Mother love addded strength and though they were soon spinning through space at a clip that made her dizzy, already in spirit she was searching for that hard, unyielding face of her father-in-law in Sioux City.

Geraldine shivered when she called up the shrewd and cunning in his nature, knowing that it would be a force with which to reckon. Could they reach there before the through train pulled East? But she dare not allow the thought of failure to creep in the head that persisted in swaying and seeing double.

DISCOVERY.

At the recent Mothers' Congress, held in Washington, D. C., the fact developed that there were four million children in the United States without educational advantages. One woman delegate reported that there were children in the mountain districts who walked seven miles to school and lived in hovels that had skins of wild animals for door coverings. And yet Andrew Carnegie doesn't know what to do with his money!—Ex.

ORGANIZATION OF SOCIALISTS IS THE NECESSARY REQUISITE.

(By J. W. Brown.)

From my own personal observation I am convinced that we have at least one million natives in the United States who believe in Socialism, and who call themselves Socialists, yet, up to the present they have failed to identify themselves with the Socialist movement, other than to admit its intents, subscribe to a Socialist paper, and perhaps, to have read and then get somebody else to read a line of our prophets.

It is this fellow I want to reach with this article and to him I want to say that, if we had fifty million such Socialists in the United States we would be no nearer to Socialism than we are today. Socialism can can only come through an organized political movement of the working class, and it requires something more to make a Socialist of a man than a nearer life in the principles of what the "intellectual" call scientific Socialism. For instance, I may be a believer in Astronomy, yet I know nothing more about astronomy than what I read in the Farmers almanac and I would be as vain as a peacock were I to say that, because of this superficial idea of astronomy gained in this way I was an astronomer.

What then are the necessary requisites to make Socialists of this one million of believers? They are two. First, it is necessary to understand the fundamental demands of Socialism which, to quote from its national platform of the Socialist party are these: "Human life depends upon food, clothing and shelter. Only with these assured are freedom, culture and higher human development possible. To produce food, clothing and shelter, land and machinery are needed. Land alone does not satisfy human needs. Human labor creates machinery, applies it to the land for the production of raw materials and food. Whoever has control of land and machinery controls human labor, and with it human life and liberty."

Everybody will admit that the first right of the individual is the life. The Socialist goes one better and says that the first duty of Society is to secure it. It contends that every man should have a right to work, and, of course, if he had a right to work he would have a right to all his labor produced. Under capitalism he has no right to work, consequently he has got to accept what ever terms the capitalists offer or starve.

In order to establish this right of the working class to work, Socialism says that all these things which are used collectively and which all the working class are called chiefly to depend upon, shall be owned by the working class collectively chiefly.

Now this does not mean that under Socialism everybody will use the same tooth-pick, nor does it mean that every body will own a tooth-pick factory. It simply means that the people collectively will own the tooth-pick factory. And every body who wants to pick their teeth will buy a tooth-pick and pick them. And if they don't want to pick them with a tooth-pick they can pick them with a pick. So much for the first requisite. What of the second one? This, Socialism has nothing to offer you as individuals. It does not propose to make one man rich at another man's expense. It does not propose to protect this, that or the other industry at the expense of the rest of society. Socialism says that there is just two ways of getting a dollar. One is to work and earn it, the other is to let some one else do the work then you get his dollar away from him. This is what law and government does for the working class today. The working class as a class do all the work, creates all the dollars and capitalism takes it away from him and gives it to the other fellow. How? Though law and government, high protective tariffs, branches and privileges, corruption, debauchery and fraud. Now it must be apparent to you who read this that, if in future American citizens are to be free citizens, instead of industrial serf, as our ancestors were feudal serfs; if we are to enjoy the blessings of life, liberty and success to the necessaries of life. This means that land, mills, mines, railroads, telegraph and telephone systems must be seized by the united people and held for use, and government national, state and municipal must be utilized for this purpose. It is for this purpose the Socialist party has entered the political arena just as the two old political parties of today represent the different interests of the capitalist class and are controlled, financed and dictated to by that class just so must the working class own, control, finance and dictate to the Socialist party. In order to do this each of you million voters referred to must get into the party, otherwise you have no voice in the affairs of the party. And if you are going to take no further interest in the party affairs other than to read the papers and vote the ticket let me say for your benefit you may as well keep on voting for the democratic or republican politicians. For instance, what will be to hinder a few clever politicians from getting up a ticket in a district or county where there is enough of you "half-baked" Socialists to elect them to office and call it the "socialist ticket" they get the offices, and what do you get? Stung again.

Now here is a grand duty and responsibility devolving upon you who thing you are Socialists and who call yourself such, and you can't avoid your responsibility by evasion. Remember Pontius Pilate has been washing his lilly white hands for two thousand years, and yet he has been unable to wash them clean of the stain caused by his evasion of his duty and responsibility. You must do your duty and do it now or your children will rise up and curse the memory of their fathers, because you were too stupid, too ignorant, or too cowardly to save them from what might have been avoided without a bloody struggle.

NOW GET BUSY!

The Socialist Wants 10,000 More Subscribers in Columbus Right Away.

The Workers in "The Storm Center Of Socialism" Have A Chance To Make Good.

All That Is Needed Is "A Long Pull, A Strong Pull, and A Pull Altogether."

The Socialist Makes Fair Proposition To Secure The Co-Operation Of All For The Next Campaign.

READ EVERY WORD OF OUR OFFER.

The Socialist wishes to co-operate with the City Central Committee, the Ward Branches and the precinct workers of the Socialist party of Columbus in educating the voters and organizing our forces so that we may reap the full benefit of our educational work.

We believe that one of the most effective means of educating the workers and of propagating Socialism is through the columns of a good Socialist paper. The paper goes each week into the home and carries some message, some truth, to each of its readers. While we make no apology for our paper, we are determined that each issue shall be an improvement over the previous one.

The subscription list is the life of any paper. Without it, it dies. We want at least 10,000 subscribers on our books before the campaign opens. We must have them if The Socialist is to be the power for good that it should be in the fight of 1911 in Columbus, "the Storm Center of Socialism."

OUR PLAN.

Here is our plan to put money into the treasuries of the City Central Committee and of the Ward Branches for use in organization and propaganda work, as they may determine:

1. We will pay to each Ward Branch 12½ per cent. of all money for subscriptions collected and turned in by its members to The Socialist.

2. We will pay over to the treasury of the City Central Committee of Local Columbus 12½ per cent. of all money collected and paid in by the Ward Branches for subscriptions to The Socialist.

LIST OF PRIZES.

As Prizes or special rewards for the workers we offer the following:

1. To the Branch turning in the largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist, in proportion to membership of the Branch in good standing, we will give $75 in books, to be selected by the Branch, or in money.

2. To the Branch turning in the second largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist, under the foregoing conditions, we will give $50 in books or money.

3. To the Branch turning in the third largest amount of money on subscriptions as stated we will give $25 in books or money.

INDIVIDUAL REWARDS.

1. To the individual turning in the largest amount of money on subscriptions to The Socialist we will pay $25 in gold.

2. To the individual turning in the second largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist we will pay $15 in gold.

3. To the individual who turns in the third largest amount of money for subscriptions to The Socialist we will pay $10 in gold.

CONDITIONS.

The only conditions we impose in this contest are that the members of Branches will get all their sub. cards from the literature or special agent of their respective Branches and that this agent will at all times have on hand a supply of sub. cards and make returns to The Socialist of all subscriptions received not later than Wednesday of each week. Sub. cards will be supplied by this office at any time. This contest will be limited to Branches and Locals in Franklin County.

This Contest Began On Saturday, Feb. 11, and Will Close Tuesday, November 7, 1911

Information as to details of this contest will be cheerfully furnished by this office.

The Organization Committee wishes to apologize for some errors which have been made and also for some that will be made. This has been a big task and when all is considered, we are well pleased with the way the work has progressed. But the mistakes that have been made have been of the hand, and not the heart, and we hope the comrades will consider it so. Another thing we wish to urge upon the new branch officers and that is, get the members dues paid up. Remember, when ou pay your dues, you help all along the line, from your Branch to the National office. So get busy on that one thing first.

We wish to take this means of thanking those who have helped us in this matter.

Now, comrades, all together:

Hurrah for sixteen new wards and victory at the polls next November!

Ohio Legislature.

"REST QUIET CAT IN PEACE"—MAY WE NEVER SEE YOUR LIKE AGAIN.

Amid scenes of drunken disorder the Ohio General Assembly, on Thursday, adjourned sine die. The session just closed was marked by more disgrace than any held for many years. The state treasury is empty and the shame of a bribery scandal hangs over both houses. The burden resting upon the back of labor has not been lifted the weight of a finger. The Socialists expected nothing from this legislature and are not disappointed. The Democrats have shown themselves as rotten as ever the Republicans were. So be it.

COMRADES AND FRIENDS.

PROGRESS

Being Made In Socialist Outing Plans for July 15.

Commitees are at Work on the Details of Arrangements.

The Outing Committee reported at the meeting of the City Central Committee, Wednesday evening, that progress was being made in the details of the arrangements for the Great Ohio Socialist Outing at Olentangy Park, Saturday, July 15, in Columbus.

Comrade E. E. Radebaugh has received the following letter from Comrade Eugene V. Debs, which explains itself:

Dear Comrade Radebaugh: A thousand thanks, but it is impossible, absolutely so. I will be in the far west at that time. Sorry, very sorry, but there's no possible chance for me to be with you. I'm not to "rest" in July. I don't know what a vacation is—never had one. When not on the road, I'm at other work, and there's always enough to demand every minute and a whole lot more. I'm always far behind, always something pressing me, and I guess it will always be so.

With heartfelt thanks and regrets, and wishing you all possible success. Yours loyally, E. V. DEBS.

Already inquiries are coming in from various parts of the state, and as soon as the matter of speakers is definitely determined, circulars, posters and other advertising matter will be sent out to all the Ohio locals.

Columbus Socialists will spare no pains to make this gathering what it should be—a vast outpouring of the people of the Buckeye State to enjoy a day of pleasure as Socialists.

DO NOT FORGET THE DATE, SATURDAY, JULY 15.

Mass Meeting of Local Columbus.

Local Columbus Socialist Party will meet in general session Sunday afternoon, June 4, 3 p. m., at Livingston Park, corner of Livingston and Eighteenth, for the transaction of such business as is deemed necessary. Every member of the party should be present and bring their friends.

Just as a reminder. Pay your dues.

EXAMPLE OF GREED.

Editor Socialist:

The demonstration of greed and love our capitalistic lords have for the dollar, and the hatred they have for their workers and slaves, surely was pictured plainer than I have ever seen it before at the aviation meet at the Driving Park, on May 28. Hundreds of working people, like myself, with the wages they receive, could not pay $1.00 admission, but would be glad to if they could. We thought perhaps we could get a partial view from the outside, but on arriving at the park we found they had stretched large pieces of canvas on the west side so it was impossible to steal a look through the picket fence. But on the north side, Livingston avenue, they had hired a large Reliance motor truck to run back and forth, making great clouds of dust that would surely strangle you if you trespassed too long on the public highway.

Around on the east side they had placed great large signs reading, "Danger—Target Practice," with soldiers to call your attention to it, and if some one happened to get close enough to look over the top of the fence, they would rush at them as though some of these calloused-hand laborers might be a band of pirates, and might possibly overpower the captain and steal one of their airships.

Mr. Rich Man! It was the man that was looking through the fence-crack that made possible through developing from the raw material every piece in the construction of those wonderful airships; also it was the man that had to walk through the great clouds of dust being made by your command through money, that made it possible for you to ride to the park in your automobile and lay down $1.00 to pass that machine through the gates. It is your ever-growing selfishness or you would put such entertainments in our reach. If we are not entitled to some of the amusements made possible through our labor, neither are you. E. MARTIN.

Lincoln's Prophecy

Read the prophetic words of Abraham Lincoln:

"I see in the near future a crisis approaching that unnerves me, and causes me to tremble for the safety of my country. As a result of war, corporations have been enthroned, and an era of corruption in high places will follow, and the money power of the country will endeavor to prolong its reign by working upon the prejudices of the people until all the wealth is aggregated in a few hands, and the republic is destroyed. I feel at this moment more anxiety for the safety of our country than ever before, even in the midst of war. God grant that my forbodings may be groundless.

"Monarchy itself is sometimes hinted at as a refuge from the power of the people. In my present position I could scarcely be justified were I to omit to raise a warning voice against the approach of returning despotism. It is not needed nor fitting here that a general argument should be made in favor of popular institutions; but there is one point with its connections, not so hackneyed as most others, to which I ask brief attention. It is assumed that labor is available only in connection with capital, that nobody labors unless somebody else owning capital, somehow by the use of it, induces him to labor. Labor is prior to and independent of capital. Capital is only the fruit of labor and could not have existed if labor had not first existed. Labor is the superior of capital and deserves much the higher consideration. I bid the laboring people beware of surrendering the power which they possess, and which if surrendered will surely be used to shut the door of advancement for such as they, and fix new disabilities and burdens upon them until all of liberty shall be lost."

The Question Box.

Would not the propaganda of Socialism more successfully appeal to people if the Socialists would be more gentle and less abusive? Why do Socialists persist in calling capitalists robbers and thieves when, by being more considerate, they might win the good will of those whom they now repel? E. E. F., Columbus.

Your complaint seems to be that because Socialists call capitalists robbers and thieves, the capitalists are offended and refuse to join the Socialist movement. There are two questions of fact involved: First, are the capitalists thieves and robbers? and second, would the capitalists join the Socialist movement if the Socialists were to call them honest?

When a Socialist denounces capitalists as thieves he uses the term thief in a slightly different sense to that in which it is commonly applied. A capitalist may be law-abiding and not take a cent from others to which he is not entitled legally; but the laws are capitalist made and confer privileges on the owners of property to which such owners are legally entitled, but to which they have no moral or economic right. There was a time when one man might own another and by such ownership steal the life of his slave. That was legal under the laws made by the master, but robbery and theft, nevertheless.

And so it is with the capitalist. He has a legal right to hire workingmen at the lowest wages their necessities may compel them to work for, but he takes part of the product of each laborer, claiming such part taken as his legal profit. The capitalist takes the value the laborer creates in excess of his wages, and for that surplus value gives nothing in return. He steals from the worker because he takes values from their creator without rendering an equivalent. He robs the worker because he does these things by force—by the force his wealth exercises on th needs of the worker. The capitalist, no matter how good his intentions, or how unconscious he may be of wrong-doing, commits theft and robbery of which his hired servant is the victim. The capitalist is, in a sense, excusable for this theft for two reasons: First, because it is the only thing he can do to make his capital invested in industry, yield him a profit—it is a necessary feature of the capitalist system of production; and second, because the great mass of the workers are willing to be robbed. When the worker understands the game, he becomes "class conscious" and opposes, as he can, the system that permits it. But the arrangement of his is so satisfactory to the capitalist that he seldom becomes conscious of the effect on the other fellow.

The capitalist, therefore, legally, often unconsciously and seldom consciously, commits theft and robbery upon those who work for him. The effect upon the robbed is just as disastrous as though a pick-pocket were to take the money from his pocket, or the bread from the worker's wife and children. The effect of the system is what we seek to emphasize and this can often be done more effectively by calling the capitalist and the capitalist class thieves and robbers than by patching fig leaves to cover the naked and hideous truth.

Would capitalists join the movement if we refrained from telling the disagreeable truth about their pilferings? A capitalist occasionally joins the Socialist party, but those who do and are sincere, are those that realize the truth of the facts stated, and as readily denounce capitalism and the acts of the capitalists as does any other Socialist. But we do not expect or hope for capitalists to join the Socialist movement in any numbers. Such a thing is as little to be expected as it would have been for any number of slave-owners to have joined the abolitionists in a movement to confiscate their own human property. We conclude, therefore, that the best thing to do is to tell the whole truth about the robbery by the capitalists and their system, since those who do not realize the truth of those bold statements could not be of any benefit to the cause, and since the strength of Socialism will not in any way come from that source which is the camp of our economic enemy.

THE McNAMARA CASE.

We notice a report in one of the daily papers that before a requisition can be issued by the governor of California, the alleged criminal must be in custody. Was this done in the above case? Who, then, violated the laws of that state? Did the Burns detectives agency lie to the governor of California in order to get it? Or was the "good" governor of California a party to the disgraceful proceedings? Just before the kidnapping the papers of the country were full of praise for Governor Johnson, because he succeeded in getting some legislation passed that the Southern Pacific Railroad pretended they were opposed to. If Johnson were not a party to the dirty deal, he should release the prisoners and permit them to return to their homes where they could then be arrested and the law complied with. But no, we must not expect this from the cohorts of capitalism. The people of Indiana also elected a "Good Democrat" in the person of Marshall, who also became a party to the dastardly outrage. This was not a political deal, but a capitalistic stunt. Who is to blame for all this rottenness? It is not the governors who have been elected by the votes of the workingmen as the representatives of the capitalistic class and who take their orders from their masters. Then it must be you, who voluntarily gave your vote to your enemies. Don't forget that with a government by parties, as we have in this country, there can be no "Good" men, as all candidates are simply representatives of their party. When you vote for a Republican, no matter who he is, you vote for the party of Johnson and the party of "Big Business" and against yourself and the party of the "workers." When you vote for a Democrat you vote for the party of Marshall and the party of "Little Business," and against the worker. The voter who thinks the worker can ever get any relief from the present chaotic condition by voting the Democratic or Republican ticket ought to be tapped for the "Simples." Don't forget, fellow workers, that every man who parades as a friend of the workers, while still retaining allegiance to either of the rotten old capitalistic parties is your enemy and a "WOLF IN SHEEP'S CLOTHING."

THE SOCIALIST $1.00 PER YEAR.

Listen to Wise Man Bues.

Comrades: As the Socialist movement in Columbus has grown to such proportions that it is impossible to talk to the membership as through the local of old, I wish to use your columns for a few words.

By hard and persevering work, coupled with the street car strike of last year, the Socialists of Columbus have built a party that local capitalists have learned must be reckoned with; a party whose last poll of votes is causing them many sleepless nights; a party that is now demanding that the reins of government be handed over to the people—the workers.

Yes, we have built a party, but "A party without a press is like a modern army without artillery," as Comrade Engdahl well said.

However, I think it better to say: "A party without a fully equipped press is like a railroad without the air-brake system." Neither can make much progress.

But "The Socialist" must be commended for the valuable service it has already rendered under very adverse conditions.

But, to conduct a successful campaign (Agitation, Education and Organization—the votes will naturally follow), this fall we must have a bigger (by that I mean daily) and better paper. To obviate the possibilities of interference in getting out our paper we should own our own printing press.

Let's make this our goal. Let's work for it, let's fight for it—fight so hard that we will attain it in plenty time for the fall campaign.

By that time we will need it as sorely as Milwaukee needs her daily now. Let us profit by their experience and have out daily before we take control of the City Hall, so we can successfully combat the lies and other dirty tactics to which the capitalistic press is not too low to stoop. Can we do it?

You bet we can!

How?

By every member who can possibly afford it, taking out at least one share of stock in The "Socialist Publishing Co." which can be secured for $10 in $1.00 installments.

By every member subscribing to "The Socialist."

By every member inducing others (non-Socialists) to subscribe. Don't rest until you get them.

Play your part (and there is work for all) in making the "Socialist Outing," which is for the benefit of our people—The Socialist—a big success.

Why should you do all this?

Because, by voting for the third one of the propositions recently offered by the Socialist Publishing Co., you voted the control of that paper into the hands of the Socialist Party. Into your own hands! It is yours! It will henceforth be what you make it!

You want a good paper.

That's what you are going to make it.

You are going to do it by buying its stock, by selling subscriptions, by boosting the Socialist Press Picnic.

Many comrades have already taken up this line of action, but this is not enough; the concerted efforts of all—co-operation—is what is needed.

Don't be a parasite on the Socialist movement. Get in and work! Get in and work! Hustle! Boost! Always having in mind your goal: a bigger and better paper for the next battle. Let that be your motto.

JUDGE GARY—"STATE SOCIALIST."

Heretofore it has been customary, not only with Socialists but also with a considerable section of the non-Socialist public, to regard the various investigations of the trust as being mainly farcical in their nature and barren as to results of any kind, but if future investigations bring to the witness stand such candid and outspoken masters of industry as Judge Gary, of the Steel Trust, this opinion will need considerable revision.

The testimony of Judge Gary, which was given voluntarily and in no sense under compulsion, contains information of the most vital importance to the education of the public in matters economic. In the examination the positions of cross-examiner and witness were to some extent reversed and the latter appeared rather in the role of a master giving instruction to his pupils than of a culprit from whom incriminating admissions were being extracted by a stern inquisitor.

Among the facts with which he confronted his inquisitors and which none of them dared to deny were the following:

That combination tends to efficiency and economy, while competition is wasteful and inefficient.

That combination and co-operation in the steel industry was an absolute necessity if demoralization was to be avoided.

That the Sherman Anti-Trust law, as recently interpreted by the Supreme Court, and in itself, is an archaic and useless statute that can not possibly be applied to modern industrial conditions.

That co-operation was bound to take the place of competition. The answer to the query of Representative Littleton, "Have we then come face to face with the surrender of our policy of competition, and the necessity of accepting this new policy under government regulation?" was, "It seems to me that we have."

That the trust controlled the output and prices of its subsidiary companies.

That the competitors of the trust could not increase the price of steel products. That the trust always withheld its consent when asked by its competitors to increase prices.

That the trust itself could put up prices, but could not put them down.

That it costs $25,000,000 to build a modern rail mill.

That three years ago the trust believed it had absolute control of all the sources of production, but that since then it had been discovered that the supply of ore was almost unlimited.

Such testimony was never before given in any previous trust investigation, and, remarkable to relate, the statements of the witness on these points were never once challenged, though they utterly overthrow the accepted political economy based on the assumption of the permanency of competition.

From these premises the witness advocated government regulation of the trust, and government control of prices, as the only method of dealing with the situation. At this point the dread specter of Socialism appeared to the examiners, and they asked if this would not lead to government ownership. The witness said he did not think it would.

It is remarkable that the only other great capitalist to suggest Federal control of the trusts at a previous investigation was Rockefeller. The Oil Trust and the Steel Trust, the two greatest of all, are the only ones that have invited the government to control their business.

And the explanation is easy enough. Those who control these two great trusts practically control the government—in fact, they may be said to be the government. Government control as applied to them is but a meaningless phrase, or as Charles Edward Russell calls it, "a blessed word."

When Judge Gary tried to explain that control could exist without ownership, and cited the governmental control and supervision of banks to corroborate his argument, he had in mind the small individual banking establishments. He would hardly contend that the tremendous banking powers of the Rockefeller-Morgan group are actually controlled by the government—meaning by that term, some power outside Morgan and Rockefeller, unless in the sense aforementioned, that this group really controls the government and is to all intents and purposes the government itself.

To sum the matter up, what Judge Gary advocates after the passing of competition is what is known indifferently as "State Socialism" or "State capitalism"—government control, supervision and ownership, with the capitalists as controllers, supervisors and owners. And it is practically certain that we will have to pass through this stage, though it is not likely to be of long duration.

Frederick Engels depicted this period some thirty-five years ago in the following passages: "The official representative of capitalist society—the State—will ultimately have to undertake the direction of production. This necessity for conversion into state property is felt first in the great institutions for intercourse and communication—the postoffice, the telegraphs, the railways.

"But the transformation either of joint stock companies or trusts into state ownership does not do away with the capitalistic nature of the productive forces.

"The modern state, no matter what its form, is essentially a capitalist machine, the state of the capitalists, the ideal personification of the total national capital. The more it proceeds to the taking over of productive forces, the more does it actually become the national capitalist, the more citizens does it exploit. The workers remain wage workers—proletarians. The capitalist relation is not done away with. It is rather brought to a head. But brought to a head, it topples over. State ownership is not the solution of the conflict, but concealed within it are the technical conditions that form the elements of that solution."

And naturally it was this solution that Judge Gary stopped short of. His testimony confirms almost to the letter the analysis of Engels. More and more is the capitalist State driven to assume direction of production, and this is exactly what Judge Gary is advocating.

WE ARE LEARNING.

(Written for The Columbus Socialist.)

Socialism is a movement and not a fossil. There is a type of critic who thinks we should have every detail thought out and determined. Such a course is impossible to any real movement.

Like the founders of any great science, we are first concerned in our great generalizations. But as these become more and more secure, we move on to particulars.

Thus we are learners, rather than dogmatists. Being an educational movement, we learn as we go. And we have much to learn because no one ever trod the way before us. We are the pioneers in our own field.

Once we had one panacea to offer to every working-class complaint. All would be made right in the co-operative commonwealth. But this was too much like the future heaven of theology—not very satisfactory for the here and now.

Now we are learning to help the workers to every possible immediate improvement of their conditions. This not only helps them a little at once—it shows them the spirit of our purpose. And so we gain adherents and grow to greater power by which we can accomplish still more good.

There are impatient souls among us who want to declare a general strike and begin the Socialist republic tomorrow. They have a "zeal not according to knowledge."

None would be so delighted as the capitalist class to see us abandon the slow and sure tactics of the international movement. Let us be patient, for we have much to learn, and our movement is far from disciplined as yet.

LINCOLN AND THE SOCIALISTS.

In his message to Congress in December, 1861, Lincoln said: "Labor is prior to and independent of capital. Capital is only the fruit of labor and could never have existed if labor had not existed first. Labor is the superior of capital and deserves much the higher consideration."

Naturally this would have pleased Karl Marx, who was then an exile in London, engaged in writing Capital and in directing the growing Socialist-Labor movement. Our Civil War bore most disastrously upon England's great cotton industry, and well-to-do opinion there sympathized with the South. In a speech at Newcastle-on-Tyne in October, 1862, Gladstone declared that the Southern leaders "have made an army; they are making a navy; and they have made what is more than either—they have made a nation," which seemed to foreshadow recognition of the Confederacy by the English government. Before the end of the year, indeed, such recognition was deemed imminent. Now Socialist history asserts that this recognition of the Confederacy, which would have been a hard blow to the North, was defeated only by the protests of English workingmen in mass meeting at London, Manchester and elsewhere, which were astutely instigated by Karl Marx, partly out of admiration for President Lincoln.

Other history may shake its head rather dubiously over this extreme claim; but everybody knows that a great deal of all history is more or less dubious. We like the version that a bold, humane, true word spoken by Lincoln and caroming upon the brain of an exiled enthusiast on the other side of the world—of whose existence perhaps he had never heard—was really what saved the day.—Saturday Evening Post.

CONNECT UP WITH THE SUPPLY.

(By John M. West.)

In the ancient classic mythology there is a story about an earth-born giant, named Antaeus. The warm earth, Terra, was his mother. His father was the stormy Neptune, a god of the sea.

When he was in touch with the earth, his mother's strength and vitality flowed into him from the earth. When he was not in contact with the earth, his strength waned.

One day Hercules happened along, swinging his club, fresh from his exploit of holding the world on his shoulders while Atlas got the golden apples of the Hesperides for him.

Envious Antaeus was like Cassius, he could not be at heart's ease while he beheld a greater than he.

So the two giants engaged in mortal combat. Hercules was the stronger. But he found that every time he felled Antaeus to the ground with his club, the earth-born giant acquired new strength from the earth and sprang to his feet stronger than ever. To overcome this difficulty, Hercules seized him by the girth, swung him aloft, and held him high in air. In this position Antaeus no longer received his accustomed supply of strength from the earth. His strength therefore waned. In a short time he died, and Hercules tossed his lubberly hulk into a neighboring valley.

Modern man also derives his strength and vitality from the earth—not directly like Antaeus—but indirectly, through his food, his clothing, his shelter, etc.

He, too, is entirely dependent upon the earth.

When the Hercules of Capitalism comes along and cuts off his supply from the earth, he, too, is "up in the air." His strength wanes. And unless his connection with the earth supply is re-established, he perishes.

At the present time all the workers are deprived of most of the supply to which they are entitled.

They are deprived of it because the industries are owned by the capitalists. The private ownership of the industries enables the private owners—the capitalists—to keep for themselves most of the earnings of the workers. They can do so, because the workers are dependent upon them for jobs.

We Socialists say that the industries shall be owned collectively by all the people. Then the people will employ themselves in their own industries and pay themselves all they earn.

Their connection with their full earth supply will thus be re-established.

Then, we shall no longer be a physically and intellectually stunted race, but will have a full and free opportunity to make the most of life.

CONSTRUCTION, NOT DESTRUCTION.

The lightning that blasts and rends the giant oak tree is the same in substance as the current that propels the traction car across the country. We, as Socialists, do not seek to let loose the thunderbolt of the people's wrath to destroy, rather do we seek to gather and direct the rising power of public sentiment so that the car of human progress may move forward with the people on board.

The Army, What It Means To You.

Have you ever stood before the large colored posters the government puts out to induce young, inexperienced men to enlist in the army?

They are prepared by the best artists, and are as alluring as good drawing and modern lithographing can make them. You almost wish that you were one of Uncle Sam's soldier boys.

Under palm trees, whose swaying leaves shine like a million crystals in the mellow sunlight, you see pictured a number of officers seated at a table engaged in the pleasant task of reading the season's best sellers. Just why they are at that particular spot and seated at the table is a secret that will always remain with the Sphinx. Off to the right in the picture stands a beautiful horse and more officers, who are gazing out into the highly colored haze veiling the sea.

As you look out over that majestic, infinite blue sea your eye is strained, your senses dazed, your mind wanders, you feel an emotion deep and thrilling, and you are borne away into infinitude.

Yes, sir, the posters are so sublime, so imaginative, so peaceful and soul satisfying, that you are seized with an overpowering desire to rush to the nearest recruiting station and demand that you be sent to the Never-Never land portrayed on the posters.

But not all of us can be influenced by "sky blue and pink" posters, so your Uncle Sam has other methods just as good to induce the "out-of-work" man to enlist.

He advertises in the classified columns of the daily newspapers. He knows that thousands, aye, tens of thousands, of the unemployed scan the "help" column every day. With bitter satire he asks: "What wages are you working for? How much have you left in your pockets after board, lodging, clothing and other necessaries are paid for? Join the service and see the world. We furnish board, lodging, clothing, medical attendants, medicine, baths, light and the advantages of school, libraries, gymnasiums, etc."

Just what the etc. means we do not know, but if it's as good as the rest, it is surely worth taking in big doses.

He also promises you a steady job for thirty years and a pension each month after that. Golly, that looks good!

Yes, our dignified Uncle Sam has adopted the clap-trap methods of the advertiser to "get men." He taunts the wage slave with his under-pay and misery, and says to the worker, "Look at my generosity. Join my service. I treat you better than your employer does. You will be blessed beyond the common lot of men."

This sarcasm indulged in by the government is a humiliating confession of the utter rottenness of our present-day industrial conditions.

The question that worries a great many people is why the government does not tell the truth about the army. The officials are in possession of all the facts. They know all about army life and its effect upon the men. Why these lying advertisements and luring posters? Why?

One of the big reasons is that this is really a government of the capitalist class, by the capitalist class and for the capitalist class. They need a big army to retain their ruling position, and if they told the truth nobody but degenerates and weaklings would enlist.

With improved machinery, whereby production is increased a hundredfold, our patriotic capitalist class is constantly in need of new markets. In order to keep its factories running the surplus goods the workers create must be sold in foreign countries. The capitalists of Japan, England and Germany also want markets for their goods.

For that reason the workingmen of all nations are invited by the ruling capitalist class to join the army and the navy.

They need you to kill one another in order to create a demand for the surplus goods you produce and need, but can't buy. If a war is necessary to get rid of the surplus, the capitalist class will wage it, provided you are fool enough to march to the tune of "My Country,' Tis of Thee," and do the fighting.

If you are foolish enough to enlist and that happens, you may get shot, but in case you are only injured or incapacitated while doing your duty, your Uncle Sam will give you a pension for life. So generous, you know!

When you sign your name to the enlistment papers to become a soldier you become an unthinking manikin, and capitalism holds the strings. You must be prepared to shoot down your own comrades, your brothers, or your own father.

If you doubt this statement, listen to two high authorities. President Taft said to the young soldier cadets at West Point in 1908, "The plainest of your duties is to keep your mouth shut and obey orders. As a soldier, you must forego the privilege of free speech."

Emperor William of Germany told the young men in his army at Potsdam, November, 1891: "You are now my children. You have given yourselves to me, body and soul. There is but one enemy for you, and that is my enemy. It may happen that I shall command you to fire on your own brothers and fathers, in such a case you are bound to obey me without a murmur.

Uncle Sam no longer represents the whole people, it is well that you stay out of his army. He stands for the millionaire and the corporations. When the old skate comes along with a cynical smile on his face and asks you to enlist, say "Nothin' doing."

The ruling class is anxious to take you out of the ranks of the unemployed—for there you are a constant menace to its peace and happiness—and insure you a comfortable living, free of want, in the army. There they can keep you until they need you. You can free yourself from the fear of poverty, but you must be willing to do its bidding.

And that means that you must kill your own kind, your own flesh and blood. If you do this you sink to the level of the lowest type of degenerate.

If the owning class wants war, if they insist upon fighting among themselves for the possession of the world's markets to sell for profits the goods they steal from you, if they insist upon using you for cannon food in order to keep their rotten system alive, inform them that it will give you a great deal of pleasure to watch their class—the Morgans, the Vanderbilts, the Rockefellers and the Carnegies—marching through the streets on their way to the front and to hell.

Not only that, but you will invite all the neighbors, including "Old Man Common Peepul" and "Happy Hooligan," to see a sight fit for the gods.—Gordon Nye.

"SLEEPING" FACTS.

While every utterance in Congress is duly recored by stenographers and appears in the Congressional Record, and while hearings before committees and commissions are likewise a matter of record, yet, owing largely to the voluminous printed documents, the greater portion of vital matters are lost to view. Just recently, in a speech made on the floor of the House, the following facts were stated, having been collected by the New York Child Labor Commission:

Children's dresses are paid for at the rate of 50 cents per dozen: the average daily output for one person in thirteen hours is one dozen.

Violets are made for 3 1-2 cents per gross, and a mother, three girls and a grandmother earn 60 cents per day.

The average wage of an entire family at present at garment finishing is from 50 to 70 cents per day.

Making cigarette wrappers brings 10 cents per 1,000, and a woman working from 8 a. m. to 12 p. m. can make $3.00 per week.

BUREAU OF MINES ACTIVE.

"Failure to appreciate the seriousness of mine fires and a lack of adequate fire protection have resulted in the loss of hundreds of lives and destruction of property in the last few years," says Herbert M. Wilson, chief engineer of the Federal Bureau of Mines "Two of the most serious disasters in coal mines, the one at Cherry, Ill., in which 282 lives were lost, and the other at the Pancoast mine, near Scranton, Pa., where 74 miners were killed, leaving 45 widows and 137 orphans, originated from trivial causes and ought to have been quickly extinguished without the sacrifice of human life. The mining engineers of the bureau of mines have made a careful study of fires in mines and have concluded that the introduction of comparatively inexpensive fire-fighting appliances, the adoption of proper regulations and the institution of a reasonable system of fire drills may minimize fires and confine others to a brief period of time, with little damage to life and property."

The Children of the Poor.

(By Eugene V. Debs.)

No fledgling feeds the father bird!
No chicken feeds the hen!
No kitten mouses for the cat—
This glory is for men.
We are the Wisest, Strongest Race,
Loud may our praises be sung!
The only animal alive
That lives upon its young.
—Charlotte Perkins Gilman.

The wages of vast numbers of workingmen are so small that they and their families are reduced to the barest existence. Life means nothing to them but a hopeless struggle which ends only in death. Poverty is their lot and misery their heritage. Their sad condition is irrevocably fixed. They toil, skimp, worry, suffer, despair and die. There is not much else in the "simple annals of the poor."

The children of these workingmen, who are poverty-stricken only because they are exploited of what they produce, come into life in an environment and under conditions that almost inevitably predetermine their wretched fate. Poverty is their sole inheritance. The cottage in which they are born, unless it chances to be a tenement or a hovel, is limited to the necessities of existence. The walls are bare, the bedding scant, the furniture cheap, the food coarse, and the clothing shoddy. The most rigid economy is self-enforced. Life is hard and hopeless here in poverty's breeding pen.

The father returns after his day's exhaustive toil to revitalize himself for the next day's slavish task—that is all that home means to him. The mother—prisoner of poverty that she is—knows nothing of the joys of home, the ecstacies of motherhood. She is not a mother at all in the sense in which that term is breathed in reverence, but only "a female that gives birth to young."

Love is not apt to dwell long in such a lair, if it enters here at all. And this is the unhappy lot of millions of laboring people who are foredoomed to such a bleak and barren existence, and from which there is no escape this side of the grave.

This condition of penury, want and social debasement is fixed and permanent in the existing industrial system and no amount of maudlin sympathy or patronising philanthropy can materially alleviate its horrors, a fact our dilettante charity-ball reformers unwittingly confess in their favorite and oft-repeated scriptural injunction, "The poor ye have always with you."

It is under these harsh and gloomy conditions that the children of the poor come into life and are joined to misery at its very threshold. Denied all that makes home the haven of love and the abode of joy, deprived of all the sweet influences that fill childhood with rapture, and which the memory treasures in after years like a vanished dream, these children of the poor are at their very birth fated to struggle and perish among "Les Miserables," the world's disinherited millions who, robbed of their birthright, are despised for their infirmities and scourged as wantons to dishonored graves.

From the wretched habitations of the poor the children early seek escape instead of clinging fondly to their birth place like fledglings to the parental nest. Under the cruel lash of poverty they are driven out into the world in their childhood. There is no time for health-giving and body-building recreation, and no means for education, for culture, for mental training and moral enlightenment. They are but the children of the poor, fit only for menial service, which awaits them at the cradle and drags them in its relentless fetters to their graves.

What words can fitly describe the life tragedy of the children of the poor! Born to poverty, they walk in the darkness of ignorance, and is it strange that some go astray? Is it not a miracle that all do not become vicious and depraved?

Society's doors are all closed against them. They are but outcasts when they are 'respectable." What a melancholy paradox! Those who rob the poor despise them.

The pampered parasites hold in loathing and horror the deflowered victims whose ruddy life-drops glisten in their gaudy plumage.

These children of the poor find their way in increasing numbers to the haunts of vice and shame. The darkness of the hovel and the sweat shop is relieved by the red light of the slums. The children of the poor are food for misery and crime. The vile groggery for the boys and the house of horror for the girls. So do millions of the children of the poor pass through this "Vale of Tears."

And so it will ever be while capitalism is suffered to rob the children of the poor of their inheritance. Deplore it as you may, these are the conditions as they are, and only a new social system can change them. Child labor laws, factory inspection laws and other remedial legislation may ameliorate in some degree the wrongs suffered by the children of the poor, but all such palliatives are powerless to end them. As long as labor is merchandise and production is carried on for profit, child labor will have preference and the children of the poor will be ground into luxuries for the children of the rich.

Socialism offers absolutely the only means for rescuing the children of the poor, and slowly but surely society is being pushed, by the underlying forces that move it, into the acceptance of its philosophy. The abolition of poverty is Socialism's insistent demand and this demand proclaims the end of private property in the means of life.

The earth spreads out before us, rich in its resources beyond the power of the imagination. The inventive genius of man has captured the lightning, snatched the thunderbolts from the hand of Jove and grasped all the forces of nature and converted them into titanic toilers for the children of men. The earth and its riotous abundance, and man, with his miraculous productive power, scout the idea that poverty is to forever scourge the human race. The past, in the density of its ignorance and the night of its superstition, may be excused. But the living present with all its myriad available agencies for producing food, clothing, shelter, and for the education of the children and the diffusion of light and intelligence among the masses, can make no such plea.

There is absolutely no excuse for the widespread poverty that now scourges mankind. It is an affront to human intelligence, and an impeachment of civilization. Child labor is not only unnecessary in this age but a crime against both the children and society. Every child ought to have, and in the triumph of Socialism will have, time enough for physical growth, for the joy of healthy childhood, for education, and for everything else required in a truly enlightened age for the scientific rearing of the children, the progenitors of succeeding generations.

It is for this very reason that the poor and the children of the poor are turning toward Socialism in increasing numbers all over the world. It is their movement, born of their travail and consecrated to their emancipation. Millions of them are already marching beneath its international banner and swelling with joyous strains the anthem of their coming deliverance. To them Socialism is as a beacon lighting the shipwrecked mariner to his destined port. It is their sunshine and shower, their meat and drink, their life and hope. It sheds its radiance in their dingy hovels and eases the ache in their numb and weary limbs.

The disinherited of every race and clime are here at home. They are in truth the people and to them of right belongs the earth.

Socialism is their gospel of economic freedom and social salvation. In the name of its commanding genius they unite in greater and greater numbers, thousands, tens of thousands, hundreds of thousands, millions of them, keeping step to the same proletarian heart-beat, the heart-beat of the international revolution, animated by the same social spirit, held steadfast by the same social conscience, their radiant faces turned forever toward the sunrise.

These are the children of the poor who have made the earth rich and are now moving toward their eternal inheritance.

The love of comrades is in their hearts, the passion for freedom in their souls, and the light of victory in their eyes. The trials that beset their struggle but fit them for their coming freedom and for the infinitely higher life that lies beyond and holds out to them its eager, outstretched hands. They move steadily as gravitation in one direction—toward the light, the fulfillment of their historic destiny. The storms may beat upon them and the lightning smite them to the earth, but they will rise again undismayed, pressing on and on, with all the patience of fate and all the persistence of truth and justice.

No disappointment, however bitter, no defeat, however crushing, can dampen the ardor of their spirit, or quench the fire of their enthusiasm. All the forces of evil must yield to their unconquerable will. All the governments and all the armed forces of the world must recede and finally disappear before the march of these silent battalions—these intrepid soldiers of international peace, who bear not the arms of sanguinary conflict, but who, armored in the righteousness of their cause, proclaim to all the children of the poor the glad tidings of the coming Kingdom of Peace and Plenty over all the Earth.

News From The World Wide Movement Of The Workers.

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS.

By a recent referendum in California, Comrade F. B. Meriam, 434 Henne Building, Los Angeles, was re-elected State Secretary-Treasurer; Comrade Job Harriman, 931 Higgins Building, was elected as the additional member of the National Committee, and Comrades N. A. Richardson, San Bernardino, and J. Stitt Wilson, Head of Ridge Road, Berkeley, were re-elected to the same position.

Camille Huysmans, International Secretary, reports that the English comrades have requested the International Socialist Bureau to transmit the following information to all affiliated parties:

"The Singer Company, whose principal product is the Singer sewing machine, has discharged all its employes who were believed to be Socialists. We ask the Socialist and workers press to print the above notice."

Upon the complaint of the Scandinavian Socialist Agitation Committee the Cook County Delegate Committee requests that the endorsement of the Scandinavian paper entitled "Reyven" as a Socialists paper be withdrawn.

The National Committee is now voting on Motion No. 2, which provides for an annual meeting at National Headquarters of the Woman's National Committee. Vote will close June 23rd.

The National Executive Committee is now voting upon the question of granting special assistance for organizing work to the state organization of Indiana, and upon the question of an appropriation or loan for the Polish People's Daily.

PROPOSED NATIONAL PARTY REFERENRUMS.

Washington, D. C., May 30, 1911.

At the last meeting of the District Committee, held May 23rd, the following National Referendums were proposed:

"Moved that Article XIII (Headquarters), Section 1, be amended to read as follows: The Headquarters of the Party shall be in the City of Washington, District of Columbia'.

"Moved that a Board of Trustees, consisting of five members of the Party, be elected by the membership, said Board, under the direction of the National Committee, to receive subscriptions to a Fund to be known as the National Headquarters Building Fund. This Fund when sufficiently large, to be expended in the purchase or erection of a National Headquarters Building in the City of Washington, District of Columbia.

"The membership of the Local in good standing is 200.

"Fraternally,

(Signed) ROSCOE JENKINS.
Secretary."

Meridian, Wash., May 20, 1911.

Local Meridian proposes motion to amend Article 11, Sec. 2, by adding the following: "Proprietors and employees of saloons and houses of ill-fame shall be excluded from party membership".

"Comment: The saloon element has for many years been notorious for its evil effect on politics; all connections therefore of the same, with the Socialist Party, is to have a corrupting influence. Above all, where we have the woman's vote to deal with, and women members in our party we should keep our official character as clean and as for above suspicion as possible. We cannot obtain any good from evil, therefore, comrades, let us keep them out.

"Yourt for a clean Party.

Secretary."

WISCONSIN NOTES.

The smashing of the paving trust by the Milwaukee Socialist Administration was the subject of debate before the West Side Neighborhood Club last week. The meeting was held in the West Side high school, and the Anti-Socialist aldermen who were present were asked some hard questions.

The Anti-Socialist alderman who, under the last administration, had been chairman of the committee of streets and alleys was in an especially awkward position when the discussion touched the point of where the money when that Milwaukee formerly spent for paving? The saving under the Socialist administration amounting to $1.05 per square yard, what became of this big graft under the former administration?

This alderman thought the best way to answer this inconvenient query was to bolt the meeting with his crowd—consisting mostly of boys and newspaper reporters.

Now here is the curious part of this story: Next morning the capitalist papers reported that the "meeting broke up in a row"—and severely censured the club for unfair treatment of the bolting alderman. But they said not one word about the smashing of the paving graft!

And yet this is one of the biggest pieces of news that they could give events and one of the most interesting the people of Milwaukee. But to mention it would have been to give credit to the Socialists. The capitalist press would suppress the most important news rather than admit the splendid efficiency of the Milwaukee Socialist administration.

The Milwaukee city council, at its next meeting, will take up the business of establishing a municipal electric lighting plant. The injunction which barred the inauguration of this much-talked-of plant is no longer in the way. Immediate steps will now be taken toward its inception.

GENERAL SOCIALIST NEWS.

In the city election just held in Reno, Nev., the Socialist vote jumped 400 to 800 per cent. The Reds came close to electing several candidates. The politicians are dumbfounded. The Socialists say they will carry the city at the next election.

Socialists in the German Parliament won a victory in forcing the government to concede Alsace-Lorraine ballot reform. Hereafter one mans vote will be the rule rather than the loaded plural vote. Other minor reforms were also obtained.

Finnish Socialists at Fitchburg, Mass., have started a daily paper called Raivaajo. They also print a monthly magazine bearing the name of Sakenia. If this thing keeps up there will soon be a Red daily in every city in the country. There are more than a dozen going now.

In the canton of Zurich, Switzerland, the Socialists elected 42 members to the legislature, holding the balance of power between the Liber-Democrats with 72 seats. Of the two candidates for the national parliaments, who have 91 members, and the ment the Socialists got one, who polled 52,561 votes, and the other, with 35,918 votes.

This is how the Socialist vote increased in Oakland, Cal., where the Socialists came pretty close to electing the Mayor against an old-party combine: In 1908, Debs in the whole county, 3,463; 1910, vote for governor in Oakland, 4,240; 1911, April primary, 5,918; May election, 9,839. A change of a little over a thousand votes will turn the city "red."

The Intercollegiate Socialist Society now has working organization in 80 colleges and universities in the United States besides five alumni and unattached bodies. In the referendum election recently held J. G. Phelps-Stokes was again chosen president; Upton Sinclair and Jessica G. Finch, vice presidents; Morris Hillquit, treasurer; Leroy Scots, secretary; Rose Laddon, executive secretary; Harry W. Laidler, organizer.

Comrade Baldoni of the Italian Young People's Socialist League and editor of its organ, the Avanguardia, has been sentenced to imprisonment for two months and a half and given a heavy fine for "insults" to the army and incitement to mutiny. In Italy Holland, Switzerland, Germany, Austria as well as in Spain, France, Belgium, Iris and the Scandinavian countries the Young People's Social Leagues have as distinctive and specific feature the education against militarism, hence the efforts on the part of the respective governments to suppress and outlaw these organizations.

Here is another straw that shows how Socialism is taking hold of the higher educational institutions that will make the millionaires bribe-givers squirm when they learn the facts. John Spargo, the well-known Socialist author, has been making a round of the Eastern colleges and universities lecturing under their auspices before the entire student bodies. Very successful meetings were held at Clark University, Cornell University, Rochester University, Lake University, Mt. Holyoke College, Trinity College, Elmira College, Springfield Training School, and a number of others.

The Associated Press correspondent in Berlin cables that the government intends to hang on to its power to the last minute and decline to call an election until next January, when the present legislative term expires constitutionally. It is further stated that the old parties are merging their forces. The Clericals and Conservatives will get together on one side, the National Liberals, Antisemites and probably others in a new alignment, while the Socialists will stand alone and will also nominate candidates for parliament in every district in the country, which has not been done heretofore. The many Socialist victories gained during the past year is causing the old crowd a great deal of anxiety for the future.

The Irish Nation, printed in Dublin, says every Sunday evening over 2,000 men attend the Socialist meetings in Daunt's Square. Also that "Socialism is now the principal theme of all discussions among the workers in Cork and Queenstown." Party branches are being organized everywhere and literature in large quantity is being distributed in all the industrial centers. The former opposition among the clergy is less pronounced and some of the ablest are beginning to become interested in the new movement. Connelly, Leary and other orators are constantly in demand to make speeches and do organizing work. The Catholic Socialist Society, a new organization, is also reported as making rapid progress. The land question is being put to the fore as the dominant issue.

The Socialist movement is making splendid progress among the Armenians in Turkey, Russia and Persia. They have 165,000 members in 33 central districts. They also have a daily paper in Constantinople and are organizing the workers into trade unions. A number of the Armenians in the Turkish parliament are Socialists.

TOLEDO SOCIALISTS NAME TICKET.

In spite of the intense heat last Sunday, the Toledo Socialists held an enthusiastic caucus at their headquarters, 108 Summit street. Having cast 19 per cent. of the total vote in the city at the last election, it will be necessary for the Socialists to enter the primaries this fall. The purpose of the caucus was to name candidates for the primaries. A future caucus will fill the remainder of the ticket, when the changes in the ward boundaries are known.

The following nominations were made:

Mayor—Thomas Devine.

President of Council—Dr. C. H. Reed.

City Auditor—Rudolph Volgraf.

City Treasurer—Claus Sass.

In the Field of Labor.

PRISON LABOR NEWS.

The legislature of Missouri, at its last session, passed a comprehensive measure relating to the inmates of its penal institutions in reference to their employment. Congressman Booher of Missouri has introduced a bill in Congress, H. R. 5601, "to limit the effect of the regulation of interstate commerce between states in goods, wares and merchandise wholly or in part manufactured by convict labor or 'in any prison or reformatory.'" The provisions of the bill give a state or territory the right to exclude convict-made goods by statutory enactment. With this bill enacted into law the system of contracting convicts for the manufacture of products in large institutions holding vast commercial prowess will in measure be beneficial to not only small manufacturing establishments employing free labor, but assist each state in upbuilding its own manufacturing interests.

CARPENTERS MAKING HEADWAY.

A letter from Secretary Duffy, of the Brotherhood of Carpenters, states that the strike now being carried on by the millmen of Grand Rapids, Mich., is effective and that a number of firms have signed an agreement and men have returned to work. Prospects are bright for an early settlement, as hardly a day passes that some firm does not come to an understanding with the organization and sign the agreement. Only 2,700 are now out, but it is reported that they are standing loyal and will remain so until the remaining firms conclude to enter into contractural relations with the brotherhood.

WOMEN'S TRADE UNION LEAGUE

The third biennial convention of the National Women's Trade Union League will convene in Boston June 12, 1911. The league has been active and assisted materially in spreading the principles of trades unionism among the women workers. It has also done valuable service in great strikes where large numbers of women have been involved. During the sessions of the convention a mass meeting has been arranged, and, among others, John Mitchell will deliver an address.

"THE M'NAMARA CASE."

The leading article in the June issue of the American Federationist, by President Gompers, deals with the McNamara case. It quotes in full former President Roosevelt's article in The Outlook, then deals with the article, as Mr. Roosevelt is the spokesman of a number who think like him. The article occupies sixteen pages and should be read by all as an exposition of labor's attitude on the McNamara case. The following are a few quotations:

"If the trade unionists had been taught by events not to attach much credit, or even, in most cases, any credit to the yarns of detectives in regard to the case which had been an almost daily production for months after the explosion, they had all the more reason to put their own interpretation of the significance of the finding of dynamite in the building in which Secretary McNamara had his office. If it can be proven that dynamite was stored there to the knowledge of Secretary McNamara, he is a fit subject for an examination as to his sanity by expert alienists. The incredibility that a directing dynamiter would have a stock of the explosive either near his business office or about the home of either of his parents, or of any of his relatives, is an absurdity if we are to give the accused man credit for the least sense of caution whatever."

RESOLUTION

Adopted at the Annual Convention of the Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Fund of the United States of America, on May 15, 1911, at the Labor Temple, New York City.

Whereas, The ruling class of this country is just preparing to strike another blow against the working class by the sudden arrest, a few weeks ago, at Indianapolis, of the secretary of the International Bridge and Structural Iron Workers' Association, John McNamara, and by his immediate extradition through the Governor of the State of Indiana to the officials of California, on which occasion all legal formalities, despite the protest of McNamara, were disregarded, and the rights guaranteed to every citizen of the United States trampled under foot; and

Whereas, This arrest of the first official of a great labor organization made under such peculiar circumstances, reminds us of the memorable Moyer-Haywood case, which served to open the eyes of some of the workers with regard to the practices employed by the capitalist class against the working class for the purpose of destroying their organizations; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we strongly condemn the lawless manner of the arrest of the McNamara's and that we call upon our members to render their assistance so that the plot formed by the Erectors' Association against the McNamaras be laid bare and the intention of the capitalist conspirators frustrated; be it also

Resolved, That we emphatically endorse Congressman Victor Berger's resolution for an investigation of the McNamara affair, and request that it be passed by the House; be it furthermore

Resolved, To urgently recommend to the members of the Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Fund of the United States, in conformity with the fundamental principles of our society, to work to their utmost to the end that the public powers be soon conquered by the working class and the capitalist rule, with all its ugly consequences, may come to an end; and be it in conclusion,

Resolved, To publish this resolution in "Solidarity," the official organ of the society, and send copies of it to the accused, the respective officers of the State of California and Indiana, the President of the United States, the members of Congress and the labor press.

By order of Convention and National Executive Board.

WM. MEYER,
Secretary.

QUESTION BOX.

(a) If the Socialists were to get in power and abolish the army and navy, what protection would we have against foreign countries?

(b) If the workers of factory, farm, mine, etc., receive the entire product of their toil, where will the money come from with which to run the government?

H. C. D., Newark, O.

(a) The Socialists can adopt the Swiss military system. In Switzerland each able-bodied citizen has his arms, ammunition and equipment in his own house, and trains a few days each year, which is a physical culture and which costs the government nothing for standing army. Do you think this country likely to be eaten up by the tigers of nations when little Switzerland has stood in the midst of them for eight hundred years, and was over-run once (by Napoleon) and immediately righted herself as soon as he was out of the territory? Remember, too, that Socialists are opposed to war—opposed to the working men fighting the battles of the capitalistic exploiting nations which pit the workers of one nation against the workers of another nation simply for capitalistic gain, as has been the case in nine-tenths of all the wars. And since Socialism is rapidly being espoused by the workers of all nations, the profit system will cease, and when exploitation, or the profit system, ceases there will be no cause for war.

(b) The factories, the shops and the farms would be the government, and the officers in these would be the officers of the government, and such officers would be productive and necessary, earning their proportion of the national wealth. If the foreman, manager and superintendent of an industry are producers, they have a right to draw their part of the average products, and if they are the public officials would they not be paid by their share of the products? We have so long been trained to pay exorbitant salaries to a lot of useless officials that we can scarcely conceive of government except as it contains a lot of these parasites. When we establish Socialism we will get rid of these parasites. That is exactly why we want to get rid of capitalism.

OUR BROTHERS ARE CALLING FOR HELP.

Street Car Victims Appeal to Prison Pardon Board—Representatives of Capitalism Deliberately Ignore Appeals.

Arthur Sands, a victim of the Columbus Rail and Light Company's malice, has been refused a pardon by the State Board of Pardons. We have no means of finding the wire that directs or carries "Master's Voice," but it is about time that these gentlemen realized the meaning of the word Justice. To prove that there is such a thing as class distinction behind the walls of the Ohio penitentiary we cite one instance of Governor Harmon pardoning a member of his own union (the Ohio Bar Association) who robbed an estsate, and after being sent to the state prison for three years refused to do any kind of labor, and was given the title of being the laziest convict ever behind prison walls. To relieve the state of a filthy incumbrance the Pardon board recommended to the Governor that this lazy, loafing lawyer be pardoned, and Governor Harmon complied with their request. Workers, just as long as you VOTE for the capitalist class just so long will these infamous class distinctions be permitted. Arthur Sands, and his fellow-victims are GUILTY OF NO CRIME. They were victims of judicial tyranny and class prejudice.

JIM HENDERSON.

IS THERE HONOR AMONG CAPITALISTS?

Judge Blair, the great legal mind who purified Adams county and convicted SOME of the vote sellers, is not a consistent person in all things, for when he agreed to give certain leading politicians immunity in consideration of their turning over evidence of the facts he was guilty of granting special privileges to the MEN HIGHER UP. If you are an honest man, Mr. Blair, worthy of your position as a judge on the judicial bench, you should deny or affirm this rumor.

POMERENE COMES TO DEFEND HIS FRIENDS—HOGAN SMILES, BEGUILES AND APOLOGIZES.

When a United States Senator comes all the way from Washington, D. C., to defend an indicted legislator there is something rotten in the capitalists' camp. For the benefit of the dear Senator Pomerene we advise that he communicate with Attorney General Hogan. This Anti-Socialist Democratic politician became very sensitive, especially when the Socialist attorney for the defense was caught smiling at his milk and water remarks to the Dr. Nye jury. The capitalist system is a cancerous growth, reeking with corruption, and yet the "I am getting mine crowd" keep on pouring on the perfume to keep down the political stench. Why not let the Socialistic surgeon remove the evil. Yes, amputate with VOTES, DEAR MR. HOGAN.

JIM HENDERSON.

EVOLUTION MARCHES ON.

Feudalism has received another blow.

This time it happened in Mexico.

With the exit of Diaz we also see the defeat which capitalism has administered to feudalism.

Under the Diaz regime European and American capital went into Mexico. And it went in for a purpose. It went in to gobble Mexico. And this has already happened.

The fight against the tyranny of Diaz was really a fight against the encroachments of the capitalist system.

And it was really the landed aristocracy of Mexico that led in the revolution.

European and American dollars caused the erection of banks and factories and railroads. These were built along the lines of capitalist methods.

The Mexican revolution was not the revolt of men who were class-conscious workers. It was a revolt of class-conscious exploiters of the petty middle class. It was the last feeble revolt of sixteenth century economics against the economics of the twentieth century.

The peonage which existed under Mexican feudalism will now become extinct. Capitalism has no use for peonage or chattel slavery. It wants competition between the men and women who have to sell their labor power. It does not want to be responsible for the physical comfort of those who work.

Capitalism in Mexico is going to make the peons free—free to fight for jobs. It is going to give the Mexicans the same freedom that is enjoyed by millions of poverty-haunted American citizens—the freedom to deteriorate into dumb and driven outcasts of an industrial system which places the dollar mark on a higher scale of valuation than that of human lives.

The Mexican people are going to have some experience. It will be a bitter experience. But it shall be the experience that will awaken them to dreams of better things.

The despotism of capitalism is a fine school.

It makes us think because it gives us pain.

And the Mexican people are going to do some thinking in the future because capitalism is going to give them pletny of pain. That may lead them into another revolution—the revolution of an enlightened working class against exploitation, wage slavery, and poverty. But we think that the next revolution will be a revolution of thought-force—not of gun and cannon.

Thought-force or intelligence usually asserts its superiority over physical force; something that is always the weapon of the despot—and often the last resort of an overburdened, unenlightened populace.

CUMMINS PREDICTS CIVIL WAR.

Senator Cummins of Iowa addressed the graduating class of the Washington Law College recently, speaking mainly on the political future of the country. He predicts that there are bloody times ahead for this country unless the accumulation of wealth in a few hands is curbed, and said that this question will be settled within the next ten years by either a bloody revolution or by lawful means.

Senator Cummins see no hope ahead unless we can turn back the clock of progress forty or fifty years and return to the old competition of that day. And that is all the well-meaning Democrat or Republican "progressive" can offer. And these babes in the woods will be kept amused for a time yet by fake reform laws and fake trust-busting Federal court decisions, until the time when the pear is ripe. Then the mask will be thrown off and all the press of the country and all the sycophant economists and college presidents will announce to a wondering world the well known economic truth that it is as utterly and wildly impossible to go back to the old competitive basis as to transform a hatched chick into the newly laid egg it came from.

We Socialists are generally practical, hard-headed folks. We are not aiming to go back to sixteenth century methods. What we are going to do is just this:

1. We are not going to abolish the trusts; we are going to own the trusts, and the whole people are going to profit by the natural trust economics.

2. We are not going to abolish inventions and go back to hand labor or to small factory labor; we are going to make use of every possible invention that will operate to the good of the human race. Think of it, our greatest scientists do not hesitate to say that the inventions of the last century have really done nothing for the great masses of humanity. The common workers of England 400 years ago were vastly better off than the average worker of today, and women and children of those days were not food for the labor market.

3. We are not going to abolish the courts, but we are going to abolish the rule of corporation and the corporation lawyer-judge and the present hideous travesty of justice. We shall do this by the people owning the corporation and thus removing the possibility of prostituted courts.

4. We are not going to abolish legislatures, because senators and representatives are corrupted by the moneyed interests; but we are going to "pull the stinger." We are going to do away with the greatest reason for corruption, the private corporation. With the initiative, the referendum, the right of recall of officials, we put the control of legislation into the hands of the people themselves.

5. But we ARE going to abolish child labor, by doing away with its necessity and the profit system; we ARE going to do away with prostitution and the white slave traffic, the evils of the liquor trade, most of the causes of crime, most of the slaughters of men, women and children by factory accidents, mine explosions, railroad wrecks, most of the causes of war. And only two things are necessary to bring about all this: Ownership by the general public of the means of production and the thoroughly democratic rule of the people. That and just that is all there is to Socialism.

THIRTY CENT GAS.

After a stormy debate of an hour, during which several councilmen often were shouting at the same time, and in one instance the sergeant-at-arms was required to head off a fist fight, council Monday night passed the ordinance fixing the gas rate at 30 cents net, and the length of the contract at five years. Prior to the meeting it had been announced that the company would accept this rate and length of contract. After the meeting Thomas H. Clark, attorney for the company, formally declared that the ordinance was satisfactory to the gas company.

However, none of the debate changed the line-up, and it stood on the final vote as it has stood ever since the gas rate question was up—eight to seven. The final vote was: Yeas—Baldridge, Dierker, Eitel, Evans, Heints, Lewis, Mahanna, Price. Nays—Geren, Harper, McGuire, O'Rourke, Ross, Sherman, Welsh. The ordinance is now up to the mayor. He has 10 days within which to approve it, veto it, or allow it to become a law without his signature. The ordinance, under its terms, becomes effective July 1, when the present rate contract expires.

This is the finish that The Socialist has predicted. Some mysterious influence has lined up the solid phalanx of eight for 30-cent gas while the other seven councilmen have been permitted to get some political capital out of the controversy.

That evidence, alleged to be locked in a safe, which is alleged to prove bribery or attempted bribery, might make some more work for the grand jury. What! To be plain, the gas legislation in Columbus has been a rotten deal for the people from start to finish. At every turn the consumers of gas have been at the mercy of the gas companies. The people always will be the prey of the corporations until the people take possession of the means of producing the things which we all must have in order to live.

SOME SOCIALIST HISTORY.

The initiative and referendum and recall is being advocated these days by the "progressives" of both the old parties. It may be interesting to trace the history of these demands. Away back in 1877 the Workingmen's party of the United States met at Newark, N. J., from December 26 to 31 of that year, and changed its name to the Socialistic Labor party. One of the delegates to that convention was A. R. Parsons, of Chicago, afterwards hanged as an alleged anarchist. The platform adopted was a mighty clear-cut expression of class-conscious Socialism. The fifteenth and sixteenth articles of the "immediate demands" were as follows:

"15th. Direct popular legislation, enabling the people to propose or reject any law at their will and introduction of minority representation in all legislative elections."

"16th. Every public officer shall be at all times subject to prompt recall by the election of a successor."

These demands have appeared in every platform of the Socialist party since then. Socialists do not claim any copyright upon the principles named, but we desire to emphasize the fact that the Socialist party is the only party that has always stood uncompromisingly for the initiative, referendum and recall.

DO NOT FORGET THIS.

Are you going to the coronation of King George? No? Well you are paying the expenses of a lot of Americans who are going. They are the owners of the means of production. You will make the wealth, and they take it.

The Labor Argus, published at Charleston, W. Va., is an able champion of Socialism, and its work showed good results at the recent municipal election in that city.

The vote of the poorest workingman counts for as much as the vote of a billionaire. The latter may be the master of thousands of wage slaves, and he has the power of life or death over them. The power of the dollar is great, but the power of the ballot is greater when cast intelligently by a workingman. The trouble is the American toiler seems to be timid about using the power which he possesses.

PRISON LABOR.

Some Figures About Work in Ohio's Penal Institutions.

The following is an abstract of the report on prison labor in Ohio, covering the calendar year 1910, and based on data obtained and compiled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics:

The institutions enumerated are: The Ohio Penitentiary; Mansfield Reformatory; Boys' Industrial School, Lancaster; Girls' Industrial Home, Delaware; Cincinnati Workhouse; Cleveland House of Correction; Columbus Workhouse; Toledo House of Correction; Dayton Workhouse; Stark County Workhouse, Canton; Zanesville Workhouse and the Xenia Workhouse—comprising, in all, four state, one county and seven city institutions.

The total number of inmates were 5,788, of which 5,015 were males and 773 females. The number employed by the state and counties were 2,852; by contractors, 1,911; unemployed for sundry causes, 825.

The labor of the prisons is divided into three systems: the contract system, under which the labor of inmates is contracted for at a given price per day; the piece price system, under which the institution is paid an agreed price per piece for the finished product; the public account system, under which the convicts or inmates are worked exclusively for the state.

The number employed under the contract system were 1,570; under the piece price system, 33, and under the public account system, 768.

The number engaged in manufacture was 2,379; in agriculture, 496, and in miscellaneous work, 2,688.

The number of establishments contracting for prison labor are 12, with an average duration of four years and eight months per contract.

The average daily wage per convict engaged in the manufacture of ironware at the Ohio Penitentiary was 73 cents; at the Ohio State Reformatory, in the manufacture of brushes and clothing, 35 cents; at the Cincinnati Workhouse, in the manufacture of brushes and wire goods, 30 cents; at the Dayton Workhouse, in the manufacture of brushes, 90 cents; at the Stark County Workhouse, in the manufacture of wire goods, 35 cents.

All contracts at the Ohio Penitentiary expired in 1910, except two, which expire in 1951. Some provision has been made to give the inmates employment operating knitting machines, while others are engaged in farm work at the State Farm; the product of all labor to be used for public account. The contracts for the manufacture of clothing and brushes at the Mansfield Reformatory having expired, the inmates are now engaged in the manufacture of furniture, shoes and other commodities for public account. All other state institutions employ inmates under the public account system. County and city institutions do not come under the provisions of the statute abolishing contract prison labor.

The total receipts for the year from contractors for prison labor were $362,104.62; value of goods manufactured under the contract labor system was $1,573,052.99; value of goods manufactured under the public account system was $304,976.59; consumed for state or county use, $270,-714.59; sold and consigned to points within the State of Ohio, $209,455.55; sold outside of the state, $1,397,-$59.44.

Average hours of labor per day, 9.4; average daily earnings per day, 58.6 cents. Maximum daily earnings (at the Ohio Penitentiary), 82 cents; minimum daily earnings (at the Stark County Workhouse), 26 cents.

Average number of unemployed during the year 1910, by reason of the statute (Werts law), abolishing contract prison labor, 195.

From the above it can be seen what enormous profit is being derived from prison or convict labor. The convicts in many cases may be unfortunate workingmen who, under this glorious system of capitalism, found it impossible to secure employment and were forced by hunger and despair to commit crime. And these unfortunates are being compelled through their labor to help perpetuate such barbarous system, for convict labor comes into competition with "free" labor, creates a downward tendency of wages and is to some extent helping to increase the ever-present army of the unemployed. The results are conditions detrimental to the working class and of benefit for a few exploiters. The more permanent unemployment, the more crime and prisoners and convict labor, then still more unemployment, and so on in an ever widening circle.

Many suggestions are made to lessen or do away with the products coming in competition with free labor. But at the best, all such suggestions can only be palliatives and will not do away with the evil. The trade unions of today, confining themselves in their struggle to the economic field, are powerless to remedy the condition. The convict labor problem is political in its nature and must be disposed of along political lines. Some trade unions, indeed, have realized that fact, but all they have done in a political way was petitioning and begging the state legislatures. When one understands the system of contracting the convicts by the state to some manufacturers, who clear enormous profits and perhaps are dividing the spoils with some unscrupulous politicians, then it is no wonder that petitioning the state legislatures brings no result.

Laws to do away with convict labor are necessary, but to get such laws and to make them effective the workingmen must vote the rotten politicians of the capitalist parties out of power and elect men of their own class into the legislative bodies.

LABOR'S ENEMIES IN NEW RAIMENT.

Jones, Metcalf & Co. Wish to Enter the Political Arena.

It's very kind of the President of the North Side Chamber of Commerce to take such an interest at this time in the welfare of the wives and children of the working class. The workers wish to remind these humanitarian wolves that we have not forgotten their actions in bringing Colonel Roosevelt to denounce labor leaders and break up the Columbus street car strike. After leaving this city the "ivory merchant" wrote a letter to one of the victims of his "coached abuse(?)" in which he regrets some of the statements made and hints ulterior motives in his being brought here at that time. This letter is on record in this city. Knowing these facts to be true, we laugh at the audacity of both Dr. Jones and Mr. Metcalf in their new role of weeping wolves. Labor has not forgot the acts of the past. If a representative of capitalism is to rule us, give us E. K. Stewart, and not his whining puppies.

DROPPED UNION LABEL.

The Daily News dropped the Union Label from its editorial page a week or so ago. The Socialist carries the ensignia of fairness and deserves the support of the workers.

DISPUTES, DISTRUSTS AND DISCORDS.

Andrew Carnegie has forwarded a general wreath to Washington, D. C., bearing the words, "The Gates Ajar." It's an enigma as to whether the "Canny Scot" is alluding to prison gates or steel trust "gates."

The undertakers and the embalmers are holding their convention. Mayor Marshall opened the convention. Several politicians began to smile when they heard George had fallen into the hands of the undertakers. Cheer up, ye mournful sisters, the Clark Grave-Vault Co. is going to increase its capital stock. It's strange how business keeps up!

The Columbus Aviation meet was a failure as a money maker. This will not mean a loss to the promoters, because, being members of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, all that will be necessary is for that body to demand of the next legislature to make good the loss. Of course it will be necessary to charge the claim to some mysterious product, such as "supplying guns and ammunition" to a sheriff. Of course we do not want to make a song about that $6,000, but now that the county commissioners have turned over the money to the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, "what about your turning over that mysterious guns and ammunition" your legislative petition read about? Silence breeds contempt!

The Inside Workings of a Mail Order House.

One of the most pernicious institutions on the face of the earth is a large mail-order house. This is not an idle opinion but the mature judgment of one who has worked in one and studied its operation.

When I applied for work at the main office of one of Chicago's largest mail-order houses I was treated with scant courtesy by the Jewish doorkeeper. He bellowed at me viciously and thrust me forcibly into a chair when I showed an ignorant inclination to advance from the marble hall into the inner sanctum where the manager was. After an interminable wait he came around again and wanted to know my business. When I handed him a card with "attorney-at-law" on it he wilted perceptibly. It was worth waiting long to see.

The manager seemed to me to be quite a decent chap, for he hired me immediately on my own terms and asked no recommendation even. He said there was no opening in the legal (?) department but he would make one, as he didn't have an opportunity often to hir a woman lawyer! If I "made good" he said, he would give me the head position in the legal department. It was with considerable elation and enthusiasm therefore that I started in the next morning to learn all the details of the mail-order business. I entered the legal pedartment unknown to the twenty-five assistants and clerks and none were to be told of my peculiar advantage over them or the possibility of my rapid advancement.

It took me about five minutes to discover that I had been employed not for a legal department but for a department of extortion, corruption and deceit.

The name of this concern is doubtless well known to every reader of this paper. Its method of operation is about as follows: Catalogs are sent to people all over the country, especially to the rural districts. In highly colored English people are urged to buy on credit and easy terms the highest quality goods at unprecedently low prices. Promises are made by the concern to make extensions in the time of payment in case a buyer becomes ill or has financial trouble of any sort.

This is what happens: Mrs. Smith, who lives in Florida, picks out from the catalog a particularly gorgeous velvet rug. She makes out an order and sends it to Chicago with her first payment and begins to wait. After a long delay a carpet comes. It is far below the value she had expected but she pays the freight from Chicago to Florida, remember, and begins to wish she had bought that one with roses in it at Jones & Co. Mrs. Smith pays each month regularly for six months and the rug is half worn out now and not half paid for. She knows she has been "stung" but Mrs. Smith is honest and so is Mr. Smith, and they intend to pay the balance. At this point Mr. Smith contracts a fever and is out of work two months. The baby Smiths are well and hearty and need shoes and milk, constantly, it seems. Debts pile up. Local creditors become alarmed and threatening. Mrs. Smith writes a detailed and heart-breaking account of the trouble to the Chicago concern and asks for one of the promised extensions. Does she get it? Well—!

The manager of the legal department told me the concern made at least 50 per cent on every article sold, so you can see the price was not low and that if a bill were two-thirds paid a decent profit would still remain. But do you suppose any of this was considered in dealing with delinquent debtors? Do you suppose the promises of extension made when the purchase was made were kept? Certainly not.

From experience I know there is a large class of people who are dishonest, whether naturally so or from necessity, I can not say. However I also know that thousands buy on credit because they are compelled to do so and that they sometimes fail to pay because of low wages and hard times or sickness and no work at all.

Mrs. Smith would come in this class. So would hundreds and hundreds of the delinquents which came under my immediate attention at the mail-order house. But all were treated exactly alike. Get all the money you can, as fast as you can, in any way you can, those were my orders, translated into brutal English.

This concern has about one hundred form letters, made up to fit various states of fact which might interfere with prompt payments. The order was always use the meanest letter possible under a given state of facts, it gets the money quicker! I was frequently criticised by members of the legal (?) department because I was too polite!

They had three sets of forms. One set was signed in the firm name. One set was signed by a long fear-inspiring collecting company, incorporated (non-existent), and another by a National Company, also incorporated, for the purpose of gathering statistics and locating heirs (non-existent). This was a bluff pure and simple. There was no collecting company or statistical company in existance but the names were used to frighten delinquent debtors. All of these forms were kept in stock by the hundreds in the legal department and sent out in regular sequence by the clerks. The general address "Chicago" was given and so no one was the wiser. Many, many letters each day went thru my hands, addressed to the mail-order house beseeching it to take claims from the collecting company and payments would be made. Sometimes a form would be sent to the terrified debtor saying the claim had been withdrawn and a short extension would be given. All the time the claim was resting quietly in the same pigeon-hole in the legal department. Different colored stationery and characteristic printing was used to heighten the effect of actual difference in in the personel of the three companies and it is not at all surprising that customers were completely deceived by the scheme.

Now this three in one and one in three hoax was pretty bad, but the substance of the letters was the really criminal part of the affair. One form was designated a notice before suit and purported to come from the collecting company. Five dollars over and above the balance due was demanded for costs. Many ignorant people sent in the five dollars at once. The forewoman in the legal (?) department said the company received $500.00 a day from this source and other over payments. If the woman knew, and I have every reason to believe she did. I can well see how the company can afford marble halls and lordly doorkeepers. Personally I can state that I positively know a very large sum was dishonestly collected and retained by this mail-order house. The bookkeeping must have been exceedingly bad. For day after day I read scores of letters from alleged debtors saying certain bills were paid. To avoid "disgrace" and "drastic proceedings" a second payment would be made.

One form was most unfair and heartless. A letter was sent to an alleged debtor, threatening a sale of his claim if same were not promptly settled. A flaming yellow poster was enclosed in the letter showing the debtor the way the claim would be advertised for sale. When Mrs. Smith got such a letter you can imagine she would make the children live on less milk fr a week and pay her bill. If her heart would not permit this she would lose the carpet, and all she had paid. Every thing was sold on a conditional sale contract, reserving title in the company until fully paid for. Even if the carpet were worn out and worthless, if not paid for, the company would take it from Mrs. Smith, so the other people in the Florida town would know that they could not beat a Chicago mail order house.

Frankly, it is impossible to beat them if you buy of them. I never shall. Will you?

PROFITABLE PROPAGANDA MEETING LAST SUNDAY.

The meeting at Livingston Park last Sunday afternoon was in no sense a McNamara protest meeting; it was a joint session of the Ward Branches of Local Columbus Socialist party. The assembly took the form of a propagapda meeting. Comrade C. F. Weichold acted as chairman. Judge M. B. Earnhart was present and was invited to speak and he responded with an address, in which, as he himself put it, he, "pretty nearly told the whole truth." The judge told a great deal of truth about the capitalistic system, the decisions of the courts and the legislation enacted by the old parties. He did not finish his speech. If he had, he would have landed in the Socialist party.

Comrade J. L. Bachman followed with an address that pointed out the way to remedy all the evils set forth by Judge Earnhart, by the working class taking possession to political power for their own benefit. Comrade Bachman had the advantage of being on the right side and knowing how to tell the true story of labor's wrongs.

A WOMAN'S VERSION OF THE VAMPIRE.

A fool there was, and she lowered her pride
(Even as you and I)
To a bunch of conceit in a masculine hide—
We saw the faults that could not be denied,
But the fool saw only his manly side
(Even as you and I),

Oh, the love she laid on her own heart's grave
Belongs to the man who did not know
With the care of her head and hand,
(And now she knows that he never could know)
And did not understand.

A fool there was, and her best she gave
(Even as you and I)
Of noble thoughts, of gay and grave
(And all were accepted as due the knave)
But the fool would never her folly save
(Even as you and I).

Oh, the stabs she hid, which the Lord forbid
Had ever been really planned,
She took from the man who didn't know why
(And now she knows he never knew why)
And did not understand.

The fool was loved while the game was new
(Even as you and) I
And when it was played she took her cue
(Plodding along as most of us do)
Trying to keep his faults from view
(Even as you and I).

And it isn't the ache of the heart, or its break
That stings like a white-hot brand
It is the learning to know that she raised a god
And bent her head to kiss the rod
For the one who could not understand
(Even as you and I).

CHEAP MOTHERHOOD IN AMERICA.

Sacred motherhood!
Divine motherhood!
Be-au-ti-ful motherhood!

I know a voter so chivalrous, so imbued with deferential awe and admiration for the mothers of men, that he would not for a moment entertain the idea of the mother of his brood of six voting.

"Preposterous! Oh, quite preposterous! Why, bless me, it is unwomanly." And that settles it.

I have seen the subject of his chivalrics solicitude on her knees—scrubbing. Have seen her in the garden—plucking roses? Oh, no. Hanging out clothes, with her sleeves rolled up to the elbow and the raw wind blowing on her damp arms. I have seen her face scorched with the heat of Saturday's baking.

I have seen her when I thought she needed the protection she never got. But vote? Sacred motherhood! No!

I know another woman who has known what beautiful motherhood meant—seven times. She washes for a living. "How can you do so much?" I asked in amazement at the quantity of work she puts out. "Well, if I get up at four in the morning, I can pretty well get two washings done a day."

Three of her little ones died, so she knows what stricken motherhood means, too, for she loves her children. And she carries her burden alone. She doesn't know where her husband is. He just left one day.

She is not very strong and her one hope is that God will spare her until her little ones are big enough to take proper care of themselves.

It never occurred to this mother that she ought to know something about government—ought to vote—ought to make demands for herself and her kind. She has but one desire: "If God will let me live until I raise my children."

Poor God! He doesn't want to kill her. Hard work will kill her. Hard work and poverty. Slavery is killing her.

In France they are pensioning mothers. In France women threatened to stop having children. The race could die out for all of them. They had borne the whole burden too long. Had suffered too much for too little. Then the whole French nation arose in alarm: "Our women aren't bearing us children," it cried. And the world took up the alarm of "race suicide" in France.

And thus it was that motherhood assumed really sacred proportions in the Third Republic. And France has undertaken the endowment of motherhood. If you will bear us children, we will at least help support them, it says.

It is more important than the poloning of soldiers. Soldiers take life, mothers give it. "Mothers suffer at the birth of every child as no soldier suffers on the battlefield. They suffer at the death of every child a suffering inconceivable to man."

France has decided to pay, not in pretty, empty phrases for sacred motherhood, but in that which protects the mother from the ravages of poverty, and the child from starvation and early death.

In New Zealand the widows of workers are pensioned. In this country we pension only widows of men who fight. How much better to pension widows of those who produce—who build up the nation. This gives the little children of the dead working man a chance to follow in the father's footsteps and continue the work of production.

In New Zealand mothers vote. In France they threatened race suicide. In both countries they have received very grave and necessary attention.

What will the mothers of America do to protect themselves, and to gain the actual necessities of life for their young?

They must do something. The sad plight of hundreds of thousands of mothers in America is a disgrace to the nation. Look about you, and you will see upon every hand abused motherhood, insulted motherhood, degraded motherhood. Motherhood in poverty, in rags, eking out a starvation wage at the wash tub, in the factory—in the brothel! Selling her body and soul that her child may live, and then seeing it die by inches, miserably, wretchedly.

Sacred motherhood? Not in the "land of the free" and the "home of the brave." Not in America. Not yet.

JOSEPHINE CONGER-KANEKO.

CHRIST AND THE WOMAN.

By John M. Work.

The disposition to prosecute innocent women who have been the victims of slander calls to mind the action of Jesus in a clear case of adultery. The story is told in the eighth chapter of John.

"And early in the morning he came again into the temple, and all the people came unto him; and he sat down, and taught them. And the scribes and the Pharisees bring a woman taken in adultery; and having set her in the midst, they say unto him, Teacher, this woman hath been taken in adultery, in the very act. Now in the law Moses commanded us to stone such: what then sayest thou of her? And this they said, trying him, that they might have whereof to accuse him. But Jesus stooped down, and with his finger wrote on the ground."

He knew the woman was not innocent. She was not the victim of baseless rumor. She had been taken in the very act. She did not deny it.

Her accusers were men of smug respectability. Some of them wore the clerical garb. They would not have been guilty of vileness—except according to law—for the world. But Jesus no doubt had in mind the view which he expressed on another occasion, namely, "Whosoever looketh upon a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart." He knew that from that point of view no man was guiltless. He also knew that lust is just as unclean when it takes place inside the marriage bond as when it takes place outside the marriage bond. He knew that these accusers dare not open up for inspection their own sex lives, carried on under the legal protection of the marriage tie, and let them be compared with the sex life of the accused woman. He knew that if they were to do so, the contrast of her comparative cleanness with their own vileness would cause them to hang their heads in shame.

"But when they continued asking him, he lifted up himself, and said unto them, He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her. And again he stooped down and with his finger wrote on the ground."

This reply came like a stroke of lightning. They saw that he had read them like a book. So they slunk away.

"And they, when they heard it, went out one by one, beginning with the eldest, even unto the last: and Jesus was left alone, and the woman, where she was, in the midst."

He was all alone with her in the huge temple. Would her remaining alone with a man in a great building further reflect upon her character? Was he himself so unclean that he could not imagine a man alone with a woman in a great building without making indecent advances to her?

"And Jesus lifted up himself, and said unto her, Woman where are they? Did no man condemn thee? And she said, No man, Lord."

And what did he do?

Did he plunge the dagger of calumny into her, and spend the next few months in giving it fiendish twists?

No, no!

TRAGEDIES IN BIRD LIFE.

(By William L. Finley.)

In the treatment of her wild children Nature does not adopt human methods. We may pass from the busy city street to the long white rows in the hospital ward, but Nature has nothing of this kind. She has no time for sickness and sympathy. Occasionally I find a sick or weakened creature, but it is rare. Her unchangeable law is the survival of the fittest. The battle is to the strong and healthy. These become wary, elusive, and fit to mate. In this way Nature safeguards the species and makes it permanent at the expense of the individual. She taught the Greeks that it was better to expose the sickly child on the face of the mountain.

Tragedies are common in bird and animal life. The end is generally tragic. The weak falls a prey to the strong. Nature knows not the decline of peaceful old age. Life is all spent on the march and in the firing line. The waning of power, a moment's lack of alertness, are fatal. In some form the shape of death glides along every trail, creeps about every orchard, lurks in the deeper woods, skims the placid surface of the river, cowers in every nook and corner that Nature owns. The cat, the fox, the weasel, the snake, the hawk, and all such creatures are hunters and hunted, pursuers and pursued. Life is death, and death is life.

One day I saw a shrike or butcher-bird strike a wild canary. The shrike is a murderer, and he kills his own kind purely for the taste of blood and brains. His name comes from his habit of hanging his meat on a hook or in a crotch. But he does not go free. A pair of shrikes had a home in a small juniper up the hillside. One day I heard a commotion and looked up toward the nest. A Swainson's hawk flew deliberately into the home tree, reached into the shrike's nest and sailed off across the canon with a young shrike dangling in his talons. Another moment, a shot rang out and the hawk fell dead, tragedy following tragedy in rapid succession. Yet it strikes no part on the face of Nature.

One day I was watching a pair of yellow warblers in the orchard. They were flitting about a vine-covered fence. They were either building or just about to build a nest in the vicinity. The first thing I noticed, the male paused on the fence, fluttering his wings. His mate flew down beside him. He tried to fly to the limb of a neary-by tree, but fell short and wavered to the ground. His wife was right beside him, chirping all the time. I went nearer for a closer view. He lay flat on his back, writhing in pain. I could see he was dying. His wife was on the fence scarcely a yard from my hand, fidgeting and calling for him. But he died almost instantly, stricken by I know not what.

Two days later I was sitting on the front porch with a flock of English sparrows sputtering and quarreling in the street in front of the house. Suddenly the Englishers scattered like fragments in an explosion, and a sparrow-hawk nabbed one just at the trellis over the porch. With two blows, he caved in the skull and sat on the post at the corner of the tennis-court to finish his meal. For a few moments the sparrows kept hidden, but in half an hour they were sputtering and fighting in the dust as if nothing had happened. The next morning the creeping form of some neighbor's cat shot out from a tuft of grass. There was a smothered chirp, and another of the flock had gone.

In my neighbor's back-yard I found a song sparrow hanging dead in the woven-wire fence. In some way the foot had been caught in the twisted wires. The bird, in trying to release itself, had wedged the leg over and finally broken it. At another time I found the body of a thrush hanging to the barb of a wire fence. The wire ran straight across the top of a zigzagged fence, and the bird, in full flight, had just skimmed the top of the rail to go full force into the wire before it was seen. The barb had caught in the neck and the force had swung the bird's body over from below, locking it in a death grip. Sometimes we hear of birds that have been entangled in the threads of horse hair used in nest building. A careless step often means death.

Telephone and telegraph wires cause the death of many birds. I have counted over twenty phalaropes and sandpipers in the distance of a mile along wires in the marshes of lower San Francisco Bay. Some were dead, other wounded. I saw a small flock flit across the road ahead of us. The end of a wing flew in one direction and the wounded bird went fluttering to the ground. In his zigzag flight he had not noticed the wire, and he struck with such force that the last joint of the wing was completely severed. He could never fly again, although otherwise he was unharmed. Like many others along the road, he was but food for some foraging cat.

CROOKED-CRABBED-CROSS-ABOUT!

The strangest land, without a doubt,
Is crooked-crabbed-cross-about;
Where fishes sigh for hook and bait,
And cry aloud, "We cannot wait!"
Where pine-trees pelt you with their bark,
And chase each other in the dark!
Where ducks wear overshoes for gout,
In crooked-crabbed-cross-about.

There boys go walking on their heads,
And children skate on feather-beds;
There Johnny sits before the fire
And teaches Grandpapa and sire;
The house turns somersaults at night,
And long-winged dogs fly off in fright
I'd leave that country with a shout,
Old crooked-crabbed-cross-about!

ROVING ANIMALS DANGEROUS TO NESTING BIRDS.

Roving animals, such as cats, coyotes, foxes, and others, often create havoc among nesting birds. On a wide, sandy beach in southern California I found a colony of least terns. The birds make no nest, but scratch out a little hollow in the sand and lay their two or three eggs. Occasionally there was a bit of driftwood or a light row of dead weeds washed up by the water. For some reason the terns usually selected a nest site just at the side of a small drift or a few blades of grass. For three hours I followed the trail of a coyote, criss-crossing back and forth up and down the extent of the beach. He, too, had learned the nesting site of the tern, and he had a taste for eggs and young birds, for he crossed from place to place wherever a nest was likely to be, and he succeeded in finding almost all the homes of the colony. Snakes are responsible for the death of many birds. But twice in my experience have I caught a snake in the act. Once while following a cow trail up the side of a small stream on the southern California coast, my attention was attracted to a fuss caused by a pair of sparrows. I pushed through the bushes and looked for five minutes before my eye caught the form of a big gopher or bull snake with the upper part of its body coiled on the nest and the rest trailing down the branch.

He had devoured the young. The rascal watched me with his lidless eyes. As I drew nearer, the fact began slowly to penetrate his brain that he was in danger, and he started to slide back down the branch. I had caught him red-handed; I ought to have scotched him. But the birds were gone, and I remembered years before I had paid one of my playmates ten cents for a bull-snake just to send him down the gopher holes in our garden. After all, the snake was playing his part. He may rob a nest occasionally, but as a rule the birds are above his reach. He is useful because he eats many mice, moles, and gophers.

Accidents are not uncommon where birds are nesting in colonies. A few years ago, I visited a colony of herons that nested in some sycamore trees. The young night herons are very expert at climbing, but, but sometimes they misstep and fall to the ground. I saw where one young bird had hung itself by getting a foot caught in a crotch. That in itself was not unusual, but a second bird hung by the neck only a few inches away. He had fallen, or overbalanced on a small limb, and, as is the custom, had hooked his chin over the branch to keep from dropping to the ground. The head was caught between the branches, but simply hooked over a bend in the twig. Here he had hung himself rather than fall to the ground. His clutched right foot showed that the death struggle had been a reaching and stretching to regain the limb. Had he thrown his head back a trifle, he would have dropped to the bushes below. It seems impossible that the bird could have held the rigid position of the neck through the death struggle. The force of instinct against falling was strong even to death.—From Collier's.

The pure and gentle Jesus said:

"Neither do I condemn thee: go thy way; from henceforth sin no more."

What would he have said if she had been a clean, wholesome woman, who had been the victim of groundless slander?

Miss Molly Elliot Seawell's method of argument against woman's suffrage is that closely resembling James the Second, as described by Macaulay: His way was to make an assertion, and when wiser persons had respectfully shown that it was not true to assert it again, in exactly the same words. Miss Seawell laid down dogmatically a whole mass of monstrous misstatements, affirming that if women were given the ballot, married women must lose their legal right to maintenance, and forfeit other "enormous property privileges" and that a "new and cataclysmal complication" would result as to the rights of children, etc.

None of these consequences or complications mentioned by Miss Seawell have arisen in Wyoming, where women have had full suffrage since 1869. Married women have not only not been deprived of any property rights which they had before equal suffrage was adopted, but from time to time statutes have been passed upholding the property rights of married women.—Chief Justice Potter, of Wyoming.

"Akin to Love"

By SYLVIA VERMILLION.

Coleman supported the trembling girl to the waiting-room as soon as his car slowed up.

"If I only had a picture of him I would be able to help," he whispered. "Keep up courage. We will find her."

They examined every face in the building, and as the through train to New York was being called, the watchers stationed themselves by the gate. Hope died hard in Geraldine's breast, but it died when the last face disappeared and she saw no wee yellow head which alone could ease the ache.

She wondered why they built stations on pivots that never stopped whirling. Why did not Colonel Coleman come closer so she could hear what he was saying.

He carried the half swooning girl to the women's waiting room, where the kind matron fanned her. Going to the tank for water Coleman saw a coarsely dressed man and woman giving their baby a drink. He was glad that mother knew not such suffering.

The water brought Geraldine back to life, and its anguish. She stared for a second only, then rushed like a wild animal on the poor man, who was leading the woman and child through the door.

"You are he disguised," she screamed, snatching his hat, to which hung a wig.

"Mamma! Mamma!"

Coleman yet afar off, ran and fell on the neck of the man, who was fighting to get Jeanette away from her mother.

The old man felt the futility of a struggle with a muscle like that. Then, with a lightning move, flashed a revolver. The bullet grazed the Colonel's arm, making a slight flesh wound.

Before he could fire a second shot, the weapon went crashing across the room. Then a veritable volcano of wrath, belching forth hot ashes and lava, flipped the kidnaper on his back.

"D—n you; let me up," he choked, trying to release the vice from around his throat.

"I will when you promise me that you will never lay hands on that child again."

"No. By G—d I'll die first."

The vice tightened gradually, forcibly; the face began to blacken, the eyes to bulge.

"Heaven, Robert, do not kill him. Remember, he is my dead husband's father."

Though a touch not heavier than a rose petal on his head, yet the felt the thrill of her hand. The old man arose, but not to call the other blessed.

He faced his daughter-in-law threateningly.

"Remember, I——"

Coleman stepped in between them, then threw the steel magnate a look that had lots in it.

"Now go," he thundered, while the crowd cheered lustily.

He went wincing under the jeers that were hurled after him.

"Let us go at once to a physician, Colonel Coleman. Your arm must be dressed. See. There is blood on my handkerchief," holding it up.

"That is nothing," shaking himself together like a huge shepard dog.

"Robert, go to please me."

He looked down into the blue eyes, and with difficulty restrained the love that her first "Robert" had nearly started to rolling.

"We will go at once to a hotel, Mrs. Norton," he said quietly. Colonel Coleman had himself well in hand again. "I will find a physician there. You have stood the strain splendidly, but you must have rest. We will take the first train back in the morning."

"Here cabby, shut up long enough to put this lady and child inside."

"I am glad the hotel is close." Geraldine leaned gratefully back in the cab and closed her eyes.

"How is Pumpkins?" said Coleman, holding out inviting hands to Jeanette, who immediately climbed into them.

"She is all right, only too badly frightened to talk. Colonel Coleman, did you ever see a truer disguise than Mr. Norton and that woman had on? They looked exactly like immigrants. By the way, where did she go when the struggle commenced. I am positive it was she who held the horses the night of the kidnaping."

"That woman was a man, Mrs. Norton, who did not care to be in the mix-up in case it would come to trial. Here we are. I have rooms just across the street. I hope you will have a comfortable night."

In the quiet and privacy of a luxuriously furnished apartment Geraldine reviewed the last twelve hours, the sum total amounting to this:

One thing sure! She must make ample apology for the high and mighty she had dished out so generously to him in the past. The way he had handled the situation and served her on the trip with a homage equal to that of courier to queen had placed him where his moral courage could not be questioned. In the morning she would show him that Geraldine Norton was not a haughty, heartless woman. The fact that her sword and spear had been beaten into plowshare and pruning hook brought her more joy than she cared to own.

The morning found her singing softly. There was a lilting note in the tune and an added buoyancy to her step as she dressed for the return trip home. The toilet was completed, but not the merry melody. It might have gone on forever had not the maid announced Colonel Coleman. The note trailed off to a wail when she saw his [illegible]

"Colonel Coleman something has happened you! Let me share your burden as you have shared mine."

He answered nothing. With strong hands tightly clasped behind him he drank in her sympathetic sweetness. Then a thought that had been in hiding from sheer coyness now came forward and expressed itself as frankly and sweetly as a child:

"Colonel Coleman, the whole of my kingdom—not half—for the privilege of sharing this thing which oppresses you."

"And that kingdom is——"

"My heart! My self!"

Then his face and manner hardened.

"No, Mrs. Norton, it is business. I am called East this morning. Can you make the return trip alone? If not, I can procure an attendant for you."

"I prefer to go alone," she answered dazedly. She wanted to solve this awful problem if possible: the change in him.

"You are not well, Jerry. Is that the reason you did not visit longer with the Comstocks?" anxiously inquired Mrs. Eaton, as Geraldine came in, weary to the heart's core. "I just received your letter this morning, posted at Ft. Randall, and now it is only supper time. I thought you would stay a week, dear."

"Well, Momsie, you know I had no intention of visiting the Comstock's when I left home, and as I had no purple or fine linen with me, I thought it best not to yield. Beth sent the letter and took matters in her own [illegible]"

Geraldine had to brace the situation some way. She knew it looked wobbly to Momsie, and Momsie must not know.

Intellectual, cultured, traveled Mr. Vernon had swept and garnished her house in honor of Geraldine Eaton Norton. She had laid aside her mourning robe and entered through the gate that swung ajar only for those who had been weighed and found not wanting. For strait was the way and narrow the gate that led to this exclusive circle, and few there were that found it.

For four months Geraldine radiated witchery, charming all who were lured thereby. Then suddenly she refused all invitations, a fact which caused society to marvel. Then sat they up and took notice and spake one to another, saying:

"It is well. She mourns. It is the anniversary month of his death."

The never ceasing bells of time rang out no joy for Geraldine. Each day of that four months of silence seemed an eternity. The delicate coloring and padding of face and figure had given way to a marble white and pathetic thinness.

As usual, she was helping the mother's love-impelled hands that morning, going about with a lassitude that tugged at Momsie's heart-strings. Then a square, white envelope, post-marked New York, transformed the gloomy atmosphere of her world to one alternating between hope and fear. She climbed the stairway to her room like a mountain goat, and read:

"Dear Mrs. Norton:

"Can you forgive a silence that has been unjust to you as it has been miserable to me. That night spent in Sioux City, after the rescue of the bedsedest baby, was the climax to my fears. Then it was I decided you had placed this verdict on my part of the program: That I had played the part of rescuer to exalt myself in your eyes; that at heart I was still a coward in your estimation.

"You remember the friend who so kindly loaned us his private car. Last week he came into my office and asked me what was up, or rather what was down, judging, he said, from my appearance. I know him to be the kind that does not lend or slop over, and so told him the whole thing: from the day on the train, when my Southern blood and impulsive nature caused me to use language to you that would naturally stamp me a coward.

"And, by the way, Mrs. Norton, when I saw you welcomed home as the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eaton I would willingly have given my good right hand for the privilege of recalling those ill-timed words. Well, my friend advised me to write, and if you can conscientiously think those words due to the cause I have named, meet me at the station with the white ponies and cart I have shipped to Jeanette. They will be a truce in the warfare your heart has been waging against mine. I shall arrive Friday, 10:15 a. m.

"Very truly your friend,

"R. R. COLEMAN."

Slowly, very slowly, she folded the letter so that the broken box of precious ointment could flow over and heal the heart wounds.

Two days later Mrs. Eaton's gentle voice interrupted a merry tune that came rollicking down the stairway in maternal stage like a joy-filled brook down a mountain side.

"Jerry, dear, do go and see what father wants. He is calling some one like all possessed."

Geraldine went, knowing it was the demon of horse lover that possessed her father and which had never been cast out. However, she found daddy clothed and in his right mind, holding a pair of milk white ponies, with Jeanette in the cart, chattering like a magpie.

"Jerry, dear, Coleman sent 'em, and they're a little bit the prettiest drivers I ever saw," running an experienced horse hand down the trim legs. "And you ought to see the car they came in. Padded like a rocking chair. Coleman surely does know a good piece of horse flesh when he sees it."

Geraldine patted their velvety noses and breathed secrets in satin-lined ears which started the blushes to chasing one another over a very happy face, finally taking refuge in a golden mesh of hair.

She went into the house and stood a moment before a life-sized portrait of her dead husband. "Dear heart, forgive me," she whispered. "For you I had the pity that is akin to love. For him I have the love that borders on idolatry."

The next morning she jumped out of the bed laughing. It was a misty, moisty morning, too, but nothing could dampen her spirits now.

She dressed with great care, for he had never seen her in anything but dreary black. The kingdom of his heart was at hand, and she felt that nothing in the heavens above or the earth beneath would prevent her from sharing it now.

They went to meet him with the ponies and cart, Jeanette and her mother, who knew that she too had met her ideal in the man who had nothing lacking. That in his strength she was strong.

He saw in her face the handiwork of his love; heard it in the voice that stopped at a sweet rising note, proclaiming that her heart had gone where the words might not follow.

His soul was trembling with very love for her.

"My kingdom—not the half—for the privilege of sharing your life," he said in a low tone, taking the outstretched hands.

"And that kingdom is—" her voice still lower.

"My heart! My self! Dear little girl, I would not change kingdoms with the King of England."

The Cause of Industrial Carnage.

By Victor L. Berger, M. C.)

Men and women are killed in factories, on railroads and in mines because human life counts for less than do the products of labor. Under our civilization the dollar is of more importance than the man. And since it is cheaper to kill or maim human beings and replace them by others than it is to furnish the proper appliances for their safety, men, women and children are sacrificed.

There is only one field nowadays where the individual workingman is as powerful as the individual employer the moment the workingman realizes this power, i. e., the political field. On election day the ballot of the workingman counts for as much as the ballot of the capitalist. And the ballots of the workingmen are infinitely more numerous.

It rests, therefore, with the workingman to make use of this power.

And above all, American capitalists must be taught one lesson: They must be made to realise that the life of the wage-earner is as sacred as is the life of the employer.

The capitalist class of Europe has learned that at least that lesson. But in America there are even some trade union men who do not seem to realize the sacredness of human life. Some trade unions still boast of the amount of insurance they are paying out to the victims of disasters instead of using all their power to compel the Master Class to use proper precautions.

Of course, even under Socialism humanity will have to pay its toll. Sacrifice is the basis of all civilization and culture. Even in future generations humanity will have its Memorial Day. Humanity will have to do honor to the heroes who die in the cause of humanity.

Only with this difference, then the workingmen and their families will enjoy all the blessings of that civilization. These benefits will not go to a small privileged class while the men and women who create all wealth suffer from misery and want.

Moreover, under a just economic system human life will be considered at its full value. Men will not go down into the bowels of the earth seven or eight thousand feet at the risk of their lives in order to be able to live. Society will make use of forces of nature that can be controlled and applied with less risk and danger.

Our water powers (our rivers and probably also the tides) will furnish an inexhaustible supply of power in the future.

Until this higher phase of civilization is reached, however, workingmen must stand together in their economic organization—the trade union—and demand respect for human life. Workingmen must stand together in their political organizations and demand respect for human life. We must demand protection for our fathers and mothers—protection for our wives and children—protection for ourselves.

By making the proper use of both forms of organization—by working hand in hand on the economic and political field—the working class will get that protection.

And we shall thereby not only improve the present conditions, but also hasten the final emancipation of labor, the new social order and the growth of the future commonwealth.

CHARLES E. RUSSELL POINTS OUT WAY TO HIT CAPITALIST PRESS.

At Call Celebration He Urges a Readers' Boycott.

A boycott upon the capitalist newspapers by all Socialists and enlightened workers was urged by Charles Edward Russell, late candidate for governor of the State of New York on the Socialist ticket, at the third anniversary celebration of The New York Call, which was held at the Harlem River Park Casino, 127th street and Second avenue.

"Let us boycott the capitalist papers," Russell urged, "just as they have boycotted us. In most of the offices of the capitalist papers the word Socialism is a forbidden word. Reporters are forbidden to use it; copy readers strike it out. Let us treat them to their own medicine. Let us boycott them as they have boycotted us."

These utterances of Russell were greeted by a storm of applause at the close of an evening of addresses in which the Socialist press of the past and of today was discussed and was proved to have made remarkable progress.

Among the other speakers beside Russell were Joshua Wanhope and Algernon Lee, who presided.—The Daily Call, New York.

CREATIVE CUTTERS.

The following statement has just been received from Secretary-Treasurer Duncan: "Trade agreements in the Granite Cutters' Association are sometimes made for one year or longer,' with three months' notice of change by either side prior to March, April or May, as the case may be, of each year, but in most instances their agreements run for three, four or five years. This year one-third of the branches in our organizations gave notice of change of three and five-year agreements, and while in some localities several weeks' suspension took place, there have been progressive settlements made with practically a uniform increase of 25 cents per day. The Saturday half-holiday is quite plentiful in those agreements entered into this year now for summer months, but all carry a clause that, beginning with the springtime of 1912, there is to be a Saturday half-holiday all the year around.

A fight now exists in that trade in Georgia and Oklahoma, where employers are so far resisting the increase of wages desired, but it is expected that a settlement will be reached with the same percentage of increase in wages as have been entered into in other granite-cutting centers. The only non-progressive locality in the present contention is Rion, S. C., where one firm resorted to a state "injunction mill" for help, and the usual questions are pending, but in the meantime union men are not working in those parts.

BUILDING A NEW SCHOOL SYSTEM.

The school as at present conducted leads directly to uniformity, to routine, to mediocrity, not to individuality, inventiveness or original thought. It has become almost as authoritative and dogmatic in its position as was the learning of the school men.

The public school is the one institution the people must defend; but it must be renovated. In the hands of the present ruling class it has become a standardized institution, turning out children without greater variety than the parts of the Baldwin locomotives.

Public education is the ideal education. But if public education is to be preserved to the people is must be preserved by the people participating in it. Educational experts we have and must have, but the people must also take a part in the management of the schools.

There is no work so necessary as the fitting of the young to live well now and in the future. The savage tribe preserves its young with care, trains it in the customs of the tribe and initiates it into its secrets; but our modern civilization not only struggles against child labor laws that will protect the child physically, but has turned the mental and moral education of the young into a formal farce.

One might imagine that those who thus control the government and sacrifice the young, fear the future that may displace them in control and that they hence live only for the satisfaction of their own present desires.—May Wood-Simons in the Coming Nation.

CONVENTIONS OF INTERNATIONAL UNIONS IN 1911

What Socialism Stands For.

Human life depends upon food, clothing and shelter. Only when these are assured are freedom, culture and higher human development possible. To produce food, clothing and shelter, land and machinery are needed. Land by itself does not satisfy human needs. Human labor gets raw materials and food out of the soil by creating machinery and using it upon the land. Whoever has control of land and machinery has control of human labor, and with it of human life and liberty.

Today the machinery and the land used for industrial purposes are owned by a rapidly decreasing minority. So long as machinery is simple and easily handled by one man it does not make its owners so powerful that they can dominate the sources of life of others. But when machinery becomes more and more complex and expensive, and requires for its effective operation the organized effort of many workers, its influence reaches over wider circles of life. The owners of such machinery become the dominant class.

The Masses in Subjection.

In proportion as the number of such machine owners compared to all other classes decreases, their power in the nation and in the world increases. They bring ever larger masses of working people under their control, reducing them to the point where muscle and brain are their only productive property. Millions of formerly self-employing workers thus become the helpless wage slaves of the industrial masters.

The more the economic power of the ruling class grows, the less useful does it become in the life of the nation. The overwhelming bulk of the useful work of the nation falls upon the shoulders of the classes that either have no other productive property but their manual and mental labor power the wage workers — or that have but little land and little machinery outside of their labor power—the small traders and small farmers. The ruling minority is steadily becoming useless and parasitic.

A bitter struggle over the division of the products of labor is waged between the exploiting propertied class, on the one hand and the exploited, propertyless class on the other. In this struggle the wage working class cannot expect adequate relief from any reform of the present order from the dominant class of society.

The wage workers are therefore the most determined and irreconcilable antagonists of the ruling class. They are also the class which suffers most from the curse of class rule. The fact that a small number of capitalists is permitted to use all the country's resources and social tools for their individual profit, and to make the production of the necessaries of our lives the object of their competitive private enterprises and speculations, is at the bottom of all the social evils of our time.

Modern Industry Plunges.

In spite of the organization of trusts, pools and combinations, the capitalists are powerless to regulate production for social ends. Industries are largely conducted in a planless manner. Through periods of feverish activity the strength and health of the workers are mercilessly undermined, and during periods of enforced idleness the workers are frequently reduced to starvation.

The climaxes of this chaotic system of production are the regularly recurring industrial depressions and crises which paralyze the nation every fifteen or twenty years.

In this mad and reckless race for profits the capitalist class is bound to exploit the workers to the very limit of their endurance and to sacrifice their physical, moral and mental welfare to its own insatiable greed. Capitalism keeps the masses of working men in poverty, destitution, physical exhaustion and ignorance. It drags their wives from their homes to the mill and factory. It snatches their children from the playgrounds and schools and grinds their slender bodies and unformed minds into cold dollars. It wantonly disfigures, maims and kills hundreds of thousands of workingmen annually in mines, on railroads and in factories. It drives millions of workers into the ranks of the unemployed and forces large numbers of them into beggary, vagrancy and all forms of crime and vice.

Public Intelligence Corrupted.

To maintain their rule over their fellow men, the capitalists must keep in their pay all organs of the public powers, public mind and public conscience. They control the dominating parties and, through them, the elected public officials. They select our executive, bribe our legislatures and corrupt our courts of justice. They sway our educational institutions. They own the nation politically and intellectually just as they own it industrially.

The struggle between wage workers and capitalists grows ever fiercer, and has become the only vital issue before the American people. The wage working class, therefore, has the most vital and direct interest in abolishing the capitalist system. But in abolishing the present system, the workingmen will free not only their own class, but also all other classes of modern society: The small farmer, who is today exploited by large capital more indirectly but not less effectively than is the wage laborer; the small manufacturer and trader, who is engaged in a desperate and losing struggle for economic independence in the face of the all-conquering power of concentrated capital; and even the capitalist himself, who is the slave of his wealth rather than its master. The struggle of the working class against the capitalist class, while it is a class struggle, is thus at the same time a struggle for the abolition of all classes and class privileges.

Must Conquer the Political Power.

The private ownership of the land and means of production used for exploitation, is the rock upon which class rule is built; political government is its indispensable istrument. The wage workers cannot be freed from exploitation without conquering the political power and substituting collective and democratic administration for private ownership of the land and the means of production used for exploitation.

The basis for such transformation is rapidly developing within the very bosom of present capitalist society. The factory system, with its immense labor, is rapidly destroying all vestiges of individual production in manufacture. Modern production is already very largely a collective and social process, while the great trusts and monopolies which have sprung up in recent years have had the effect of organizing the work and management of some of our main industries on a national scale, and fitting them for national use and operation.

An End to Class Rule.

In the struggle for freedom the interests of the workers of all nations are identical. The struggle is not only national, but international. It embraces the world and will be carried to ultimate victory by the united workers of the world.

To unite the workers of the nation and their allies and sympathizers of other classes to this end, is the mission of the Socialist. In this battle for freedom the Socialist movement does not strive to substitute working class rule for capitalist rule, but by working class victory to free all humanity from class rule and to realize the international brotherhood of [illegible]

REFORMERS

Unite to Support Initiative and Referendum Proposition.

Adopt Name of Progressive Constitution League. Brand Whitlock, President.

Adopting the initiative and referendum as the tool for accomplishing all governmental reforms urged in the making of a new constitution for Ohio in 1912, and choosing Brand Whitlock, mayor of Toledo, as its president, the Progressive Constitution League of Ohio was formed in Columbus Sunday to fight the people's battle and combat the powerful special privilege interests in the forthcoming campaign for the election of delegates to the constitutional convention to convene in Columbus, January, 1912.

The officers of the league elected are: President, Brand Whitlock, mayor of Toledo; first vice president, John Frey, Cincinnati, editor of the Iron Molders Journal; second vice president, L. G. Spencer, Warren, chairman of legislative committee of the Ohio state grange; third vice president, J. V. Denny, professor of English at Ohio State University; fourth vice president, Rev. Herbert S. Bigelow, Cincinnati, former secretary Ohio Direct Legislation League; secretary, C. B. Galbreath, state librarian, who retires from office July 1; treasurer, O. J. Demuth, farmer, New Philadelphia, treasurer of Ohio state grange.

The program adopted was as follows:

Whereas, A non-partisan method has been provided for the election of delegates to the Ohio constitutional convention, to convene next January; and

Whereas, The powerful special interests have already organized for the election of delegates who will attempt to perpetuate the rule of the franchise-holding corporations; be it

Resolved, That we organize under the name of The Progressive Constitution League of Ohio, and that the work of the organization shall be to elect delegates to the constitutional convention who earnestly favor the following program:

No. 1—A brief constitution, applying the initiative and referendum to the state and every political subdivision thereof.

No. 2—A method of amending the new constitution by initiative petition in order that all other governmental reform may be secured as soon as and whenever demanded by the people.

No. 3—The officers shall consist of a president, four vice presidents, a secretary and treasurer, and these officers shall constitute the executive committee. The membership shall consist of all persons in sympathy with its principles.

No. 4—The committee is authorized to appoint state and county officers, who shall proceed at once in each county to federate all labor unions, granges, citizens and civic bodies to unite on the program of this league and undertake through their representatives an active campaign for the election of delegates who will support their cause in the constitutional convention.

Hart's Princess Theater has been playing to good houses the past week, the attraction being "The Arrival of Percy, or the Downfall of Bloody Mike," a musical comedy that brought roars of laughter from the audience. Next week the bill will be "Fun on the Midway." It is a refined show for ladies, gents and children. Matinee each day.

OUR BOOSTERS.

Just at this season of the year business of every sort takes a slump, and our subscription department feels the effect of general conditions to some extent. This does not mean that we are not adding new subs to our list every week, but renewals are not what they ought to be. The workers of Columbus should realize that The Socialist is their only champion in this city, and the more this paper is boosted the stronger will be the fight against the Master Class.

Recently the telephone bell in The Socialist office rang and the Old Man answered the call. This is what came from the other end of the line, after the usual preliminaries: "Say, that was a good paper last week. Keep it up." We are keeping it up, but comrades, a few words of commendation and a lot more dollars would help out

Comrade Vois, of East Linden, met the Old Man near the office the other day and extended his rough right paw, with the remark: "Last week's paper was the best yet. It's getting better all the time." Vois is on the firing line all the time, and his good opinion is worth something.

MAYOR MARSHALL IS NO GENTLEMAN.

City Council Adopts Resolutions Roasting George, the First.

The city council is mad and went on record last Monday evening, declaring that Mayor Marshall is no gentleman, and, furthermore, is a liar.

The resolution, after setting forth that the mayor is making speeches and will continue to make speeches in which he declares that council has embarrassed his administration by refusing to pass legislation he wished, and that these statements are false, concludes:

"Be it resolved, That the members of the council of the said city of Columbus do hereby denounce the course of the said mayor, George S. Marshall, as being ungentlemanly, undignified and unworthy of the high office which he holds. We denounce as false his oft-repeated assertions that the council has stood in his way and embarrassed him and his administration.

"Be it further resolved, That the members of this council hereby assert their independence of the executive department of said city, and that they will in the future, as in the past, be guided by their own judgment as to their course of action, rather than by the judgment of of the mayor."

SOME DETAILS

Of Ohio Constitutional Convention Election.

There has not been a time in Ohio in the past 50 years when the people should be as wide awake to their own interests as this summer and fall. The new constitution will give them an opportunity to make fundamental law of many things that boss-controlled and reactionary legislatures have refused to give the people.

The people must control the convention as an escape from the power that special privilege now exercises in Ohio.

And the only way for the people to control is for every voter in Ohio to keep his eyes open and on election day SEND THE RIGHT KIND OF MEN TO THE CONVENTION.

NO PARTY LINES.

Any voter may be a candidate for delegate to the convention, and all he has to do to get his name on the ballot is to get out among his neighbors and friends and secure the signatures of at least two per cent of the qualified voters of his county, although in no case are less than 300 signatures allowed. The party bosses have no say as to who shall run, and all names on the ballots in the election shall appear without party designation and shall be rotated.

ELECTION NOV. 7.

Each county in the state is entitled to as many delegates in the constitutional convention as it has members of the lower house of the legislature, just adjourned. This will mean 119 delegates altogether. FRANKLIN COUNTY WILL HAVE THREE DELEGATES.

The delegates are to be elected on Nov. 7 next. This is the day municipal elections are to be held, so municipalities won't be to any great additional expense. Outside of municipalities special elections will have to be called to elect the delegates.

The constitutional convention will meet in the hall of the house of representatives in the State House, Columbus, on Jan. 9, 1912, and begin the drafting of a new constitution. Authority is given the convention to adjourn to any place or places in the state for the holding of the convention, so the body could, if it so desired, honor any number of cities with its presence.

Big problems to confront the convention will be the initiative and referendum, the recall, the classification of property for purposes of taxation, home rule for cities, methods of court procedure and the liquor question.

On most of the big problems there will be fights between the people and special privilege which wants to get the best of the people. In nearly every community special privilege is backing men to run for delegates who, if elected, will vote against the people and for special privilege, just as reactionary senators did this last session of the legislature. It is these men the people must watch and use their votes on election day to keep them out of the convention.

Advertise in The Socialist.

Under the present capitalistic system business can not be carried on without advertising. This is a fact. Another fact is that Socialists ought to realize that their newspapers must have advertising in order to keep up under this system.

It therefore follows that Socialists should patronize the business men who advertise in Socialist papers, and should let these business men know that advertising in a Socialist paper draws the patronage of Socialists.

We are fighting for the right to live as humans should live, and we should recognize all who help us in the contest.

Tell the merchants that you buy goods of that you are Socialists and that they must boost your paper if they expect to get your trade.

The capitalists draw the line, and we must do the same.

BEWARE OF THE WOLF IN THE LAMB'S COAT.

A local capitalistic paper states that the Progressive Republicans, Democrats, Single Taxers, Socialists and labor leaders have held a meeting for the purpose of organization to force a campaign to have the initiative and referendum put in the constitution. The Socialist party has placed itself on record for the initiative, referendum and recall, and can not unite with any elements to get the crumbs that have fallen from the old parties and fair weather reformers.

The only men who can be trusted to formulate a constitution that will abolish classes are the men elected by the Socialist party as delegates to the Constitutional Convention.

What a picture is being brought forward by the capitalistic tribe and their agents. A faction of the Republican and Democratic parties want municipal ownership so as to head off Socialism. The single-taxers and reformers of the old parties want the initiative and referendum. The Grand Old Man of the Steel Trust is begging the government to control the trusts and regulate price of their products. A few years ago they, one and all, said, "You have no business to meddle in our private matters. You horrid creatures, you are trying to introduce a foreign idea into these United States." What have they done now? They have almost approached the greatest reformer of the nineteenth century—Robert Owen.

We, the Socialists, will have the whole loaf, and that is a Pure Industrial Democracy, and will get it through the ballot when the workers unite to cast off the chains of paternalism and special privilege.

Vol. 1. No. 26. COLUMBUS, OHIO, SATURDAY, JUNE 17, 1911. PRICE $1.00 per year. SINGLE COPIES, 3 cents.

Ohio State Library Columbus, O

LIBRARY

Socialist Outing, Saturday, July 15, at Olentangy Park, Columbus, Ohio

Congressman Victor L. Berger and Fred G. Strickland will speak.

The Socialist Local and Branches of Columbus have arranged to hold the largest demonstration and outing ever held, and are very much desirous of everybody being our guests on that occasion Saturday, July 15, 1911.

We have already secured Comrades Victor L. Berger and Fred G. Strickland as speakers on that day and are making further arrangements to secure other well-known speakers in addition to the above.

We have arranged for free open-air speaking, in a shady spot that will accommodate from fifty to sixty thousand. We have also arranged free special attractions, such as balloon ascensions, parachute leaps, daylight and evening fireworks, athletic contests on land and water, wrestling and sparring matches by professional athletes, canoe regatta, band and orchestra concerts, open-air vaudeville, and other special attractions that we may be able to book for the occasion.

We shall be glad to furnish you with a badge of admission to the park on that day, which will cost you nothing.

The picnic will be held in Olentangy Park, one of the most attractive summer parks in America; also a strictly union park. In this park there are all kinds of attractions, such as bathing, bowling, boating, restaurants, ice cream, confectionery, soda water and lemonade stands, all kinds of games, dancing, beautiful summer theater seating 2,200, Old Mill, Circle Swing, Gigantic Forest Toboggan, Loop the Loop, Pony Track, Electric Auto attractions, Johnstown Flood, Wonderland, two Carrousals or Merry-Go-Rounds, Double Whirl, Shoot the Chutes, Fair Japan, Gigantic Whirlwind, Figure Eight, and all kinds of concessions and souvenier booths usually found in places of this character.

This will be the most magnificent gathering of the proletariat of Ohio ever held. Advertising posters will appear in due time. Let every Socialist in Ohio boost this event and paralyze the plutes by a demonstration that will be unique, massive and effective.

STATE SOCIALISM NOT WANTED.

State Socialism is not what we seek. Government ownership of railroads, for instance, when the capitalist class is the government, would simply mean that the railroads would be used chiefly for the benefit of the capitalist class. The workers use the roads, ordinarily, merely in traveling in search of employment. The capitalists use them for the shipment of commodities, and while industry remains in the hands of the capitalist class the railroads would be simply an appendage to the privately owned plants.

What we must have is social ownership of what is now called capital. Nothing else will be satisfactory.

While it was known before, this investigation has brought again forcibly to the attention of all citizens the fact that capitalism spells murder. Those eminent gentlemen who own the trusts have not stopped at robbery, at murder, or at swindling of all kinds. They have used every social power for the purpose of robbing society. They have corrupted the government, prostituted the press and turned the courts into an instrument of oppression. Under government supervision, it is true, there would be economy for the corporations. They would not then be under the necessity of buying the "honor" of this or that statesman, because all would be powerless to interfere with the operations of the trusts. Today, while the capitalist class is the government, there is plenty of opportunity to interfere with the operations of capitalists. Under the form that is sought this opportunity would be entirely gone. Absolutely, in every department, the trusts would be protected, fostered and fattened through government supervision.

But now is the time for the Socialists to fight as they never fought before. A change is imperative and is almost here. If the capitalists can compass it the change will be one in which they will have greater license to operate and in which the public will be deprived of its last chance to interfere. Or the change will be one in which a real, worthy beginning is made toward the conversion of capital to social property.

The capitalists, through their ready compliance with orders that pretend to mean much, but really mean nothing, are lining up their forces for a desperate battle in the Presidential election of 1912. The old issues will not be so much to the front as formerly. The capitalists know it, and they are seeking now to remove from the field this question of trust domination.

It is the duty of the Socialists to make the fight a straight one. Under government supervision, as under present conditions, private ownership of social utilities would be the cause of all the crimes, all the misery and all the discontent.

So down with private ownership.

People have been aroused to a consideration of the question and they should be taught to consider it right. They can not consider it right without an understanding of the Socialist program, and every agency of the party should be set vigorously at work in this campaign of education.

Don't let the trusts get to cover through this new dodge of government supervision. It is the most brazen and vicious attempt made yet to turn the whole force of the government to the protection of enslaving private property.

SOCIALISM AND EDUCATION.

(Written for The Columbus Socialist.)

When the workers have solved the problem of the bread, and humanity is freed from hunger and the fear of hunger, then we have also freed the human intellect.

There is no standard by which we can measure the possible achievements of the mind. Our own Comrade Joseph Dietzgen taught that the brain was the organ of knowledge, and, since its function is to know, no limitations are to be placed upon its possibility.

When all human minds are free to think, and each one can profit by the other's accomplishment; when, in short, knowledge is socialized, then the real education of humanity will begin.

Under such a condition originality would be encouraged. The public schools will be training places to give each child possession of his own powers.

Self-expression and social service will be the twin goals of education, and the two will by no means conflict. Commerce now demands that the child's mind shall be crammed with mathematics in the early grades. Under Socialism the child's psychology shall be the determining factor in laying out the subjects to be studied.

The child shall be the important citizen of the new state.

Frederick Guy Strickland.

If some of your ancestors were fools, knaves or tricksters, that is no reason why you should follow their footsteps. That should interest the workingmen—he should vote to change the conditions that were left by his ancestors.

The men who make the loudest noise are not always the greatest patriots.

To be poor is a crime; to become rich by crime is forgivable. That's capitalistic ethics.

THE MAYOR AND THE INDUSTRIAL MARTYR—"GET ORGANIZED" DICKERT, AND "GET THE HABIT" BOND.

George B. Dickert never was a member of the Civic Federation. George was ineligible, because he never possessed a dress suit. George Dickert was just a common, ordinary citizen, with a mind set in one direction and its goal was industrial freedom. George Dickert saw an ex-mayor and his political associates organizing their heelers so they could better their conditions economically. George noticed that Mayor Bond and his henchmen were only organizing their particular class. So George said, "I'll 'get the habit,'" and George started out to organize the city employes into a labor union. This caused a panic in the "HIGH GRADES" camp. A council of war was held and George Dickert was denounced as an "undesirable citizen" and plans laid to deport him, by threats, from the city. Next day the police were ordered to arrest George Dickert, and he was arrested at his home. He was taken before the Police court judge and charged with being a "pauper, without visible means of support. The man indicted for legislative bribery, Ex-Mayor Bond, appeared in police court against him. By orders of the now indicted Bond, Dickert was hounded all over the city, and finally was made to report to the PROBATION OFFICER every week until ordered not to do so. At this time the mayor's secretary, a carpet-bagger from Cleveland, Ohio, was being summoned to appear in court in conjunction with a claim for debts, and yet this cowardly persecutor, C. A. Bond, continued to hound HONEST GEORGE DICKERT.

EX-MAYOR BOND CONTINUES TO "GET THE HABIT"—AND HE LIKEWISE GETS INDICTED FOR LEGISLATIVE BRIBERY.

When C. A. Bond was mayor of Columbus he advertised for $70,000. This was proclaimed on billboards all over the city. [illegible] so many hold-up men on our streets. Also articles about the money stringency. In spite of this fact, about six weeks after, Mr. Bond notified the citizens that he had received the $70,000. Some said the mayor had discovered a gold mine, While others hinted that George Dickert had left town and the mayor had been paid $70,000 for the service rendered in helping the city to get rid of this honest undesirable citizen. When the mayor left Columbus he went to Cleveland, Ohio. The next we hear is that Mr. C. A. Bond is manufacturing a rotary tooth brush, invented by a convict. Lawyers sometimes talk about "hypothetical" cases. Ex-Mayor Bond said "Dickert and his kind are a menace to the community." By "kind" he alluded to the Socialists. The Socialists are undesirables. They have too good a memory for some people. We have a habit of putting two and two together. Which was the most desirable citizen: the convict inventor, the indicted ex-mayor or POOR HONEST GEORGE DICKERT?

PREACHERS MUST HAVE PRAYED TO THE WRONG SIDE OF THE HOUSE.

The Ohio Legislature paid the Columbus Ministerial Association $200 for offering up daily prayers. Considering that many of the ministers are always preaching to the workers about giving the employers "a fair day's work," we would suggest that the ministers survey the grand jury legislative indictments. The results of their labors have not been very beneficial to the people. To be terse, while the ministers were praying in the legislative chambers some of the legislators must have been preying on those interested in the passage of some of the bills before the body. We imagine that some of the indicted "Judases" would give several two hundred dollars if they could only be saved from the wrath of the PEOPLE.

BOOSTERS AND BUSTERS.

Yes, Mr. Worker, the gang that gave you that BOOSTER button brought the militia here to bust up the Columbus street car strike, and then made you pay the bill. Sure, there is an election coming on. Don't wash your children's faces, workers. The GOOD BUSINESS MEN will lick the dirt off the children, sure. The capitalist will kiss your whole family for your VOTE. After the election, he will KICK you out of his office. And then you will go home and kick the dog, and bawl out your wife because things are so high on market. Your wife, mother and sister have no vote. Imagine lambs singing hymns of praise to hungry lions. Imagine WORKERS wearing the UNION BUSTER BOOSTER BUTTONS, expecting to change this parasitical system by so doing.

Still Smashing Machines.

(By A. M. Simons.)

More than a century ago a mob of English weavers went from factory to factory smashing the looms and spinning frames that were depriving them of their jobs. Those weavers were ignorant. They had been barred from access to the sources of knowledge. They were maddened by anger. They were in the desperation of despair. Men and women under such conditions may be excused if their actions are not reasoned.

They have no time to reason. They could know nothing of the social evolution of which these machines were a part. They could ont have been expected to sacrifice their lives and the lives of their children for the sake of social evolution if they had understood it.

A century has gone by since then. Millions of machines that might have lightened the toil of the workers have come and brought profits to the idle. Labor has gained little by the introduction of machines, but it has learned the uselessness of trying to smash them.

A new machine, the trust, now threatens a section of the class of profit takers. A more perfect instrument for doing work—a better tool—it is displacing those who depend upon competition.

Now, as in the eighteenth century, there is a class whose position in society is being destroyed by this new machine. This time it is the little competing capitalists who see their profits in danger. They see their "chance to rise" into the class of great capitalists transformed into a certainty of falling into the class of workers.

Just as those desperate workers in the factory towns of England sought to drive society back into the stage of handicraft with their rocks and clubs, so these profit-hungry exploiters are trotting up and down the country flinging legislative pebbles and swinging Supreme Court clubs and executive big sticks at this new machine.

Generations of capitalists and wise men have laughed at the pitiful story of the starving weavers smashing the machines of Lancashire.

It is the worker's turn to laugh.

Labor may well shout with mirth.

In the twentieth century the Supreme Court of the United States "smashed" the Standard Oil and the Tobacco, Trust and is strutting up and down the avenues of business patting these gigantic industrial machines upon the wrist and shouting peans of victory with each stroke.

A century ago the capitalists laughed at the starving workers and took possession of the machines and used them to extract profits for the few.

In the immediate future the workers will take possession of the trusts and use them to satisfy the wants of all.

Thus society moves on over machine-smashers and trust-busters.

Ghent's Figures Challenged.

W. J. Ghent, the well-known author and statistician who is acting as private secretary for Congressman Victor L. Berger, has compiled a list showing that the Socialists have elected (besides a member of Congress) 18 members of legislatures, 21 mayors and 228 other officials. The lists is given by states and we are grieved to note that Ohio appears among the missing, along with Alabama, South Carolina and a few other jungles. It's up to Secretary Storck to wipe this stigma from the bright escutcheon of the Buckeye State—to lift us out of the slough of despond, as it were—and show Ghent where his figures are unreliable and subject to radical revision. If our memory serves us correctly, it was the better part of Storck's household, the same being Mrs. Anna Storck, who was elected to the Lorain School Board nearly three years ago and was the first woman in the United States to win on a Socialist ticket. Furthermore, Socialists have been elected in Conneaut, Elmwood Place, Columbus, and quite a number of places in the mining districts. This fall, from present indications, Ohio will come down on that Ghent list in a manner that will cause that figure manipulator to imagine that he was hit by a tornado. If he will train his telescope on about latitude 88, longitude 80, the evening of November 7, as will observe a bright red sky, which will mean that there is some conflagration between Lake Erie and the Ohio River. Likewise the sun will rise the following morning with an unusual red glow, a sure sign of the dawn of the co-operative commonwealth.—Cleveland Citizen.

An Easy Wheel.

(By Gertrude Breslau Hunt.)

I live in Norwood Park, a suburb of Chicago, eleven miles from the heart of the city, on a branch of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway, one of the many roads owned by the Vanderbilts. One mile north of Norwood Park, and farther from the city, there is a cemetery where the Polish and Bohemian poor of Chicago bury their dead.

One bitter day last January as I alighted from the two o'clock train from the city I saw a woman sitting on the wooden bench in front of the station. Her face looked as though prematurely aged by poverty, drudgery and suffering, her shoulders stooped, but these things I did not notice until later. That which caught and held my attention was the little unstained pine box which she held upon her knees. It did not need any gift of second sight to know that box contained the body of her dead baby. She seemed to see nothing about her, but stared at the little box with a dull apathy that told of an exhaustion of grief more terrible than tears. The hands she clasped about the box were brown, seamed and calloused by hard work. She was alone. At last I ventured to touch her and speak to her: "Madam, will you please tell me where you live?"

"I live on Throop street, near Eighteenth, in Chicago, Lady."

"Will you tell me what work you do?"

"I wash and scrub when I can get the work to do."

I said, "Have you no husband, that you should be alone in such an hour as this?"

"Oh, yes, Lady, I have a good husband, but he is away from home just now."

Prostitution in Chicago became so alarming that the Church Federation got busy and prevailed on the mayor to appoint a commission to investigate. That commission found the chief cause to be lack of employment and lack of sufficient wages paid to women and girls. Still, the commission found that the employers could not realize profits if they paid more for work, and reported this phase of the situation as "almost baffling." The Austin Statesman says: "There is something very serious the matter with a nation which finds itself face to face with such conditions as the Chicago commission discovered."—Farmers' Journal, Abilene, Texas.

Tragedy of A $3 Life.

The tragedy of a death such as scores of girls met recently in a New York factory fire trap is great, but for many of the victims the tragedy of living was just as great. Here is a paragraph taken from the pitiful story of the identification of the dead:

A cutter identified his sweetheart by their engagement ring and her purse. It contained her week's pay, $3.

Imagine, if you can, a young woman fighting for an existence in New York city on a pittance of $3 a week! Imagine her daily starving, her daily crushing of desire, her daily killing of hope!

What an awakening in the morning from a night of troubled sleep on a miserable pallet that gave no rest to weary flesh and bones; not an awakening to fresh air and sunshine and comfortable surroundings, but to squalor and dirt, narrow walls that barely give space to a bed box and a broken chair. What a breakfast must be hers! A cup of tea warmed over a smoky lamp and dry bread—no more probably. What a toilet! A pitiful effort to make a few worn and faded garments look presentable, and then a glance into a broken bit of mirror at a figure so unattractive and a face so unsatisfied. There follows the long tramp to work, sometimes through cold, sometimes through heat, sometimes wet; then a hard day's toil, 10 hours of bending over fine garments for the prosperous, and then a painful tramp back "home" again to another scant meal and another night's weary sleep.

And so day after day the struggle goes on to keep body and soul together, and the soul clean, on a pitiful $3 a week. It dare not stop—not even for sickness. It must go on. And with it all there is an everlasting yearning for something better that is never appeased.

The tragedy of such living is as great as the tragedy of any dying. Sometimes in the years to come men will look back upon these present days of ours, and marvel that we ever believed that we dealt justly and uprightly with one another.—Haverhill Gazette.

Socialism is wrong because it will make the brotherhood of man what was intended instead of this dog-eat-dog system. But you know if we had such a brotherhood it would interfere with the living of the fellows who now oppose Socialism. So you see it is only a bread and butter question after all—but the other fellows want all the butter.

Lack of Understanding.

Much of the strife and chaos and bitterness existing in the world today is because men do not understand each other.

In the past men were divided by race, creed and language.

The human animal will fight anything beyond his own mental grasp.

The Christian does not understand how an agnostic may be moral, clean and upright. The agnostic is suspicious of the Christian, hence, while both Christian or agnostic may be working for righteousness, and justice for all men, they allow prejudice to divide the forces of progress.

Good men of all classes and creeds and of no creed desire the uplift of mankind.

Why does a good Christian look with suspicion on a good Jew, and both despise the efforts of an agnostic that works for the right?

Men may have creeds, but morality and truth are not the sole property of any particular set or creed.

Truth, justice and morality abide in all creeds, and often in the hearts of men of no creed.

Justice practiced by a Jew is still justice.

Truth spoken by an agnostic is still truth.

And morality may be practiced by Christian, Jew or Gentile.

The forces of evil are united. The corporations that rob the people en masse and divekeepers all vote the same ticket.

The boulevard and the slum go hand in hand.

The legislator that accepts a bribe owes his election to the political boss in the pay of big business, big brothels and the goats and owls of the under world.

The good people are aghast at enormous crimes committed.

There is a wild howl, and then they crawl back into their little snug shells.

On election day the politicians, the boodlers, grafters, gamblers, divekeepers and hypocritical business men all line up, shout reform, a cry that catches the ear of the stupidly blind moralist, and he, too, votes her straight.

Only a small group of men, relatively, see the game and know it. This bunch will be found in the Socialist party. They are not shouting reform, they know better. They want to revolutionize a system that makes gamblers, prostitutes and grafters.

And then some sanctimonious person, without any investigation whatever, says that Socialism means free love, anarchy and destruction of religion.

Thus because there are few Socialists, and Socialists that are freethinkers, sanctimonious ignoramusses allow their prejudices to overcome their good sense, and they line up with the tenderloin.

Now take it from me, parson, there are no gamblers and divekeepers or bribe-givers in the Socialist party.

The powers that prey are all in the Democratic and Republican parties.

Every man that has sense enough to pound sand in a rat hole knows that.

Why do you who pray to God line up with hell's own?

Why do you vote the ticket that gets its sustenance from the rich robber barons of the boulevard, and the rat holes of the underworld?

Why can't you good people see the game?

Are you deaf, dumb and blind?

How long are you going to divide your forces to the devil's own delight?—Memphis Social Democrat.

SOCIALIST VOTE DOUBLED.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA, June 7.—At the special election in the Ninth Iowa District for the Walter L. Smith seat in Congress, the Socialists doubled their vote. Their candidate received 800 votes as against 400 at the last election. Judge W. B. Green, progressive Republican, was elected over F. F. Cleveland, Democrat. Full returns show that Green has about 1,400 plurality over Cleveland in a district with a normal Republican plurality of 4,000 to 5,000.

Nine Men Now Mold Our Laws at Will.

In Oil Decision Supreme Court Hit Some Fond Dreams.

N. A. Richardson, in San Bernardino (Cal.) Sun.

First—It legalizes the trust. All restraint is removed from "good trusts;" and the "badness" of all others is determined by the degree of "unreasonableness" in the conduct of their affairs. What constitutes "unreasonableness" is wholly undefined and left to future determination, in each individual case, by this same court of so elastic opinions. This is a matter that must vary with time. The growth of trust institutions has been such that what a few years ago seemed a monster is today a very amicable creature. What is today a Hydra will in a short time be a nymph.

Second—This decision, in advance, renders ineffective any act of Congress that seeks to impose a prison sentence upon trust magnates. The "unreasonableness" of the assumed culprit's conduct must first be established and passed upon by this same court before said culprit is even subject to civil punishment. In such conditions a billionaire certainly has little to fear from prison bars regardless of what Congress may enact. Let none be deceived by assuming that this result was not a part of the program.

Judicial Usurpation.

Third—The decision embodies absolutely the usurpation of the legislative function of government by the judicial branch. On this point the words of Associate Justice Harlan are superfluous. It will be apparent even to a wayfarer if the aged jurist had not told us so. The legislative body, Congress, did not insert the word "unreasonable" into the law; and as evidence that they did not intend any such construction being placed upon it they have for more than a dozen years, and in the face of repeated and persistent effort, refused that word admission to that statute. The court deliberately put it there—deliberately amended a law—deliberately enacted a new law that Congress persistently refused to enact.

Fourth—This decision, in itself, embodies and enacts an amendment to the Constitution of the United States. Thus these nine men have usurped the supremest function of any government institution, the right to modify the fundamental law of a people. This function has heretofore been assumed to be vested in two-thirds of Congress and three-fourths of the legislatures of all the states. Judge Harlan tells us that the court has accomplished the thing in merely deciding a law suit. And as was said in the preceding paragraph, Judge Harlan's diagnosis of the matter was not necessary to its easy discernment. The constitutional change is found in the conferring of direct legislative powers upon the judiciary—the self-clothing of this court by a function from which it is barred by the Constitution. Here then is a legal precedent under which the court may enact as it sees fit, and there is now no power to gainsay their authority. No more revolutionary constitutional amendment could be conceived than the one under discussion, and none more dangerous to democratic institutions. Is this what President Taft is applauding as a victory for good government?

Fifth—It places the government of this nation in the hands of a hierarchy as absolute as has ever ruled any nation of earth. It is a centralization of power as far removed from democracy as anything of which one can conceive. If this decision is to stand and the judges are to remain unimpeached, where is the thing to stop? What can place a limit upon the usurpation? And mark you, it is obligatory upon every court of this nation to follow the precedents established by the supreme tribunal. What it does, they not only may do, but must do. Any attorney will tell you that there is nothing in our national Constitution conferring upon our courts the power to declare a legislative enactment unconstitutional. That function was first usurped by our Supreme Court, and is now a regular thing in every court in the land. Its first exercise produced a sensation second to none other in our history. But the precedent stood the test of criticism and is now recognized as fundamental in our institutions. What is to be the future history of this one?

WISCONSIN NOTES.

The two Anti-Socialist aldermen who debated in the West Side High School on the subject, "Has the Socialist Administration Made Good?" and were defeated, have suddenly decided that it is wrong to have political discussions in our public schools.

This is like the small boy who decided that it was wicked to fight on Sunday, when he began to get the worst of the fight.

These two Anti-Socialist aldermen have accordingly brought charges against the West Side Neighborhood Club for arranging the debate in a school-house. It is very funny that the aldermen did not have any scruples when they accepted the invitation to debate. Their objections were evidently an after-thought.

But the purpose of the charges is, of course, to close the school buildings for any further discussions on similar subjects, to free the Anti-Socialists thus from the risk of any further challenges to debates of this sort and at the same time throw discredit on the social centers. These, like every other means of popular enlightenment, hav worked for the benefit of the Social-Democratic party in Milwaukee. The Anti-Socialists would like not only to close the schoolhouses to the social center work, but they would like to close the schoolhouses altogether! Witness the Anti-Socialist vote against the school bonds at the last Milwaukee election.

The Socialist city attorney has brought suit against the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry. for $98,000 for repairs on the Sixteenth street viaduct.

The Milwaukee City Council has also ordered the street car company to begin to pave within its tracks in ten days. This work before has always been done by the city at its own expense. If the street car company refuses to do this, the city attorney will bring suit, with excellent chances of winning the case. This will mean a saving to the city of $114,000.

Thus while the Milwaukee Socialists have as yet no legal power to substitute collective ownership for the ownership by corporations, they will at least make the corporations help to pay for some of the big things which we are planning.

The Socialist administration of Milwaukee has reduced by $65,000 the city debt of $166,064.49, inherited from the last administration. At this rate the debt will be reduced to nothing before the end of the year.

The object of the Socialist administration, of course, is not merely economy. But ecohomy is necessary in order to have funds for the great undertakings which the Socialists design for the benefit of the people. Besides, all this is a telling answer to the ridiculous charge that has gone out through all the capitalist press that the Milwaukee administration is wasting money and that the Socialists don't know how to run a city!

They know how to run a city without contractors' and politicians' graft—that is their crime. And for that terrible offense the capitalist papers will never forgive them.

E. H. THOMAS,
State Secretary.

OKLAHOMA CITY TO THE FRONT.

Official figures to hand of the recent municipal election in Oklahoma City show that the Socialist vote jumped from 350 six months ago to 1,800. Oscar Ameringer writes that a majority of the union men in Oklahoma City have joined the Socialist party, and that seats will be won in the next legislature without a doubt.

SOCIALISM AT PANAMA.

There is one place on the Western Hemisphere where prices have not gone up, where no shoddy goods are sold, where the Government runs department stores, bakeries, railroads, amusement halls, and Sunday excursions.

In this place the most perfect safety devices are in use. The workers who are injured receive compensation, without suing for damages, and no one suggests that there is any graft connected with these things.

This remarkable place is under the flag of the United States. It is on the Canal Zone, where the United States Government is digging the "Big Ditch."

While the statesmen at home are declaring that such things are impracticable and would destroy incentive, they are being carried out as the only means of accomplishing the biggest job in the world.

According to Albert Edwards, who describes these things in The Coming Nation for May 27, Socialism is applied further in the Canal Zone than any other place on earth. To be sure, it lacks the important element of democracy, but if this were added and the labor was expended in the production of consumable goods, it would be a fair forecast of what Socialists say is coming in the United States.

The history is illustrated with photographs.

GENERAL SOCIALIST NEWS.

Despite the sweltering heat Debs' meetings in Pennsylvania were record-breakers. The daily papers show that wherever he spoke the auditoriums were filled to overflowing. Something is going to happen in that boss-ruled, poverty-stricken state.

A big victory was gained in the canton of Basel, Switzerland, by the Socialists, who elected 47 men to Parliament and became the largest party in that body, although not in the majority. The gains of the Socialists have caused a great deal of apprehension in old-party political circles.

Now there is a Socialist member in in the Oklahoma Legislature. State Senator P. J. Yeager, of the Tulsa district, has left the Democratic party and applied for membership in the Socialist party. Yeager's move created a big sensation, as he is a very popular man. Things are moving fast when people in office are flopping.

Dr. R. D. Williams, elected Mayor of Denver, Kan., on the Citizens ticket several weeks ago, has made application to join the Socialist party. He was socialistic inclined for some time and put up by the Anti-Socialists to keep out of the Reds. Now the latter are giving the other fellows the laugh.

Socialists came within less than a thousand votes of carrying the big city of Stuttgart, Germany, for Mayor. Not only is the right of suffrage restricted, but the old parties had to combine to keep the workers out of power. The Berlin Vorwaerts says the old politicians also had to employ "American methods" to win, which probably means that the distributed boodle and promises of offices judiciously.

Oh, yes! The open shoppers are a big factor when they dare to come out in the open and make an honest fight. At Palo Alto, Cal., there was a contest for the Mayorality. There were six candidates in the field, including John F. Parkinson, a "plute who stood straight for open shop. He got 144 votes, all from the avenue. There were about 1,800 votes cast for the other candidates and Parkinson come in as the tail of the procession.

The Czar still wants Federenko, the Russian Socialist who was imprisoned in Canada several months ago, but got free by one of the courts owing to the agitation of the working people. Russian authorities notified Canadian officials to arrest and hold Federenko, as his case will be appealed to the highest court in Great Britain. But Federenko has come to the United States and the Canadian officials so informed the Russian tyrants, and now probably Uncle Sam will be called upon to act as a bloodhound for the Russian Czar.

If Socialism destroys the initiative, read what the "Coming Nation" has to say about the form of government prevailing along the Canal Zone. Men live better and enjoy more humane conditions than anywhere in the States, and their measure of liberty is not interfered with by some corporation judge. The success of the governmens on the Canal Zone is due to the co-operation existing. While this sort of paternalism does not appeal to profit seekers, yet it furnishes a lesson to the working class that should not be lost. We would advise you to send for a copy of the publication and read what Allen Edwards has to say. Some old foggy notions you now possess will be dispelled.

CARRY LOS ANGELES.

For the Workers in Nineteen Hundred.

By Miss Tupper Maynard, in Coming Nation.

The above slogan has been in many mouths, and on countless bright red buttons in the southern California metropolis for many months. Enthusiasm and badges, however, do not alone win victories. They represent the steam in the engine, but afford no guarantee that there is brain stuff in the cab that will insure carrying the train to the desired destination.

On Sunday, May 21st, a City Convention was held in Los Angeles which proved that this condition for a successful campaign for the election in November is also abundantly present.

A ticket was nominated as follows:

Mayor, Job Harriman, Socialist and lawyer.

City Council: Fred T. Wheeler, President of the Carpenters' Union, No. 158.

C. F. Grove, Business Agent, Machinists' Union.

T. W. Waittie, Organizer Afro-American League.

Frank B. Wolfe, Newspaper writer.

A. J. Mooney, Secretary Los Angeles Trades Council.

Alexander Kana, Member San Pedro Longshoreman's Union.

Wm. Vetter, Member German Branch, Socialist Party.

T. W. Williams, Minister and Socialist Lecturer.

Dan Regan, Member Moulders' Union.

City Attorney, Edward Tuttle, lawyer and former teacher of law.

Auditor, Geo. W. Downing, Real Estate Dealer.

Assessor, A. N. Salyer, Piano Maker.

Job Harriman has been active in the Socialist party for twenty years or more. As an attorney the local unions have come to know, and trust him as they trust no one else outside their own ranks. They have learned that he is not only to be trusted in what they ask him to do, but that he thinks with brains formed in working class moulds. They have learned that he can see more clearly than they what concerns them and understands what they "are up against" before they realise it themselves.

Gradually they have come to see that the best part of their traits upon which they have so long defended are due, not to the man, but to the Socialism. They have discovered that Socialism trains to just that loyalty and gives that working class philosophy which brings understanding of today's events.

Forces of Socialist-Unionists have taught the same truth until now the Socialist in California has the proud consciousness that every unionist trusts him as he does a brother unionist.

"Thou knowest not what argument thy life to thy neighbor's creed hath lent."

Emerson's lines fit more than one form of vital propaganda.

The man first nominated on the Council, Fred T. Wheeler, is another whose Socialism has been preaching eloquently for years. He has been in them as one of them. The Carpenters' Union, of which he is the head, is the largest in Southern California.

The other union men on the ticket are as enthusiastic Socialists as they are loyal in their industrial organizations.

F. W. Whittie is colored. He was nominated not only because he represents a people who are, many of them, of the working class, but even more because the party was glad to make known in their way its complete freedom from color prejudice. Not a question was raised as to the nomination. This is a matter-of-course to those who understand Socialist principles, but is worth noting when it is remembered how this people have been relegated to the blacking of boots and cleaning of spittoons in other parties.

F. E. Wolfe was, until recently, editor of the Los Angeles Herald. He, with Harriman and Cantrell, served as the public committee of the state party in the legislature last winter where their newspaper experience served the workers in countless ways.

He was the actual author of the Eight-Hour Day for women recently gone into effect in this state and which has not only enormously improved the conditions for working women, but given all labor a tremendous homage in extending the shorter day.

Did a mass convention of red-card Socialists show themselves able in a one-day meeting to canvass the situation, find just the right one for each place, consider the thousand and one items that needed to be studied and reach a conclusion so satisfactorily?

Hardly.

The day of miracles has been over for some time.

One would need to believe in a special providence of a marvelous brand to expect haphazard nomination from the floor or committee acting-while-you wait to effect intelligent, well-balanced results.

In this convention there was no mystery and no miracle and no hidden wires.

The party had used its brains. Weeks before the Socialist City Central Committee had appointed a committee of five to confer with a like committee appointed by the Union Labor Political Club. The ten were to act as a nomination committee.

This committee gave the most careful heed to every suggested consideration, always aiming to keep in mind, not only the representative characters from the worker's viewpoint of earth, but their ability to make good when elected.

The report of this committee (of nomination) was made to City Central Committee and published two weeks prior to the convention, allowing ample time for consideration by the membership.

The convention received the committee's report for what it was worth. Every red-card Socialist in the city was eligible to membership in the convention and Labor Temple Auditorium was filled with men and women who realized their responsibility. They knew that, thanks to the capitalist powers that be, this election was to be, not only of significance to the local and national party, but a crucial factor in the great international struggle of the working class.

They realized that the eyes of every thoughtful Socialist the world over was upon them hoping, almost painfully, that the horse sense of Los Angeles Socialists would be equal to their ardor and the grandeur of their cause.

The committee's report was kept in mind, but each nomination was made separately and independently. In most cases rival candidates were presented, and in two instances the action of the convention differed from the suggestion made.

One wise decision of the convention was to postpone the adoption of the platform until later in the campaign. A committee was appointed to prepare a platform to report to another mass convention.

In the meantime, the platform of the National party will answer the purpose. It was not thought best to formulate too early the statements as to local issues.

Tactical advantage is worth considering and the nondescript "reform" parties of this city are fond of purloining (for platform purposes only) the more pleasing items of Socialist platforms.

All in all the Los Angeles City Convention proved that, not only is the time ripe for Socialist victory, but that Socialists are ready to meet opportunity with clear-headed, practical efficiency.

THE NEW LANDMARK—WE HAVE THE ORGANIZATION, NOW FOR VICTORY FOR THE WORKING CLASS.

It's strange that in spite of the fact that we rant about the advance of modern science in the development of cities, nevertheless we pay a great deal of respect to the buildings erected a century back. They are known as LANDMARKS. Often we hear men say, "They don't build like that today." They were put together to stay.

The Socialist party is laying the foundation stones of a new building. It's to be the home of real democracy. Let us beware lest we build on a sand hill. This building must have a foundation of rock, because it's to be the landmark of the House of Truth, wherein was sheltered the cradle of Hope.

The Socialist party is made up of men and women who believe in self-sacrifice and self-denial. They present themselves at the altars of capitalism, ready to die for the gospel of Human Liberty, wishing for no other reward but the right of the army of emancipation to move a few more steps onward—yes, upward.

In the past men and women have been slaughtered in the arena by wild beasts, burnt at the stake, had their limbs torn apart on the torture rack, and beheaded for the cause of liberty. Men and women are today suffering in tenements, infirmaries, prisons, and the streets because industrial tyranny yet exists. The blacklist has taken the place of the headsman's block. The wolves yet prowl around our legislative bodies, protesting against all laws that seek to preserve the dignity and virtue of women. Like the beasts of the jungle, that grin with beastly humor at the result of their fiendish growls, while women are being burnt up in unsanitary factories, these human vultures are gathered round a banquet table telling the people's representatives what to and what not to do. Like wolves, they seldom prowl in daylight. Like poisonous serpents, they sting and retire. Such is the battle scene today. How shall we combat these monsters? First let us strengthen our lines of communication. What are they? One of them is this paper. You can help this section by getting subscribers. Second, we must become an active working body. Our central body must be a Clearing House and not a Laundry. To do business right we must be impartial and practical in all things. The central body must be a Chamber of Consultation. The exchange of opinion is one of the essential features of democracy. Third, we are engaged in an industrial battle. Military warfare, economic and political warfare, arise from the same cause, viz., the desire for wealth, for better social conditions. This being the fact, it becomes necessary for the Socialists to be active organizers. We must have a close line of communication with each branch. While we have no need of being suspicious of our fellow-men we must make our principles safe against the attacks of the enemy. Far better that the party go down in defeat than a principle be dishonored by fusion or any other disreputable schemes. The fight is on. The enemy is moving forward. Don't be a coward, wearing a BOOSTER BUTTON on your coat. That is the sign of Capitalism. Mr. Worker, are you going to allow the Columbus Chamber of Commerce to bait their hooks with your flesh and blood? If not, join the Socialist party NOW. We want to build a noble Landmark, comrades.

A SURVEY OF THE LAST OHIO LEGISLATURE.

The Ohio Federation of Labor has given the state membership a full account of the measures that were introduced in the interest of no particular class, but rather toward preventing pauperdom, which generally results from national indifference toward preserving the lives and limbs of the workers.

While the employing class are always berating the unions, charging that they are breeding "class hatred" and a desire for "special privileges," the action of their last lobby proves that they are the guilty parties to such crimes, and not the unions.

One of the employers' recent organs rejoices because graft has been discovered in the Ohio Legislature and the guilty parties brought to justice. Yet these practices are the results of the demand of Mr. Big Business for special legal loopholes, so that they could throttle their competitors and yet live inside the law instead of a prison cell. When we consider that it was possible for a chosen few HIGH GRADE CITIZENS to take upon themselves to purchase "guns and ammunition" to menace the rest of the citizens and then to have these same immaculate, sanctified, human vultures compel their victims to pay for the articles their oppressors have failed to return to the state, surely we have a right to ask the question, Who owns the State Treasury, the people or the Columbus Chamber of Commerce?

But these were the acts of yesterday, and what could we expect when we allowed hungry judicial wolves to be our legislative guardians? The paramount issue now is to prepare for the future. Let us proceed to lay plans to place men in the legislature as workers who will voice labor's demands, and not representatives with union cards in their pockets who sit silent while Ex-Secretary of State Daniel J. Ryan and Ex-Governor James Campbell denounced Woman's Eigh Hour Bill. When Ex-Governor Campbell was denouncing telephone girls as "GUM CHEWERS," adding that they had nothing else to do but say, "LINE WAS BUSY," Senators Green and Reynolds sat silent in their seats in spite of the fact that the Democratic ex-governor loudly proclaimed the fact that he was standing on the Democratic platform. This was one of the disgraceful acts of the session. If these two veneered labor representatives consider party principles above the rights of womanhood, or if again they dare not make a sacrifice, never mind how personal it may be, they are unworthy of being classed as representatives of labor.

Brethren, let us abolish this system of legislative beggary. Would you allow a fox to watch your chickens and expect to find them on the outside of the fox? Then why trust to the tools of capitalism? If you desire justice, you must at all times and places be represented by your own class. Then it will not be necessary for your misrepresentatives to be marked "ABSENT" the day an important bill is to come up, for fear of offending PARTY PRINCIPLES and OBLIGATIONS. To be plain, let your representatives be labor men and not capitalistic-pledged DEMOCRATS and REPUBLICANS.

CONFESSIONS OF A SOCIALIST.

Socialism will kill all incentive—for vice and crime.

Socialism will destroy—prostitution.

Socialism will destroy our American institutions—of graft, bribery and corruption.

Socialism wants to divide up—liberty and happiness among all the people.

Socialism will abolish the constitution—of Morgan, Rockefeller & Co.

Socialism is an enemy of religion—which sanctions war and other legalized forms of murder.

Socialism is a grave menace—to the present economic order, which gives to an idle few, the capitalist class, that which is produced by the brawn and brain of an overwhelming majority, the working class.

DIRECT ELECTION OF SENATORS.

The federal constitution is to be amended, at least the states, through their legislatures, will be given the opportunity to do so.

The United States Senate passed, by a vote of 64 to 24, the so-called Bristow resolution providing for the election of United States senators directly by the people.

This is a decided victory for the people. It will take the election of senators out of the state legislatures and will make it more difficult for organized wealth to elect United States senators.

It takes three-fourths of the states to ratify the proposition. Some of the states, especially the Southern Democratic, may reject the amendment because it retains in the federal government the control of the manner of elections.

The people realize, more than ever before, the value of direct legislation and are beginning to assert their rights.

The earnest work of the Socialists for a true democracy is having its effect.

The direct election of senators is only a step toward direct legislation, but it is a step and shows the trend of events.

ATTEMPT TO HANG CHICAGO LABOR OFFICIALS.

The following dispatch from Chicago tells its own story:

Detective Guy Biddinger, who aided Burns in the kidnaping of the Structural Ironworkers' secretary in connection with the Los Angeles labor war, is accused of approaching Harry Higgins, a slugger, on trial for an alleged assault of workingmen in the Heisen Building with a proposition to sign a "confession" to fasten indictments for conspiracy to murder Altman and Gentleman on John R. Alpine, vice president of the American Federation of Labor and president of the Plumbers' national organization, and other high labor officials. Higgins was prepared to make this charge in open court Tuesday, but his case was continued. He is said to have gone to State's Attorney Wayman and revealed the attempt to bribe him, but that official has done nothing to probe the charge.

Be optimistic. Sure thing. When you are hungry, imagine you are prosperous. And when you are prosperous, vote with the political party that will make you hungry again.

QUESTION BOX.

Suppose the nation—that is, all the people—owned the trusts, the land, the sources of supply, the means of distribution, everything, could the nation—the public—manage the industries as well as private owners do now?

Would men having the ability to manage great enterprises exercise their energies and powers to their highest capacity for the benefit of all the people like they do now, when large benefits accrue to themselves?

H. C. J.,
Cleveland, Ohio.

In supposing the nation, or all the people, to own everything you are supposing the existence of Communism and not Socialism. Socialists advocate the collective ownership of things used collectively, and do so only that the things privately used may be distributed more equitably—that is, among the people who produce.

You overlook the fact that most of the management of actual production is now entrusted to hired help, which has no more interest in results than can be realized in the wages or salary received. Suppose we take J. D. Rockefeller" as a brilliant example of an industrial manager. Do you suppose that Mr. Rockefeller wastes any of his precious time inventing oil-drilling or oil-refining machinery, or that his peronal attention is devoted to the location of oil wells, or the chemistry of his business? In other words, does Mr. Rockefeller devote his time to the management of the actual production of oil and its products, or does he use his peculiar ability for other purposes?

If you will read Lloyd's or Miss Tarbell's history of the Standard Oil Company you will find that the splendid talents of the Rockefellers, Archebolds and Rogerses have been more active in securing advantages over competitors. These master minds, instead of directing the legitimate and necessary work of finding oil, bringing it to the surface and refining it, have directed destructive campaigns for destroying the little firms that were once struggling to do what the Standard has succeeded in doing.

The thousands of business wrecks that strew the path of Standard Oil furnish eloquent testimony to the kind of management that has made "Oily John" the king of an industry. The inventions, the operations of improved processes have fallen to others who, compared with John D., are small fry, but who, under the system of industry demanded by Socialists, would be competent to perform the work of management to which you refer. Mr. Rockefeller was wise enough to see the folly of competition and has eliminated it by destroying or buying his competitors. Since that time his powers as a manager has been directed to the reinvestment of the enormous profits derived from his monopoly. He buys a railroad, but does not manage its operation—he can hire that done. And if Mr. Rockefeller can hire the management of his industries, why can't any other owner of those industries secure the same service, especially when the operators would have an interest in them?

The kind of work that Mr. Rockefeller now does, and the kind of work done by others of his kind, is not essential to the production of oil, or any other of the products of industry. The great capitalists expend what energy and talent they possess in producing profits for themselves, and leave the production of wares, and the management of such production to hirelings, of which there are more than a plenty.

A laymen is one who cannot possible know anything about a law without seeing a lawyer.

A criminal is one who would rather take chances than see a lawyer.—Life.

Notable Session of the Columbus Federation of Labor.

The Federation convened Monday, evening, June the 12th.

Delegates were received from the Stage Hands, Musicians, Steamfitters, Glass Blowers, Bakers, Brewery Workers and Electrical Workers. Committee on Credentials reported favorably and the delegates present were obligated.

Communications were received from the striking Garment Workers of Cleveland regarding scab product being shipped in from this city. Communication received from Ice Handlers relating to unfair employer's action. Same will be published in next issue.

Resolution received and indorsed from Central Labor Union, Washington, D. C., which reads as follows:

"Whereas the government of the United States is engaged in negotiating a new arbitration treaty with Great Britain, to take the place of a treaty now in existence, and which is amply sufficient for the preservation of peace between the two countries; and,

"Whereas Sir Edward Grey, the British foreign secretary, in a speech delivered in the House of Commons on March 13, in favor of England's two-power naval standard, described the proposed arbitration treaty as the first step toward an alliance for war against a third power; and

"Whereas the agitation in favor of this treaty has been fostered in this country by Andrew Carnegie, an inveterate enemy of organized labor, and is maintained solely by the lavish expenditure of the money he wrung from the blood and sweat of American workingmen; therefore be it

"Resolved, That we, as true friends of peace and representing the toiling masses who fill the army and navy, and have to bear the chief burden when war comes, and whose families would endure all the suffering, declare our unrelenting opposition to the proposed arbitration treaty with Great Britain for the reason that it is not a genuine peace measure, but, on the contrary, a cunning scheme to bring about an Anglo-American alliance for the promotion of British interests alone.

"We denounce as hypocritical Andrew Carnegie's pretense of zeal in the cause of peace and arbitration, and remind American workingmen of the blood of their comrades which his hirelings shed at Homestead as a direct consequence of his refusal to arbitrate or to settle the strike by any other peaceful method. The ostentatious championship of the cause of peace by such a man stamps the whole movement with the indelible brand of hypocrisy.

"Resolved, That we respectfully call on the Senate to reject the proposed arbitration treaty with Great Britain as wholly unnecessary for the preservation of peace and contrary to the advice of George Washington when he warned against foreign and entangling alliances.

"Further resolved, That a copy be sent to every central labor union, requesting them to take like action, and also a copy to the foreign Relations Committee of the Senate."

Letter from W. J. Winans, relative to Our Liability Commission; moved to lay on table.

Communication received relating to the unfair attitude of Robert Young, proprietor of the Metropole Hotel. The delegates instructed to carry this back to their locals. Communication received from the Famous Clothing Co. informing the delegates that they are carrying a line of Union label straw hats. Councilman Mahanna was denounced as an enemy of organized labor, and the delegates instructed to carry the same back to their unions.

The Federation reaffirmed its former action indorsing the Housing Code and denounced the owners of disreputable property who were peddling a crippled councilman to win sympathy for their unholy cause.

The Federation of Labor by practically a unanimous vote indorsed the present code and censured all those who had given out rumors to the contrary.

The Chair appointed the following Auditing Committee to audit the books of the Federation: Brothers Lenrowe, Fitzgerald, Liddy.

Delegate Al Stevens reported the actions of the Constitutional Progressive League and urged the delegates to elect workingmen to said convention.

The Federation sent a telegram to the Eagles Convention at Akron asking them to give Columbus the next State Convention.
